Better to wander in the mountains with the wild beasts than to live in the palace of the gods with a fool.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Salaka. No. 14. (c. A. D. 100)

There is no companionship with a fool.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 61. (c.475)

<sup>8</sup>
He that begetteth a fool doeth it to his sorrow: and the father of a fool hath no joy. (Natus est stultus in ignominiam suam: sed nec pater in fatuo laetabitur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 21. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>9</sup>
Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise. (Stultus quoque si tacuerit, sapiens reputabitur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 28. (c. 350 B.C.)

The Latin proverb is, "Stultitiam dissimulare non potes nisi taciturnitate" (Folly cannot be concealed except by silence). The modern form, "A fool, when he is silent, is counted wise."

Let a fool hold his tongue and he will pass for a sage. (Taciturnitas stulto homini pro sapientia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 693. (c. 43 B. C.) The French say, "Tant est le fol sage qu'il se tait" (The fool is wise according as he holds his tongue), or "Fous sont sage quand ils se taisent" (Fools are sages when they keep themselves silent).

The fool among the wise may shine

A moment, if his dress be fine;

But . . . One moment, while his mouth is shut.

UNKNOWN, Hitopadesa. (c. 1200) Ryder, tr.

Fools are wise until they speak.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Fol. (1611)

Generally Nature hangs out a signe of simplicity in the face of a Fool. . . . Yet some by their faces may passe currant enough till they cry themselves down by their speaking. Thus men know the bell is crackt, when they heare it toll'd.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Naturall Fools. (1642) See also under SILENCE.

1 A fool's lips enter into contention, and his mouth calleth for strokes. (Labia stulti miscet se rixis: et os eius iurgia provocat.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 6. (c. 350 B. C.)

But of all burdens that a man can beare, Moste is, a fooles talke to beare and to heare.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: May, l. 140. (1579)

2 Every fool will be meddling. (Omnes autem stulti miscentur contumeliis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 3. (c. 350 B. C.)

Fools will be meddling.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1584. (1732)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Beasts and fools will be meddling.

WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 23. (1822)

3 Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like unto him. Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit. (Ne respondeas stulto iuxta stultitiam suam, ne efficiaris ei similis. Responde stulto iuxta stultitiam suam, ne sibi sapiens esse videatur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 4, 5. (c. 400 B. C.) Many commentators have tried to explain the contradiction in these verses, but not very successfully.

To foolish demur [question] behoveth a foolish answer.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesope, ii, 175. (1484)

The best way . . . to answer the fooles, according to their foolishness.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), i, 166. (1589)

Answer every fool in his folly.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Aesop, p. 10. (1692)

So fools are often answered in their folly.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 332. (1740)

4 The legs of the lame are not equal: so is a parable in the mouth of fools. (Quomodo pulchras frustra habet claudus tibias: sic indecens est in ore stultorum parabola.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

5 As a dog returneth to his vomit, so a fool returneth to his folly. (Sicut canis, qui revertitur ad vomitum suum, sic imprudens, qui iterat stultitiam suam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 11. (c. 350 B. C.)

Though thou shouldest bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him. (Si contuderis stultum in pila quasi ptisanas feriente desuper pilo, non auferetur ab eo stultitia eius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 22.

Beate a fool in a mortar saith the wise man, and thou shalt not make him leaue his folly.

WILLIAM WAGER, The Longer Thou Liuest, sig. D2. (c. 1568)

Bray a fool in a mortar, and you'll find all of him but his brains.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. i, act v, sc. 2. (1694)

6 God help the fool, quoth Pedley.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1674. (1732) Ray explains, "This Pedley was a natural fool himself, and yet had usually this expression in his mouth. Indeed, none are more ready to pity the folly of others, than those who have but a small measure of wit themselves."

7 Martin said to his man, . . . Who's the fool now?

RIMBAULT, ed., Songs and Ballads: Deuteromelia. (1609)

8 A fool believes the thing he would have so.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 620. (1681)

Florimundus justified the proverb, A fool believes everything.

UNKNOWN, Harleian Miscellany, iv, 130. (c. 1685)

9 The wise man who consorts with fools will become a fool, and the fool who consorts with fools will become a greater fool.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 80. (c. 1258)

According to the proverb, A friend of fooles wil become like unto them.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 44. (1574) Pettie, tr.

One fool makes a hundred.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 527.

(1640) Quoting an Italian proverb, "Un pazzo ne fa cento." The Spanish form is, "Uno loco hace ciento." There is a Latin proverb to the same effect, "Unius dementia dementes efficit multos" (The madness of one makes many mad.) The French say, "À la presse vont les fous" (Fools go in crowds).

One fool makes many.

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, p. 140. (1654)
One fool maketh many fools.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)
Well, I see one fool makes many.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Fool beckons fool, and dunce awakens dunce.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, 142. (1761)
As to those who . . . take my rhapsodies for their model, . . . they have exemplified the ancient adage, "one fool makes many."

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Byron, 6 Nov., 1813.
Loose tongue found credulous ears, and so one fool made many.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 74. (1860) See also under COMPANY.

1
It is the part of a fool to say, I should not have thought it. (Insipientis est dicere, Non putarum.)

SCIPIO AFRICANUS, Maxim. (c. 190 B. C.) See VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Facta et Dicta Memorabilia. Bk. vii, Maxim 2, 1. 2.

Never be reduced to having to say, "I had not thought of that." (Nec committere, ut aliquando dicendum sit, "Non putarum.")

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 23, sec. 81. (c. 45 B. C.)
It is the part of a fool to say, I had not thought.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 13. (1616)

Who would have thought it?

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 320. (1639)

Is it possible? (Est-il possible?)

PRINCE GEORGE OF DENMARK, Consort of Queen Anne. (c. 1690) "The impenetrable stupidity of Prince George served his turn. It was his habit, when any news was told him, to exclaim, 'Est-il possible?'"—MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i. ch. 9.

The Fool saith, who would have thought it?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4539. (1732)

2
Better to fleech [flatter] a fool than fight with him.

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 14. (1820)

3
What fools these mortals be! (Tanta stultitia mortalium est!)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. i, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 64)

What fools these mortals be!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
iii, 2, 115. (1596)

"What heels we agents be," North misquoted.

VAN WYCK MASON, The Bucharest Ballerina Murders, p. 143. (1940)

4
Whenever I wish to laugh at a fool, I am not compelled to hunt far; I laugh at myself. (Quando fatuo delectari volo, non est mihi longe quaerendus; me rideo.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 50, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 64)
Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. ii, ch. 25, "Si j'ay envie de rire d'un fol, il ne me fault chercher gueres loing, je ris de moy meisme."

To make a trade of laughing at a Fool is the highway to become one.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State: Of Fools. (1642)

One should no more laugh at a contemptible fool than at a dead fly.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. (1693) Works, p. 235.

5
To fools foolish things are terrible. (Vanis enim vana terrori sunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 11, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 55)

6
The dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, i, 2, 58. (1600)

7
Amiens: What's that 'ducdame'?

Jacques: 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools into a circle.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 5, 60. (1600)
Your name, even in life, was, alas! a kind of ducdame to bring people of no very great sense into your circle.

ANDREW LANG, Letters to Dead Authors:
Shelley. (1886)

8
How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 5, 52. (1598)

The French say, "Tête de fou ne blanchit jamais" (The head of a fool never grows white).

9
Tut, she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iii, 2, 159. (1594) To be a fool to: to be inferior to.

Childers would have been a fool to him.

GEOFFREY GAMBADO, An Academy for Horsemen. Ch. 17, p. 137. (1791)

The Black Hole of Calcutta must have been a fool to it.

RIDER HAGGARD, King Solomon's Mines, p. 79. (1885)

10
What says Quinapalus? "Better a witty fool than a foolish wit."

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 39. (1599)

"Quinapalus," an invention of Shakespeare

There are no fools so troublesome as those that have wit. (Il n'y a point des sots si incommodes que ceux qui ont de l'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 451. (1665)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741 and 1745.

I am a fool, I know it: and yet, heav'n help me, I'm poor enough to be a wit.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 1. (1695)

He's a Wit to the Fools, and a Fool to the Wits.

SWIFT, The Enigma Explain'd, l. 4. (1707)

Though he is a wit, he is no fool.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 106. (1728)

A modern wit is one of David's fools.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

11
They say, euery foole is a fiddle to the companie.

EDWARD SHARPHAM, Cupid's Whirligig. Act iv. (1616)

More fool than fiddler.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 245. (1678)

A Fool can dance without a Fiddle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 99. (1732)

- <sup>1</sup> No fool, the saw goes, like the obstinate fool.
(αὐθάδία τοι σκαϊότηρ' ὀφλισκάνει.)
SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1028. (c. 441 B. C.)
- <sup>2</sup> To argue with a fool befits not a wise man.
(τὸ γὰρ | νοσοῦντι ληρεῖν ἀνδρὸς οὐχὶ σῶφρονος.)
SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 434. (c. 409 B. C.)
Do not humiliate thyself in the presence of a fool.
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iv, 27. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr. The Apocrypha renders it, "Make not thyself an underling to a foolish man."
Bandy not words with a fool. (Non litiges cum homine linguato.)
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, viii, 4.
A wise man does not contend with a fool.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 4, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)
He is not the foolle that the foole is, but he that with the foole deals.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595) MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)
KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 146. (1721) The French say, "Bien fol est qui à fol demande sens" (He is indeed a fool who expects sense from a fool).
I am but a fool to reason with a fool.
TENNYSON, The Last Tournament, l. 271. (1872)
- <sup>3</sup> Hated by Fools, and Fools to hate,
Be that my Motto, and my Fate.
SWIFT, To Doctor Delany, l. 171. (1730)
Every fool can do as they're bid.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
When I want a fool, I'll send for him.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.
You should be cut for the simples.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.
- <sup>4</sup> He turns fools into madmen. (Ex stultis insanos facit.)
TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 254. (161 B. C.)
Fools are not mad folk.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, ii, 3, 105. (1609)
- <sup>5</sup> A fool will tread upon thy neck, if he seeth thee lying in the dust.
M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Humility. (1839)
- <sup>6</sup> A foole and his monie be soone at debate,
Which after with sorrow repents him too late.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 10, st. 11. (1573)
A foole oft finds himselfe short of his reckonings.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Fol. (1611)
A fool and his money is soon parted.
JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, 20 Oct., 1629.
SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 39. (1816) SHAW, Arms and the Man. Act iii. (1894)
A fool and his money are soon parted.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 98. (1732) etc., etc.
A Fool loseth his Estate, before he finds his Folly.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 104. (1732)
- He that gets Money before he gets Wit,
Will be but a short while Master of it.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6432.
Fools and their money are soon parted.
TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 11. (1748)
A fool and his wares are soon parted.
BERNARD SHAW, Caesar and Cleopatra. Act iii. (1897)
See for yourself how soon a fool is parted from his money.
MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen. Act i, sc. 1. (1930) The French say, "Un sot a bientôt vidé son sac" (A fool has soon emptied his bag).
- <sup>7</sup> Fools cannot understand clever men. (Les sots ne comprennent pas les gens d'esprit.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 52. (1746)
Fools are like people who think themselves rich with little. (Le sot est comme le peuple qui se croit riche de peu.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 260.
- <sup>8</sup> The longer thou livest, the more foolle thou art.
WILLIAM WAGER. Title. (c. 1568)
- <sup>9</sup> The foole that farre is sente some wisdom to attain,
Returns an idiot, as he wente, and brings the foole againe.
GEOFFREY WHITNEY, A Choice of Emblems, p. 178. (1586)
You may all depart like fooles as you came.
UNKNOWN, Pasquil's Jests, p. 38. (1604)
He that sends a fool, expects one.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 850. (1640)
Who sends a fool expects the same back again.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 147. (1666)
Send a fool to market and a fool he will return.
The Italians say, "Chi bestia va à Roma bestia retorna." He that goes a beast to Rome returns thence a beast. Change of places changes not men's minds or manners.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 140. (1678)
Send a Fool to Market, and a Fool he'll return.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4096. (1732)
You may go back again, like a fool as you came
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Send a fool to France and he'll come a fool back
ANDREW HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22 (1832) See also under TRAVEL.
- <sup>10</sup> The best way to silence any friend of yours whom you know to be a fool is to induce him to hire a hall.
WOODROW WILSON, Speech, New York, 27 Jan., 1916.
- <sup>11</sup> The wise man alone is free, and every fool is a slave. (μόνος ὁ σοφὸς ἐλεύθερος, καὶ πᾶς ἄφρων δούλος.)
UNKNOWN, A Stoic maxim, frequently quoted. (c. 300 B. C.)
TOM FOOL, see under TOM

II—Fool and Knave

1 There are more fools than knaves in the world, else the knaves would not have enough to live upon.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains. Vol.ii, p.474. (c.1675)
Knaves and fools divide the world.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 111. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3133. (1732)

Knaves and fools are the composition of the whole world.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. G6. (1690)

Mankind are a herd of knaves and fools.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 239. (c. 1821)

2 He seemed to me to be more knave than fool. (Mihi autem impudens magis quam stultus videbatur.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. v, epis. 21. (50 B. C.)
This man's more knave than fool.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, i, 72. (c. 1630)

I take him to be more knave than fool.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

3 Fools out of favour grudge at knaves in place. And men are always honest in disgrace.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman: Introduction, l. 7. (1700)

4 A Knave discover'd is a great Fool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 232. (1732)

If there were no Knaves and Fools, all the World would be alike.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2715.

Knaves are in such Repute, that honest Men are accounted Fools.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3134.

5 You'll find at last this maxim true, Fools are the game which knaves pursue.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. ii, fab. 12, l. 61. (1727)

An easy Fool is a Knave's Tool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6189. (1732)

6 It might be argued, that to be a knave is the gift of fortune, but to play the fool to advantage it is necessary to be a learned man.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: Intellectual Superiority. (1821)

I am always afraid of a fool: one cannot be sure that he is not a knave as well.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 225. (1823)

7 Better a fool than a knave.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 959. (1640)

Most of us would rather be taken for knaves than for fools.

FOWLER, The King's English, p. 58. (1906)

There is more excitement in being a knave, but more contentment in being a fool.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 94. (1940)

Better a rogue than a fool I always say.

FRANCIS BONNAMY, Dead Reckoning, p. 58. (1943)

8 Now will I shew my selfe to have more of the Serpent | Than the Dove; that is, more knave than fool.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act ii, sc. 3. (c. 1592) A reference to Matthew, x, 16, "Be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves." See under SERPENT.

9 Every knave has a fool in his sleeve.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 55. (1710)

10 Very often, say what you will, a knave is only a fool. (Bien souvent, quoi qu'on dise, un fripon n'est qu'un sot.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Dépositaire. Act ii, sc. 6. (1769)

Men never turn rogues without turning fools.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis. No. 3. (1776)

A rogue is a roundabout fool.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 4 Jan., 1823.

III—Fools and Wise Men

See also Wisdom and Folly

11 The wise man is deceived but once, the fool twice.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Wise. (1736)

12 Either mere fools or good physicians all.

BARNABE BARNES, Divils Charter. Sig.L3. (1607)

No matter whether I be a fool or a physician.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Mayden-Head Well Lost. Act iii. (1634) See also under DOCTOR

13 The discourse of the godly is always wisdom, but the fool changeth as the moon.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxvii, 11. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

There is a wise man who is wise to many, and to his own soul he sheweth himself a fool.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxxvii, 19.

14 If the fool would persist in his folly he would become wise.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

The selfish, smiling fool, and the sullen, frowning fool, shall both be thought wise, that they may be a rod.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

A fool sees not the same tree that a wise man sees.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

The errors of a wise man make your rule,

Rather than the perfections of a fool.

WILLIAM BLAKE, On Art and Artists. (a. 1827)

15 If wise men play the fool, they do it with a vengeance.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p.419. (1855)

When a wise man errs, he errs with a vengeance.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 49. (1875)

16 The enmity of the wise rather than the friendship of the fool.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 415. (1817)

Better to die with a wise man than live with a fool.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 495. (1872)

<sup>1</sup> Fools set stools for wise folks to stumble at.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 322.

(1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1582. (1732)

Yee know what the old prouerbe saies, . . . When fooles set stocks, and wise men breake their chins.

SAMUEL ROWLEY, When You See Me, You Know Me, sig. F3. (1613)

A fool may throw a stone into a well, which a hundred wise men can not pull out.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 529. (1640)

Fools tie knots, and wise men loose them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1678) A Scottish form is, "Fools ravel and wise men redd [unravell]." See under KNOT.

Every Fool can find Faults, that a great many wise Men can't remedy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1416. (1732)
See also under BUILDING, FEAST, JEST.

<sup>2</sup> Wise men profit more from fools than fools from wise men; for the wise shun the mistakes of fools, but fools do not imitate the successes of the wise. (τοὺς δὲ φρονίμους μάλλον ὑπὸ τῶν ἀφρόνων ἢ τοὺς ἀφρονάς ὑπὸ τῶν φρονίμων ὠφελεῖσθαι.)

MARCUS CATO, THE CENSOR, Maxim. (c. 160 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. ix, sec. 4. Quoted by FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms, No. 167, and by MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. iii, ch. 8: "Les sages ont plus à apprendre des fols, que les fols des sages."

Wyse ben by foles harm chastysed.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 329. (c. 1380)

A fole never byleveth tyll he fele sore.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, p. 485. (c. 1489)

A happie man and wise is he

By others harmes can warned be.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, fo. 103. (1591)

Wise Men learn by other Men's Harms; Fools, by their own.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5780. (1732)
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

Wise Men learn something of Fools; but Fools nothing of wise Men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5780.

Wise men learn by other men's mistakes; fools by their own.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 570. (1855)
EXPERIENCE TEACHER OF FOOLS, see EXPERIENCE.

<sup>3</sup> The fool knows more in his own house than the wise man in another's. (Más sabe el necio en su casa que el cuerdo en la ajena.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

<sup>4</sup> The follies of the fool are known to the world, but are hidden from himself; the follies of the wise are known to himself, but hidden from the world.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. (1820)

<sup>5</sup> Wise men respect the hour for utterance:

Fools out of season utter worthless trash.

(Observat sapiens sibi tempus in ore loquendi; insipiens loquitur spretum sine tempore verbum.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 41. (c. A.D. 600)

Wise men are silent, fools talk.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 5. (1639) The Dutch say, "De gekken vragen naar de klok, maar de wijzen weten hunnen tijd" (Fools ask what's o'clock; wise men know the time)

<sup>6</sup> Ye suffer fools gladly, seeing ye yourselves are wise. (ἡδύται γὰρ ἀρέχθε τῶν ἀφρόνων φρόνιμοι ὄντες.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, xi, 19. (c. A.D. 55) The Vulgate is, "Libenter enim suffertis insipientes, cum sitis ipsi sapientes."

<sup>7</sup> The fool who knows his foolishness is wise at least so far, but a fool who thinks himself wise, he is called a fool indeed.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 63. (c. 425 B.C.)

He may be called a foole that . . . auuncenth him selfe to be wise.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Diall of Princes, fo. 91. (1557)

The first chapter of fooles, is to esteeme them selues wise. (El primo capitulo de matti, si è tenersi sanio.)

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 93. (1574) Pettie, tr. JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1659) [With "hold" for "esteem."] THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 4525. (1732) [As in 1574.]

The chiefest account of a foole, is to hold hym selfe wise. (La prima parte del pazzo, è ditenersi sanio.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

I do now remember a saying, "The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a fool."

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, v, 1, 35. (1600)
Those that think them wise, are greatest fools.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF STIRLING, The Tragedy of Croesus. Act ii, sc. 1. (1607)

The greatest fool is he who thinks he is not one and all others are. (Pero el mayor necio es el que no se lo piensa y á todos los otros define.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 201. (1647)

He who thinks himself wise, O heavens! is a great fool. (Qui se croit sage, ô ciel! est un grand fou.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Droit du Seigneur. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1750)

People are never so near playing the fool as when they think themselves wise.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to Lady Bute, 1 March, 1755.

<sup>1</sup> To reason with a wise man is easy; with a fool, impossible.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 278. (1872)

<sup>2</sup> The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness. (Sapientis oculi in capite eius: stultus in tenebris ambulat.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ii, 14. (c. 250 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> A wise man's heart is at his right hand; but a fool's heart at his left. (Cor sapientis in dextera eius, et cor stulti in sinistra illius.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 2.

The heart of fools is in their mouth but the mouth of the wise is [in] their heart.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxi, 26. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

The tongue of a discrete man is in his herte & the herte of a foole is in his tonge.

EARL RIVERS, Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 140. (1477) Quoting Socrates.

The wise man bath his tong in his hart, and he that is a foole and furious, hath his hart in his tong.

EDWARD HELLOWES, tr., Guevara's Chronicle, p. 183. (1574)

The wisdom of a foole is in his tongue, & the tongue of the wise man is hydden in his hart.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 67. (1578)

These are those fooles, which carry their Hearts in their Mouthes; and farre from those wise men, which carry their Mouthes in their Hearts.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentleman, p. 47. (1630)

Fools have their hearts in their mouths, but wise men keep their mouths in their hearts. (Los locos tienen el corazón en la boca, y los cuerdos la boca en el corazón.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 131. (1814) A Spanish proverb.

Wise men have their mouth in their heart, fools their heart in their mouth.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 570. (1855)

<sup>4</sup> Rather be accounted a fool, than be wise and snarled at. (Delirus inersque videri, quam sapere et ringi.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 112. (1511)

To counterfeit the fool at the right time is the greatest wisdom. (Stultitiam simulare loco prudentia summa est.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 112.

<sup>5</sup> Wise sayings seem but folly to a fool. (δὲτις τῆς ἀμαθείας σοφὰ λέγων οὐκ εἰς φρονεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, The Bacchae, l. 480. (c. 410 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Fooles are fain of flitting.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 235. (1678)

Fools are fain of flitting, and wise men of sitting.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 105. (1721)

The Fool wanders, the wise Man travels.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4540. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> A foole by nature, and a wise man by writyng. (Matto per natura, e sanio per scrittura.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

<sup>8</sup> The cunning man steals a horse, the wise man lets him alone.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

He's a Fool that cannot conceal his Wisdom.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

Life with Fools consists in Drinking;

With the wise Man, Living's Thinking.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

The Brave and the Wise can both pity and excuse when Cowards and Fools shew no mercy.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

<sup>9</sup> One may get wisdom by looking on a Fool.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Fools. (1642)

A Fool and a Wiseman are alike both in the starting-place, their birth, and at the post, their death; only they differ in the race of their lives.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Fools.

Many have been the wise speeches of fools, though not so many as the foolish speeches of wise men.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Fools.

<sup>10</sup> A Fool is happier in thinking well of himself, than a wise Man in others' thinking well of him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 102. (1732)

A wise Man's thoughts walk with him, but a Fool's without him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 478.

All Fool, or all Philosopher.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 517.

Fools and Philosophers are made out of the same Metal.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1566.

Fools are wise Men in the Affairs of Women.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1571.

That, which makes wise Men modest, makes Fools unmannerly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4382.

The wise Man draws more advantage from his Enemies, than a Fool from his Friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4833.

The wise Man, even when he holds his Tongue, says more than the Fool when he speaks.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4834.

The wise Man is born to rule the Fool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4835.

Wise Men may look ridiculous in the Company of Fools.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5783.

<sup>11</sup> Fools lade polys, wisemenn ete the fysshe. [Fools lade out pools, wise men eat the fish.]

F. J. FURNIVALL, ed., Babees Book, p. 332. (c. 1450)

Wyse men may ete the fysshe, when ye [Fancy] shal draw the pole [pool].

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 300. (c. 1520)

Fools lade the water, and wise men catch the fish.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 322. (1605)
Fools lade out all the water, and wise men take the fish.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 92. (1670)

Diffidence is the diadem of the wise, while boldness is characteristic of the fool.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No 78. (c. 1050)

The wise do at once what the fool does at last. (Haga al principio el cuerdo lo que el nacio al fin.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 268. (1647)

That which a fool doth at last, a wise man doth at first. (Lo que hace el loco à la postre, hace sabio al principio.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 197. (1666)
A wise man doth at first what a fool doth at last.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 20. (1880)

Of the wise thou shalt learne to make thy selfe better, of fooles, to make thy selfe more advised.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 117. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The vanity of fools is the wisdom of the wise.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 20. (1843)

The wisest fool in Christendom.

HENRY IV OF FRANCE, referring to James I of England, when the latter abandoned him for an alliance with Spain. (1617) The remark has also been attributed to Sully

While the discreet advise, the fool doth his business.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 275. (1640)
The old saying is a shrewd one, that Wise men propose, and fools determine.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables. No. 122. (1692)
While wise men, long beset by doubt,

Wander from pole to pole,
The fool who knows his way about
Is first to reach the goal.

SYDNEY KING RUSSELL, The Victor. (1940)

A fool says I can't, a wise man says I'll try.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 489. (1940) There is also a reverse, "The wise man said it couldn't be done, and the fool came and did it."

Fools bite one another, but wise men agree together.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 454. (1640)

If the wise erred not, it would go hard with fools.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
If a wise man should never miscarry, the Fool would burst.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2664. (1732)

The wise and the fool have their fellows.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 4. (1659)

Who is wise in the day, can be no fool in the night.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 6. (1659)

He that is a wise man by day is no fool by night.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 389. (1855)

Every man is made a fool through his own wisdom. (Stultus factus est omnis homo a scientia.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, x, 14. (c. 700 B.C.)

This is the rendering made by John Wilson of the sentence, as quoted by ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium, sec. 114. The King James Version is, "Every man is brutish in his knowledge."

Nis nawer nan so wis mon

That me ne mai bi-swiken.

LAYAMON, Brut (Madden), i, 32. (c. 1205) Repeated in ii, 211.

None is so wise but the fool overtakes him.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 736. (1640)

None is so wise but the Fool sometimes overtakes him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3654. (1732)
Fuller improves on Herbert.

Thou maist flatter with fooles because thou art wise, but the wise will euer marke thee for a foole.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 319. (1580)

A wise man altereth his purpose, but a foole persevereth in his folly.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 104. (1631)

Mabbe is paraphrasing a Spanish proverb, "El sabio muda consejo; el necio, no" (The wise man changes his mind, the fool never). The Italian form is very like the Spanish: "Il sabio muda conscio, il nescio no."

The wise man questions himself, the fool others.

MENCIUS, Discourses. (c. 300 B.C.) See BROWN, Wisdom of the Chinese, p. 82.

Does not he return wisest that comes home whipt with his own follies?

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Trick to Catch the Old One. Act ii, sc. 1. (1607)

One wise man is worth more than ten thousand fools. (εἰς φρονῶν μυρίων μὴ φρονούντων κρείττον ἐστί.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 490A. (c. 360 B.C.)

A single day in the life of a learned man is worth more than the lifetime of a fool. (Unus dies hominum eruditorum plus patet quam imperitis longissima aetas.)

POSIDONIUS, Exhortations. (c. 75 B.C.) See SENECA, Ad Lucilium Epis. lxxviii, sec. 28.

Of more worth is one day of a wise man then the whole life of a foole.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 248. (1631)

Twenty wise men may easily add up into one fool.

J. A. SPENDER, Comments of Bagshot. Ch. 11. (1925)

<sup>1</sup> The wise shall inherit glory: but shame shall be the promotion of fools. (Gloriam sapientes possidebunt: stultorum exaltatio, ignominia.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, iii, 35. (c. 350 B. C.)

A reproof entereth more into a wise man than an hundred stripes into a fool. (Plus proffit correptio apud prudentem, quam centum plagae apud stultum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 10.

Wisdom is before him that hath understanding; but the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth. (In facie prudentis lucet sapientia: oculi stultorum in finibus terrae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 24.

<sup>2</sup> He bids fair to grow wise who understands he is a fool. (Non pote non sapere qui se stultum intellegit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 451.

Fools fear fortune, wise men bear it (Stulti timent fortunam, sapientes ferunt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 648.

<sup>3</sup> Those who wish to appear wise among fools, among the wise seem foolish. (Qui stultis videri eruditi volunt, stulti eruditus videntur.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. x, ch. 7, sec. 22. (C. A. D. 80)

A fool with judges, amongst fools a judge.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 300. (1781)

<sup>4</sup> In all companies there are more fools than wise men. (En toutes compaignies, il y a plus de folz que de saiges.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. (1545)

<sup>5</sup> The wise man knows the fool, but the fool doth not know the wise man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 271. (1678)

<sup>6</sup> The fole is knowen by his wordis and the wieseman by his werkis.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 17. (1477)

Somme axed him [Diogenes] why he was called dogly? He sayde because I barke vyon the fooles and fawne vpon the wysemen.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes, fo. 36.

If thou wol be wyse be not in feliship with foolis, but be euer in feliship with them that ben wyser than thy self.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes, fo. 87.

Wysdom can not proufyt to a fole, ne wytte to hym that vseth it not.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes, fo. 104.

The gouernour of a wyseman is pacience, & the gouernour of a foole is pride.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes, fo. 116.

If thou correct a wyseman he shal thanke the therefore, & if thou teche a foole he shall dyspreye the.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes, fo. 116.

<sup>7</sup> Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools. (φάσκοντες ελναι σοφοι ἐμωράθησαν.)

New Testament: Romans, i, 22. (C. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Dicentes enim se esse sapientes, stulti facti sunt."

<sup>8</sup> Whatever aversion a wise man may feel for a fool, a fool feels a hundred times more for a wise man.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 5, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)

Be not astonished that a fool should overpower a wise man with his loquacity, for a common stone will break a jewel.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 55.

The sound of the lute is drowned by that of the drum, and the perfume of ambergris is overpowered by the stench of garlic.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 56.

<sup>9</sup> The Italian seems wise, and is wise; the Spaniard seems wise, and is a fool; the French seems a fool, and is wise; and the English seems a fool and is a fool.

THOMAS SCOT, The Highwaies of God and the King, p. 8. (1623) Quoted as a proverb.

<sup>10</sup> Fools cut their fingers, but wise folks cut their thumbs.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Fools cut their fingers, but wise men cut their thumbs. . . . i.e. the follies of the wise are prodigious.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 467. (1902)

<sup>11</sup> Immortal gods! how much does one man excel another! What a difference there is between a wise person and a fool! (Di immortales, homini homo quid praestat! Stulto intellegens quid interest!)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 232. (161 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> A fool may ask more than seven wise men can answer. (Un matto sa più domandare che sette savj rispondere.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 69. (1666)

A fool may ask more questions in an hour than a wise man can answer in seven years.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1670)

Fools may ask more in an Hour, than wise Men can answer in seven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1578. (1732)

A fool will ask more questions than the wisest can answer.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Examinations are formidable even to the best prepared, for the greatest fool may ask more than the wisest man can answer.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 322. (1820)

A fool may ask more questions than a wise man cares to answer.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 18. (1821)

There is an old French proverb, "Ce esmuert ung fol que quarante sages ne pourroyent apaiser" (One fool may make a disturbance which forty wise men may not be able to quiet).

<sup>1</sup> The wise man must carry the fool upon his shoulders.

JOHN WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, p. 89. (1623)

<sup>2</sup> A foole beholdeth but onely the begynnyng of his workys, but a wiseman takyth hede to the ende.

UNKNOWN, Dialogues of Creatures, ccvii. (c. 1535)

<sup>3</sup> I saw ful set one segis of honore, and wysmen set one lawar segis. [I saw fools set on seats of honor, and wise men set on lower seats.]

UNKNOWN, Wisdom of Solomon, l. 765. (c. 1400)

Want of wyse men makis fulis sitt on bynkis.

ROBERT HENRYSON, Want of Wise Men. (c. 1450)

For want of a wise man, a fool is set in the chair.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 137. (1639)

For faut o' wise men, fools sit on binks [benches].

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 235. (1678)

Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 105 (1721), with the comment, "Spoken when we see unworthy persons in authority." The Spaniards say, "Por falta de hombres buenos, á mi padre hicieron alcalde" (For want of good men they made my father justice of the peace).

IV—Playing the Fool

<sup>4</sup> To fenyhe foly quhile is wyt. [To feign folly at times is wit.]

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce, i. 344. (1375)

Which Gonella noteth, saying, That to playe the foole wel, it behooveth a man first to be wise.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk. ii, p. 159. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Na man can play the fool so well as the wise man.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)

This fellow is wise enough to play the fool.

And to do that well craves a kind of wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1. 68. (1600)

I have read in a book, that to play the fool wisely, is high wisdom.

BEN JONSON, Poetaster. Act iv. sc. 5. (1601)

Non plays the foole well without wit.

DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly, p. 42. (1611)

Who are a little wise, the best fooles bee.

JOHN DONNE, The Triple Foole. (c. 1625)

Sometimes the fool to play.

Is wisdom great they say.

Poor Robin's Almanack, July, 1687.

He is no wise Man, that cannot play the Fool upon Occasion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1929. (1732)

It is a cunning Part to play the Fool well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2849.

<sup>5</sup> The wise through excess of wisdom is made a fool.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

If thou hast never been a fool, be sure thou wilt never be a wise man.

THACKERAY, Lovel the Widower. (1860) The French say, "Il vaut mieux être fou avec tous que sage tout seul" (Better be a fool with all than wise by yourself).

He dares to be a fool, and that is the first step in the direction of wisdom.

HUNEKER, The Pathos of Distance, p. 257. (1913)

<sup>6</sup> He who lives without folly is not so wise as he thinks. (Qui vit sans folie n'est pas si sage qu'il croit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 209. (1665)

There is a Scottish jingle, which runs, "The gravest fish is an oyster; The gravest bird is an owl; The gravest beast is an ass; An' the gravest man is a fule." The Germans say, "Zu viel Weisheit ist Narrheit" (Too much wisdom is folly).

And he is oft the wisest man

Who is not wise at all.

WORDSWORTH, The Oak and the Broom. (1800)

<sup>7</sup>

At times discretion should be thrown aside, And with the foolish we should play the fool.

(οὐ πανταχοῦ τὸ φρόνιμον ἀρμόττει παρὸν, καὶ συμμαρῆναι δ' ἐνία δέι.)

MENANGER, Poloumenoi. Frag. 421K. (c. 300 B. C.)

To act the fool is sometimes the greatest wisdom.

(Stultitiam simulare loco, prudentia summa est.)

CATO (?) Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 18. (c. 175 B. C.)

The usual form of the proverb is, "Stultitiam simulare loco sapientia summa est."

It is pleasant to play the fool in the right season. (Dulce est desipere in loco.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 12, l. 27. (23 B. C.)

Quoted as a proverb by ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium, sec. 112. (1511)

Then, Pallas, take away thine Owl,

And let us have a lark instead.

THOMAS HOOD, To Minerva. (c. 1840)

Nor is he the wisest man who never proved himself a fool.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l. 244. (1886)

<sup>8</sup>

I have played the fool. (Apparet enim quod stulte egerim.)

Old Testament: I Samuel, xxvi, 21. (c. 600 B. C.)

Make not a fool of thyself, to make others merry.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, iii, 7. (1621)

He hath great need of a fool that plays the fool himself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 49.

(1640) From the French proverb, "Grand besoin a de fol qui de soi-même le fait."

If thou play the fool, stay for a fellow.

J. HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 7. (1659)

I staid up a little while, playing the fool with the lass of the house.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 28 Feb., 1660.

He would fain have a fool that makes a fool of himself.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 161. (1721)

People have no right to make fools of themselves, unless they have no relations to blush for them.
T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 18. (1843)

V—Fool's Paradise

<sup>1</sup>
A fools paradise is a wisemens hell.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 20. (1642)

A fool's paradise is better than a wiseacre's purgatory.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, The Deuce Is in Him. Act i, sc. 1. (1763) SAINTSBURY, Scrap-Book, p. 254, condenses this to "Fools' paradises are wise men's purgatories."

A fool's paradise is better than none.

E. BONETT, Old Mrs. Camelot, p. 189. (1944)

<sup>2</sup>
Into a Limbo large and broad, since call'd
The Paradise of Fools, to few unknown.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 495. (1667)

Limbus fatuorum (the limbo of fools), the name given by the old schoolmen to the post-mortem abiding place of those too lacking in merit for Heaven, and too lacking in blame for Hell, whom Dante calls "the praiseless and the blameless dead," in other words, fools, idiots and lunatics, somewhat resembling the Limbus infantum, to which unbaptized infants were condemned.

Hence the fool's paradise, the statesman's scheme,
The air-built castle, and the golden dream.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 9. (1728)

Beguiling tedious hours with romances and fairy tales and fools' paradises.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance p. cxiii. (1910)

<sup>3</sup>
I wold not be in a folis paradyce.

WILLIAM PASTON, in Paston Letters. No. 457. (1462)

Thus my lady, not very wyse,
Is brought in to foles paradyse.

WILLIAM ROY, Rede Me and Be Nott Wrothe. (1528)

Dyd I desyre a sonne of my Lorde? Dyd I not say that thou shouldest not bryng me in a foles paradyse?

MATTHEW'S BIBLE: II Kings. Ch. 4. (1549)

She wyll also in talke cast oft times upon a man such a sweete smyle, that it were enough to bryng him into a foles Paradise.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 242. (1574) Pettie, tr.

By a few filed woordes to bring us into a foles paradise.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 88. (1576)

He had bryght Philautus into a foles Paradise.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, pp. 69, 344. (1579)

If ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very grosse kind of behaviour.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 175. (1595)

Promise of matrimony by a yong gallant, to bring a virgin lady into a foles paradise!

WEBSTER AND MARSTON, The Malcontent. Act v, sc. 3. (1604)

In this fool's paradise he drank delight.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Let 12. (1810)

Love's fool-paradise is out of date, like Adam's.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh, iv, 339. (1856)

<sup>4</sup>
The fools we know have their own Paradise,
The wicked also have their proper Hell.

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night. Pt. xi. (1874)

FOOT

<sup>5</sup>
When the night come . . . I hot-foots up to the dance.

GEORGE ADE, Artie, p. 22. (1896)

He . . . Hot-footed up to see the Boss.

GEORGE ADE, More Fables, p. 159. (1900)

I hot-footed it into the ravine.

R. A. WASON, Friar Tuck. Ch. 40. (1912)

<sup>6</sup>
Keeping thy foot from the slough of destruction. (ἔξω κομίζων ἀλεθρίου πηλοῦ πόδα.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 697. (458 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup>
I see many footprints going in but few coming out. (ὁρῶ ἵχνη πολλῶν εἰσιόντων, ὀλίγων δὲ ἐξιόντων.)

AESOP, Fables: The Lion and the Fox. (c. 570 B. C.)

A lion, having grown old and not being able to catch enough food, pretended to be sick, and when the animals came to visit him in his cave, seized and ate them. But the fox, seeing many footprints going into the cave and few coming out, refused to enter.

Whoso sought them could find no marks leading to the cave. (Quaerenti nulla ad speluncam signa ferebant.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 212. (19 B. C.)

Cacus steals four bulls and four heifers, and, that there might be no tracks pointing forwards, he dragged them by the tail into his cavern, so that all the tracks pointed outwards—the reverse of those in Aesop's fable.

It frightens me to see all the footprints directed towards thy den, and none returning. (Quia me vestigia terrent, | omnia te adversum spectantia, nulla retrorsum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. i, l. 74. (20 B. C.)

The fox speaking to the lion. "Vestigia nulla retrorsum" is a familiar motto.

<sup>8</sup>
Measure off your steps some other way. (οὐκ ἀναμετρήσεις σαυτὸν ἀπ' ὧν ἀλλαχθῆ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 1020. (414 B. C.)

It is right that each man should measure himself by his own foot. (Metiri se quemque suo modulo ac pede verum est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, No. vii, l. 98. (20 B. C.)

Measure yourself by your own foot. (Tuo te pede metire.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 89.

(1523) Citing the proverb derived from

Horace. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, with the comment,

"The paynters and caruers of ymages holde opynyon that the just measure of euery man consisteth in seuen of his owne fete. By this prouerbe we be therefore warned that we dylate not our selves beyond our condition." But what Horace probably meant was that every one should measure himself by his own standards, and not by those of other people. You shal not know the length of my foote, vntill by your cunning you get commendation.

JOHN LYLly, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 290. (1579) Shall not understand me. [Satan] marks how every man is inclined, . . . and when he hath the measure of his foot, then he fits him.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, ii, 37. (c. 1585) Having now the full length of his foot, then shewes she herselfe what she is.

THOMAS DEKKER, Works (Grosart), i, 263. (1603)

I know the length of his foot.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 108. (1616) When Henrie came to the Crown, Wolsey quickly found the length of his foot, and fitted him with an easie shoe.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Life of Cardinal Wolsey. (1642) Quickly sized him up. Well, gossip, I know too the length of your foote.

SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, The Play-House to Be Let. Act v. (c. 1663) SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 19. (1826) HUGHES, The Scouring of the White Horse. Ch. 3. (1858)

He had taken the length of the Squire's foot. S. J. WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 19. (1922)

1 He measures another man's foot by his own last.

RICHARD BERNARD, tr., Terence, p. 70. (1598) FROM THE FOOT, HERCULES, see under HERCULES.

2 They carried them out of the world with their feet forward.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Urn Burial. Ch. 4. (1658) They never enter St. Denys but with their Feet foremost.

JOHN OZELL, tr., Rabelais, ii, 27. (1734)

3 Big feet, great luck; felicity hangs from the tips of the toes.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 359. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

In every small foot there is a jarful of tears.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 360. A reference to the Chinese custom of binding the feet of young girls.

4 He hadn't a foot to stand on. (Pedem ubi poneret non habebat.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iv. ch. 25. (c. 45 B. C.) Erasmus quotes the proverb as "Pedem ubi ponat, non habet." Cicero uses it a number of times, in Ad Atticum, in the second Philippic, and elsewhere. See under LEG.

5 Bare foot is better than none.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Nud. (1611) Better a bare foot than none.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 83. (1640) Better a bare foot than no foot at all.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote Pt. i, act i, sc. 1. (1694)

And hence a third proverb, . . . Better a bare foot than none at all.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, ii, 111. (1748)

6 Thou, O king, sawest, and behold a great image. . . . This image's head was of fine gold, . . . his feet part of iron and part of clay. (Pedum quaedam pars erat ferrea, quaedam autem fictilis.)

Old Testament: Daniel, ii, 31-33. (c. 170 B. C.) Daniel is interpreting Nebuchadnezzar's dream, and "feet of clay" became proverbial for the weak and human part of a great person's character.

Mr. Carlyle made an inimitable bust of the poet's head of gold; may I not be forgiven if my business should have more to do with the feet of clay?

R. L. STEVENSON, Some Aspects of Robert Burns. (1880)

It is the feet of clay that makes the gold of the image precious.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 13. (1891)

I look for clay feet before I even glance at an idol's head.

RUFUS KING, A Variety of Weapons, p. 87. (1943)

7 Fellows who turn to philosophy suddenly with unwashed feet. (Pedibus inlotis.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. i, ch. 9, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 150) Proverbial for "without preparation." Gellius uses the phrase again in bk. xvii, ch. 5, sec. 14, "It is with unwashed feet, as the proverb says, and unwashed words that our critic assails the argument of that most learned man [Cicero]." PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 316, refers to "inlutis manibus" (unwashed hands).

8 Going with my feete sometime thither whyther I go not with my hart.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 193. (1574) Pettie, tr.

9 We'll fix you up with dry Trilbys.

O HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Sphinx Apple (1907) From George du Maurier's novel, Trilby, about an artist's model whose greatest beauty was her feet.

10 One foot is better than two crutches.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 771. (1640) From the French proverb, "Mieux vaut un pied que deux échasses."

11 He thinkth his feete be, where his head shall neuer come.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546) Some thinke their feete be where their head shall neuer come.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 49. (1611)

12 Here is, sens thou camst, too many feete a-bed. JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

<sup>1</sup> He would dictate two hundred lines, while standing, as they say, on one foot. (Stans pede in uno.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, No. iv, l. 10. (35 B.C.)
Proverbial for "without effort."

<sup>2</sup> From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it. (A planta pedis usque ad verticem non est in eo sanitas.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 6. (c. 725 B.C.)

From the sole of his foot unto his crown. (A planta pedis usque ad verticem eius.)

Old Testament: Job, ii, 7. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> I am not, as your Lombard proverb saith, cold on my feet; or content to part with my commodities at a cheaper rate than I am accustomed.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act ii. (1605) In the Lombard dialect "to have cold feet" means to be without resources. In a novel by a Low German writer, Fritz Reuter, published in 1862, a card-player gives "cold feet" as his reason for quitting the game, and from this perhaps developed the modern meaning of the phrase, to become discouraged, or to lose one's nerve. See article by KENNETH McKENZIE, in Modern Language Notes, Dec., 1912. The Germans have another phrase, "Auf schwachen Füßen stehen" (To stand on weak feet).

He's one o' them boys that never has cold feet.

GEORGE ADE, Artie, p. 108. (1896)

Instead of "getting cold feet," as the phrase for discouragement ran, and turning back, they determined to cover as many as possible of the seventeen hundred miles.

ELIZABETH ROBINS, The Magnetic North. Ch. 1. (1904)

She got cold feet.

O. HENRY, Roads of Destiny, p. 64. (1909)

Swollen head, weak nerves, cold feet.

H. C. BAILEY, Mr Fortune Finds a Pig, p. 11. (1943)

<sup>4</sup> Apt to get off on the wrong foot.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 139. (1940)

This is the time to catch somebody on the wrong foot.

JEFFERSON FARJEON, Murder at a Police Station, p. 189. (1943)

I hope I'm off on the wrong foot.

ANNE NASH, Said with Flowers, p. 106. (1943)

<sup>5</sup> Hoeder, the blind old God,

Whose feet are shod with silence.

LONGFELLOW, Tegner's Drapa. St. 6. (1847)

<sup>6</sup> I resemble those that hauing once wet their feete, care not hoe deepe they wade.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England: Epistle Dedicatory (Arber), p. 216. (1580)

One foote goeth by an other, but they both carrie the body.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England, p. 221.

<sup>7</sup> To every foot, its shoe. (À chasque pied, son soulier.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595)

All feet tread not in one shoe.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 499. (1640)
All shoes fit not all feet.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. i, act v, sc. 2. (1694)

Two feet in one shoe Will never do.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 40. (1875)

<sup>8</sup> I'm here now, with both feet!

C. E. MULFORD, The Man from Bar-20, p. 248. (1918) I'm here with a vengeance.

<sup>9</sup> To thrust one's feet under another man's table.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 272. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5247. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> That lady had indeed, as the phrase is, fallen on her feet.

WILLIAM ROUGHEAD, Malice Domestic. Ch. 1. (1929) See under CAT.

<sup>11</sup> As for me, when I perceiued upon which foot he halted, I made hast to eat.

D. ROULAND, Lazarillo (1924), p. 40. (1586)

I now perceive on which foot you halt.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 212. (1631) What your weak point is.

I now see which Leg you are lame of.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2623. (1732)

'Tis a sure sign what foot the patient halts upon.

WALTER SCOTT, Quentin Durward. Ch. 29. (1823)

<sup>12</sup> Come on, my lords, the better foot before.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, ii, 3, 192. (1593) King John, iv, 2, 170. (1596)

His legs are not matches, for hee is still setting the best foot forward.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Footeman. (1613)

I did put my best leg forward.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina. Act xi. (1631)

Cheer up, the better leg avore.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act ii, sc. 1. (1633)

To set the best foot forward.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 245. (1678)

You should commence an amour, and put your best foot foremost.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 10. (1700)

You must put your best leg foremost, old lady.

CHARLES DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 5. (1838)

We had to put our best foot foremost.

E. E. NAPIER, Excursions in South Africa, ii, 373. (1849)

Put forward your best foot.

ROBERT BROWNING, Respectability. (1855)

Best foot foremost kills the hill.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Cripps the Carrier. Ch. 7. (1876)

<sup>13</sup> Andrew made his bows, and as the saying is, took his foot in his hand.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, tr., Don Quixote, iv, iv, 1. (1755) To depart; to make a journey.

The kind of scenes he may alight on if he "take his feet in his hands."

J. H. BURTON, The Cairngorm Mountains, p. 5. (1864)

Make your feet your friend.

BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy. Ch. 11. (1896)

I tell you, says the president, my foot is down.

SABA SMITH, Major Downing, p. 141. (1833)

She . . . put her foot down.

JAMES PAYN, The Luck of the Darrells. Ch. 25. (1886)

I've put my foot down.

MARY E. W. FREEMAN, The Shoulders of Atlas, p. 171. (1908)

One foot in the shoe and the other in the basin. (δεξιὸν εἰς ὑπόδημα, ἀριστερὸν εἰς ποδόνιπτον.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, v, 32. (c. 950) A Greek proverb, also cited by Erasmus.

One foot in sea and one on shore.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 3, 66. (1598) A snatch from an old ballad. See PERCY, Reliques, i, ii, 18.

He that hath one foot in the straw hath another in the spittle.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 440. (1640)

ONE FOOT IN THE GRAVE, see under GRAVE

One foot in this boat, one in that—

They both push off, and you fall flat.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. See DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 324. (1872)

One foot cannot stand on two boats. (Yi chih chiao tao pu tē liang chih ch'uan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 60. (1875)

The bishop has set his foot in it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

"To put one's foot in it," to make a blunder on the wrong side; to get into a scrape by speaking.

BEE, Slang: Foot. (1823)

I put my foot into it (as we say) for I was nearly killed.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 12. (1833)

He's that kind of young ass. The kind that's always putting his foot in it.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p. 23. (1941)

OPEN MOUTH AND PUT FOOT IN IT, see MOUTH

With prosperous foot approach. (Dexter adi pede sacra.)

VERGIL, Aenid. Bk. viii, l. 302. (19 B. C.) The right foot is the lucky foot, as witness the proverb, "To get out of bed with the left [wrong] foot first."

Right foot first. (Dextro pede.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 30. (c. A. D. 60) "For a moment we were naturally nervous, for fear any of us had broken the rule in crossing the threshold."

The man with the lucky foot. (Boni pedis hominem.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. No. xvii, sec. 2. (A. D. 390) That is, the man whose coming brings some good fortune.

Gangand fote ay getes fode. [The going foot always gets food.]

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 28939. (c. 1300)

A walking foot is ay getting.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 262. (1670)

A going foot is ay getting, if it were but a thorn.

A man of industry will certainly get a living.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 11. (1721)

It was all "hay-foot, straw-foot" with him. He knew as little of tactics as he did of politics.

Knickerbocker Magazine, Vol. xxxviii, p. 79. (1851) Referring to the alleged use of hay and straw by drillmasters in teaching rustic recruits to distinguish between the right foot and the left.

Scores of men . . . would "hay-foot" every time when they should "straw-foot."

JOHN D. BILLINGS, Hardtack and Coffee, p. 208. (1887)

Your "heppin" and "hay-foot" and "straw-foot" drillin'.

R. D. SAUNDERS, Colonel Todhunter of Missouri, p. 98. (1911)

FOR

If I am not for myself, who will be for me?

Babylonian Talmud: Pirke Aboth. Ch. i, sec. 14. (c. 450)

I am your man, I am for you.

ROBERT GREENE, A Looking-Glass for London. (1594) Works, xiv, 128.

My lord, I am for you.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 1, 386. (1598)

Who are you for? I am for him I can get most by.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 565. (1855)

I am for him.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Purple Dress. (1907)

[He] will one day determine for or against us.

BULKELEY AND CUMMINS, A Voyage to the South Seas: Dedication. (1743)

I was privy to all the fors and againsts.

JANE AUSTEN, Persuasion, ii, 185. (c. 1815)

FORBEARANCE

There is a limit at which forbearance ceases to be a virtue.

EDMUND BURKE, Observations on a Late Publication on the Present State of the Nation. (1769)

After having passed through forbearance, gladness comes.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts): Social Intercourse. (1710) Ken Hoshino. tr.

Bear and forbear. (ἀρέχου καὶ ἀρέχου.)

EPICETUS, Maxim. (c. A. D. 100) "A phrase frequently used, as embracing almost the whole that philosophy or human reason can teach." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vii, 13, with the Latin, "Sustine et abstine."

The philosopher's rule, Bear and forbear. (La sentence du philosophe, soustenir & abstenir.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 17. (1552)

Beare and forbear.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 452. (1580)

Both beare and forbear now and then as ye may.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Supper Matters. (1573)

To bear and forbear here, will tend to rest.

JOHN BUNYAN, Building of the House of God. Ch. 10. (1688)

Bear and forbear is gude philosophy.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 50. (1832)

Epictetus used to say that . . . "If a man should take to heart these two words and observe them . . . he will be free from wrongdoing, and will live a highly peaceful life." These two words, he used to say, were bear and forbear. (Verba haec duo dicebat: ἀρέχου et ἀρέχου.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, xvii, 19. (c. A. D. 150)

When you find men at fault, whisper "Forbear"; when you come to a hard place, whisper "Bear."

J. C. NEVIN, Precious Characters. See DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 390. (1872)

The golden rule of married life is, "Bear and forbear."

SAMUEL SMILES, Character, p. 313. (1872)

You must take two bears to live with you—Bear and Forbear.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 483. (1940) Advice of a mother to her son's intended bride.

1 Forbearance is no payment. (Radigo non fa pagamento.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578) A rendering of the Latin proverb, "Quod deferatur non aufertur" (What is deferred is not relinquished).

Arden escaped us. . . But forbearance is no acquittance; another time we'll do it

UNKNOWN, Arden of Feversham. Act ii, sc. 2. (1592)

Forbearance is no acquittance.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, If You Knew Not Me. (1605) Works (1874), i, 332. RAY, English Proverbs, p. 92. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1587. (1732)

He soon shall find Forbearance no acquittance.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 53. (1667)

2 Beare with mee and I'll beare with thee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

There is a Latin proverb, "Ferto feris" (By bearing with others, you shall be borne with).

3 I was weary with forbearing. (Defeci.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xx, 9. (c. 700 B. C.)

By long forbearing is a prince persuaded. (Patientia lenietur princeps.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 15. (c. 350 B. C.)

4 The very word "Forbearance" is precious in a house. (Jên tzu chia chung pao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1858. (1875)

5 I am for let-a-be for let-a-be, as the boys say. WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 37. (1821)

Let abee for let abee with mad dogs and daft folk, is an auld but very true adage.

MICHAEL SCOTT, The Cruise of the Midge. Ch. 2. (1836) LIVE AND LET LIVE, see under LIFE.

FORCE

See also Might, Power, Strength

6 Tries force because persuasion fails.

ROBERT BROWNING, Prince Hohenstiel-Schwangau. (1871) See also GENTLENESS.

Force is not a remedy.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech, at Birmingham, 16 Nov., 1880.

7 Leveful is with force force of-showve.

CHAUCE, Canterbury Tales: The Reeve's Prologue, l. 58. (c. 1386) It is allowable to repel force with force.

To repel force by force. (Vim vi repellere.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 461. (1869) A law proverb states, "Vim vi repellere omnia iura clamant" (That we may repel force with force all laws declare).

8 Force overcome by force. (Vi victa vis.)

CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. xi, sec. 30. (52 B. C.)

By force and arms. (Vi et armis.)

CICERO, Ad Pontifices. Ch. xxiv, sec. 63.

9 His eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated. (Non caligavit oculus eius, nec dentes illius moti sunt.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxiv, 7. (c. 650 B. C.) Of Moses.

10 Force without Fore-cast is of little avail.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1589. (1732)

11 Brute force bereft of wisdom falls to ruin by its own weight. (Vis consilii experts mole ruit sua.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 4, l. 65. (23 B. C.)

A tendency to prevail over brute force.

BISHOP JOSEPH BUTLER, The Analogy of Religion Natural and Revealed, i, iii, 82. (1736)

The land has been changed by the brute forces of nature.

KINGSLEY, Hereward the Wake. Ch. 8. (1866)

Brute force. Force and violence applied without intelligence; senseless force.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Brute. (1941)

12 Force cannot give right.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, The Rights of British America. (1774)

13 The irresistible force and the immovable object about summed it up.

C. & G. LITTLE, The Black Thumb, p. 163. (1942) Moving like the irresistible body on its way to meet the immovable mass.

CLIFFORD KNIGHT, The Affair of the Fainting Butler, p. 77. (1943)

<sup>1</sup> Willing-nilling you'll be forced to stay. (Force forcée vous y retiendra.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 6. (1552)

<sup>2</sup> Forced to play a desperate game, and reduced to a forc't put.

GEORGE STARKEY, Helmont's Vindication, p. 328. (1657) A forced put is an action forced upon one by circumstances.

It must be therefore a forc'd Put, that presseth us on.

SIR A. MERVYN, Speech on Irish Affairs. (1662) He's at a forc't put.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1678)

It is, truly, to be ingenuous, a forced put.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vii, 63. (1748)

He thought that it might pass for a case of necessity, or forced-put.

THOMAS NUGENT, tr., History of Friar Gerund de Campazas, i, 526. (1772)

<sup>3</sup> Force finds a way. (Fit via vi.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 494. (19 B. C.)

FORD

<sup>4</sup> I must take the foord as I find it.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies, 6. (1575)

It is not good praysing of a foord, vntill a man be ouer.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, 51. (1633)

Ruse [praise] the foord as ye find it.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, 86. (c. 1595)

Let ilka ane roose the ford as they find it.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818)

FORESIGHT

<sup>5</sup> A pilot who sees from afar will not make his boat a wreck.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. 25, l. 14. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith tr.

<sup>6</sup> Yu a prouerbe telle men thys

He wyys ys, that ware ys.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 8085. (1303)

Avyement is good bifore the nede.

CHAUCEER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 343. (c. 1380)

He ys wyse that ys ware or he harm fele.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 101. (c. 1530)

He is wise that is ware in time. That is, who foresees harm before it comes, and provides against it.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 156. (c. 1595)

<sup>7</sup> The forehead is better than the hindhead. (Frons occipitio prior est.)

CATO, De Agri Cultura. Ch. 4. (c. 170 B. C.) Foresight is better than hindsight. The Germans say, "Vorrat ist besser als Nachrat," or "Vorsorge ist besser als Nachsorge." It will be noted that in both English and German, the noun which serves as a basis, i. e. "foresight." "Vorrat," or "Vorsorge," has been made into a new compound by substitution of a first member of opposite meaning: fore and hind, vor and nach.

If a man had half as much foresight as he has hindsight, he'd be a lot better off.

ROBERT J. BURDETTE, Hawk-eyes. (1879) Sometimes quoted, "If a man's foresight was as good as his hindsight, he'd be better off a damn sight."

Hindsight is far more acute than foresight.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 95. (1940)

I've got second sight, hindsight, and foresight.

EDITH HOWIE, Murder for Christmas, p. 49. (1941)

<sup>8</sup> Forecast is better than labour.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Widdowes Teares. Act ii, sc. 4. (1612)

Fore-cast is better than work-hard.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 92. (1670)

Force, without forecast, is little worth.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 106. (1721)

"Strength unless guided by skill and discretion, will avail but little." The Scots say, "Gude foresight furthers the wark."

<sup>9</sup> What is foreseen by the mind is lighter to bear. (Praemeditata animo levius sufferere valebis.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 17. (c. A. D. 600) In the next line the obverse is stated, "The unforeseen seems heavier to bear." Another Latin form is, "Praevisus ante, mollior ictus venit" (Foreseen, more lightly comes the blow).

Unforeseen, they say, is unprepared.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. ii, l. 74. (1700)

<sup>10</sup> Forethought is better than repentance. (κρείττων ἢ πρόνοια τῆς μεταμελείας.)

DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS, Maxim. (c. 25 B. C.)

Forethought is easy, repentance hard. (Ssü ch'ien yung, i 'hui 'hou nan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2058. (1875)

<sup>11</sup> Provision in season, makes a rich meason [house].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 281, with the explanation, "Because every thing is gotten at the easiest rate."

<sup>12</sup> To see may be easy; but to foresee, that is the fine Thing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5224. (1732)

'Tis easy to see, hard to foresee.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

<sup>13</sup> Think beforehand; today for tomorrow. (Pensar anticipado; hoy para mañana.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 151. (1647)

<sup>14</sup> He that looks not before, finds himself behind.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 202. (1640)

Look before, or you'll find yourself behind.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

1 While it is yet midsummer command your slaves: "It will not always be summer; build barns." (οὐκ αἰεὶ θέρος ἔσσειται, ποιεῖσθε καλίας.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 503. (c. 800 B. C.)

Cited by PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, with the Latin, "Aestas non semper fuerit, composita nidos."

Dig your well before you are thirsty.

MENCIUS, Discourses. (c. 300 B. C.) See BROWN, Wisdom of the Chinese, p. 78.

Who leaves not some leaven over night, will hardly have dough the next morning. (Qui au soir ne laisse leuain, ia ne fera au matin leuer paste.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1545) A Hebrew proverb asks, "If a man does not prepare his food on Friday, what will he eat on Saturday?"

He that provides not a cloak before the raine, may chance to be wet to his cost.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 267. (1639)

Have not thy Cloke to make, when it begins to rain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1808. (1732) Cutting out well is better than sewing up well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1230.

Thatch your roof before the rain begins. (I wei yü êrh ch'ou mu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2349. (1875)

The time to plant persimmons is before you lose your teeth.

H. S. KEELER, The Sharkskin Book, p. 287. (1941) Quoted as a Chinese proverb.

2 One good forewit is woorth two after wits.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 169. (1633)

Better is one fore thought than two after.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus, fo. 3. (1550)

One forecast is worth two after.

ROBERT GREENE, Mamillia. (1583) Works, ii, 26.

3 He had knowledge of all things that were, that were to be, and that had been. (ὅς ἤδη τὰ τ' ἔοντα τὰ τ' ἐσσόμενα πρό τ' ἔόντα.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 70. (c. 850 B. C.) The reference is to the soothsayer, Chalcas, and the line is the basis of the proverb, "He looks both behind and before," referring to a prudent man.

Old age looketh before and after. (ἄμα πρόσσω καὶ ὀπίσσω.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 109. Quoted by SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 9. (c. A. D. 55) Alluding to Janus.

Another Janus. (Ἰάνος ἄλλος.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. ii, No. 93. (1508) With the Latin, "Alter Ianus." A man who has both foresight and hindsight.

Looking before and after.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 4, 37. (1600)

Shakespeare says, we are creatures that look before and after: the more surprising that we do not look round a little, and see what is passing under our very eyes.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1833)

4 The first years of man must make provision for the last.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 17. (1759) The Germans say, "Man soll lernen, weil man jung ist" (A man must learn while he is young).

5 To change one's mind is not Afterthought's job, but Forethought's. (τὸ μεταβουλεύεσθαι Ἐπιμηθέως ἔργον, οὐ Προμηθέως.)

LUCIAN, Prometheus. Sec. 7. (c. A. D. 170)

Afterthought's province is not to think out, but to regret. (Ἐπιμηθεὶ οὐκ ἔστι τὸ μελεῖν, ἀλλὰ τὸ μεταμελεῖν.)

SYNESIUS OF CYRENE, Epigram. (c. A. D. 400)

6 Aftersight informed us of much that our foresight had overlooked.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, In Lena Delta. Ch. 4, p. 50 (1885)

7 They are wisest, who in the likelihood of good, provide for ill.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Forren Newes: From the Low-Countries. (1613) After the Latin proverb, "Sapiens qui prospicit" (He is wise who looks ahead).

8 Whoever can foresee the affairs of three days will be rich for three thousand years. (Nêng chih san jih shih, fu kwei chi ch'ien nien.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2682. (1875)

9 I have foreseen all things, and convassed them in thought beforehand. (Omnia praecepi, atque animo mecum ante peregi.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 105. (19 B. C.)

FOREST

See also Wood

10 The forest of Arden. (La forest de Ardeine.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 25. (1548)

Well, this is the forest of Arden.—Ay, now am I in Arden; the more fool I; when I was at home, I was in a better place: but travellers must be content.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 4, 15. (1600)

11 In a moment the ashes are made, but a forest is a long time growing. (Momento fit cinis: diu sylva.)

SENECA, Naturales Quaestiones. Bk. iii, sec. 27. (c. A. D. 62)

12 In a forest made sacred by the religious mysteries of our fathers and by ancient awe. (In silvam auguriis patrum et prisca formidine sacram.)

TACITUS, Germania. Sec. 39. (c. A. D. 98)

<sup>1</sup> Into the forest primeval. (In antiquam silvam.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 179. (19 B. C.)
This is the forest primeval.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Evangeline, l. 1. (1845)

FORGETTING

See also Forgive and Forget

<sup>2</sup> The sweets of forgetfulness.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Hermit, l. 2. (1760)
Life's best balm—forgetfulness.

FELICIA HEMANS, Caravan in the Desert. (1808)

<sup>3</sup> We have all forgot more than we remember.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5442. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> I myself foryete, That I wot neuer, what I am.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, ii, 21. (1390)

I had forgot myself: am I not king?
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 2, 84. (1595)

Push! you forget yourself.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Changeling, iii, 4. (c. 1625)

There, held in holy passion still,

Forget thy self to Marble.

JOHN MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 41. (1632)

Tho' cold like you, unmov'd and silent grown,
I have not yet forgot myself to stone.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 24. (1717)

<sup>5</sup> The great rule of life: Learn to forget.
(A quella regla del vivir, que es saber olvidar.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 126. (1647) The Germans say, "Glücklich ist, wer vergisst, | Was nicht mehr zu ändern ist!" (Happy is he who forgets what cannot be altered).

<sup>6</sup> Oft craving makes soon forgetting.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 301. (1869)

<sup>7</sup> It makes you disremember to forget.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Fog in Santone. (1912)

<sup>8</sup> Forgetting my people, and by them forgot.
(Oblitusque meorum, obliviscendus et illis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 11, l. 8. (20 B. C.)

The world forgetting, by the world forgot.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 208. (1717)

<sup>9</sup> Nobuddy ever fergits where he buried a hatchet.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 52. (1930)

<sup>10</sup> Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Recessional. Written in celebration of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee, and first published in the London Times, 17 July, 1897.

<sup>11</sup> The things we forget most easily are those we are weary of discussing. (On n'oublie jamais mieux les choses, que quand on s'est lassé d'en parler.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 595. (1665)

<sup>12</sup> O too, too forgetful of your own kin. (O nimium, nimiumque oblite tuorum.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. i, l. 41. (c. 10 B. C.)

Too forgetful of your own people. (Nimiumque oblite tuorum.)

STATIUS, Thebaid. Bk. vii, l. 547. (c. A. D. 92)

<sup>13</sup> At times he positively forgets his own name.
(Quin suum ipse interdum ignorat nomen.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 560. (c. 200 B. C.)

I often forget my own name. (Frequenter nomen meum obliviscar.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 66. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>14</sup> If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. (Si oblitus fuero tui Ierusalem, oblivioni detur dextera mea.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxvii, 5. (c. 250 B. C.)

<sup>15</sup> It is sometimes expedient to forget even what you know. (Etiam oblivisci quod sis interdum expedit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 179. (c. 43 B. C.) Sometimes printed "quid sis" i. e. "It is sometimes expedient to forget what you are."

What one knows, it is useful sometimes to forget.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 555. (1855)

<sup>16</sup> Hotten Rotten Forgotten.

G. A. SALA, Epitaph for John Camden Hotten. (1873)

<sup>17</sup> Men are men; the best sometimes forget.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 241. (1605)

<sup>18</sup> Of what significance the things you can forget?

H. D. THOREAU, Unpublished Manuscripts. (a. 1862) Quoted by EMERSON, Thoreau.

<sup>19</sup> At the water of Lethe's stream they drink the soothing draught and long forgetfulness. (Lethaei ad fluminis undam | securos latices et longa oblivia potant.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 714. (19 B. C.)

FORGIVENESS

See also Pardon

<sup>20</sup> May God forgive all who have vexed me.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 28a. (c. 450)

Recommended as a prayer before going to bed.

Extend thy forgiveness to him who has wronged thee.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar-ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 107. (c. 1050)

There is no transgression too serious for my forgiveness.

IBN GABIROL, Mibhar-ha-Peninim. No. 89.

1 Count not upon forgiveness, by adding sin to sin.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), v, 5. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

2 God may forgive you, but I never can.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, to the Countess of Nottingham, when the latter confessed that she had kept a ring given to her by Essex, after his trial and condemnation, to pass on to the queen. It was a ring which Elizabeth had given him, telling him to keep it always as a token of her affection and esteem. See HUME, History of England (1876), vol. iv, p. 341. LYTTON STRACHEY, Elizabeth and Essex, p. 265, says, "Such a narrative does not belong to history. . . . The testimony against it is overpowering." It has also been rejected by Clarendon and Rancke.

3 Certainly he will forgive me; that's his business. (Bien sûr qu'il me pardonnera; c'est son métier.)

HEINRICH HEINE, on his deathbed, when a priest assured him that God would forgive his sins. (1856) See FREUD, Wit and Its Relation to the Unconscious. Pt. i, ch. 3.

4 It is just that he who asks forgiveness for his offenses should give it in turn. (Aequum est peccatis veniam poscentem reddere rursus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 74. (35 B. C.)

5 A wise man will make haste to forgive, because he knows the true value of time, and will not suffer it to pass away in unnecessary pain.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 24 Dec., 1751.

6 Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. (Πάτερ, ἄφεσ αὐτοῖς, οὐ γὰρ οἶδασιν τί ποιοῦσιν.)

New Testament: Luke, xxiii, 34. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Pater, dimitte illis: non enim sciunt quid faciunt."

7 Before we extol a man for his forgiving temper, we should inquire whether he is above revenge or below it.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: Hallam. (1828)

8 Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. (ἄφεσ ἡμῖν τὰ ὀφειλήματα ἡμῶν ὡς καὶ ἡμεῖς ἀφήκαμεν τοῖς ὀφειλέταις ἡμῶν.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 12. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Debitte nobis debita nostra, sicut et nos dimittimus debitoribus nostris."

Forgive us our sins; for we also forgive everyone that is indebted to us.

New Testament: Luke, xi, 4 (c. A. D. 65)

Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us.

Book of Common Prayer: The Lord's Prayer. (1541)

9 A bluff word and forgiveness thereafter are better than an alms and hard treatment to follow.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, ii, 263. (c. 622)

10 Forgive what you can't excuse.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to James Stuart, 13 Oct., 1759.

11 He that forgives first, wins the Lawrel.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 546. (1693)

12 Forgiveness is better than revenge. (συγγνώμη τιμωρίας κρείσσων.)

PITTACUS, when he set Alcaeus free, after having him in his power. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus, i, 76.

Forgiveness is better than revenge; for forgiveness is the sign of a gentle nature, but revenge the sign of a savage nature.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 68. (c. A. D. 100)

Ready to forgive, and slow to punish. (Pronto in perdonar, lento in castigar.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 65. (1578)

13 Frequent forgiveness turns a fool into a knave. (Crebro ignoscendo facies de stulto improbum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 144. (c. 43 B. C.)

It is as much a cruelty to forgive all as to forgive none. (Omnibus ignoscere crudelitas quam nulli.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 55)

He who forgives readily only invites offense. (Qui pardonne aisément invite à l'offenser.)

CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act iv, sc. 4. (1639) The Japanese have a proverb, "Forgiving the unrepentant is like making pictures on water." See also JUSTICE AND MERCY.

14 Forgive others often, yourself never. (Ignoscito saepe alteri, nunquam tibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 325. (c. 43 B. C.)

Forgive any sooner than thyself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1670) The Germans say, "Verzeih dir nichts, und den Andern viel" (Forgive yourself nothing, others much).

15 To forgive much, makes the powerful more powerful. (Multa ignoscendo fit potens potentior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 391. (c. 43 B. C.)

16 Forgive that you may be forgiven. (Ut absolveris, ignosce.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 28. (c. A. D. 54)

Let him forgive freely who needs forgiveness. (Det ille veniam facile cui venia est opus.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 267. (c. A. D. 60)

17 But to forgive our enemies their virtues—that is a greater miracle, and one which no longer happens.

(Mais à ses ennemis pardonner les vertus, C'est un plus grand miracle, et qui ne se fait plus.)

VOLTAIRE, Discours sur la Vraie Vertu. (1732)
To forgive no enemy; but to be cautious and often dilatory in revenge.

HENRY FIELDING, Jonathan Wild. Ch. 4. (1743)
Wild's rule for attaining greatness.

TO KNOW ALL IS TO FORGIVE ALL, see UNDERSTANDING.

II—Forgive and Forget

<sup>1</sup>
I forgive and forget. (ἀμνηστῶν ἀνδρῶν παρέρω.)

PHILO, De Iosepho. Sec. 239. (c. A. D. 40)
Al thet hurt and al thet sore were yorgiten [forgotten] and forgiuen uor [for] gledenesse.

UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwe, p. 124. (c. 1220)

Mochil thyng haast thow write,
That they nat forgeue haue, nor forgite.

THOMAS HOCCLEVE, Dialogues, 672. (1421)

So wil Cryst of his curteiseye, and men crye hym mercy,
bothe forgiue and forgeute.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman, Text B, passus xvii, l. 241. (1377)

She was . . . redy a none to forgeute and to forgyue.

BISHOP JOHN FISHER, Funeral Sermon of the Countess of Richmond. (1509)

All our great fraie the last night

Is forgeuen and forgotten betwene us quight.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

Praiyng hir, to forgeue and forget all.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9.

I forgive and quite forget old faults.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 3, 200. (1591)

Forget, forgive; conclude and be agreed.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 1, 156. (1595)

I have forgiven and forgotten all.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, v, 3, 9. (1602)

Pray you now, forget and forgive.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 7, 84. (1605) Usually misquoted "Forgive and forget," which is the more logical arrangement, since it may be fairly argued that one must forgive before one can forget.

I have said amiss, let it be forgotten and forgiven.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

Endeavour to forget, sir, and forgive.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act v, sc. 2. (1696)

You must forget and forgive.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) See also SHERIDAN, The Rivals, iv, 2, and v, 3. (1775) HOLCROFT, The Road to Ruin. Act v, sc. 3. (1892) etc., etc.

FORT

<sup>2</sup>
Hold the fort, for I am coming!

GENERAL WILLIAM TECUMSEH SHERMAN, Signal, from the top of Kenesaw Mountain, to General Corse, when the latter was attacked by the Confederates at Allatoona, 5 Oct.,

1864. What Sherman really signalled was, "Hold out, relief is coming," but "Hold the fort for I am coming" soon became the accepted version, and was further popularized as the refrain of a widely sung gospel song by Philip Paul Bliss.

You're to sit here and hold the fort.

P. A. TAYLOR, The Six Iron Spiders, p. 268. (1942)

FORTUNE

See also Chance, Destiny, Luck, Providence

<sup>3</sup>
'Tis a manly thing to bear bad fortune lightly. (Erat istuc virile, ferre advorsum fortunam facul.)

ACCUS, Meleager. Frag. 440. (c. 140 B. C.)
Whatever it be, all fortune can be overcome by bearing. (Quidquid erit, superanda omnis fortuna ferendo est.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 710. (19 B. C.) Another form is, "Fortiter ferendo vincitur malum quod evitari non potest" (Ill-fortune which cannot be avoided is conquered by bravely enduring).

<sup>4</sup>
Sovereign of all the gods is Fortune, for she alone disposeth all things as she will. (πάντων τύραννος ἡ τύχη 'στι τῶν θεῶν, . . . | μόνη διοικεῖ γούν ἅπανθ' ἢ βούλεται.)

AESCHYLUS (?), Fragments. Frag. 254, Loeb. (c. 475 B. C.) Quoted by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, i, 6, 16.

Fortune is indeed a great weight in the scales; I might almost say it is everything in human affairs. (μεγάλη γὰρ ῥοπή, μᾶλλον δ' ὅλον ἡ τύχη παρὰ πάντ' ἐστὶ τὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων πράγματα.)

DEMOSTHENES, Olynthiacs. No. ii, sec. 22. (349 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 323A.

Fortune, not prudence, rules the life of men. (τύχη τὰ θνητῶν πράγματα οὐκ εὐβουλία.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Callisthenes. (327 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, De Fortuna, sec. 97. Quoted by CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, v, 9, with the Latin, "Vitam regit fortuna, non sapientia."

Everything that we think or say or do is Fortune, and we are but countersigners. Fortune ever holds the tiller. (Τύχη κυβερνᾷ πάντα.)

MENANDER, The Rustic. Frag. 483K. (c. 300 B. C.)
Fortune moulds and limits human affairs as she pleases. (Fortuna humana fingit artatque ut lubet.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 304. (c. 200 B. C.)
The schemes of a hundred learned men are all inferior to one lone goddess, Fortune. (Centum doctum hominum consilia sola haec devincit dea, Fortuna.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 678. (c. 195 B. C.)
Beyond question Fortune rules in all things. (Profecto fortuna in omni re dominatur.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 8, sec. 1. (c. 41 B. C.)
No wall can be erected against Fortune, which she cannot take by storm. (Nullus autem contra fortunam inexpugnabilis murus est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiv, sec. 19. (c. A. D. 64)

Against diverse fortune the carter cracks his whip in vain. (Contre fortune la diuerse vn chartier rompit nazardes son fouet.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1534)

Some Philosophers call Fortune the treasurer of the world, which ruleth every thing as pleaseth her most. (Alcuni Filosofi chiamano Fortuna, la tresoriera del mondo, la qual regge ogni cosa, come piu li piace.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Frviles, fo. 46. (1578)

Fortune is the Mistress of the Field, says the Poet.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 273. (1709)

1 When Fortune knocks, be sure to open the door.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Fortune. (1736)

2 Every man is the architect of his own fortune. (Faber quisque fortunae suae.)

APPIUS CLAUDIUS CAECUS, Aphorism. (c. 312 B.C.) Only a few of the Saturnian aphorisms of Appius have survived. This one is preserved in the Pseudo-Sallustian speech, Ad Caesarem Senem, ch. i, sec. 2, addressed to Caesar in his later years, where the author writes, "Experience has shown that to be true which Appius says in his verses, that every man is the architect of his own fortune (Fabrum esse suae quemque fortunae); and this proverb (maxime) is especially true of you." The saying is referred to by CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, iv, 2, 4, who calls it Pythagorean. A proverb in almost every modern language.

A wise man is the architect of his own fortune. (Sapiens quidem pol' ipse fingit fortunam sibi.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 363. (c. B.C. 194.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 42. A similar Latin proverb is, "Sibi uni fortunam debet" (He owes his fortune to himself alone).

Every man's fortune is moulded by his character. (Mores cuique sui fingunt fortunam.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, De Viris Illustribus: Atticus. (c. 40 B.C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 42.

A mans owne maners do shape hym hys fortune.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, fo. 37. (1539)

They make their fortune who are wise and strong. (Ché sovente adivien che 'l saggio e 'l forte fabro a sé stesso è di beata sorte.)

TORQUATO TASSO, La Gerusalemme Liberata. Canto x. st. 20. (1581)

Be his own carver, and cut out his way.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 3, 144. (1595)

Every one is the artificer of his own good fortune. (Chacun est artisan de sa bonne fortune.)

MATHURIN REGNIER, Satires. Sat. 13. (c. 1600)

Every one is the artificer of his own fortune. (Cada uno es artifice de su ventura.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 66. (1615)

It is a highway saying, that we are the architects of our own fortune.

JOHN DUNTON, Athenian Sport, p. 454. (1707)

"Highway saying" is an admirable definition of a proverb. In fact the Greek word for proverb, ᾠκίσματα, means just that.

Every man is the maker of his own fortune.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 52. (1709)

As every one is said to be the artificer of his own fortune, so every one . . . had best be the artificer of their own friendship.

SUSAN FERRIER, Marriage. Ch. 52. (1818)

Man is the artificer of his own happiness.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 21 Jan., 1838.

We have not a commoner saying among us than "Every man is the architect of his own fortune," and we have very few much older.

E. TEW, in Notes and Queries, iv, xii, 515. (1873)

EVERY MAN IS THE SON OF HIS OWN WORKS, see under WORKS.

3 The bad fortune of some people is good fortune to others.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 606. (1817)

4 Fortune is a giver and a taker. (Das Glück ist ein Geber, und ein Nehmer.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 318. (1856) A German proverb.

5 Good fortune is far worse than bad.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to Emerson, 3 Feb. 1835

6 Do not call Fortune blind, for she is not. (Noli Fortunam, quae non est, dicere caecam.)

CATO the Censor (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 3. (c. 175 B.C.) Man is blind, not Fortune.

Not only is Fortune blind herself, but as a rule she even blinds those whom she has embraced. (Non enim solum ipsa fortuna caeca est, sed eos etiam plerumque efficit caecos, quos complexa est.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 15, sec. 54. (44 B.C.)

Fortune although blind . . . sent them a good gale of wind.

ROBERT GREENE, Pandosto. (1588) Works (1881), vi, 245.

So may I, blind fortune leading me, Miss that which one unworthier may attain.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 1, 36. (1597)

That goddess blind

That stands upon the rolling restless stone.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 6, 29. (1598)

Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 6, 33. (1598)

Blind Fortune still

Bestows her gifts on such as cannot use them.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour. Act ii, sc. 4. (1599)

Fortune . . . with her blind hand, . . . bestows blind gifts.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster, v, 1. (1601)

If a man look sharply and attentively, he shall see Fortune; for though she be blind, yet she is not invisible.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Fortune. (1612)

Fortune never seems so blind as to those upon whom she has bestowed no favors. (La fortune ne paraît jamais si aveugle qu'à ceux à qui elle ne fait pas de bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 391. (1665)

Blind fortune follows blind daring. (Fortune aveugle suit aveugle hardiesse.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 14. (1678)

Fortune has often been blamed for her blindness; but Fortune is not so blind as men are.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 3. (1859)

There is an old French proverb which says that Fortune is blind, but not invisible.

ELLIOTT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 106. (1940)

Fortune always leaves a door open in disasters, whereby to find a remedy. (Siempre deja la ventura una puerta abierta en las desdichas para dar remedio a ellas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 15. (1605)

God grant it may prove wild marjoram, and not turn caraway on us. (Plegue á Dios, que orégano sea, y no se nos vuelva alcaravéa.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 21. God grant our fortune may continue sweet and not turn sour on us.

He who cannot take advantage of fortune when it comes, should not complain if it passes him by. (El que no sabe gozar de la ventura cuando le viene, que no se debe quejar si se le pasa.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1615)

When good fortune comes to thee, take it in. (Cuando viene el bien, mételo en tu casa.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 4.

Good fortune is not known until it is lost. (El bien no es conocido hasta que es perdido.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 54.

When the wagon of fortune goes well, spite and envy hang on to the wheels.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 360. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

Fortune will call at the smiling gate.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 441. Japanese.

For certain, when that fortune list to flee, Ther may no man the cours of hir withholde.

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 5. (c. 1387)

Lo, who may truste on fortune any throwe?

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 146.

Ay fortune hath in hir hony galle.

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 357.

As the same Senek seith: "the more cleer and the more shyning that fortune is, the more brotil and the sonner broken she is."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 42.

Fortune helps him that is willing to help himself.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Aider. (1611)

GOD HELPS THEM WHO HELP THEMSELVES, see under GOD.

I am prepared for Fortune as she wills. (Che alla fortuna, come vuol, son presto.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xv, l. 93. (c. 1300)

No one is satisfied with his fortune, nor dissatisfied with his intellect. (Nul n'est content de sa fortune; Ni mécontent de son esprit.)

MADAME DESHOULIÈRES, Moral Reflections. (c. 1685)

In no wise has fortune followed any man all his days. (Haudquaquam quemquam semper fortuna secuta est.)

ENNIUS, Annals. Bk. viii, frag. 286, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

It is the common lot of mankind not to enjoy continual good fortune in all things. (κοινὸν ἀνθρώπων τὸ μὴ πάντα διευτυχεῖν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Superstition, 167F. (c. A. D. 95)

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 2, 164. (1605)

Fortune is weary to carry one and the same Man always.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1602. (1732)

The Arabs say, "Fortune, good or bad, does not last forever"; the Germans, "Das Glück kann über Nacht umschlagen" (Good fortune can disappear over night).

Fortune loves those that have least wit and most confidence, and such as like that saying of Caesar, "The die is cast." (Iacta est alea.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 111. (1511)

Little wyt serueth, vnto whom fortune pypeth. (Poco senno basta, á chi fortuna sona.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Everyone knows how to dance when fortune blows on the pipes. (Ognun sa ballar quando la fortuna suona.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 192. (1856) An Italian proverb.

He that waits upon fortune is never sure of a dinner.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

A Change of Fortune hurts a wise man no more than a Change of the Moon.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

None know the unfortunate, and the fortunate do not know themselves.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

A Man of Parts may lie hid all his Life, unless Fortune call him out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 305. (1732)

Fortune is like the Market, where many times, if you stay a little, the Price will fall.

Fortune often lends her Smiles, as Churls do Money, to undo the Debtor.

Fortune often rewards with Interest those that have Patience to wait for her.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 160-4.

He's a good Man, whom Fortune makes better.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2438.

It is the fortunate who should praise fortune. (Das Glück erhebe billig der Beglückte.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 115. (1790)

Fortune pays sometimes for the intensity of her favors by the shortness of their duration.

BALTASAR GRACIAN, The Art of Worldly Wisdom. Maxim 38. (1647)

1 When fortune is good, you rule over devils; when fortune is bad, they rule over you.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, No. 611. (1937)

2 Fortune favors fools. (Fortuna favet fatuis.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 132. Quoting a Latin proverb of c. A. D. 150. The Italians say, "La fortuna aiuta i pazzi"; the Germans, "Glück und Weiber haben die Narren lieb" (Fortune and women delight in fools).

They saie it ofte, God sendeth fortune to fooles.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

KYD, Soliman, ii, 2, 1. (1592) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 306. (1605) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1599. (1732)

Fortune favours Fooles as old men saye.

BARNABY GOOGE, Eglogs, p. 74. (1563)

Fortune, that favours fools.

BEN JONSON, The Alchemist: Prologue. (1610)

Fortune sometimes sticks the finest Feathers in the Fool's Cap.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 257. (1709)

'Tis a gross error, held in schools,

That Fortune always favours fools.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. ii, No. 12. (1737)

Fortune makes Folly her peculiar care.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 604. (1761)

3 Once in each man's life fortune smiles. (Semel in omni vita cuique aridet fortuna.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 402. Citing a proverb of c. A. D. 150.

Fortune once in the course of our life dothe put into our handes the offer of a good torne.

SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello, ii, 148. (1567)

Fortune knocks once at least at every man's gate.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 136. (1869)

See also under OPPORTUNITY.

4 He that hath no ill fortune, is troubled with good.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 360. (1640) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1754.

He that hath no ill fortune is cloy'd with good.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1670) The Spanish form is, "Quien malas hadas no halla, de las buenas se enhada" (Who has no ill-luck grows tired of good).

5 Fortune to one is Mother, to another is Stepmother.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1116. (1640)

What a tragic, treacherous stepdame is vulgar Fortune to her children

THOMAS CARLYLE, Reminiscences, i, 219. (1866)

6 Learn to bear great fortune well. (Bene ferre magnam | disce fortunam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 27, l. 74. (23 B. C.)

Bear good fortune modestly. (Fortunam reverenter habe.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. Epig. ii, l. 8. (c. A. D. 370)

7 Ill fortune never crushed that man whom good fortune deceived not.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Fortuna. (1636)

8 Whenever Fortune is supplicated on my behalf, she plugs her ears with wax. (Cum pro me Fortuna vocatur, adfixit ceras.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. ix, l. 148. (c. A. D. 120)

9 Flee never so fast you cannot flee your fortune.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 108. (1721)

Another form is, "Flee as fast as you will, your fortune will be at your tail."

10 Fortune is always wrong. (La Fortune a toujours tort.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Fortune et le Jeune Enfant. Bk. v, fab. 11. (1668) La Fontaine is saying that when a man succeeds he attributes it to his own sagacity, but when he fails he blames his luck. REGNIER, Satires, xiv, relating the same fable, closes with, "Souvent nous imputons nos fautes au Malheur."

The good, we make it; the bad, it's Fortune; we are always right, Destiny is always wrong. (Le bien, nous le faisons; le mal, c'est la Fortune; | On a toujours raison, le Destin toujours tort.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 14.

11 Fortune reveals our virtues and vices, as light reveals material objects. (La fortune fait paraître nos vertus et nos vices, comme la lumière fait paraître les objets.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 380. (1665) We should treat fortune as we do our health; enjoy it when it is good, be patient when it is bad, and never resort to violent remedies except in the last necessity. (Il faut gouverner la fortune comme la santé; en jouir quand elle est bonne, prendre patience quand elle est mauvaise, et ne faire jamais de grands remèdes sans un extrême besoin.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 392.

12 Men are less sensitive to good fortune than to evil. (Segnius homines bona quam mala sentiunt.)

LIVY, History, xxx, 21. (c. 10 B. C.)

Greater qualities are necessary to bear good fortune than bad. (Il faut de plus grandes vertus pour soutenir la bonne fortune que la mauvaise.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 25. (1665)

See also PROSPERITY AND ADVERSITY.

13 Seldom are men blessed with good fortune and good sense at the same time. (Raro simul hominibus bonam fortunam bonamque mentem dari.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxx, sec. 42. (c. 10 B. C.) Paraphrasing the Latin proverb, "Ubi mens plurima ibi minima fortuna" (Where there is most mind there is least fortune).

14 Fortune often guards the guilty. (Servat multos fortuna nocentes.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iii, l. 448. (c. A. D. 60)

1 Fortune is a young woman, and therefore friendly to the young, who with audacity command her. (La fortuna è donna.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 25. (1513)
Fortune has somewhat the nature of a woman; if she be too much wooed, she is the farther off.

EMPEROR CHARLES V. (c. 1540) As quoted by
BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.
Who doesn't chase after Fortune? Don't seek this goddess and she'll seek you; her sex is used to doing that. (Qui ne court après la Fortune? . . . | Ne cherchez point cette déesse, | Elle vous cherchera; son sexe en use ainsi.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 12. (1678)

2 Fortune does not always favor the most worthy. (Nec fortuna probat causas, sequiturque merentes.)

MANTILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. iv, l. 96. (c. 25 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 47.

Fortune and love don't always favour the most deserving.

THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760) iii, 167. (c. 1700)

3 Fortune gives too much to many, enough to none. (Fortuna multis dat nimis, satis nulli.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 10. (c. A. D. 103)
Fortune, men say, doth give too much to many: But yet she never gave enough to any.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Of Fortune. (c. 1605)
The Germans have the same proverb, "Das Glück giebt Vielen zu viel, aber Keinem genug."

4 Whom the poets call Fortune we know to be God.

MELANCHTHON, Satires, x, 366. (c. 1520) As quoted by SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World, i, 1.

5 How complex and misleading a thing is Fortune! (ὡς ποικίλον πρᾶγν' ἐστὶ καὶ πλάνον τύχη.)

MENANDER, The Cithara Player. Frag. 288K. (c. 300 B. C.)

6 Fortune can do nothing to the man who knows how to die. (Fortune ne peult rien sur celuy qui sçait mourir.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1580) Quoting Seneca.

7 To Fortune I commit the rest. (Fortunae cetera mando.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 140. (A. D. 7)

8 If the gale of Fortune carries you along, let it carry you along; if you resist, it carries you along just the same. (εἰ τὸ φέρον σε φέρει, φέρε καὶ φέρον· εἰ δ' ἀγανακτεῖς | καὶ σαυτὸν λυπεῖς, καὶ τὸ φέρον σε φέρει.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. 425) Greek Anth., x, 73.

9 If fortune smiles, beware of being exalted; If fortune thunders, beware of being overwhelmed.

(Si fortuna iuvat, caveto tolli;
Si fortuna tonat, caveto mergi.)

PERIANDER OF CORINTH, Sententiae. (c. 600 B. C.)
According to AUSONIUS (?), Septem Sapientum Sententiae. No. 4. There are various versions of this aphorism. See under LABOR.

Let none be over-confident when fortune smiles; let none despair of better things when fortune frowns. (Nemo confidat nimium secundis, | nemo desperet meliora lapsis.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 615. (c. A. D. 60)

10 Yea fortune presented her selfe once agayne upon the stage and ment to have one flinge more at him.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 142. (1576)
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 58. (1600)
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune fell blunted from the buckler of his armored pride.

O. HENRY, The Higher Abdication. (1907)

11 Not past but present fortune must be regarded. (Non praeteritam sed praesentem aspiciendam esse fortunam.)

PHAEDRUS (?), New Fables. No. 29. (c. 25 B. C.)

12 The first of prizes is good-fortune. (τὸ δὲ παθεῖν εὖ πρῶτον ἐθλῶν.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. i, l. 99. (470 B. C.)

13 If Dame Fortune herself comes along, don't you let the hussy in. (Si Bona Fortuna veniat, ne intro miseris.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 100. (c. 210 B. C.)
Fortune, indulgent Fortune! (Fortunam, atque obsequentem.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 716. (c. 200 B. C.)
The gamesome goddess fortune.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 142. (1576)

14 By the grumbling of men Fortune is made a goddess. (Ex hominum questu facta Fortuna est dea.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 180. (c. 43 B. C.)
Thou wouldst have no divinity, O Fortune, if we had but wisdom; it is we that make a goddess of thee, and place thee in the skies. (Nullum numen habes, si sit prudentia: nos te, | nos facimus, Fortuna, deam caeloque locamus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 365. (c. A. D. 120)

15 When Fortune flatters, she comes to betray. (Fortuna cum blanditur captatum venit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 197. (c. 43 B. C.)
That which Fortune breaks, 'tis vain to repair. (Fortuna unde aliquid fregit cassumst [reficere].)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 201.
When Fortune favors a man too much she makes him a fool. (Fortuna nimium quem fovet stultum facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 203.
Man proposes one thing, Fortune another. (Homo semper aliud, Fortuna aliud cogitat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 253. MAN PROPOSES, GOD DISPOSES, see under GOD.

The man is never without suffering, who meets with fortune. (Homo ne sit sine dolore fortunam invenit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 255. Nisard's rendering is, "L'homme serait sans douleur s'il ne trouvait la fortune" (Man would be without suffering if he did not find fortune).

No fortune is so good but you could make some complaint about it. (Nulla tam bona est fortuna de qua nihil possis queri.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 429.

Fortune shields more people than she makes safe. (Plures tegit Fortuna quam tutos facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 544.

Whatever fortune bedizens is soon despised. (Quicquid fortuna exornat cito contemnitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 602.

1 Fortune is never contented with hurting anyone once. (Fortuna obesse nulli contenta est semel.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 213. (c. 43 B. C.) BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 14.

Fortune rarely brings Good or Evil singly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1605. (1732)
See also under MISFORTUNE: MISFORTUNES
NEVER COME SINGLY.

2 Fortune is like glass—just when it glitters, it smashes. (Fortuna vitrea est: tum cum splendet frangitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 219. (c. 43 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 40. Godeau, Bishop of Grasse, translated the line thus:

Et comme elle a l'éclat du verre,
Elle en a la fragilité.

(And while it has the brightness of glass, it has also its fragility.) Corneille introduced this translation into Polyeucte. Florio translated it,

Fortune is glasse-like, brittle as 'tis bright:

Light-gon, Light-broken, when it lends best light.
The Germans say, "Glück und Glas, Wie bald bricht das!" (Fortune and glass, how quickly broken!)

3 Fortune avails a man more than judgment. (Fortuna plus homini quam consilium valet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 222. (c. 43 B. C.) Fortune knows neither reason nor law. (οὐ λόγου, τὰ θνητῶν πράγματα, οὐκ εὐβουλία.)

CHAEEMON, Fragment. Nauck, p. 782. (c. A. D. 50) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: Chance, 97C, and by CICERO, Tusculanean Disputations, v, 9, 25: "Vitam regit fortuna, non sapientia."

Fortune knows neither reason nor law. (οὐ λόγου, οὐ νόμον οἶδε Τύχη.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. 450) Greek Anth., x, 62. The French say, "En fortune n'a point de raison" (In fortune there is no reason at all).

4 Fortune takes least from him she has given least. (Minimum eripit Fortuna cum minimum dedit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 393. (c. 43 B. C.)

Fortune takes nothing away except what she gives us. (Nihil eripit Fortuna nisi quod et dedit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 422.

That which Fortune has not given she cannot take away. (Quod non dedit fortuna, non eripit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lix, sec. 18. (c. A. D. 64)

Fortune can take from us nothing but what she gave us.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1598. (1732)

5 Fortune makes a fool of him whom she would ruin. (Stultum facit Fortuna quem vult perdere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 671. (c. 43

B. C.) BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia, No. 13, quotes this in a different form, "Fortuna nimium quem fovet, stultum facit" (Fortune makes a fool of him whom she most favors). The Germans say, "Wenn das Glück verderben will, den macht es zum Narren" (He whom fortune would ruin she makes a fool of). The more familiar form of this proverb is "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad." See under MADNESS.

6 As Fortune's man rides the horse, so Fortune herself rides the man.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World: Preface. (1614)

7 When fortune smiles, take the advantage.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1678)

When fortune favours, none but fools will dally.

DRYDEN, The Duke of Guise: Epilogue. (1682)

When Fortune smiles, embrace her.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5553. (1732)

When Fortune knocks, be sure to open the door.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Fortune. (1736)

The Germans have the same proverb, "Wenn das Glück anpocht, soll man ihm aufthun." The Danes say, "Fortune knocks, but fools do not answer."

The day of fortune is like a harvest day,

We must be busy when the corn is ripe.

(Ein Tag der Gunst ist wie ein Tag der Ernte, Man muss geschäftig sein sobald sie reift.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act iv, sc. 4. (1790)

See also under OPPORTUNITY.

8 If fortune favour I may have her, for I go about her;

If fortune fail you may kiss her tail, and go without her.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 212. (1678)

9 If the heavens bestow not fortune, by no valour can it be obtained.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. v, Maxim 2. (c. 1257)

10 To tempt fortune. (Fortunam temptare.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 7. (c. 40 B. C.)

11 Fortune runs to meet us not less often than we go to meet her. (Non minus saepe fortuna in nos incurrit quam nos in illam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxvii, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 64)

Fortune has not the long reach with which we credit her; she can seize none except him that clings to her. (Non habet, ut putamus, fortuna longas manus; neminem occupat nisi haerentem sibi.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxii, sec. 5. He can beware fortune who can bear fortune. (Potest fortunam cavere, qui potest ferre.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 7. He was undisturbed amidst the greatest disturbance of fortune. (Aequalis fuit in tanta inequalitate fortunae.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. civ, sec. 28. Of Socrates.

1 Fortune conquers us, unless we wholly conquer her. (Vincit nos fortuna, nisi tota vincitur.)

SENECA, De Constantia. Ch.15, sec.3. (c. A. D. 45)

2 Fortune is gentle to the lowly. (Minor in parvis Fortuna furit.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1124. (c. A. D. 60)

Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to the poor.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 52. (1605)

3 Fortune fears the brave, the cowardly overwhelms. (Fortuna fortes metuit, ignavos premit.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 159. (c. A. D. 60) A paraphrase of the older proverb, "Audaces fortuna iuvat timidusque repellit" (Fortune helps the daring but repulses the timid).

Fortune can take away our wealth, but not our courage. (Fortuna opes auferre, non animum potest.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 176. (c. A. D. 60)

4 Let none be over-confident when fortune smiles; let none despair of better things when fortune fails. (Nemo confidat nimium secundis, | nemo desperet meliora lapsis.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 615. (c. A. D. 60)

5 The football of fortune. (Fortunae pila.)

SEXTUS AURELIUS VICTOR, Epistles, xviii. (c. A. D. 358.)

6 One out of suits with fortune.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, i, 2, 258. (1600)

On Fortune's cap we are not the very button.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 233. (1600)

I am now, sir, muddled in fortune's mood.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, v, 2, 4. (1602)

7 Will Fortune never come with both hands full? . . .

She either gives a stomach and no food, . . . Or else a feast | And takes away the stomach.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 4, 103. (1598)

Fortune sends almonds to those who have no teeth. (Da Dios almendras á quien no tiene muelas.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 221. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

8 And all the unsettled humours of the land
Have sold their fortunes at their native homes . . .

To make a hazard of new fortunes here.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, ii, 1, 66. (1596)

A Hazard of New Fortunes.

W. D. HOWELLS. Title of novel. (1890)

9 I rank myself as Fortune's favorite child.
(ἐγὼ δ' ἐμαυτὸν παῖδα τῆς Τύχης.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 1080. (c. 409 B. C.) No favorite of fortune. (οὐ πᾶν μοῖρας εὐδαιμονισαί | πρώτης.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 143.

Past disputing you are the one favorite of the gods. (Sine controversia ab dis solus diligere.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 854. (161 B. C.)

Fortune's child. (Fortunae filius.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 49. (35 B. C.)

He was fortune's child, in his hand lead turned to gold. (Fortunae filius, in manu illius plumbum aurum fiebat.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 60)

Son of a white hen. (Gallinae filius albae.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xiii, l. 141. (c. A. D. 120)

A child of fortune. Probably a reference to the white hen which was dropped by an eagle into Livia's lap, carrying in its beak a sprig of laurel, just as the eagle had carried it off. Livia was the wife of Augustus Caesar, and she reared the hen and planted the sprig. Both flourished, and it was from this sprig that the Caesars gathered their laurels to celebrate their triumphs. See Suetonius, Galba, sec. 1.

Fortune turns everything to the advantage of its favorites. (La fortune tourne tout à l'avantage de ceux qu'elle favorise.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 60. (1665)

10 A just fortune awaits the deserving. (Sors aequa merentes respicit.)

STATIUS, Thebaid. Pt. i, l. 661. (c. A. D. 92) Another form, used by Sallust, is, "Fortuna meliores sequitur" (Fortune follows the deserving).

11 We are corrupted by good fortune. (Felicitate corrumpimur.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 15. (c. A. D. 109)

Contrarious Fortune profiteth more to men than Fortune debonaire.

CHAUCER, Boethius. Bk. ii, prose 8. (c. 1380)

He getteth much, that looeth fortune. (Assai guadagna, chi fortuna perde.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 27. (1578)

Great Fortune brings with it great Misfortune.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1142.

(1640) The Germans say, "Zu viel Glück ist Unglück" (Too much good fortune is bad fortune). "Good fortune is never good till it is lost," or, according to the Latin, "Bona a tergo formosissima" (Good things look best from the back). The French say, "La bonne fortune et la mauvaise sont nécessaires à l'homme pour le rendre habile."

In losing fortune, many a lucky elf
Has found himself.

HORACE SMITH, Moral Alchemy. St. 12. (1841)

<sup>1</sup> What fortune offers let us accept with unmoved mind. (Quod fors feret, feremus aequo animo.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 138. (161 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> With a fortunate man all things are fortunate.
(ἐν ὀλβίῳ ὀλβία πάντα.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 24. (c. 270 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Fortune is an exacting mistress. (La fortune exige des soins.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 60. (1746)

Energy makes more fortunes than prudence.
(L'activité fait plus de fortunes que la prudence.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 181. (1746)

<sup>4</sup> Where fortune points out the road of safety let us follow. (Fortuna salutis monstrat iter, . . . sequamur.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 387. (19 B. C.)

Whatever road Fortune points out, follow it.
(Quamcumque viam dederit Fortuna, sequatur.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. x, l. 49. The Germans say, "Mag's gehen, wie es will" (May it go as it will).

Where God and cruel Fortune call, let us follow.
(Quo deus et quo dura vocat Fortuna, sequa-mur.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 677.

<sup>5</sup> Fortune cannot retrace her steps. (Neque habet Fortuna regressum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 413. (19 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Fortune is a great deceiver: she sells very dear
the things which she seems to give us. (La fortune est une grande trompeuse: elle vend bien chèrement les choses qu'elle semble nous donner.)

VOITURE, Letters. Let. 123. (c. 1634) Echoed by LA FONTAINE, Philemon et Baucis, "La Fortune vend ce qu'on croit qu'elle donne" (Fortune sells that which one thinks she gives).

<sup>7</sup> An ounce of good fortune is worth a pound of discretion.

WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 42. (1672)

An Ounce of Fortune is worth a Pound of Forecast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 657. (1732)

II—Fortune: Its Fickleness

<sup>8</sup> Fortune, that is uncertein to alle mortal folk.
CHAUCER (?), Boethius. Bk. i, prose 4. (c. 1380)

Fortune is chaungeable.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knightes

Tale, l. 384. (c. 1386)

Fortune ever hath an incertayne end.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Skyp of Folyis, i, 126.
(1509)

<sup>9</sup> Fortune's current is swift to change its course.
(τὸ τῆς τύχης γὰρ ρεῖμα μεταπίπτει ταχύ.)

MENANDER, The Farmer. Frag. 94K. (c. 300 B. C.)

In a wink fortunes keep changing around, life takes such turns. (Actutum fortunae solent mutari, varia vitast.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 219. (c. 186 B. C.)

When things are calm, look out for Fortune's change. (Tranquillis rebus semper diversa timeto.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 26. (c. 175 B. C.)

Changeable Fortune wanders abroad with aimless steps. (Passibus ambiguis Fortuna volubilis errat.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, No. viii, l. 15. (c. A. D. 11)

Recalling the Latin proverb, "Lubrici sunt fortunae gressus" (The footsteps of fortune are slippery).

<sup>10</sup> Virtue is accused of being fair but unprofitable; Fortune of being inconstant but good.
(κατηγορεῖται δ' Ἀρετὴ μὲν ὡς καλὸν μὲν ἀνωφελὲς δέ, Τύχη δ' ὡς ἀθέβαιον μὲν ἀγαθὸν δέ.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On the Fortune of the
Romans. Sec. 316C. (c. A. D. 95)

Fortune is full of fresh variety,
Constant in nothing but inconstancy.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content.
St. 11. (1594)

Who thinks that Fortune cannot change her mind,
Prepares a dreadful jest for all mankind.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat.
ii, l. 123. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Fickle is Fortune: she soon demands back what she gave. (Levis est Fortuna: cito reposcit quod dedit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 335. (c. 43 B. C.)
Swift is fortune, and fickle. (Rapida fortuna ac levis.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 219. (c. A. D. 60)

Trust indulgent fortune little; she is a fickle goddess. (Crede obsequenti parcius; levis est dea.)

SENECA, Octavia, l. 452. (c. A. D. 60)

Fortune is never so favourable but she is as fickle:
her prosperity is ever sauced with the sour drops of adversity, being constant in nothing but inconstancy.

ROBERT GREENE, Morando. (1584) Works, iii, 52.
O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 5, 60. (1595)

Fortune is as fickle as she's fair.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

<sup>12</sup> Fortune directs the course of things according to her caprice. (Res fortuna ex libidine sua agitat.)

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem Epistula. Ch. 1. (c. 50 B. C.)

Fortune, whose caprice rules the nations. (Fortuna, cuius libido gentibus moderatur.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. li, sec. 25. (c.
41 B. C.)

<sup>13</sup> For Fortune with a constant ebb and rise
Casts down and raises high and low alike.
(τύχη γὰρ ὀρθοὶ καὶ τύχη καταρρέει τὸν εὐτυχόοντα τὸν τε δυστυχόοντα del.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1158. (c. 441 B. C.)

A single day puts down the mighty and exalts the low. (μὴ ἡμέρα | τὰ μὲν καθέλειν ὑψόθεν τὰ δ' ἥρ' ἄνω.)

EURIPIDES, Ion. Frag. 420. Nauck. (c. 440 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 104A. A Latin proverb says, "Fortuna parvis momentis magnas rerum commutationes efficit" (Fortune effects great changes in brief moments).

This is man's lot: nothing stands firm. (τὰ θνητὰ τοιαῦτ' οὐδὲν ἐν ταύτῳ μένει.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 969. (c. 419 B.C.)

From one man Fortune with wings shrilly whirling snatches the crown; on another she delights to place it. (Hinc apicem rapax | Fortuna cum stridore acuto | sustulit, hic posuisse gaudet.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode xxxiv, l. 14. (23 B.C.) Whatever Fortune has raised on high, she has raised but to bring low. (Quidquid in altum Fortuna tulit, | ruitura levat.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 101. (c. A.D. 60)

Lowest with highest the fickle hour exchanges. (Ima permutat levis hora summis.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 598. (c. A.D. 60)

Whom the rising sun hath seen high in pride, him the setting sun hath seen laid low. (Quem dies vidit veniens superbum, | hunc dies vidit fugiens iacentem.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 613. (c. A.D. 60) The Germans say, "Am Morgen roth, Am Abend todt" (At morning red, At evening dead).

If Fortune so wishes, you will become a Consul from being a rhetor; if again she so wishes, you will become a rhetor from being a Consul. (Si Fortuna volet, fiet de rhetore consul; | si volet haec eadem, fiet de consule rhetor.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. vii, l. 197. (c. A.D. 120) Where the master of the house once hung his weapons, the shepherd hangs his scrip.

Palestinian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 84b. (c. 400)

Today nobody, tomorrow a prince. (Hodie nullus, cras maximus.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, i, 88. (1523) The reverse of "Today a man, tomorrow a mouse."

It is the fashion of fortune commonly thus to frame, that when hope and hap, when health and wealth are highest, then woe and wracke, disease and death are nighest.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 179. (1576)

No change of Fortune's calms

Can cast my fortune down.

When Fortune smiles, I smile to think

How quickly she will frown.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, I Envy Not Their Hap. (c. 1595)

Ter-morrow may be de carridge-driver's day fer ploughin'.

J. C. HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

1 O Fortune, that never are constant in your kindnesses. (O fortuna, ut numquam perpetuo es bona.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 406. (165 B.C.)

Nor does swift Fortune keep faith with any. (Nec ulli praestat velox Fortuna fidem.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1141. (c. A.D. 60)

Many a man has inconstant Fortune mocked, then once more set upon firm ground. (Multos alterna revisens | lusit et in solido rursus Fortuna locavit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 426. (c. 20 B.C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 3, the French being, "La fortune abaisse souvent les hommes pour les relever avec plus d'éclat."

Men have survived their own executioners. Even bad fortune is fickle. (Aliquis carnifici suo superstes fuit. Habet etiam mala fortuna levitatem.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xiii, sec. 11. (c. 64 A.D.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 3.

2 Fortune's a right wheare:

If she give ought, she deales it in small parcels, That she may take away all at one swope.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act i. (1612)

O fortune, fortune, thou art a bitch.

JOHN VANBRUGH, The Relapse. Act i. (1696)

III—Fortune: Its Wheel

3

Thanked be Fortune, and hir false wheel.

That noon estat assureth to be weel.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 67. (c. 1386)

Thus can fortune hir wheel governe and gye, And out of joye bringe men to sorwe.

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 407.

4

Fortune's wheel is ever turning.

CHIA I, Verses. (c. 200 B.C.)

The wheel [of fortune] is constantly revolving.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 151b. (c. 450)

The whirlyng wheel of fortune.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 81. (1576)

Fortunes turning whyle.

THOMAS WILSON, Diana (1921), p. 34. (1596)

The wheel of Fortune turns faster than a mill-wheel. (La rueda de la Fortuna anda más lista que una rueda de molino.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 47. (1605)

Motteux renders this, "The old proverb is true again, fortune turns round like a mill-wheel, and he that was yesterday at the top, lies today at the bottom."

The wheel of fortune is still rolling.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Aesop, p. 15. (1692)

The wheel of fortune turns incessantly round.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Let. vii. (1760)

5

Despayre not, though fortune be contrary, for her wheele doth alwayes turne about. (Ne disperarsi per fortuna auersa, che la suarota sempre ingiro versa.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 30. (1578)

The highest Spoke in Fortune's Wheel, may soon turn lowest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4595. (1732)

6

Fortune hath sworne

To set him upward on the whele;

So goth the world; now wo, now wele.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. viii, l. 1740. (c. 1390)

That false housewife, Fortune, has been more than usually active with her wheel.

FRANCIS BEEDING, The Eight Crooked Trenches, p. 156. (1936)

1 Not only ought fortune to be pictured on a wheel, but every thing else in this world.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1075. (1640)

2 Men's fortunes are on a wheel, which in its turning suffers not the same man to prosper forever. (κύκλος τῶν ἀνθρωπῶν ἐστὶ πρηγμάτων, περιφερόμενος δὲ οὐκ ἐὰν αἰεὶ τοὺς αὐτοὺς εὐτυχεῖν.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 207. (c. 445 B. C.)

Fortune's wheel goes round and round, with now one part of the rim at the top and now another. (τροχὸς περιστρέχοντος ἄλλοθ' ἡτέρα ἀψὶς ὑπερθε γίγνεται ἄλλοθ' ἡτέρα.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To Appolonius, 103F. (c. A. D. 95)

Quoting from an unknown author. (Bergk, iii, 740) The Scots have a similar proverb, "Fortune turns like a mill wheel; now you are at the top and then at the bottom."

3 Fortune turns on her wheel the headlong fates of kings. (Præcipites regum casus | Fortuna rotat.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 71. (c. A. D. 60)

4 Turn the giddy round of fortune's wheel.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 952. (1594)

And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 6, 29. (1599)

Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, i, 2, 34. (1600)

Fortune, good night: smile once more; turn thy wheel!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 2, 180. (1605)

She sings defiance to the giddy wheel of fortune.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Fair and Happy Milkmaid. (1613)

5 Turn, Fortune, turn thy wheel and lower the proud.

TENNYSON, Marriage of Geraint, l. 347. (1859)

IV—Fortune Favors the Brave

6 To men of fortitude is fortune granted. (Fortibus est fortuna viris data.)

ENNIUS, Annals. Bk. vii, frag. 254, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

Quoted by MACROBIUS, vi, i, 52. "Virtutis fortuna comes" (Fortune is the companion of valor) was the motto of the Duke of Wellington.

Fortune helpeth hardy men. (La fortuna aiuta chiunque è ardito.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto iv, st. 73. (c. 1380) CHAUCER, tr., Troilus, iv, 600.

Hap helpeth hardy men alday.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Lucretia, l. 94. (c. 1385)

Who that is hardy the aventure helpeth him.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart, p. 66. (1481)

7 When you find Fortune favorable, stride boldly forward, for she favors the bold and, being a woman, the young. (El que la observó favorable prosiga con despejo; que suele apasionarse por los osados, y aún como bizarra por los jóvenes.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 36. (1647) The Germans say, "Das Glück hat Weiberart: liebt Jugend und wechselt gern" (Fortune is like a woman: loves youth and is fickle).

Fortune is like a widow won,
And truckles to the bold alone.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Fortune-Hunter. Canto ii. (1735)

8 Fortune favoureth not the faint hearted.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 113. (1576)

FAINT HEART NEVER ERECTED TROPHY, see under TIMIDITY.

9 Fortune assists the brave. (τυχὰ τολμῶσιν ἀρῇγει.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 94. (c. 475 B. C.)

Quoted by CLAUDIAN, Epistles, iv, 9, who calls it "Simonides' maxim."

Fortune favors the brave. (Fortes fortuna adiuvat.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 203. (161 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 45, and included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 10, with the rendering, "Fortune helpeth men of good courage." The proverb appears in many languages. The French say, "La Fortune aide aux audacieux," or "Les plus hardis réussissent" (The boldest succeed); for the Spanish, Cervantes uses the form, "A osado favorece la fortuna," but there are two other Spanish forms, "A los osados ayuda la fortuna," and "Al hombre osado, la fortuna le da la mano." The Germans say, "Das Glück hilft den Kühnen."

It is not only true that "fortune favors the brave," as the old proverb says, but philosophic thought does so in a far higher degree. ("Fortes" enim non modo "fortuna adiuvat," ut est in vetere proverbio, sed multo magis ratio.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, ch. 4, sec. 11. (45 B. C.)

Fortune favors the daring. (Audentes Fortuna iuvat.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. x, l. 284. (19 B. C.) Widely used in this form. Sometimes written, "Fors iuvat audentes," as by CLAUDIAN, Ad Probinum, l. 8.

Fortune unto the bolde Is favourable for to helpe.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis, vii, 4902. (c. 1390) This saying also no less tried than true that fortune ever favoureth the valiaunt.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 61. (1576)

Love and fortune favour lusty lads.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

Fortune assists the boldest.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea. Sonnet lix. (1594)

Fortune was always a friend to the Brave.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 110. (1709)

- Fortune aye favours the active and bauld.
RAMSAY, The Widow Can Bake. (c. 1724)
Fortune still assists the bold.
SWIFT, Strephon and Chloe, l. 148. (1731)
Fortune gives her Hand to the bold man.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1600. (1732)
Fortune . . . delights to favour the bold.
R. H. BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: Gray Dolphin. (1840)
- 1
Be bold: Venus herself aids the stout-hearted.
(Audendum est: fortes adiuvat ipsa Venus.)
TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 2, l. 16. (19 B. C.)
Fortune and Venus help the bold. (Audentem | forsque Venusque iuvat.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 608. (c. 1 B. C.)
God himself helps those who dare. (Audentes deus ipse iuvat.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. x, l. 586. (A. D. 7)
SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell, act i, sc. 2, uses the same form, "Dem Muthigen hilft Gott."

V—Fortune: Wealth

See also Riches

- 2
Fortunes . . . come tumbling in some men's laps.
BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii. (1605)
No man's fortune can be an end worthy of his being.
BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.
The fortune which nobody sees makes a man happy and envied. (Facit gratum Fortuna, quam nemo videt.)
BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 15. (c. 1605)
- 3
Why is fortune mine, if I use it not? (Quo mihi fortunam, si non conceditur uti?)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. v, l. 12. (20 B. C.)
Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 10.
It is a mistake to suppose a man makes a fortune, when he doesn't know how to enjoy it. (Il est faux qu'on ait fait fortune, lorsqu'on ne sait pas en jouir.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 57. (1746)
- 4
And all your fortune lies beneath your hat.
JOHN OLDHAM, Lines to a Friend About to Leave the University. (c. 1680)
- 5
Who makes a fortune meanly will not enjoy it long. (K'o po ch'êng chia, li wu chiu hsiang.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2647. (1875)
- 6
A great fortune is a great slavery. (Magna servitus est magna fortuna.)
SENECA, Ad Polybium de Consolatione. Sec. 26. (c. A. D. 43) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 3.
Another Latin proverb is based upon Seneca's, "Fortuna magna magna domino est servitus" (A great fortune is a great bondage to its master).
Gilded ceilings break our rest, and purple coverlets drag out wakeful nights. Oh, if the hearts of rich men were laid bare! What fears does lofty fortune stir within! (Quantos intus sublimis agit | fortuna metus!)

- SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 646. (c. A. D. 60)
The care of a great fortune is wretchedness. (Misera est magni custodia census.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 304. (c. A. D. 120)
A great Fortune, in the Hands of a Fool, is a great Misfortune.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 194. (1732)
A great Load of Gold is more burthensome than a light Load of Gravel.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 197.

FOUNTAIN

- 7
You must cut off the fountain, if you would dry up the stream.
TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night x, p. 173. (1854)
- 8
The fountains themselves are athirst. (Fontes ipsi sitiunt.)
CICERO, Ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. iii, epis. 1, sec. 4. (58 B. C.)
- 9
They that loath the Fountaines heade, will neuer drinke of the lyttle Brookes.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England: To the Gentlemen Readers, p. 223. (1580)
- 10
A spring shut up, a fountain sealed. (Hortus conclusus, fons signatus.)
Old Testament: Song of Solomon, iv, 12. (c. 900 B. C.) "A Fountain Sealed," title of novel by Anne Douglas Sedgwick.
- 11
Who wants clear water, let him go to the fountain-head. (Chi vuol dell' acqua chiara, vada alla fonte.)
UNKNOWN, An Italian proverb, from which comes the English, "The fountain is clearest at its source."

FOX

See also Lion and Fox

- 12
The fox seldom preys near home, nor does Satan meddle with his own.
THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, p. 986. (1629)
A crafty fox never preyeth neare his den.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 127. (1639)
This they do . . . to divert suspicion, that they may prey the furthest from their holes.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Constant Virgin. (1642)
The Fox preyes furthest from home.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)
The fox preys furthest from's hole. Crafty thieves steal far from home.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 92. (1670)
Foxes prey furthest from their Earths.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1510. (1732)
- 13
The fox knows many tricks, but the hedgehog one great one. (ῥάλλ' οἷδ' ἀλώπηξ ἅλλ' ἐχίνοσ ἐν μέγα.)
ARCHILOCHUS, Satires. Frag. 83. (c. 700 B. C.)

- Quoted by STASINUS OF CYPRUS (?), The Margites. No. 5. (c. 675 B.C.), and by ZENOBIUS, Adagia, v, 68, who attributes the epigram to Homer. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 18, with the Latin, "Multa novit vulpes, echinus unum magnum." "Felis" (cat) is often substituted for "echinus," this form being based upon the fable of the fox who boasted of the many devices he had to escape the hounds, and the cat retorted that she had only one, to climb the nearest tree, but that it was worth more than all the fox's tricks put together. This is the form followed by the English, "The fox knows many tricks and the cat only one, but that the best of all." In other words, cleverness is not enough.
- Though the fox run the chicken hath wings.
 GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 551. (1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5008. (1732)
- <sup>1</sup>
 When the fox is king, bow to him.
Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 16b. (c. 450) One month in the year, according to fable, the fox is king over all animals, and all acknowledge him, although he is one of the weakest. The moral is that when one is elevated to office from no matter how low a station, he must be respected.
- We must fall down before a fox in season.
 JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 405. (1678)
- When the monkey reigns, dance before him.
 BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 87. (1817)
- To the fox in his time one has to bow.
 COHEN, Ancient Jewish Proverbs, p.100. (1911)
- <sup>2</sup>
 The fox condemns the trap, not himself.
 WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)
- <sup>3</sup>
 It seemed (as the saying is) either a foxe or a fearnie brake.
 JOHN BRIDGES, A Defence of the Government Established in the Church of Englande, p. 99. (1587)
- Beware the fox in a fearnie bush. . . . Hypocrisy often clokes a knave.
 UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS., iii, 33. (1639)
- He spoke of a fox, but when all came to all, it was but a ferne brake.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 143. (1639)
 HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)
- It is a blind Goose that knows not a Fox from a Fernbush.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2848. (1732)
- <sup>4</sup>
 The fox kills the lambs and the hounds the old sheep.
 GEORGE CHAPMAN, Two Wise Men. Act iii, sc. 1. (1619) Quoted as a proverb.
- <sup>5</sup>
 To set the fox to keep the geese.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 9. (1639)
- You have set the fox to keep the geese.
 WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia. p. 31. (1672)
- He sets the fox to keep the geese.
 OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 45. (1709)
- A Fox should not be of the Jury at a Goose's trial.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 116. (1732)
- <sup>6</sup>
 Every fox must pay his own skin to the flayer.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 215. (1639)
 RAY, English Proverbs, p. 93. (1670)
- At length the fox is brought to the furrier.
 GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 86. (1640) From the old French proverb, "Enfin les renards se trouve chez le pelletier."
- All foxes are found at the furriers shop. (Tutte le volpi si trovano in pellicaria.)
 TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 199. (1666)
- No fox so cunning but he comes to the furrier's at last.
 MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant, iii, 409. (1796)
- The fox's hide finds aye the flaying knife.
 WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818)
- <sup>7</sup>
 An old fox need learn no craft.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 267. (1639)
 RAY, English Proverbs, p. 127. (1670)
- An old Fox needs not to be taught Tricks.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 644. (1732)
- Old Foxes want no Tutors.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3712. (1732)
- <sup>8</sup>
 'Tis good to follow the old fox.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 268. (1639)
- <sup>9</sup>
 The sleepy fox hath seldom feathered breakfasts.
 RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Emplumé. (1611)
- When the foxe sleepeth, nothing falleth into his mouth.
 THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 98. (1633)
 From the French, "A regnard endormi rien ne cheut en la gueule."
- The sleeping Fox catches no poultry.
 FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.
- <sup>10</sup>
 At length the fox turns monk.
 RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Moine. (1611)
 HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 77. (1640)
- <sup>11</sup>
 My deeds were not those of the lion, but of the fox. (L' opere mie | non furon leonine, ma di volpe.)
 DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxvii, l. 74. (c. 1300)
- The Foxes wiles shal neuer enter into ye Lyons head.
 JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 337. (1579) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4547. (1732)
- <sup>12</sup>
 He is a proud tod [fox] that will not scrape his own hole.
 FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595)
- The tod [fox] keeps his own hole clean.
 JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 320. (1721)
- SCOTT, Peveir of the Peak. Ch. 4. (1823)
- Foxes dig not their own Holes.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1608. (1732)
- <sup>13</sup>
 He is no fox whose den hath but one hole.
 THOMAS FULLER, Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1642)

<sup>1</sup> Reynard is still Reynard, tho' he put on a Cowl.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4033. (1732)
The Fox praiseth the Meat out of the Crow's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4546. A reference to Aesop's fable. See under CROW.

<sup>2</sup> We must play the Foxe with Foxes, and declude art with art.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 80. (1574) Pettie, tr. A rendering of the Greek proverb, ἀλωπεκίσειν πρὸς ἑτέραν ἀλώπεκα (In the presence of another fox one must play the fox).

If thou dealest with a Fox, think of his Tricks.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2717. (1732)
With Foxes we must play the Fox.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5797. (1732)
See also under CUNNING.

<sup>3</sup> Aye runneth the Foxe as long as hee feete hes.

ROBERT HENRYSON, The Morall Fabillis of Esope, p. 29. (c. 1450)

As long runs the fox as he feet hath.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 4. (c. 1595)

<sup>4</sup> He that will deceive the fox must rise betimes.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 353. (1640)
They must rise betimes that can put tricks upon you.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 20 Feb., 1646.

He must rise early, that deceives the tod [fox].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 130. (1721)

<sup>5</sup> He that hath a fox for his mate, hath need of a net at his girdle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 430. (1640) A variation of "He who hath a wolf for his mate needs a dog for his man."

<sup>6</sup> Be a man neuer so greedy to wyn,
He can haue no more of the foxe but the skyn.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

<sup>7</sup> Where the lion's skin does not reach, it must be pieced out with the skin of a fox. (δπου μὴ ἐφικνείται ἡ λεοντῆ, προσραπτέον ἐκεί τὴν ἀλωπεκῆν.)

LYSANDER, Maxim. (c. 400 B.C.) PLUTARCH, Life of Lysander, ch. 7. Also twice in the Moralia, 190E, 229B. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, v, 81, with the Latin, "Si leonina pellis non satis est, vulpina addenda" (If the lion's skin isn't enough, that of the fox should be added).

When the lion's skin fails, the fox's must be employed; that is, when strength fails, we must employ cunning. (Ubi lionis pellis deficit, vulpinam induendam esse, hoc est, ubi deficient vires, astu utendum.)

PHAEDEUS (?), New Fables. No. 23. (c. 25 B.C.)

Another form is, "Cutis vulpina consuenda est cum cute leonis" (The fox's skin should be sewn with that of the lion); cunning and strength should go together.

A prince must imitate the fox and the lion, for the lion cannot protect himself from traps, and the fox cannot defend himself from wolves. One must therefore be a fox to recognize traps and a lion to frighten wolves.

MACHIAVELLI, The Prince. Ch. 18. (1513)

If you can't clothe yourself in the skin of a lion, use that of a fox. (Cuando no puede uno vestirse le piel del leon, vistase la de la vulpeja.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 220. (1647)

We shall endeavour to joyne the lyon's skin to the fox's tail.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 26 Dec., 1662.

Craft, where strength doth fail,

And piece the lion with the fox's tail.

JOHN WILSON, Andronicus Comnenius. Act iv, sc. 4. (1664)

The lion's skin too short, you know . . .

Was lengthened by the fox's tail;

And art supplies, where strength may fail.

UNKNOWN, Agreeable Companion, p. 182. (1743)

THE FOX IN THE LION'S SKIN, see under LION.

<sup>8</sup> If the foxe be crafty. more crafty is he that catches him.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 264. (1631)

The Fox knows much, but more he that catcheth him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 282.

(1640) From the Spanish proverb, "Mucho sabe la zorra, pero mas el que la toma." "Raposa" is sometimes used in place of "zorras." Both mean a female fox, or a cunning person. Also cited by FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4544. (1731)

<sup>9</sup> Now I do smell a fox strongly.

MIDDLETON AND DEKKER, The Roaring Girl.

Act i. (1611) To be suspicious. See under RAT

<sup>10</sup> Foxes fare well so long as there are geese to be plucked. (Les renards feront bonne chère tant qu'il y aura des oies à plumer.)

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 253. (1890)

<sup>11</sup> Mee, beeing but a simple sheepe, see how sone
this subtil Foxe could deceive.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 207. (1576)

Though thy skin shewe thee a fox, thy little skil tryeth thee a sheepe.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 322. (1580)

<sup>12</sup> What does the cunning fox really gain by his cunning? (κερδοὶ δὲ τί μάλα τοῦτο κερδαλέον τελέθει.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. ii, l. 78. (c. 475 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> A fox is not caught twice in the same snare
(ἀλλ' οὐκ αὖθις ἀλώπηξ πάγαις.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia, quoting an old saying. (c. A. D. 95) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 22, with the Latin, "Vulpes non iterum capitur laqueo." There is another Latin form, "Vulpes quae semel effugerit laqueos, non capitur iterum" (The fox which has once escaped from the snare is not taken a second time). The French say, "Un renard n'est pris deux fois à un piège."

The old fox cannot be caught with a snare. (γέρων δλώπηξ οὐχ ἀλίσκεται πᾶν.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. x, No. 17. (1508)

With the Latin, "Annosa vulpes haud capitur laqueo." Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 27, with the rendering, "An olde foxe is not taken in a snare."

Vetua vulpes, as the proverb saith, laqueo haud capitur; an old fox is not so easily taken in a snare.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, iii, vi. (1621)

An old Fox understands a Trap.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 645. (1732)

An old fox is too cunning to be caught in a trap.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas, iv, ix. (1809)

An old fox is shy of a trap.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 116. (1880)

<sup>1</sup> The Fox was sick, and he knew not where: He clap't his hand on his tail, and swore it was there.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1678)

The fox had a wound, and he could not tell where.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

"The fox had a wound, and he could not tell where"—we feel extremely unhappy, and we cannot tell why.

LORD LYTTON, Paul Clifford. Ch. 18. (1830)

<sup>2</sup> It is an ill sign to see a fox lick a lamb.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 142. (1678)

<sup>3</sup> We never find that a fox dies in the dirt of his own ditch.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 405. (1678) A better form is, "A fox never dies in the dirt of his own ditch." Ray explains that "the meaning is that men do rarely receive any hurt from the things to which they have accustomed themselves."

<sup>4</sup> And the old ancient prouerbe true did make, Some fox is taken when he comes to take.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, More Knaves Yet, p. 10. (1613)

<sup>5</sup> The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 1, 55. (1590)

<sup>6</sup> Rank as a fox.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 5. (1599)

Red and rank as a fox.

D'URFEY, The Richmond Heiress. Act i. (1693)

He's as ram [fetid] as a fox.

CARR, Dialect of Craven, ii, 69. (1828)

<sup>7</sup> The little foxes, that spoil the vines. (Vulpes parvulas, quae demoliumtur vineas.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 15. (c. 900 B. C.)

It's the little foxes that destroy the vineyards.

E. R. PUNSHON, The Conqueror Inn, p. 18. (1944)

<sup>8</sup>

The fox fareth beste when he is moste careste.

WILLIAM SPELMAN, A Dialogue between Two Travellers, p. 109. (c. 1595)

I perceiue you fare as the Fox, the more band [cursed], the better hap.

HENRY CHETTLE, Kind Harts Dreame, p. 70. (1592)

The old proverb, "The more the fox is curst the better he fares."

ROBERT GREENE, Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay.

Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1590) It has been suggested that "curst" is an obsolete form of "coursed."

Praie thy worst;

The Fox fares better still when he is curst.

UNKNOWN, Thomas Lord Cromwell. Act ii, sc.

3. (1602) Shakespeare Apocrypha.

The Fox fareth well when he is cursed.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 212. (1605)

[They] cared not what they were called, being akin to the cunning creature, which fareth best when cursed.

THOMAS FULLER, The Church-History of Britain. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1655)

"Proverbs, witty in themselves, often become wittier still in their application. . . . No writer that I know of has a happier skill in thus adding wit to the witty than Fuller the church-historian. For instance, he is describing all the outcries and remonstrances which the thousand-fold extortions . . . of the papal see gave birth to in England during the reigns of such subservient kings as our third Henry; yet he will not have his readers to suppose that the popes fared a whit the worse for all this outcry which was raised against them: not so, for The fox thrives best when he is cursed; the very loudness of the clamour was itself rather an evidence how well they were faring."—TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 71.

Let them laugh that win; the cursed fox thrives the better.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1712)

The tod [fox] never thrives better than when he's ban'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 331. (1721)

The Fox fares best, when he is most cursed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4543. (1732)

The Italians say, "Quanto più la volpe è maladetta, tanto maggior preda fa."

<sup>9</sup>

The fox changes his fur, but not his nature. (Vulpem pilum mutare, non mores.)

SUETONIUS, Twelve Caesars: Vespasian. Ch. 16,

sec. 3. The Germans say, "Der Fuchs ändert den Pelz und behält den Schalk" (The fox changes his skin but remains the rogue); the Dutch, "Een vos verliest wel zijne haren, maar niet zijne streken" (The fox may lose his hair, but not his tricks).

Though the fox change his haire, yet he never changeth his nature.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 207. (1631)

The fox is gray before he's good.

EDWARD HOWARD, The Six Days Adventure. Act iii. (1671)

You breed of the tod [fox], you grow gray before you grow good.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 361. (1721)
He's like a Fox, grey before he is good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2460. (1732)
The Fox may grow grey, but never good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4545. (1732)
Many Foxes grow grey, but few grow good.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

Men become old, but they never become good.
WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act i. (1892)

<sup>1</sup> You cannot catch a fox with a bait. (Vulpes haud corrumpitur muneribus.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. 950) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 18.

<sup>2</sup> Colonel Atwit: Well, I must be plain; here's a very bad smell.

Miss Notable: Perhaps, colonel, the fox is the finder.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
The fox always smells his own smell.

K. F. PURDON, Folk of Furry Farm. Ch. 7. (1914)
The usual form of the proverb is, "The fox smells his own stink first."

<sup>3</sup> The wiliest fox provides the best hunting.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Corpse with the Eerie Eye, p. 211. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> Tiberius play'd the Fox with the Senate of Rome.

NATHANIEL WARD, The Simple Cobler of Aggawam, p. 6. (1647)

I played fox several times.

S. R. CROCKETT, The Raiders, p. 329. (1894)

<sup>5</sup> Besides his Skinne, the Fox hath nought to pay.

THOMAS WATSON, Poems (Arber), p. 96. (1582)

<sup>6</sup> Let furth youre geyse, the foxe wille preche.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Mysteries, p. 12. (c.1460)
Though this appeere a proper pulpet peece,
Yet whan the fox preacheth, then beware your geese.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

The French say, "Quand le renard pêche, gare aux oies"; the Germans, "Wenn der Fuchs predigt, so nimm die Gänse"; the Italians, "Quando la volpe predica, guardatevi, galline" (When the fox preaches, look out, poultry).

When the Foxe preacheth, the Geese perish.

JOHN LILLY, Euphuus (Arber), p. 75. (1579)
It is . . . a blynde Goose that commeth to the Foxes sermon.

LILLY, Euphuus and His England, p. 327.
Beware the geese when the Fox preaches.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 304. (1605)

Take in your geese, the fox begins to preach.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, A Whole Crew of Kind Gossips, p. 14. (1609)

When the fox preacheth, beware geese.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 339. (1640)

When the tod [fox] preaches, look to the geese.
When wicked men put on a cloak of religion, suspect some wicked design.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 344. (1721)
It is a silly Goose, that comes to a Fox's Sermon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2881. (1732)
When the fox turns preacher, the geese had better not go to night meetins.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 26. (1843)

To SAY BO TO A GOOSE, see under BO.

THE FOX AND THE GRAPES, see under GRAPE.

II—The Fox and His Tail

<sup>7</sup> Like Aesop's fox, when he had lost his tail, would have all his fellow foxes cut off theirs.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621) The reference is to Aesop's fable, bk. v, fab. 5, of the fox who lost his tail in a trap.

Like the fox, who having lost his own taile, would needs perswade all others out of theirs.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Enigmaticall Characters, p. 78. (1658)

The fox that had his tail cut off, wanted to persuade every other fox to try the short dock, too.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 14. (1843)

Foxes who had lost their tails, they felt themselves marked men until others followed their example.

STANLEY WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 31. (1922)

<sup>8</sup> As long as ye serve the tod [fox], ye maun bear up his tail.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 12. (c. 1595) As long as you serve a master, you must do as he commands.

<sup>9</sup> The Foxe, who had rather bruze and breake his tayle against the ground to no profit, then to give a little of it to the Ape, to cover his privy parts.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 36. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>10</sup> The fox is known by its tail. (Cauda de vulpe testatur.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 51.
Quoting a Latin proverb of c. A. D. 150.

You mayest knowe a foxe by his furred taile.

HENRY BRINKLOW, Complaynt of Roderyck Mors, xxiv. (1545)

A fox is known by his brush.

THOMAS WALKINGTON, The Optick Glasse of Humors, p. 38. (1607)

<sup>11</sup> I flatter hym to begyle hym, or I gyve one a slappe with a foxe tayle.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 563. (1530)
The other get . . . a flappe with a Foxe taile.

WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 37. (1553)

When a souldier hath thus served in many a bloudie broile, a flappe with a foxe taile shall bee his beste reward.

BARNABY RICH, His Farewell to Militarie Profession, p. 4. (1581)

A man may break His heart out in these days, and get a flap With a fox-tail when he's done.

BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act ii, sc. 4. (1633)
To give one a flap with a foxes tail. That is, to cozen or defraud.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 176. (1670)
Your honour has a mortal good hand at giving a flap with a fox's tail, as the saying is.

SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 8. (1762)
Fox-tail. Anciently one of the badges of a fool. Hence perhaps the phrase to give one a flap with a fox-tail, to deceive or make a fool of him.

HALLIWELL, Dictionary: Fox-tail. (1847)

1 He drags a fox's tail behind him. (τῇ δλώπεκα ἔλκει ἐξώπισθεν.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. ii, sec. 365C. (c. 375 B.C.) And the dragging tail betrays him. The tail betrays the fox. (ἡ κέρκος τῇ ἀλώπεκι μαρτυρεῖ.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, v, 15. (c. A.D. 125)
For as the proverb is . . . the taile is ynough to bewray the foxe.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 362. (1576)

The taylor often condemnes the Foxe to death, because it is too long. (La coda condanna spesso la volpe a morte, per esser troppo lunga.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

The tail doth often catch the fox.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. Prov. 70. (1611) DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 72. (1633)

2 Foxes are all tail and women all tongue.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 6. (1869)

FRANCE AND THE FRENCH

3 The French would be the best cooks in Europe if they had got any butcher's meat.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Biographical Studies: Guizot, p. 358. (1881) Referred to as an "old saying."

4 France was long a "Despotism tempered by epigrams."

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. i, bk. ii, ch. 4. (1837)

5 What is the Third Estate? Everything. What part has it in government? Nothing. What does it want? To become something. (Qu'est-ce le Tiers État? Tout. Qu'a-t-il? Rien. Que veut-il? Y devenir quelque chose.)

SEBASTIAN CHAMFORT. Suggested to Sieyès as title for a pamphlet, 1791.

6 And Frensh she spak ful faire and fetisly, After the scole of Stratford atte Bowe, For Frensh of Paris was to hir unknowe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 124. (c. 1386)

Besides as I suppose their lawes they pen'd, In their old Pedlers French vnto this end.

GEORGE WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt, ii, 1. (1613)

All this to the husbandmen was heathen Greek or pedlar's French.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch. 19. (1620)

7 Nothing is changed in France: there is only one Frenchman the more. (Il n'y a rien de changé en France; il n'y a qu'un Français de plus.)

COMTE D'ARTOIS, afterwards CHARLES X OF FRANCE, Proclamation, published in Le Moniteur upon the restoration of Louis XVIII, April 12, 1814 and mercilessly jeered by the Parisians. Said to have been composed by Comte Beugnot. See Contemporary Review, Feb., 1854; DE VAULABELLE, Hist. Deux Restaurations, ii, 30.

8 A dancing nation, fickle and untrue:

Have oft undone themselves, and others too.

DANIEL DEFOE: The True-Born Englishman. 1701.

9 Nec Pluribus Impar.

DOUVIER, Motto, of the device of the rising sun adopted by Louis XIV of France, c. 1643. Fournier says it was devised by an antiquarian named Douvier. It has been variously translated.

Nec pluribus impar. Non inégal à plusieurs soleils même. C'est-à-dire supérieur à tout le monde, au-dessus du reste des hommes. (Not unequal to several suns even. That is to say, superior to all the world, above the rest of mankind.)

Nouveau Petit Larousse: Locutions Latines et Étrangers, p. 1133. (1936)

10 That will go, that will last. (Ça ira, ça tiendra.)

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, according to CASSAGNAC, History of the Girondists, i, 373. Cassagnac says the Ça Ira, the famous French revolutionary song, was composed by an itinerant musician who took the refrain from this mot of Franklin's on the revolution. It is sometimes translated, "That will certainly happen."

When Franklin heard in Paris the disastrous news of Valley Forge, he exclaimed, "This is indeed bad news, but ça ira, ça ira, it will all come right in the end." The remark, spreading through Paris, reëmerged in the song.

VAN WYCK BROOKS, The World of Washington Irving, p. 15, note. (1944)

11 Fifty million Frenchmen can't be wrong.

Attributed to TEXAS GUINAN. See New York World-Telegram, 21 March, 1931.

The old auncient prouerbe . . . whiche saieith he that will Fraunce wyne, muste with Scotlande firste beginne.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 55. (1548) HOLINSHED, Chronicle, p. 66. (1577)

But there's a saying very old and true,
 "If that you will France win,
 Then with Scotland first begin":
 For once the eagle England being in prey,
 To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
 Comes sneaking and so sucks her princely eggs,
 Playing the mouse in absence of the cat.
 SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, i, 2, 166. (1599) See also under ENGLAND.

<sup>1</sup> France is a meadow that cuts thrice a year.
 GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 891.
 (1640) A rendering of the French proverb,
 "France est un pré qui se tond trois fois l'année."

<sup>2</sup> Have the Frenchman for thy friend, not for thy neighbour. (Ayez le François pour ton amy, non pas pour ton voisin.)
 JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 1 Dec., 1643. Repeating an "old saying."

<sup>3</sup> The French are an indelicate people; they will spit upon any place.
 SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1775.

<sup>4</sup> We are more than ready. There is not a gaiter button wanting.
 EDMOND LE BŒUF, MINISTER OF WAR, Speech, to the French Legislative Assembly, on the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War. (1870)

<sup>5</sup> French ignorance is often more amusing than the wisdom of other people.
 H. C. LODGE, French Opinions of the United States. (1884)

<sup>6</sup> The great nation. (La grande nation.)
 NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Proclamation, 1797. But Napoleon was merely repeating a phrase which had been used previously.
 In France, only the impossible is admired. (En France, on n'admire que l'impossible.)
 NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. (c. 1810) See
 GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 297.

<sup>7</sup> The empire, it is peace. (L'empire, c'est la paix.)
 NAPOLEON III, Address, before the Chamber of Commerce at Toulouse, 9 Oct., 1852. See JERROLD, Life of Louis Napoleon. In Germany this pronouncement was parodied,
 "L'empire, c'est l'épée"—The empire, it is the sword. See Kladderdatsch, 8 Nov., 1862.

<sup>8</sup> The day of the ruine of France, is the eve of the ruine of England.
 SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, *Observations in His
 Travailes*. (1626)

<sup>9</sup> The French they are a peculiar race,
 Parley-vous.
 RED ROWLEY, Mademoiselle from Armentières.
 (1915) "The folk song of the Great War." A mademoiselle from Armenteers. | She hasn't been kissed in forty years, | Hinky-dinky, par-lee-voo.

<sup>10</sup> What France admires is good enough for France.

J. G. SAXE, The Money-King. (1860)
 Everything French suits exactly every Frenchman.
 W. C. BROWNELL, French Traits. (1889)

<sup>11</sup> "They order," said I, "this matter better in France."

LAURENCE STERNE, A Sentimental Journey. Ch. i, l. 1. (1768)

These things are managed so well in France.

BRET HARTE, The Tale of a Pony. (c. 1898)

<sup>12</sup> Who so frivolous as a Frenchman? Who else goes to Venice to see gondolas? (Qui est aussi léger qu'un Français? Qui va, comme lui, à Venise, pour voir des gondoles?)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 683. (1746)

<sup>13</sup> Your nation is divided into two species: the one of idle monkeys who mock at everything, and the other of tigers who tear.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to Madame du Deffand, 21
 Nov., 1766.

A nation of monkeys with the throat of parrots.
 (Une nation de singes avec la gorge de perruches.)

JOSEPH SIEVÈS, Letter to Mirabeau. (1790)
 Something of the monkey aspect inseparable from a little Frenchman.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, Journals, 5 July, 1837.

<sup>14</sup> They do everything, they know nothing;
 They know nothing, they do everything.

(Tutto fanno, niente sanno;

Niente sanno, tutto fanno.)

UNKNOWN. An Italian jibe at the French, a "blason populaire." The Spanish proverbial phrase is "Francés gabacho" (The Frenchman is a scoundrel).

<sup>15</sup> Look at Marianne! (Voilà la Marianne!)

UNKNOWN. A taunt shouted by the Royalists at Albi in 1830, when the Republicans were parading through the streets, carrying a painting of Minerva, supposed to personify the Republic. Marianne was the local slang for a prostitute.

<sup>16</sup> Adieu, pleasant land of France. Oh, my country, the dearest in the world! (Adieu, plaisant pays de France, O ma patrie la plus chérie!)

UNKNOWN. A song alleged to have been sung by Mary Stuart on leaving France to become Queen of Scotland, but really a forgery by De Querlon. The lines were given wide currency by Béranger, who used them as the refrain for his song, Les Adieux de Marie Stuart.

<sup>17</sup> The King of France with twenty thousand men
 Went up the hill, and then came down again.

UNKNOWN, The King of France. (c. 1610) See
 Sloane MS. No. 1489.

The King of France went up the hill
 With twenty thousand men;

The King of France came down the hill,
And ne'er went up again.

UNKNOWN, Old Tarleton's Song. Quoted in a tract entitled Piffes Corantoe, London, 1642.
See also HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes.

Henry the Fourth . . . levied a huge army of 40,000 men [1609], whence came the song.

JAMES HOWELL, Letter to Sir James Crofts, 12 May, 1620.

<sup>1</sup> Liberty, equality, fraternity. (Liberté, égalité, fraternité.)

UNKNOWN. This phrase, which became the watchword of the French revolution, and which, until the fall of France in June, 1940, was to be seen upon the front of every public building in France, is usually ascribed to Antoine François Momoro (1756-1794). The first official use of the phrase, according to AULARD, Études et Leçons sur la Révolution Française, ser. vi, was in a motion passed by the Club des Cordeliers, 30 June, 1793, inviting owners of houses to have painted on their façades in large letters, these words: "Unité, indivisibilité de la République, Liberté, Égalité, Fraternité ou la mort." (Unity, indivisibility of the Republic, Liberty, Equality, Fraternity or death). See Journal de Paris, No. 182. There is a legend that the use of the phrase as the revolutionary watchword was suggested by Benjamin Franklin. After the fall of France in 1940, "Liberté, Égalité, Fraternité" was discarded, and in its place was substituted "Travail, Famille, Patrie" (Work, Family, Fatherland). With the liberation of France in 1944, the old revolutionary phrase was restored.

Be my brother, or I will kill thee. (Soyez mon frère, ou je tu tuerai.)

SEBASTIAN CHAMFORT, ridiculing the revolutionary watchword, "Fraternity or death," which he called a "brotherhood of Cain." CARLYLE also paraphrased it, French Revolution, ii, i, 12, "We will have equality should we descend for it to the tomb."

I have lived. (J'ai vécu.)

JOSEPH SIEYÈS, after the Reign of Terror, when asked what he had done during the Revolution. See MIGNET, Notices Historiques, i, 81.

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN

<sup>2</sup> I succeed him; no one could replace him.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, to the Comte de Vergennes, when the latter remarked, "You replace Mr. Franklin," as envoy to France.

The greatest man and ornament of the age and country in which he lived.

JEFFERSON, Letter to Samuel Smith, 1798.

A philosophical Quaker full of mean and thrifty maxims.

JOHN KEATS, Letter to G. Keats, 14 Oct., 1818.

<sup>3</sup> He has wrested from thundering Jove his thunderbolt and strength. (Eripuitque Jovi fulmen viresque tonandi.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica, i, 104. (c. 25 B. C.)

He snatched the thunderbolt from heaven, then the sceptres from tyrants. (Eripuit caelo fulmen, mox sceptrum tyrannis.)

ANNE ROBERT JACQUES TURGOT, Inscription, for the Houdon bust of Franklin, 1778. According to CONDORCET, Vie de Turgot, p. 200, this is the phrase as Turgot wrote it, adapting it from Manilius, but it is frequently misquoted, "Eripuit caelo fulmen, sceptrumque tyrannis." Frederick von der Trenck, at his trial before the Revolutionary Tribunal of Paris, 9 July, 1794, asserted that he was the author of the line. See GARTENLAUBE, Last Hours of Baron Trenck. It may be that the direct ancestor of the phrase was not Manilius, but Cardinal Melchior de Polignac, whose Latin poem in refutation of Lucretius, Anti-Lucretius, Sive de Deo et Natura Libri Novem, published in 1745 and widely read in France, contained the line (bk. i, l. 96), "Eripuit fulmenque Jovi, Phoeboque sagittas" (He snatched the thunderbolt from Jove, and the arrows from Phoebus). Franklin, in a letter to Félix Nogaret, commenting on Turgot's line, wrote, "Notwithstanding my experiments with electricity, the thunderbolt continues to fall under our noses and beards; and as for the tyrant, there are a million of us still engaged at snatching away his sceptre."

FRANKNESS, see Candor

FRAUD

See also Cheating, Deceit

<sup>4</sup> This seems to me to be fraud upon fraud. (Esto mi parece argado sobre argado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 69. (1615)

<sup>5</sup> Because fraud is an evil peculiar to man, It is the more hateful to God. (Ma perchè frode è dell' uom proprio male più spiace a Dio.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xi, l. 25. (c. 1300)

Fraud, which in every conscience leaves a sting. (La froda, ond' ogni coscienza è morsa.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xi, l. 52.

<sup>6</sup> Fraud and Deceit are always in Haste.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1611. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> Fraud may be repelled by fraud. (Fallite fallentes.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 645. (c. 1 B. C.)
See under DECEIT.

<sup>8</sup> The trick, begun with pious fraud, remained undetected. (Inde incepta pia mendacia fraude latebant.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ix, l. 711. (A. D. 7) A pious fraud is a deception practised for the furtherance of what is considered a good object, especially, in modern usage, for the advancement of religion.—O.E.D.

Their accustomed lies, which they term Fraudes pieuses, pious beguillings.

JOHN FOXE, Book of Martyrs, iii, 898. (c. 1563)

When pious frauds and holy shifts
Are dispensations and gifts.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 1145. (1663)
Madam, 'twas a pious fraud, if it were one.

APHRA BEHN, Lucky Chance. Act v, sc. 7. (1686)
Pious Frauds were made use of to amuse Man-kind.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 419. (1712)
The outworn rite, the old abuse,
The pious fraud, transparent grown.

J. G. WHITTIER, The Reformer. (1846)

1
Frauds are not frauds, unless you make a practice of deceit. (Doli non doli sunt, nisi astu colas.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 222. (c. 200 B.C.) There are a number of Latin proverbs dealing with fraud; among them are, "Dolus versatur in generalibus" (Fraud deals in generalities);
"Fraus est celare fraudem" (It is fraud to conceal fraud); "Nullis fraus tuta latebris" (Fraud is safe in no hiding place); "Fraus vitiat omnia" (Fraud vitiates everything);
"Ex dolo malo non oritur actio" (No right of action can arise out of a fraud), the last two being legal maxims.

FREE

2
Paul said, But I was free born. (ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ γεγεννημαι.)

New Testament: Acts, xxii, 28. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Ego autem et natus sum."

The child's free, white, and twenty-one.

MARGERY ALLINGHAM, Black Plumes, p. 147.
(1940)

The old free, white, and twenty-one business, with every boy an equal right to be President.

J. W. BELLAH, The Bones of Napoleon, p. 245.
(1940) See also HOWIE, Murder's So Permanent, p. 9. (1942) MALMAR, Never Say Die,
p. 10. (1943) etc. etc.

3
No one is free save Jove. (ἐλεύθερος γὰρ οὐτὶς ἐστὶ πλὴν Διός.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 50. (470 B.C.)

Among mortals there is no man free;
To riches is he slave, or else to fortune.

(οὐκ ἔστι θνητῶν ὅστις ἔστ' ἐλεύθερος· ἢ χρημάτων γὰρ δοῦλός ἐστιν ἢ τύχης.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 865. (c. 425 B.C.) ARIS-TOLE, Rhetoric, ii, 21, 2, remarks that the first line of this quotation is a maxim, and that Euripides, by adding the second line, developed it into an enthymeme.

4
Wherever snow falls, man is free. Where the orange blooms, man is the foe of man.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1862.

5
He is not free that draws his chain.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 830.
(1640) From the French "Il n'est pas échappé qui traîne son lien." The Germans say, "Es sind nicht alle frei, die ihrer Kette spotten" (They are not all free who scoff at their chains).

Inferior, who is free?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 825. (1667)

6
In gloomy tones we need not cry:
"How many things there are to buy!"
Here is a thought for you and me:
"The best things in life are free."

JOHN MARTIN, These Things Are Free. (?)

You'd never get him to agree

The nicest things in life are free.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Song Against Sweetness and Light. (1940) The Germans say, "Nichts in der Welt ist umsonst" (Nothing in the world is free).

7
He would have a song about it, and sing it at the "free and easies."

J. C. NEAL, Charcoal Sketches, p. 27. (1837) A saloon or house of ill fame.

Druther git drunk at the "free-and-easy."

EDWARD EGLESTON, Duffels, p. 253. (1872)

Here is . . . a restaurant, a free-and-easy, a saloon.

SWEET AND KNOX, Through Texas, p. 256. (1884)

8
Is any man free except the one who can live as he chooses? (An quisquam est alius liber, nisi ducere vitam cui licet ut libuit?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 83. (c. A. D. 58)

Is freedom anything but the right to live as we wish? Nothing else. (ἄλλο τί ἐστὶν ἐλευθερία ἢ τὸ ἐξεῖναι ὡς βουλόμεθα διεξάγειν; οὐδέν.)

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 23. (c.
A. D. 100)

He is free who lives as he chooses. (ἐλεύθερός ἐστὶν ὁ ζῶν ὡς βούλεται.)

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 1.

No man is free who is not master of himself.
(οὐδεὶς ἐλεύθερος ἑαυτοῦ μὴ κρατῶν.)

EPICTETUS [?], Encheiridion. Frag. 35. (c. A. D.
100) Stobaeus ascribes this maxim to Pythagoras.

The greatest thing in the world, is for a man to know how to be his own. (La plus grande chose du monde, c'est de sçavoir estre à soy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1580)

The power, opportunity, or advantage that anyone has to do as he pleases.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, Freedom of the Will. Ch.
1. (1754)

9
Hee was admitted free gratis.

PICTON, Liverpool Municipal Records, i, 252.
(1682)

Free gratis and for nothing.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 12.
(a. 1902)

They give you maps free gratis for nothing.

ANTHONY BOUCHER, The Case of the Baker Street Irregulars, p. 187. (1940)

10
Too free to be fat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 176. (1670)
Quoted by ROBINSON, Phraseologia Generalis, with the Latin phrase, "Promus magis quam condus" (Giving out rather than storing up).

1 Oh, only a free soul will never grow old! (O, nur eine freie Seele wird nicht alt.)

JOHANN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 140. (1800)

2 Man is born free, and everywhere he is in chains. (L'homme est né libre, et partout il est dans les fers.)

JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU, Du Contrat Social. Ch. 1. (1762)

Man is created free, and is free, even though born in chains. (Der Mensch ist frei geschaffen, ist frei Und würd' er in Ketten geboren.)

SCHILLER, Die Worte des Glaubens. St. 2. (c. 1800)

3 Be free as is the wind.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, i, 9, 88. (1607)

I am free, free as air.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Double Marriage. Act iv, sc. 3. (c. 1625)

As free as a bird in ayre.

SOMERS Tracts, vii, 214. (1635)

He roamed where he listed, as free as the wind.

T. L. PEACOCK, Maid Marian. Ch. 16. (1822)

You know you are as free as air.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen. Act ii, sc. 3. (1930)

4 They wish to be free, and know not how to be just. (Ils veulent être libres et ne savent pas être justes.)

ABBÉ JOSEPH SIEYÈS, in the Constituent Assembly, 10 Aug., 1789. See DUMONT, Recollections of Mirabeau.

5 No one can be perfectly free till all are free. HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30, sec. 16. (1850)

While there is a soul in prison I am not free.

EUGENE V. DEBS, Labor and Freedom. (1895)

For every man who lives without freedom, the rest of us must face the guilt.

LILLIAN HELLMAN, Watch on the Rhine. Act ii. (1941) Quoted.

6 Man is free at the moment he wishes to be. (L'homme est libre au moment qu'il veut l'être.)

VOLTAIRE, Brutus. Act ii, sc. 1. (1730)

FREEDOM

See also Liberty; Speech: Freedom of Speech

7 Fredome is a noble thing!

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce. Bk. i, l. 225. (1375)

Freedom is a fair thing.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595)

Depend upon it that the lovers of freedom will be free.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, to the electors of Bristol, 3 Nov., 1774.

8 Hope, for a season, bade the world farewell, And Freedom shrieked—as Kosciuszko fell!

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 381. (1799)

9 Freedom, it is said, dwells in the mountains.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Address, House of Commons, on the German invasion of Norway, 11 April, 1940.

10 Restraint from ill is freedom to the wise.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman. Pt. ii, l. 206. (1700)

That sweet bondage which is freedom's self.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto ix, l. 76. (1813)

But what is Freedom? Rightly understood, A universal license to be good.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Liberty. (c. 1840)

11 Let them fear bondage who are slaves to fear; The sweetest freedom is an honest heart.

JOHN FORD, The Lady's Trial. Act i, sc. 3. (1638)

12 The greatest glory of a free-born people Is to transmit that freedom to their children.

WILLIAM HAVARD, Regulus. Act v, sc. 4. (1744)

13 Those who deny freedom to others deserve it not for themselves.

LINCOLN, Letter to H. L. Pierce, 6 April, 1859.

14 I remembre a proverbe said of olde, Who lesethe his fredam, in faith! he leseth all.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 183. (c. 1430)

15 Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom, must, like men, undergo the fatigue of supporting it.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis. No. 4. (1776)

16 The only freedom which deserves the name, is that of pursuing our own good in our own way.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 1. (1859)

17 The four freedoms . . . freedom of speech and expression—everywhere in the world. . . . Freedom of every person to worship God in his own way. . . . Freedom from want. . . . Freedom from fear—anywhere in the world.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Message to Congress, 6 Jan., 1941.

18 Freedom, near at hand, makes an old man brave. (Fortem facit vicina libertas senem.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 139. (c. A. D. 60)

The New Freedom.

WOODROW WILSON. Used as the slogan of his first campaign. (1912)

FRESH

19 As fresh as a daisy.

E. S. BARRETT, The Heroine. Vol. iii, p. 155. (1815) She presently came bouncing back—the saying is, as fresh as any daisy; I say fresher.

DICKENS, Cricket on the Hearth. Chirp 2. (1845) Here he comes swinging in . . . fresh as a daisy.

I. AND C. I. GORDON, Two Vagabonds in Languedoc, p. 41. (1925)

<sup>1</sup>
Forth they walked . . . as fresh as an oyster.
E. S. BARRETT, The Heroine. Vol.iii, p.81.(1815)

<sup>2</sup>
"Don't make yourself too fresh here"; that is to say, not quite so much at home.

JOHN BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms: Fresh. (1848)

When she goes out and says that isn't right, they tell her she's too fresh.

H. L. WILSON, The Spenders, p. 270. (1902)

When a man gets too fresh in my town, somebody is liable to push his face in for him.

R. D. PAINE, Comrades of the Rolling Ocean,
p. 41. (1921)

<sup>3</sup>
Fresh as an angel o'er a new inn-door.

LORD BYRON, Beppo. St. 57. (1817)

<sup>4</sup>
As fresshe as braunche in May.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. v, l.
844. (c. 1380)

He was as fresh as is the month of May.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 92.
(c. 1386)

Fressher than the May with floures newe.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 179.

A festlich man as fresh as May.

CHAUCER, The Squires Tale, l. 273.

Freshe and flourishing as the floures in May.

LEWIS WAGER, Mary Magdalene, sig. B1.(1566)

As peart as bird, as straite as boulte, as freshe as flowers in May.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albions England. Ch. 31, st.
4. (1592)

You shall meet some of them sometimes as fresh as flowers in May.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Fair Maid of the West.
Pt. ii, act i. (1631)

<sup>5</sup>
As fresh as is the brighte someres day.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes
Tale*, l. 652. (c. 1388)

<sup>6</sup>
I coulede walke as fresh as is a rose.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Wife of
Bath's Prologue*, l. 448. (c. 1388)

With swetenes freshe as any rose.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. v, l.2897.(1412)

Fayr and fresche, as rose on thorn.

UNKNOWN, Coventry Mysteries, 154. (1468)

Faire and fresh as morning rose.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene, ii, ix, 36. (1590)

Gay and fresh as a rose upon the stalk.

THOMAS BROWN, tr., Scarron, ii, 182. (1700)

<sup>7</sup>
Fresh as a drop of dew.

O. HENRY, Roses, Ruses and Romance. (1908)

<sup>8</sup>
You are looking as fresh as paint.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairlegh. Ch. 41. (1850)

You look as fresh as paint.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act
ii. (1906)

I feel as fresh as paint.

A. W. PINERO, "Mind the Paint" Girl. Act iii.
(1912)

FRIAR, see Monk

FRIDAY

<sup>9</sup>
Right as the Friday, soothly for to telle,
Now it shyneth, now it reyneth faste.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Knightes
Tale*, l. 676. (c. 1386)

Friday, of all the week, is the finest or the foulest
day. (Vendredi de la semaine est | Le plus beau ou le plus laid.)

A. JUBINAL, Recueil des Contes. (c. 1500) Reliquiae Antiquae, ii, 10. (c. 1540) It will be noted that the French kept the Latin name for Friday, Dies Veneris, Day of Venus, while the English word came from the Norse Frige-doeg, Frigg's Day, Frigg or Freyja being the Norse equivalent of Venus. For other weather proverbs relating to Friday, see INWARDS,
Weather Lore.

<sup>10</sup>
Selde is the Friday al the wyke y-lyke.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Knightes
Tale*, l. 681. (c. 1386)

Fridays in the week Are never aleek.

Notes and Queries, Ser. i, i, 303. (1850)

<sup>11</sup>
And on a Friday fel al this meschaunce.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Nonne Prees-tes Tale, l. 521. (c. 1386) The Romans called Friday (dies Veneris) nefastus, because of the overthrow of their army at Gallia Nar-bonensis on that day; among Christians it is regarded as unlucky because it is supposed to be the day of Christ's crucifixion. Legend has it that Adam and Eve ate the forbidden fruit on a Friday.

Now Friday came, your old wives say,
Of all the week the unluckiest day.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Diarium, p. 38. (1656)

Friday's moon,

Come when it will it comes too soon.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 138.(1869)

<sup>12</sup>
I take my man Friday with me.

DANIEL DEFOE, The Life and Adventures of Robinson Crusoe. Pt. i. (1719)

<sup>13</sup>
The foxe made a Friday face, counterfeiting sorrow.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), xii, 120. (1592)

Look what a Friday-face that fellow makes!

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions,
p. 152. (1667)

He has a Friday look.

J. GLYDE, JR., Norfolk Garland, p. 150. (1872)

A downcast, sulky look.

<sup>14</sup>
Friday's hair and Sunday's horn

Goes to the D'ule on Monday morn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 294. (1678) It is wrong to cut the hair on a Friday or the nails on a Sunday.

Friday cut hair, Sunday cut horn,

Better that man had never been born.

Notes and Queries. Ser. i, iii, 462. (1851)

FRIEND

1 Few there be among men in whom it is inborn to admire without envy a friend's good fortune. (παύροις γὰρ ἀνδρῶν ἐστὶ συγγενὲς τόδε, | φίλον τὸν εὐτυχοῦντ' ἀνευ φθόνου σέβειν.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 832. (458 B. C.) When people sometimes see the misfortunes of their friends and rejoice instead of grieving, is not that wrong? (τὰ δέ γε τῶν φίλων ὀνύκτας ἐστὶν ὅτε κακὰ μὴ λυπεῖσθαι, χαίρειν δέ, ἀρ' οὐκ ἀδικόν ἐστιν;)

PLATO, Philibus. Sec. 49D. (c. 350 B. C.) We are easily consoled for the misfortunes of our friends. (Nous nous consolons aisément des disgrâces de nos amis.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 235. (1665) In the adversity of our best friends we always find something which does not displease us. (Dans l'adversité de nos meilleurs amis nous trouvons toujours quelque chose qui ne nous déplaît pas.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 583. This maxim appeared originally as No. 99 in the 1665 edition, but it aroused such a storm of protest that La Rochefoucauld suppressed it.

Wise Rochefoucauld a Maxim writ,
Made up of Malice, Truth, and Wit: . . .

He says, "Whenever Fortune sends Disasters to our Dearest Friends,
Although we outwardly may grieve,
We oft are laughing in our sleeve."
And, as I think upon't this minute,
I fancy there is something in it.

SWIFT, The Life and Character of Dean Swift, l. 1. (1731)

This Maxim more than all the rest
Is thought too base for human Breast.

SWIFT, Verses on the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 5. (1731) Swift argues that the maxim is true, and that one is more envious of his friends than of his enemies. Chesterfield agrees with him. See Letters, 5 Sept., 1748.

2 I please the friend who pleases me. (ἄδον φίλον ὅς κ' ἐμ' ἀδῇσι.)

ALCMAN (?), Fragments. Frag. 18. (c. 630 B. C.) See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, iii, 427.

3 It is better to have one friend of worth than many worth nothing. (κρείττον ἔλεγεν ἓνα φίλον ἔχειν πολλοῦ ἀξίου ἢ πολλοὺς μηδενὸς ἀξίους.)

ANACHEARSIS, Maxim. (c. 590 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Anacharsis. Sec. 105.

Many friends in general, one in special.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 283. (1640)

Choose thy friends like thy books, few but choice.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)

4 A snake is preferable to a faithless friend.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, Invocations. (c. 1075)

The malyce of a friend, is like the sting of an Aspe, which nothing can remedie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 381. (1580)

5 'Tis thy friends that make thee choke with rage. (σὺ γὰρ δὴ παρὰ φίλων ἀπάγχεο.)

ARCHILOCHUS OF PAROS, Lamproon. Frag. 61 Bergk. (c. 600 B. C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Politics, vii, 6, 3.

6 He has no friend who has many friends. (οὐθεὶς φίλος ᾧ πολλοὶ φίλοι.)

ARISTOTLE, Eudemian Ethics. Bk. vii, ch. 12. (c. 340 B. C.) Diogenes Laertius, in his life of Aristotle, sec. 21, condenses this to ᾧ φίλοι, οὐδεὶς φίλος. In the Nicomachean Ethics, ix, 10, 6, Aristotle enlarges upon the same theme: "Persons of many friendships (πολύφίλοι), who are hail-fellow-well-met with everybody are thought to be real friends of nobody."

All men's friend, no man's friend.

JOHN WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, p. 475. (1623) I cannot conceive how he can be a friend to any, who is a friend to all.

THOMAS FULLER, Good Thoughts in Bad Times: Mixt Contemplations. Ch. 13. (1645) Every bodies friend is nobodies friend. (Amico d'ognuno, amico di nessuno.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 8. (1666)

Friendship, like love, is but a name,
Unless to one you stint the flame.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Hare with Many Friends. (1727)

A Friend to all, is a Friend to none.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 120. (1732) All friendship is preferring the interest of a friend to the neglect, or, perhaps, against the interests of others; so that an old Greek said, "He that has friends has no friend."

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 15 April, 1778. I believe he is right, Sir . . . He had friends, but no friend.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 24 April, 1779. He who serves all the world serves nobody. (Chi serve al commune, serve nessuno.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 184. (1856) An Italian proverb. The Spanish form is exactly the same, "Quien hace por el comun, hace por ningun," and the French say, "Qui sert tout le monde, n'oblige personne."

Many friends, no friend.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 96. (1875) The Germans say, "Viele Freunde und wenige Nothhelfer" (Many friends and few helpers in need).

7 Without friends no one would choose to live, even if he had all other goods. (ἀνευ γὰρ φίλων οὐδεὶς ἐλοιτ' ἂν {ἔ}χων τὰ λοιπὰ ἀγαθὰ πάντα.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, sec. 1. (c. 335 B. C.)

A friendless man is like a left hand without a right hand.

IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 255. (c. 1050)

Life without a friend, is death without a witness.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 387. (1640) From the Spanish, "Vida sin amigo, muerte sin testigo."

Life without a Friend, is Death with a Vengeance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3211. (1732)
He who finds himself without friends is like a body without a soul. (Chi si trova senz' amici, è come un corpo senz' anima.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 1. (1814) An Italian proverb.

Better without gold than without friend. (Besser ohne Geld als ohne Freund seyn.)

CARIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 313. (1856)

1 A man is his own best friend. (μάλιστα γὰρ φίλος αὐτῷ.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. 8, sec. 2. (c. 335 B. C.)

I have begun to be a friend to myself. (Amicus esse mihi coepi.)

HECATO, Fragments. Frag. 26, Fowler. (c. A. D. 50) As quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, vi, 7, who adds, "Scito hunc amicum omnibus esse" (You may be sure that such a man is a friend to all mankind). Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. iii, ch. 10, who expands it a little, "Qui sibi amicus est, scito hunc amicum omnibus esse," the French of which is, "Celui qui est ami de soi-même, l'est aussi de tous les autres." Cited as a proverb by BLAND, Proverbs, i, 3, with the comment, "Whether this is true or not, it is certainly true that he who is not a friend to himself should not be expected to be a friend to anyone."

Be a friend to thyself, and others will befriend thee.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 57. (1721)
Be a Friend to thyself, and others will be so too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 847. (1732)

2 We should behave to our friends as we would wish our friends to behave to us. (ὡς ἂν εὖξαίμεθα αὐτοὺς ἡμῖν προσφέρεισθαι.)

ARISTOTLE, Maxim. (c. 335 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec. 21.

This adage ever keep in readiness:

Ask not of friends what you yourself can do.

(Hoc erit tibi argumentum semper in promptu situm:

Ne quid expectes amicos, quod tute agere possies.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Satires. (c. 175 B. C.) As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, ii, 29. The moral of Aesop's fable of the bird in the harvest field.

Hast thou a friend, as hart may wish at will?

Then use him so to have his friendship still.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Posies for the Parler. (1573)

3 Thy friend has a friend, and thy friend's friend also has a friend.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 28b. (c. 450)

A man shall be a friend to his friend's friend.

SAEMUND (?) Poetic Saga: Hovamol. St. 43. (c. 900) The French proverb is, "Les amis des mes amis sont mes amis" (The friends of my friends are my friends).

4 Thy friend is dead! believe it. Thy friend has become rich! believe it not.

Babylonian Talmud: Gittin, fo. 30b. (c. 450)

There is a play upon words which cannot be reproduced in translation: "believe" ('ashar) and "become rich" ('ith'ashshar).

5 Go up a step to seek a friend.

Babylonian Talmud: Jabamoth, fo. 63a. (c. 450)

Never have a friend that's poorer than yourself.

JERROLD, Bubbles of the Day. Ch. 2. (1842)

Make friends with men better than yourself; better none than those like yourself.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, p. 497. (1937)

6 Friends are thieves of time. (Amici fures temporis.)

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning, ii, xxiii, 218. (1605)

He may love study and wish not to be interrupted by his friends: Amici fures temporis.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1783.

7 Be on guard against thy friends. (ἀπὸ τῶν φίλων σου πρόσσεχε.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vi, 13. (c. 190 B. C.)

Between friends the bug in the eye. (De amigo a amigo la chinche en el ojo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 12. (1615)

"Tener chinche (or sangre) en el ojo" means to keep a sharp lookout, and the proverb is saying that even between friends this is advisable. Nuñez gives it, "Chispe en el ojo" (A spark in the eye).

Love your friend, but look to yourself.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 238. (1721)

8 A faithful friend is a strong defence, and he that findeth such findeth a treasure. A faithful friend is beyond price, and there is no weighing of his goodness. A faithful friend is the medicine of life. (Amicus fidelis, medicamentum vitae.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vi, 14-16. (c. 190 B. C.) "I do not remember to have met with any saying that has pleased me more than that of a friend's being the medicine of life."—The Speaker. No. 58.

No doctor can surpass a trusty friend. (Nec quisquam melior medicus quam fidus amicus.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 13. (c. 175 B. C.)

If a man has a friend, what need has he of medicines?

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 21. (c. A. D. 100)

For Catoun seith: "if thou hast nede of help, axe it of thy freendes; for ther nis noon so good a phisicien as thy trewe freend."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 31. (c. 1387)

A friend to whom to reveal is a medicine to relieve.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

- 1 Change not a friend for money.
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vii, 18. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.
Be slow in chusing a friend, slower in changing.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.
- 2 A friend and a companion never meet amiss.
(φίλος καὶ ἑταῖρος εἰς καιρὸν θλίψεως.)
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xl, 23. (c. 190 B. C.) The Latin is, "Amicus et sodalis in tempora convenientes."
- 3 Think twice before you speak to a friend in need.
AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)
While your friend holds you affectionately by both hands you are safe, for you can watch both his.
AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.
- 4 Friends are like fiddle-strings, they must not be screwed too tight.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 358. (1855)
- 5 Whensoever you see your friend, trust to yourself.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 26. (1639)
- 6 We became as great friends as the Devil and the Earl of Kent.
THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760), ii, 194. (c. 1700)
As great as Cup and Cann; or as great as two Inkle-makers.
B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Cannikin. (1690)
As great as old Nick, and the old Earl of Kent.
EDWARD WARD, Writings, ii, 90. (1703)
Lady Smart: Miss, I hear that you and lady Coupler are as great as cup and can.
Lady Answerall: Ay, miss, as great as the devil and the earl of Kent.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)
Scott, in a note to this, says, "The villainous character given by history to the celebrated Godwin, Earl of Kent, in the time of Edward the Confessor, occasioned the proverb."
But Odo, not Godwin, was Earl of Kent.
She and you were as great as two inkle-weavers.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.
When people are intimate we say that they are as great as two inkle-weavers. . . . Inkle-weavers contract intimacies with each other sooner than other people on account of their juxtaposition in weaving of inkle [tape, the looms being very narrow].
WILLIAM COWPER, Letter, 6 May, 1788.
- 7 When friends quarrel the truth comes to light.
(Cuando pelean los compadres, | Se descubren las verdades.)
CARRER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 236. A Spanish proverb.
- 8 Let me have no good thing unknown to a friend. (ἀγνοῶσιν δὲ φίλος μὴδὲν ἔχοιμι καλόν.)
CALLIMACHUS, Fragments. Frag 121. (c. 250 B. C.)

- 9 Where shall a man have a worse friend than he brings from home?
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 335. (1605)
No man hath a worse friend than he brings from home.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 351. (1678)
I see there's no worse friend than one brings from home with one.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
No man has a worse friend than he brings with him from home; . . . in striking agreement with Augustine's remarkable prayer, "Deliver me from the evil man, from myself." (Libera me ab homine malo, a meipso.)
TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 6. (1852)
- 10 Never condemn your friend of many a year: If changed his ways, think how he once was dear.
(Dannaris numquam post longum tempus amicum: mutabit mores, sed pignora prima memento.)
CATO (?) Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 41. (c. 175 B. C.)
Fall not out with a friend for a trifle.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 25. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670)
- 11 There is no friend for a friend (No hay amigo para amigo.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch 12. (1615)
A friend may have so exalted an idea of the duties of friendship that he becomes too exacting.
- 12 [The ties of friendship] should be unravelled rather than rent apart. (Dissuendae magis quam discindendae.)
CICERO, De Amicitia. Sec. 76. (44 B. C.) Quoting Cato. In sec. 78 Cicero adds, "Our care should be that friendships appear to have burned out rather than to have been stamped out" (Exstinctae potius amicitiae quam oppressae).
- 13 One God, no more, but friends good store.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 26. (1639)
RAY (p. 94) and FULLER (No. 6104).
- 14 It's good having a friend both in heaven and hell.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 232. (1639)
It's good to have some friends both in heaven and hell.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1125. (1640)
- 15 To a humble friend one gives a handsome gift. (Iam magnum reddis modico tu munus amico.)
COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 43. (c. A. D. 600)
- 16 To have a friend come from a distant part, is it not happiness? (Yaou phung chee eün fong loi put yek lok?)
CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. I, ch. 1. (c. 500 B. C.) Marshman, tr.

It is delightful to go mad over a friend restored to me (Recepto | dulce mihi furere est amico.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 7, l. 27. (23 B. C.)

Nothing, so long as I am in my senses, would I match with the joy a friend may bring. (Nil ego contulerim iucundo sanus amico.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 44. (35 B. C.)

When friends meet, hearts warm.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 262. (1678)

Between friends, frequent reproofs make friendship distant.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 26. (c. 500 B. C.)
A wound in the eye maketh tears to flow and a wound in the heart severeth friendship.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxii, 19. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

He that reproacheth a friend dissolveth friendship.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxii, 20.

Wring a blush from a friend and you lose him. (Ruborem amico excutere amicum est perdere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 634. (c. 43 B. C.)

Between two friends not more than two words. (Entre deux amis n'a que deux paroles.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 296.

Citing a proverb of c. 1440.

Alas! I then have chid away my friend!

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 1, 87. (1596)

Let us be friends, Cinna, it is I who invite you. (Soyons amis, Cinna, c'est moi qui t'en convie.)

CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act v, sc. 3. (1639) The line which made the Grand Condé weep.

One friend ever watches, or cares for another.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Ami. (1611)

Thou art my guide, my master thou and lord. (Tu duca, tu signore, e tu maestro.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto ii, l. 140. (c. 1300)

Thou wert my guide, philosopher, and friend.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 390. (1732)

The most precious of all possessions is a wise and loyal friend. (κρημάτων πάντων ἐστὶ τιμιώτατον ἀνὴρ φίλος συνετός τε καὶ εὐνοός.)

DARIUS, to Histiaeus. (c. 513 B. C.) As related by HERODOTUS, v, 24.

Whoso would fain possess or wealth or power

Rather than loyal friends, is sense-bereft.

(ὅστις δὲ πλοῦτον ἢ σθένος μᾶλλον φίλων ἀγαθὸν πεπᾶσθαι βούλεται, κακῶς φρονεῖ.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 1425. (c. 420 B. C.)

A loyal friend in trouble's hour

Shows welcomer than calm to mariners.

(πιστὸς ἐν κακοῖς ἀνὴρ κρείσων γαλήνης ναυτίλοιςιν εισοᾶν.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 727. (c. 410 B. C.)

Nothing is better than a loyal friend. (οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδὲν κρείσων ἢ φίλος σαφής.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 410. (c. 410 B. C.)

Of all possessions the most precious is a good and sincere friend. (πάντων κτημάτων κράτιστον εἷν φίλος σαφής καὶ ἀγαθός.)

XENOPHON, Memorabilia. Bk. ii, ch. 4, sec. 2. (c. 375 B. C.)

Of all the means which wisdom uses to ensure happiness throughout the whole of life, by far the most important is the acquisition of friends. (ὡν ἡ σοφία παρασκευάζεται εἰς τὴν τοῦ ὅλου βίου μακαριότητα, πολὺ μέγιστόν ἐστιν ἡ τῆς φιλίας κτήσις.)

EPICURUS, Souvan Maxims. No. 27. (c. 290

B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus, Bk. x, sec. 148.

Nothing but heaven itself is better than a friend who is really a friend. (Homini amico, qui est amicus ita uti nomen possidet, | nisi deos ei nil praestare.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 385. (c. 190 B. C.)

More useful than a crown are friends won by deserving. (Utilius regno est meritis acquirere amicos.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 1. (c. 175 B. C.)

Nothing better can be purchased than a staunch friend. (Amico firmo nihil emi melius potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 53. (c. 43 B. C.) Quoted by TACITUS, Annals, i, 12.

A true friend is the greatest of all blessings, and the one which we take least thought to acquire. (Un véritable ami est le plus grand de tous les biens et celui de tous qu'on songe le moins à acquérir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 544. (1665)

A true friend is of more price than a kingdom.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 376. (1580)

Above our life we love a steadfast friend.

MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sest. ii. l. 79. (1590)

To have the greatest blessing, a true friend.

MASSINGER, Parliament of Love, iii, 2. (1624)

A true friend is the best Possession.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

Codlin's the friend, not Short.

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 19. Repeated in later chapters.

"Wal'r, my boy," replied the captain, "in the Proverbs of Solomon you will find the following words: 'May we never want a friend in need, nor a bottle to give him!' When found, make a note of."

DICKENS, Dombey and Son, i, 15. (1848)

A friend is a person with whom I may be sincere.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Friendship. (1841)

My friend is one who takes me for what I am.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 23 Oct., 1852.

A friend is a person with whom you dare to be yourself.

FRANK CRANE, Friendship. (1919)

A friend may well be reckoned the masterpiece of Nature.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Friendship. (1841)

A man's growth is seen in the successive choirs of his friends.

EMERSON, Essays: Circles. (1841)

A divine person is the prophecy of the mind: a friend is the hope of the heart.

EMERSON, Essays: Character. (1844)

A man's friends are his magnetisms.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

A day for toil, an hour for sport,
But for a friend is life too short.

EMERSON, Considerations by the Way. (1860)

The ornament of a house is the friends who frequent it.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Domestic Life.

1 He does good to himself who does good to his friend. (Sibi benefacit qui benefacit amico.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Amicitia. (1631)

2 When the Gods honour us, we need not friends:

God's help sufficeth, when he wills it so.

(θεοὶ δ' ὅταν τιμῶσιν, οὐδὲν δεῖ φίλων· ἄλλοι γὰρ ὁ θεὸς ὠφελῶν, ὅταν θέλῃ.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 1338. (c. 420 B. C.)

When heaven grants us luck, what need of friends? (ὅταν δ' ὁ δαίμων εὖ διδῷ, τί δεῖ φίλων;)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 667. (c. 440 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 68F, who comments that in good fortune men have most need of friends to speak frankly and prevent an excess of pride.

3 Man should have some certain test set up to try his friends, some touchstone of their hearts, to know each friend whether he be true or false.

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 925. (c. 428 B. C.)

If thou testest a friend, get him by testing. (ἐκ κτᾶσαι φίλον, ἐν πειρασμῷ κτῆσαι αὐτόν.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vi, 7, 8. (c. 190 B. C.)

You should love your friend after you have appraised him; you should not appraise him after you have begun to love him. (Cum iudicaris, diligere oportet; non, cum dilexeris, iudicare.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Sec. 85. (44 B. C.) Paraphrasing Theophrastus.

Beware of thinking any man a friend save him you have tried. (Cave amicum credas nisi si quem probaveris.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 134. (c. 43 B. C.)

Be scarce of thi louing til hit come to prouing of thi gode frende.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi. l. 1672. (c. 1400)

Man, beware and wyse in dede,
Asay thi frend or thou hast neede.

UNKNOWN, Songs and Carols, p. 28. (c. 1470)

Proue thy frende er thou haue neede.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

It is good trying of friendes before need do require.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 67. (1564)

Friendes are tryed before they are to be trusted.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 378. (1580)

First try thy friend before thou trust.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, ii, 573. (c. 1600)

No friend's a friend until he prove a friend.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Faithful Friends, Act iii, sc. 3, l. 50. (c. 1608)

Try your friend before you trust him.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 24. (1639)

4 'Tis sweet with friends to share prosperity.
(σὺν τοῖς φίλοις γὰρ ἡδὺ μὲν πράσσειν καλῶς.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 730. (c. 419 B. C.)

5 True is the old saying, "Get thee friends, not relations only." (τοῦτ' ἐκεῖνο, κτᾶσθ' ἐταίρους, μὴ τὸ συγγενὲς μόνον.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 804. (c. 410 B. C.) There is a Latin proverb, sometimes attributed to Cicero, "Praestat amicitia propinquitate" (Friendship excels relationship), and Cornelius Nepos is credited with "Plus in amicitia valet similitudo morum quam affinitas" (Similarity of manners unites us more strongly in friendship than relationship).

At mariages and burials, frinds and kinrede is knowen. (Alle noze, e alla morte, si cognoscono li amici.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

A sound friend is a second kinsman.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Parenté. (1611)

A near friend is better than a far-dwelling kinsman.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 184. (1669)

Here's to our friends, and hang up the rest of our kindred.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347. (1678)

A good Friend is my nearest Relation.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 151. (1732)

Friends are the nearest Relations.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1613.

No better relation than a prudent and faithful friend.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

Fate makes relatives, but choice makes friends. (Le sort fait les parents, le choix fait les amis.)

JACQUES DELILLE, Pitié. (c. 1780)

Friends—those relatives that one makes for one's self. (Les amis—ces parents que l'on se fait soi-même.)

ÉMILE DESCHAMPS, L'Ami. (1840)

Better one good friend than a hundred relatives. (É meglio un buon amico, che cento parenti.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 177. (1856) An Italian proverb. The French say, "Un bon ami vaut mieux que cent parents" (One good friend is worth a hundred relations); the Spaniards, "Mas vale buen amigo que pariente primo" (Of more worth is a good friend than a near relation).

6 If ye wanted me and your meat, ye wald want ane good friend.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 66. (c. 1595)

If you wanted me and your victuals, you'd want your two best friends.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

7 Hatred among friendes, is succour vnto strangers. (Odio fra gli amici, è soccorso de gli stranieri.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

<sup>1</sup> There are three faithful friends—an old wife, an old dog, and ready money.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

A Father's a Treasure; a Brother's a Comfort; a Friend is both.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

A Brother may not be a Friend, but a Friend will always be a Brother.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

To be intimate with a foolish Friend, is like going to bed with a Razor.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

When a Friend deals with a Friend,
Let the Bargain be clear and well penn'd,
That they may continue Friends to the End.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

SHORT RECKONINGS MAKE LONG FRIENDS, see under RECKONING.

<sup>2</sup> Never catch at a falling knife or a falling friend.

J. H. FRISWELL, Gentle Life, p. 79. (1864)

Quoted as a Scottish proverb.

<sup>3</sup> If you have one true Friend, you have more than your Share comes to.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2760.

One friend in a lifetime is much; two are many; three are hardly possible.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 312. (1918)

<sup>4</sup> Can't I be your Friend, but I must be your Fool too?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1054. (1732)
Friends got without Desert, will be lost without Cause.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1614.

He that ceaseth to be a Friend, never was a good one.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2064.

No Man can be happy without a Friend; nor be sure of his Friend, till he is unhappy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3593.

<sup>5</sup> It is better to be deceived by one's friends than to deceive them. (Es ist besser, man betrügt sich an seinen Freunden, als dass man seine Freunde betrüge.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

<sup>6</sup> There is nothing better than a bosom friend with whom to conferre.

ROBERT GREENE, Never too Late, p. 56. (1590)
The secrets of the breast unfolded to a bosom-friend.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, An Inquiry Concerning Virtue, ii, 2. (1699)

No friend to a bosom friend; no enemy to a bosom enemy.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 261. (1721)

No Friend like to a Bosom-Friend, as the Man said when he pull'd out a Louse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3571. (1732)

One of Fuller's few Wellerisms, q.v.

Your bosom friends are become your backbiters.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

They're kind of bosom friends, if you know what I mean.

NGAIO MARSH, Death of a Peer, p. 311. (1940)

<sup>7</sup> Her stayednesse in sticking to her friendes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 201. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>8</sup> We never know the true value of friends. While they live we are too sensitive of their faults: when we have lost them we only see their virtues.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

<sup>9</sup> If friends have faith in each other, life and death are of no consequence.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 507. (1937)

<sup>10</sup> Particular contentement of mynde that I have sutch an old frende in a corner.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 80. (c. 1579)

Had it not been for a friend in a corner [takes aquavilae] I had kicked up my heels.

DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Westward Hoe. Act ii, sc. 2. (1607)

A friend in a corner for a refuge.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 1056. (1681)

<sup>11</sup> I like a friend the better for having faults that one can talk about.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, The Plain-Speaker, i. (1826)

<sup>12</sup> Before you make a friend, eat a bushel of salt with him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 626. (1640) See under SALT.

<sup>13</sup> Wilt thou my true Friend be?
Then love not mine, but me.

ROBERT HERRICK, True Friendship. (1648)

<sup>14</sup> Do not make a friend equal to a brother. (μηδὲ κασιγνήτῳ ἴσον ποιεῖσθαι ἐταῖρον.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 707. (c. 800 B. C.)

There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. (Magis amicus erit, quam frater.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 24. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>15</sup> He is a worthless man who makes now one and now another his friend. (δειλὸς τοι ἀνὴρ φίλον ἄλλοτε ἄλλον ποιεῖται.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 713. (c. 800 B. C.)

Be called neither the friend of many nor the friend of none. (μηδὲ πολὺξέειον μηδ' ἀξείον καλέεσθαι.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 715. (c. 800 B. C.)

Cited by PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 122, with the Latin, "Nec nulli fis amicus, nec omnibus."

Do not be rash to make friends. (φίλους μὴ ταχὺ κτῶ.)

OLON, Apothegm. (c. 590 B. C.) As quoted by

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, i, 60.

Do not give your hand to everybody. (μὴ παντὶ ἐμβάλλειν δεξιάν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children, secs. 12E, 96A. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, 1, 2, with the Latin, "Ne cuius dextram iniceris," and included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, with the rendering, "Hold not forth your right hand to every man."

Wel seyde Salomon in his langage,
"Ne bringe nat every man in-to thyn hous."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Cook's Prologue, l. 6. (c. 1386)

We should not shake every man by ye hand: That is, we should not contract friendshippe with all.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 148. (1579)
Quoted as a saying of Pythagoras.

Do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledged comrade.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 64. (1600)

1
Ye'll ne'er grow howbackit [humpbacked] bearing your friends.

ALEXANDER HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 334. (1862) "From this," Hislop comments, "we can infer that the person addressed does not allow himself to be troubled by his friends."

2
A good thing is the encouragement of a friend. (ἀγαθὴ δὲ παραίφασις ἐστὶν ἐταίρου.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xi, l. 793. (c. 850 B. C.) Repeated in Bk. xv, l. 404.

Be friends with the friendly, and visit him who visits you. (τὸν φιλέοντα φιλεῖν, καὶ τῷ προσιόντι προσεῖναι.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 353. (c. 800 B. C.)

A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly. (Vir amabilis ad societatem.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 24. (c. 350 B. C.)

3
Those make friends who do friendly acts. (Aquéllos son amigos que hacen amistades.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 32. (1647)

The way to win friendly feelings is to do friendly acts. (Y para ganar amistades el mejor medio es hacerlas.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 111.

The only way to have a friend is to be one.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Friendship. (1841)

4
Not for me attentions that are burdensome. (Nil moror officium quod me gravat.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, No. i, l. 264. (c. 15 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 68, who quotes other writers who protested against too demonstrative friendship.

Unseasonable frendshyp dyffereth lytle from enemytie. (Intempestiua benevolentia nihil a similitate differt.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii, No. 68. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 64. (1550)

5
Have but few friends, though much acquaintance.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1807. (1732) The Spanish form is, "Conocidos muchos, amigos pocos."

A good friend, but bad acquaintance.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 54. (1818)

6
Make not thy friend too cheap to thee, nor thy self too dear to him.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1659)
Make not thy friend too cheap to thee, nor thy self to thy friend.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1670)

7
Who is friend loveth evermore. (Toujourz aime qui est amis.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 4930. (c. 1270) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 5516.

A good friend never offends.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1659)

8
My familiar friends have forgotten me. (Qui me noverant, obliti sunt mei.)

Old Testament: Job, xix, 14. (c. 350 B. C.)

Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me. (Etenim homo pacis meae, in quo speravi: qui edebat panes meos, magnificavit super me supplantationem.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xli, 9. (c. 350 B. C.)

The man in whom I trusted raised his fist against me.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

9
One friend must in time lose the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs. William Strahan. 23 April, 1781.

10
Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. (μεῖζονα ταύτης ἀγάπην οὐδεὶς ἔχει, ἵνα τις τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ θῇ ὑπὲρ τῶν φίλων αὐτοῦ.)

New Testament: John, xv, 13. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Maiorem hac dilectionem nemo habet, ut animam suam ponat quis pro amicis suis."

Greater love hath no man than this, that he should lay down his checkbook for his life.

ANTHONY BOUCHER, The Case of the Seven Sneezes, p. 223. (1942)

11
When my friends are one-eyed, I look at their profile. (Quand mes amis sont borgnes, je les regarde de profil.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 4. (1810) Following the Latin proverb, "Quod pudet socium, prudens celare memento" (What causes shame to a friend, remember as a wise man to keep concealed).

12
Rich for yourself, and poor to your friends. (Dives tibi, pauper amicis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. v, l. 113. (c. A. D. 120)

And who-so wol have freendes here,
He may not holde his tresour dere.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 1179. (c. 1365)

It is not tint [lost] that is done to friends.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595)

It is no tint that a friend gets.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Answer to a

Tale of a Tub. (1642) SCOTT, Old Mortality, ch. 41. (1816)

If there be grease on thy hand, rub it off on thy nearest friend's.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 25. (1817)
Share your superfluities with friends, not with strangers.

What a neighbour gets is not lost.

J. L. KIPLING, Beast and Man, p. 188. (1891)
Quoted as a proverb.

1
Better my friend think me framet [strange] than fashious [troublesome].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (1721)
The Scots also say, "Better a fremit friend than a friend fremit" (Better a stranger made a friend than a friend a stranger).

Where'er

He met a stranger, there he left a friend.

J. R. LOWELL, Agassiz. Pt. ii, sec. 2. (1874)

2
Fresh fish, and poor friends become soon ill sar'd [savored].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 106. (1721)

3
It is more shameful to mistrust one's friends than to be deceived by them. (Il est plus honteux de se défier de ses amis que d'en être trompé.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 84. (1665)
The greatest endeavor of friendship is not to show our faults to a friend, but to make him see his own. (Le plus grand effort de l'amitié n'est pas de montrer nos défauts à un ami; c'est de lui faire voir les siens.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 410.

God send me a Friend, that will tell me of my Faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1686. (1732)
Many a friend will tell us our faults without reserve, who will not so much as hint at our follies.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 1 July, 1748.

There is no man so friendless but what he can find a friend sincere enough to tell him disagreeable truths.

LORD LYTTON, What Will He Do with It? Bk. ii, ch. 14. (1858)

4
It is the part of a friend to forewarn aright. (Porro amici est bene praecipere.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xxvi, frag. 694, Loeb. (c. 131 B. C.)

He is the greater friend whose censure heals than he whose flattery anoints the head. (Magis amat obiurgator sanans quam adulator unguens caput.)

St. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. No. xxviii, sec. 6. (A. D. 398)

Reprove your erring friend, but don't discard him. (Corripe peccantem, noli at dimittere, amicum.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 40. (c. A. D. 600)

I have discharged the duetye of a friend, in that I haue not winked at thy folly.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 321. (1580)

The admonition of a true friend should be like the practise of a wise Phisition, who wrappeth his sharpe pills in fine sugar.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 328.

Thou canst not have me for thy friend and flatterer too.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown, ii, 19. (1669)

The same man cannot be both friend and flatterer.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

5
It is not my habit to lie to a friend. (Homini amico non est mentiri meum.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xxvi, frag. 695, Loeb. (c. 131 B. C.)

6
Help your friends. (Prodes amicis.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Frag. 1187, Loeb. (c. 130 B. C.)

7
There hath neuer bene any faythlesse to his friende, that hath not also bene fruitlesse to his God.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 90. (1579)

Euphues carieth this Posie . . . engrauen in his heart. A faithfull friend, is a wilfull foole.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 331.

8
My fine feathered friend.

VAN WYCK MASON, The Bucharest Ballerina Murders, p. 151. (1940) BALLARD, Say Yes to Murder, p. 14. (1942) THAYER, Murder Is Out, p. 31. (1942)

9
Friends are like melons. Shall I tell you why? To find one good, you must a hundred try.

CLAUDE MERMET, Epigram. (c. 1600)

10
Of all my many friends, scarcely two or three of you are left to me. (Vix duo tresve mihi de tot superestis amici.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 5, l. 33. (c. A. D. 9)

All thy friends are lapp'd in lead.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Philomel. (1594)

A man dies as often as he loses his friends. (Homo toties moritur quoties amittit amicos suos.)

FRANCIS BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 17. (1605)

11
A friend as far as the altar. (τοῦ βωμοῦ φίλον εἶναι.)

PERICLES, Epigram. (c. 450 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 808B. A proverbial phrase cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ii, 10, with the Latin, "Usque ad aras amicus," meaning, "As far as religion will permit." The French say, "Un ami jusqu'aux les autels."

Be not a Friend beyond the Altar: but let Virtue bound thy Friendship.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 115. (1693)

A friend as far as conscience permits.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Conscience. (1736)

12
Of al greifes it is most griping when freindes are forced to parte eche from other.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 117. (1576)

When friendes at departing woulde vtter most, their teares hinder most.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 431. (1580)
For friends, you know must part.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, i, 253. (c. 1620)
But dearest friends, alas! must part.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. i, fab. 50. (1727)

Fate ordains that dearest friends must part.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 232. (1728)

Dearest Friends, they say, must part.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 240. (1731)
The best friends must part.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 11. (1821) The French have an old Wellerism, "Il n'y a si bonne compagnie qui ne se quitte, comme disait le roi Dagobert à ses chiens" (There is no company so good that it doesn't have to part, as King Dagobert said to his dogs).

1 They are twice as good friends as before [they quarreled]. (Bis tanto amici sunt inter se quam prius.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 943. (c. 200 B. C.)
Let the falling out of frinds be a renewing of affection.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 378. (1580) See LOVE: LOVERS' QUARRELS.

2 I praise you, when you regard the trouble of your friend as your own. (Laudo, malum cum amici tuum ducis malum.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 151. (c. 200 B. C.)

3 Nothing's more annoying than a slow-footed friend. (Tardo amico nihil est quicquam inaequius.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 504. (c. 200 B. C.)
I am never too busy to oblige a friend. (Non sum occupatus umquam amico operam dare.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 288. (c. 200 B. C.)

When a friend asks, there is no tomorrow.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 33. (1640)

4 Few friends out of many can really be counted on. (Pauci ex multis sunt amici, homini qui certi sient.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 390. (c. 195 B. C.)
How difficult to find a friend worthy of the name. (Nimium difficilest reperiri amicum ita ut nomen cluet.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 620. (c. 194 B. C.)
Common is the name of friend, but rare is fidelity. (Vulgare amici nomen, sed rara est fides.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fable 9. (c. 25 B. C.)
A steadfast friend is something rare and hard to find. (σπάνιον καὶ δυσεύρετόν ἐστι φίλος βέλαιος.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Having Many Friends, 97B. (c. A. D. 95)

A black swan or a white crow are less rare than a faithful friend. (Cygnus niger, aut corvus albus, rarus sit avis quam fidelis amicus.)

ERASMUS. (c. 1508) See BLAND, Proverbs, i, 3. As Aristotle was wont so often to repeat, "O my friends there is no friend." (Il fault employer le mot qu' Aristote avoit tres familier, "O mes amys! il n'y a nul amy.")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27. (1580)

Nothing is plentier than the name [of friend], nothing is rarer than the thing. (Rien n'est plus commun que ce nom, | Rien n'est plus rare que la chose.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Paroles de Socrate. Bk. iv, fab. 17. (1668)

Friends are rare, for the good reason that men are not common.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 2. (1885)

5 No ill words of an absent friend. (Ne male loquere absenti amico.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 926. (c. 194 B. C.)

A man who backbites an absent friend is black of heart. (Absentem qui rodit amicum, . . . hic niger est.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 81. (35 B. C.)

He that doth love on absent friends to jeere
May hence depart, no room is for him here.
(Quisquis amat dictis absentum rodere famam, Hanc mensam indignam noverit esse sibi.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Epigram. (c. A. D. 390) See

FULLER, The Holy State: Life of St. Augustine. Fuller says St. Augustine "had this distich wrote on his table."

6 True is the proverb they quote: where your friends are, there your riches are. (Verum est verbum quod memoratur: ubi amici ibidem sunt opes.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 884. (c. 186 B. C.) One of the most famous of Latin proverbs. It is quoted by OVID, Ex Ponto, bk. ii, by QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae, bk. v, ch. 11, sec. 41, and by many others. It is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 24, in its usual short form, "Ubi amici, ibi opes," and with the explanation that its meaning is that friends are better than money, and that it is better for a man to have friends without money than money without friends. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 14, with the rendering, "Where frendes be, there be goodes." There are similar proverbs in many languages. The Spaniards say, "Aquellos son ricos, qui tienen amigos" (They are rich who possess friends); the Germans, "Ein guter Freund ist besser als baar Geld in Beutel" (One good friend is better than cash in purse). BLAND (Proverbs, i, 68) echoes Taverner in saying that the reverse is truer, "Ubi opes, ibi amici" (Where there is wealth there are friends), for "Vulgus amicitias utilitate probat" (Friends are commonly esteemed only in proportion to the advantages they can procure us).

I am wealthy in my friends.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, ii, 2, 193. (1608)
They are rich who have true friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4957. (1732)

7 A friend is more indispensable than fire and water. (πυρὸς καὶ ὕδατος ὁ φίλος ἀναγκαϊότερος εἶναι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Tell a Flatterer, 51B. (c. A. D. 95) Quoted as a proverb. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, with the Latin, "Amicus magis necessarius quam ignis et aqua," and the comment that this is "proverbial hyperbole."

How true is this old apothegm, "The usage of a friend is more necessary and more sweet than the elements of water and of fire." (Combien est vray cette ancienne sentence, "Que l'usage en est plus necessaire et plus doux que des elements de l'eau et du feu!")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)
When men are friends, even water is sweet. (Jên yao 'hao shui yeh tien.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 286. (1875)

1 Unless you bear with the faults of a friend, you betray your own. (Amici vitia nisi feras, facis tua.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 10. (c. 43 B. C.)
Study a friend's character, but do not despise it. (Amici mores noveris non oderis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 56.
You should rightly consider your friend's fault as your own. (Peccatum amici veluti tuum recte putes.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 522.
Know the characters of thy friends, but hate them not. (Mores amici noveris, non oderis.)

HORACE. (c. 23 B. C.) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 96. TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 40, comments, "In the maners of frendes some vyces ought to be dissimulated and wynded at."

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act iv, sc. iii, l. 86. (1599)

We find it easy to forgive our friends those faults which do not affect us personally. (Nous pardonnons aisément à nos amis les défauts qui ne nous regardent pas.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 428. (1665)
Cyrus, . . . amongst his equals in age, . . . would never play at any sport . . . in which he knew himself more excellent than they. Ama l'amico tuo con il difetto suo. [Love your friend with his fault.]

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, ii, iv, 78. (1650)
Have patience with a friend rather than lose him forever.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 120. (1817)
A modern Greek proverb says, "Love your friend with his foible."

FITZGERALD, Polonius: Friendship. (1852)

2 So benefit friends that you do not injure yourself. (Amicis ita prodesto ne noceas tibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 53. (c. 43 B. C.)
A friend must not be wounded, even in jest. (Amicum laedere no ioco quidem licet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 54. (c. 43 B. C.)
RATHER LOSE FRIEND THAN JEST, see under JEST.

3 One's table receives more friends than one's heart does. (Plures amicos mensa quam mens concipit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 549. (c. 43 B. C.)

4 Who fears a friend teaches a friend to fear. (Qui timet amicum, amicus ut timeat, docet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 576.
He who fears a friend knows not the meaning of the word. (Qui timet amicum vim non novit nominis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 592.
5 It's ill complaining even about the very friend you love. (Quem diligas etiam queri de ipso malum est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 609.
Admonish your friends in private, praise them openly. (Secretes amicos admone, lauda alam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 653. (c. 43 B. C.) BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, iii, vii, 360, renders this, "Admonish thy friend in secret, commend him in public."

6 Happy is he whose friends were born before him, i. e. Who hath rem non labore parandam sed relictam (Who has got his property not by labor but by legacy).

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 99. (1670)
You may thank God that your friends were born before you.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 379. (1721)
'Tis happy for him that his father was born before him.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

7 He is a good frende that doth thee good.
EARL RIVERS, Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 57. (1477)

He is my friend that grindeth at my mill.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 74. (1633) RAY, Proverbs, p. 93. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2464. (1732)

He is my friend | That helps me in the end.
UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, iii, 288. (c. 1640)
He's a friend that speaks well on's behind our backs.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 143. (1768)
FULLER (Gnomologia, No. 2465) has, "He's my Friend that speaks well of me behind my back."

He is my Friend that succoureth me, not he that pitieth me.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1926. (1732)

8 To cook the pot of thy well-wishers burn all thy furniture if necessary.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apol. 33. (c. 1258)

9 Do not in a moment estrange a friend whom it has taken a lifetime to secure.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 57. (c. 1258)
A friend is long a getting, and soone lost, like a Merchants riches, who by tempest looseth as much in two houres, as he hath gathered together in twentie yeares.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 324 (1580)

10 A friend is not so soon gotten as lost.
HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington, viii, 386. (1599)

They that study man say of a friend,
There's nothing in the world that's harder found,
Nor sooner lost.

WEBSTER AND ROWLEY, A Cure for a Cuckold.
Act iii, sc. 1. (1661)

Friends are not so easily made as kept.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims of State. No. 12. (c. 1693)
A faithful friend is hard to find.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 285. (1721)

Friends are not so soon got or recover'd as lost.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1612. (1732)

It is difficult to win a friend in a year; it is easy to lose one in an hour.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs.

No. 510. (1937) And the Latin proverb says,
"Amicum perdere est damnum maximum"
(To lose a friend is of all injuries the worst).

<sup>1</sup> To be confined by the feet with friends is better than to walk in a garden with strangers.

SADI, The Gulistan. (c. 1258) CLOUSTON,
Flowers from a Persian Garden, p. 5.

<sup>2</sup> Fare often to find the friend you trust:
brambles grow on the rare-trodden road.

SAEMUND, Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 119. (c. 900)

<sup>3</sup> Give glass to friends of glass. (Vitrei amici vitro sunt donandi.)

BISHOP SALOMON, OF CONSTANCE, Apothegm.
(c. 925) A reference, of course, to the fragility of certain friendships, of which glass rings, common as gifts among poor folk in the Middle Ages, were a symbol.

<sup>4</sup> Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided. (In morte quoque non sunt divisi.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 23. (c. 800 B. C.)

Damon to his Pythias, Pilades to his Orestes,
Tytus to his Gysippus, Theseus to his Pirothus, Scipio to his Laelius, was neuer founde more faithfull, then Euphues will bee to Philautus.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 49. (1579)

Pylades and Orestes died long ago, and left no Successors.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3987. (1732)

'Twas sung how they were lovely in their lives,
And in their deaths had not divided been.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt.
iii, st. 33. (1809)

These are two friends whose lives were undivided.
SHELLEY, Epitaph. (c. 1822)

<sup>5</sup> There is a fat friend at your master's door.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, v, 1, 414.
(1593)

Who's your fat friend?

GEORGE BRYAN (BEAU) BRUMMELL, referring to the Prince of Wales. (c. 1814) See GRO-
NOW, Reminiscences, p. 63. Clyde Fitch used the line in his play Beau Brummell. (1890)

<sup>6</sup> Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,

Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 62. (1600)

Keep thy friend Under thy own life's key.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 1,
75. (1602)

Rivet them to their sides with bolts of gold.

ILKA CHASE, Past Imperfect, p. 115. (1942) Of mistresses and maids.

<sup>7</sup> It is better to make one's friendships at home.
(οἱκοι βελτιόν ἐστι ποιῆσαι φιλίας.)

SOLON, Aphorism. (c. 575 B. C.) See PLUTARCH,
Lives: Solon. Sec. 5.

<sup>8</sup> May I be candid with thee as a friend? (ἔξεστιν οὖν εἰπόντι τάληθ' φιλῶ;) )

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1328. (c. 409 B. C.)

Give me the avowed, the erect, the manly foe,
Bold I can meet,—perhaps may turn his blow;
But of all plagues, good Heaven, thy wrath can send,

Save me, oh, save me from the candid friend.

GEORGE CANNING, The New Morality, l. 207. (a.
1823)

<sup>9</sup> There's no great loue lost 'twixt them and mee,
We keepe asunder, and so best agree.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, The Travailes of Twelve-Pence. (1621)

Friends agree best at a distance.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 103. (1721)

The Italians say, "Meglio amici de lontano che nemici d'approso" (Better be friends at a distance than neighbors and enemies); the French, "Longue demeure fait changer amy"
(A long stay makes friendship change). On the other hand, there is a Latin proverb,
"Non sunt amici qui degunt procul," or "Non sunt amici qui vivunt procul" (They are not friends who live far away).

<sup>10</sup> The old prouerb neuer failed yet, Who spreads nets for his friends, snares his own feet.

JOHN TAYLOR, Works, p. 152. (1630)

<sup>11</sup> I know the Table Round, my friends of old;
All brave, and many generous, and some chaste.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 814. (1870)

<sup>12</sup> He's the only friend that is a friend. (Solus est homo amico amicus.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 562. (161 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 17, giving the proverb as "A friend that is a friend" (Amico amicus).

He was a friend to his friends. (Amicus amico.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 60) He stood by his friends.

<sup>13</sup> All is precious that comes from a friend.
(πάντα δὲ τιμὰτα τὰ παρ φίλων.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxviii, l. 25. (c. 270 B. C.)

<sup>14</sup> A tongue friend. (ἀπὸ γλώττης φίλος.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies, l. 63. (c. 600 B. C.)

A friend in word is never friend of mine. (λόγοις δ' ἐγὼ φιλοῦσαν οὐ στέργω φίλην.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 543. (c. 441 B. C.)

All are not friends that speak us fair.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 128. (1639)
Cited by both Ray and Fuller. The French say, "Un ami jusqu'à la bourse" (A friend as far as the purse), a friend till it comes to lending money, a fair-weather friend.

<sup>1</sup> The most I can do for my friend is simply to be his friend.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 7 Feb., 1841.
Friends will not only live in harmony but in melody.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 April, 1841.
Friends are the ancient and honorable of the earth.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 8 April, 1841.
A man cannot be said to succeed in this life who does not satisfy one friend.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 19 Feb., 1857.

<sup>2</sup> For a dear old friend, even seven versts is not a roundabout.

TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. iii, ch. 4. (1865) Dole translates the phrase with the proverb, "Friendship laughs at distance."

<sup>3</sup> One drachma for a good book, and a thousand talents for a true friend.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Reading. (1839)

<sup>4</sup> Hast thou a friend, as hart may wish at will? Then use him so, to have his friendship still.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Posies for the Parler. (1573)

<sup>5</sup> Change your pleasure, but never change your friends. (Changez de volupté, ne changez point d'amis.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Dépositaire. (1769)
Be slow in choosing a friend, slower in changing.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack.

<sup>6</sup> No girding satirist can take up the old proverb against you and say, That you are afraid of your friends, when there is none near you.

UNKNOWN, in Harleian Miscellany, ii, 38. (1699)
You are afraid of your friends, when none are near you.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, i, 222. (1740)

II—Friend: Alter Ego

<sup>7</sup> Friends have one soul between them. (μὴ ψυχῇ.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. 8, sec. 2. (c. 335 B.C.) DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Life of Aristotle, bk. v, sec. 20, expands this to μὴ ψυχῇ δύο σώμασιν ἐνοικοῦσα (One soul dwelling in two bodies).

One soul in two bodies, according to the very fit definition of Aristotle. (Qu'une ame en deux corps, selon la trespropre definition d'Aristote.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27. (1580)
Two friends, two bodies with one soul inspired.

POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 267. (1715)

<sup>8</sup> A friend is another I. (τὸν φίλον ἕτερον αὐτὸν.)
PYTHAGORAS, Apothegm. (c. 757 B.C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 2, who gives the Latin, "Amicus alter ipse."

Another I. (ἄλλος ἐγώ.)

ZENO, answering the question "What is a friend?" (c. 460 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 23. The Latin, of course, is "Alter ego."

Honest men esteem and value nothing so much in this world as a real friend. Such a one is, as it were, another self.

BIDPAI, Choice of Friends. Ch. iv. (c. 300 B.C.)
A friend is, as it were, another self. (Amicus est tamquam alter idem.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 21, sec. 80. (44 B.C.)

This is slightly adapted. Cicero actually wrote "Everyone loves himself . . . because he is dear to him self on his own account; and unless this same feeling were transferred to friendship, the real friend would never be found; for he is, as it were, another self" (Est enim is qui est tamquam alter idem).

You are my second self. (Es alter ego.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. Epis. xxxviii, sec. 1. (A. D. 397)

A friend is in prosperitie a pleasure, a solace in aduersitie, in grief a comfort, in ioy a merry companion, at al times an other I.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 48. (1579)

A true friend, . . . He is a mans second selfe.

FRANCIS LENTON, Characterismi, sig. H. (1631)

<sup>9</sup> Here's the joy; my friend and I are one.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. 42. (1609)

He ought not to pretend to Friendship's name, Who reckons not Himself, and Friend the same.

SIR SAMUEL Tuke, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act ii. (1663)

One should our int'rests, and our passions, be;
My friend must hate the man that injures me.

POPE, tr., Homer's Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 727. (1715)

III—Friend: A Friend at Court

<sup>10</sup> The man that has no friend at court,

Must make the laws confine his sport;

But he that has, by dint of flaws,

May make his sport confine the laws.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, The Revenge. Act ii, sc. 3. (1795)

<sup>11</sup> When the Lord was to bring his people into Egypt He provided so that they should have a friend at court before they came.

DAVID DICKSON, Explication of Psalms: cv, 16. (1655)

<sup>12</sup> It is good to have friends at court.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Popular Fallacies. (1833)

I shouldn't wonder— Friends at court you know.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 38. (1848)

If one has friends at court he can easily become an officer. ('Chao chung yu jên 'hao wei kuan.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 184. (1872)

It's nice to know I have a friend at court.

WILLIAM O'FARRELL, Repeat Performance, p. 95. (1942)

1

For freend in court ay better is
Than peny in purs, certis.

(Qu'adès vaut meauz amis en veie Que ne font denier en courreie.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 4947.
(c. 1270) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 5542. (c. 1365)

A frend in court is worth a peny in purse.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 14. (1550)

A friend in the court is better than a penney in the purse, but yet I haue heard that suche a friend cannot be gotten in the court without pence.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 476. (1580)

A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 1, 33. (1597)

A friend in court, is worth a penny in a man's purse. . . . A friend in court makes the process short.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1670) The latter phrase is a short rendering of the French, "Bon fait avoir ami en cour, | Car le procès en est plus court."

A Friend in the Market is better than money in the Chest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 119. (1732)

IV—A Friend in Need

2

The sure friend is discerned in unsure circumstances. (Amicus certus in re incerta cernitur.)

ENNIUS, Hecuba. Frag. 216, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.) Quoted by CICERO, De Amicitia, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, v, 5. Warmington, in the Loeb edition, renders the phrase by its English equivalent, "A friend in need is a friend indeed." Falconer, in the Loeb edition of CICERO, De Amicitia, xvii, 64, renders it, "When Fortune's fickle the faithful friend is found." The French say, "Amitié dans la peine, amitié certaine" (Friendship in trouble, friendship sure); the Flemings, "In den nood kent men zijne vrienden" (In need men know their friends). The Spanish form is, "En chica casa y en largo camino, | Se conoce el buen amigo" (A little house and a long road, and you'll know a good friend).

In tight places one's friends are apparent. (In angustiis amici apparent.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 62. (c. A. D. 60)

At need one sees who his friend is. (Au besoing voit on qui amis est.)

Li Proverbe au Vilain, p. 32. (c. 1190) The modern French form is, "On connaît les amis au besoin." The Germans say, "Den Freund erkennt Man in der Noth"; the Italians, "Al bisogno si conoscono gli amici."

A freende is knownen in necessite.

GEORGE ASHBV, Poems, p. 67. (c. 1470)

A perfect friend should be lyke the Glazeworme, which shineth most bright in the darke.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues (Arber), p. 91. (1579)

3

Varied indeed are the uses of friends, but the help that is given in time of need stands highest. (χρείαί δὲ παντοίαι φίλων ἀνδρῶν τὰ μὲν ἀμφὶ πόνοις | ὑπερώτατα.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. viii, l. 42. (c. 459 B. C.)

4

It does no good to offer consoling words to a man in distress; his real friend in a pinch is a friend in deed, when deeds are needed. (Nihil agit qui diffidentem verbis solatur suis; | is est amicus, qui in re dubia re iuvat, ubi rest opus.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 112. (c. 200 B. C.)

5

Nothing is dearer to a man than a friend in need. (Nihil homini amicost opportuno amicus.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 425. (c. 200 B. C.)

A sug fere he his help in mod. [A safe companion he that helps at need.]

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred (South), l. 635. (c. 1275)

At nede shul men proue here frendys.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 2251. (1303)

The very and trewe frend is fond in the extreme nede.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Fables of Esope, ii, 251 (1484)

It is sayd, that at the nede the frende is knowen.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon. Ch. 19. (c. 1489)

A freende is neuer knowen tyll a man haue neede Before I had neede, my most present foes

Semed my most freends, but thus the world goes

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Heywood's line served as a model for many others. CAMDEN, Remains, p. 302 (1605), has, "A friend is never knowne till a man have neede"; MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, p. 83 (1685), "A friend is not knawn but in need"; and FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 118 (1732), "A friend is never known till needed."

A friend thou art in deede,

That helps thy friend in time of nipping neede

THOMAS HOWELL, His Deuises, p. 58 (1581)

He that is thy friend indeed,

He will help thee in thy need.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 423. (1599)

Behold, how much it stands a man in steede.

To have a friend answe're in time of neede.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. No. 197. (1618)

A friend in need is a friend indeed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 142. (1678)

GRAVES, Spiritual Quixote. Bk. viii, ch. 22, heading. (1772) EDGEWORTH, Rosanna, ch. 4. (1802) READE, Griffith Gaunt, ch. 46. (1866) etc., etc. The Dutch have the same form, "Een vriend in nood is een vriend inderdaad."

V—Friends Have All Things in Common

<sup>1</sup> You shall share everything, for you are my friend. (ὥστε μετέχειν ἔξουσιν· εἰ γὰρ τῶν φίλων.)
ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 345. (388 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> Cast in thy lot among us; let us all have one purse. (Sortem mitte nobiscum, marsupium unum sit omnium nostrum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, i, 14. (c. 350 B. C.)
The Purse-strings are the most common Ties of Friendship.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4727. (1732)
Friends tie their purse with a cobweb's thread. (Gli amici legono la borsa con un filo di rag-natelo.)

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (1791) An Italian proverb.

Two friends for one purse, one sings while the other weeps. (Dos amigos de una bolsa, | El uno canta, y el otro llora.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 228. (1856) A Spanish proverb. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 562, renders it, "When two friends have a common purse, one sings and the other weeps." An old English proverb says, "One hand in the purse is enough."

<sup>3</sup> What is thine is mine, and moreover all mine is thine. (Quod tuumst meumst, omne meumst autem tuum.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 329. (c. 194 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> Friends have all things in common. (κοινὰ τὰ τῶν φίλων.)

PYTHAGORAS, Apothegm. (c. 525 B. C.) According to Timaeus, the Pythagorean philosopher, Pythagoras was the coiner of this saying, perhaps the most famous of all Greek proverbs. See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras, bk. viii, sec. 10. Laertius also places it in the mouths of Diogenes (Diogenes, sec. 72) and of Bion (Bion, bk. iv, sec. 53). The earliest instance of its use in this exact form which the present compiler has been able to discover in the written work of any author is in EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 735. (c. 410 B. C.) This antedates Diogenes by half a century and Bion by a century and a half. EURIPIDES used it in slightly different form in the earlier play, Andromache, l. 376, where he has Menelaus say, "φίλων γὰρ οὐδὲν ἴδιον οἷτινες φίλοι | ὁρθῶς πεφύκασ', ἀλλὰ κοινὰ χρήματα" (For naught that friends have, if true friends they be, | is private; held in common is all wealth). In the Phoenissai, l. 243, he has "κοινὰ γὰρ φίλων ἄχρη" (In common is the sorrow of friends). After Euripides, the use of the proverb was widespread. PLATO (c. 380 B. C.) uses it four times, Lysis, sec. 207C, Phaedrus, sec. 279C, Republic, bk. iv, sec. 424A, Laws, bk. v, sec. 739C. ARISTOTLE uses it twice in the Nicomachean Ethics (c. 335 B. C.), bk. viii, ch. 9, sec. 1, and bk. ix, ch. 8,

sec. 2. MENANDER (c. 300 B. C.) uses it in the Adelphoi, frag. 9, and many instances of its use by later writers could be cited. In 160 B. C., Terence translated Menander's play into Latin, and put the proverb into that language (Adelphoi, l. 803), "Vetus verbum hoc quidemst | communia esse amicorum inter se omnia" (It's an old saying that friends have all things in common). CICERO, De Officiis, bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 51, also puts it into Latin, "Graecorum proverbio, amicorum esse communia omnia" (The Greek proverb, amongst friends all things in common). It is the first proverb in ERASMUS' Adagia, where the Latin is given as "Amicorum communia omnia," or "Amicorum communia sunt omnia," and nearly a page is devoted to its discussion. It is included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 70, with the rendering, "Amonges frendes all thynges be commune."

Socrates: O beloved Pan and all ye other gods of this place, grant to me that I be made beautiful in my soul within, and that all external possessions be in harmony with my inner man. May I consider the wise man rich; and may I have such wealth as only the self-restrained man can endure. —Do we need anything more, Phaedrus? For me that prayer is enough.

Phaedrus: Let me also share in this prayer; for friends have all things in common (κοινὰ γὰρ τὰ τῶν φίλων).

PLATO, Phaedrus. Conclusion. (c. 385 B. C.) Friends' goods common goods, as the proverb says. (κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν, κοινὰ τὰ φίλων.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 5. (c. 330 B. C.) Aristotle paraphrases the saying in bk. vii, ch. 9, sec. 6.

If the possessions of friends are common, then by all means the friends of friends should be common. (εἰ κοινὰ τὰ φίλων ἐστί, μάλιστα δεῖ κοινὸς τῶν φίλων εἶναι τοὺς φίλους.)

THEOPHRASTUS. Frag. 75, Wimmer. (c. 300 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 65A, 490E.

The human race has certain rights in common. . . . And he that has much in common with a fellow-man will have all things in common with a friend. (Omnia enim cum amico communia habebit, qui multa cum homine.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlviii, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 64) Old in sooth is the proverb which says, "Common are the possessions of friends." (ὁ κοινὰ ἀποφαίνων τὰ τῶν φίλων.)

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Third Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 110. (c. A. D. 75)

He [Pythagoras] was a subtil man and loued aswele to do good to his frendes as to him selfe, sayng the goodis of frendes ought to be comyn.

EARL RIVERS, Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs: Pythagoras, fo. 31. (1477)

All things are common among them which are trusty and faithful friends.

WILLIAM HUGH, The Troubled Man's Medicine, i, i, 3. (1546)

The benefites of fortune are common amongst friendes.

WILLIAM FULLWOOD, The Enemie of Idleness, p. 91. (1568)

All things went in common between them.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 50. (1579)
All things being common between them. (Tout estant commun entre eux.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27. (1580)
Like the primitive Christians, they [friends] have all things in common.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 110. (1693)

VI—Friends Old and New

<sup>1</sup>
Forsake not an old friend; for the new is not comparable to him: a new friend is as new wine; when it is old, thou shalt drink it with pleasure.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), ix, 10. (c. 190 B. C.)

Not before old friends must new friends be set. (Non erit antiquo novus antefereendus amicus.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 12. (c. A. D. 600)

Never exchange an old friend for a new one.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mihhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 253. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr.

When you make new friends, don't forget the old ones. (νέοις φίλους ποιῶν, λῴσε, τῶν παλαιῶν μὴ ἐπιλανθάνου.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iii, No. 80. (1508) Quoting a Greek proverb, of which he gives the Latin, "Novos parans amicos, ne obliviscere veterum." Another form is, "Novos amicos dum pares, veteres cole" (While you are forming new friendships, cultivate the old).

I am to admonish you that you prefer not new fangle freinds beefore olde faythfull freinds.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 245. (1575)

<sup>2</sup>
Let time mature new friends, just like new wine. (Sic novus atque novum vinum veterascat amicus.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 37. (c. A. D. 600)

You ought to like those friends best which last longest, . . . like many wines, which the older they are the better they are.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, ii, 132. (1576)

Vin vieux et amy vieux sont aimez en tous lieux. / Old wine and old friend are loved everywhere.)

FRANCIS BACON, Promus, 508. (c. 1594)

Old wine and an old friend are good provisions.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Old friends and old wine are best.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1670)

I find friendship to be like wine, raw when new, ripened with age, the true old man's milk and restorative cordial.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Benjamin Rush. (1811)

<sup>3</sup>
A new friend makes the old forgotten.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Aimé. (1611)

Ever the new friend driveth out the old, as the ballad sings.

CHARLES LAMB, Letters, i, 159. (1800)

<sup>4</sup>
An old friend an excellent looking-glasse.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Miroir. (1611)
The best mirror is an old friend.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 298.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1670)

There is no better looking-glass than an old friend.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4905. (1732)

There is no better mirror than an old friend. (No ay mejor espejo, que el amigo viejo.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 1. (1814)

Quoting a Spanish proverb cited by Nunez in 1555, and adding, "Like a glasse will discover to you your own defects." Another form is, "A friend's eye is a good mirror." VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 149, also cites the Spanish proverb, translating it, "There is no better looking-glass than an old true friend."

Without a bright mirror, a woman cannot know if the powder is smooth on her face; without a true friend, a man cannot know his mistakes.

H. H. HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 505. (1937)

<sup>5</sup>
Friendship, the older it grows, the stronger it is.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1624. (1732)

<sup>6</sup>
An old friend is a new house.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 402. (1640)

A new friend and an old house are not greatly to be trusted. (Neuen Freund und einen alten Hause, ist nicht wohl zu trauen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 314. (1856) A German proverb.

<sup>7</sup>
A friend may be often found and lost, but an old friend never can be found, and nature has provided that he cannot easily be lost.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, To Hester Thrale, 13 Nov., 1783.

<sup>8</sup>
Look only for this in a new friend—is he worthy to become an old comrade? (Tu tantum inspicere qui novus paratur | an possit fieri vetus sodalis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 54. (c. A. D. 85)

There is no more hold in a new friend than a new fashion.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 324. (1580)

<sup>9</sup>
True freinds are not like new garments, which will be the worse for wearing: they are rather like the stoane of Scilicia, which the more it is beaten the harder it is: or like spices, which the more they are pounded, the sweeter they are: or like many wines, whiche the older they are the better they are.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Pigmaliions Freinde, p. 246. (1576) The origin of Pettie's reference to the stone of Scilicia has not been traced, though it may go back to Albertus Magnus. See Croll's edition of Lyly's Euphues, p. 38, note 4. Lyly used the simile almost verbatim (p. 38), referring to women's hearts.

Friends are better the older they are, garments are better the newer they are.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 440. (1872)

<sup>1</sup> The older a friend is the better you find him. (Quam veterrimus, tam homini optimus amicus.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 173. (c. 186 B. C.)

As olde wood is best to burne; old horse to ride; old bookes to reade; and old wine to drink; so are old friends alwayes most trusty to vse.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 19. (1589) For other quotations on old wine, old books, etc., see under AGE.

Old friends are best. King James used to call for his old shoes, they were easiest for his feet.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Friends. (c. 1650)

Eggs of an hour, bread of a day, wine of a year, a friend of thirty years. (Ova d'un ora, pane d'un di, vino d'un anno, amico di trenta.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 2. (1814)

An old Italian proverb, cited also by CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 177.

<sup>2</sup> Old friends (like old swords) still are trusted best.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act ii, sc. 2. (1614)

<sup>3</sup> After all, there are no friends like old friends: in their company one doesn't have to defend or explain oneself.

F. B. YOUNG, A Man About the House, p. 208. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> Do not disavow an old friend.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 20. (c. 1000) The Germans say, "Alt Weg und alt Freund soll Man behalten" (One should keep old roads and old friends).

VII—Friends and Adversity

<sup>5</sup> When a man fares badly, his friends keep away. (ἄνδρὸς κακῶς πράσσοντος, ἐκποδὼν φίλοι.)

ARISTIDES, Oratio Panathenaica. (c. 450 B. C.)

This proverb, which has been phrased in many ways by many writers, has also been attributed to Menander (c. 300 B. C.), but both ZENOBIUS, Sententiae, i, 90, and ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 81, name Aristides as its author. Erasmus gives the Latin, "Viri infortunati procul amici" (The friends of an unfortunate man are far away). A Latin form, noted by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 70, is, "Cum fortuna perit, nullus amicus erit" (When fortune deserts us, our friends are nowhere), and Henderson adds one of his own, "An empty purse frights away friends." He gives still a third version (p. 469), "Vos inopes nosis, quis amicus quisve sit hostis" (Poverty shows us who are our friends and who are our enemies).

All friends from the poor man stand aloof. (πένητα φεύγει πᾶς τις ἐκποδὼν φίλος.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 561. (c. 431 B. C.)

Who are the friends of a man in misfortune? (φίλοι γὰρ εἶσιν ἀνδρὶ δυστυχεῖ τίνες;)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 559. (c. 420 B. C.) Seek to be prosperous; friends vanish if thou prosper not. (εὖ πράσσε· τὰ φίλων δ' οὐδέν, ἦν τι δυστυχῆς.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 403. (c. 420 B. C.)

No friend will approach when wealth is lost. (Nullus ad amissas ibit amicus opes.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 10. (c. A. D. 9)

The Germans say, "Nimmer Geld, nimmer Gesell" (No money, no comrade).

If thou be povre, thy brother hateth thee, And alle thy freendes fleeen fro thee, alas!"

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue of the Man of Law's Tale, l. 22. (c. 1386)

The wretched have no friends.

JOHN DRYDEN, All for Love. Act iii, sc. 1. (1678)

The vanquish'd have no friends.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Vision of the Maid of Orleans. Bk. vii, l. 465. (1796)

<sup>6</sup> The nuisance these friends are Who spring into being whenever fortune smiles! (ὡς χαλεπὸν εἶσιν οἱ φίλοι οἱ φαινόμενοι παραχρήμ' ὅταν πράττη τις εὖ.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 782. (388 B. C.)

Ready Money seems to be the great Cement of modern Friendship.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 200. (1709)

If you have money and wine your friends will be many. (Yu ch'ien yu chiu to hsiung ti.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2277. (1875)

Feast, and your halls are crowded;

Fast, and the world goes by.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Solitude. (1883)

<sup>7</sup> Whom prosperity maketh our friend, adversity will make our enemy. (Quem felicitas amicum fecit, infortunium faciet inimicum.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (A. D. 524)

For Infortune makith anoon

To knowe thy freendis fro thy foon.

(E li povres, qui par tel preuve

Les fins amis des faus espreuve.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 5551.

(c. 1270) CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 5551. (c. 1365)

For what man that hath freendes thurgh fortune, Mishap wol make hem enemys, I gesse:

This proverbe is ful sooth and ful commune.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Monkes Tale, l. 254. (c. 1387)

<sup>8</sup> Be more swift-footed to visit friends in adversity than in prosperity. (ταχύτερον ἐπὶ τὰς δυστυχίας τῶν φίλων ἢ ἐπὶ τὰς εὐτυχίας πορεύεσθαι.)

CHILON, Aphorism. (c. 560 B. C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Chilon, sec. 70. STOBÆUS, Florilegium, iii, 79, 7, has Chilon say the same thing in a more flowery way, "Come slowly to the banquets of thy friends, but swiftly to their misfortunes."

Be not ashamed of a friend who becometh poor, and hide not thyself from his face.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxii, 25. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr

The swallows are at hand in summer, but in cold weather they disappear. So false friends are at hand in life's clear weather; but as soon as they see the winter of fortune, they all fly away. (Simul atque hiemem fortunae viderint, devolant omnes.)

CICERO, Ad Herennium, iv, 48. (c. 55 B. C.)

Kepe no swalowes under the same roufe of thy house. (Hirundines sub eodem tecto ne habeas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 2. (1508)

Taverner, tr., fo. 73. Because swallows fly away when winter comes.

2 Saucepan friends and friends postprandial. (τῶν περὶ τάγηρον καὶ μετ' ἄριστον φίλων.)

EUPOLIS, Fragments. Kock, i, 349. (c. 425 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 54B.

There is a friend who is a table-friend, who is not to be found in the evil day.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vi, 10. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr. The Vulgate is, "Est amicus socius mensae, et non permanebit in die necessitatis."

Evil is the friend that looketh to the table, but in time of stress standeth aloof.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxxvii, 4.

Friends, not of festive board, nor of tankard, nor of fireside's cheer. (οὐ διὰ τραπέζης, οὐδὲ κώθωνος, οὐδ' ἐφ' ἐστίας.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Precepts of Statecraft. Sec. 816B. (A. D. 97) "Tankard friends" was a proverbial phrase.

While the pot boils, friendship lasts. (ζεῖ χύτρα, ζῇ φιλία.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, iv, 12. (c. A. D. 130) Cited also by DIOGENIANUS, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 23, who gives the Latin, "Fervet olla, vivit amicitia." Erasmus gives also the shorter Greek proverbial phrase, χύτρης φιλία (Pot friendship), of which the Latin is the well-known "Ollae amicitia." Erasmus cites Juvenal's lines, "Te putat ille suae captum nidore culinae | nec male coniectat" (He who thought you captured by the odors of his kitchen would not be mistaken), and "Mensae amicos" (Friends of the table), a similar proverbial phrase. A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 95, renders the first phrase, "While the pot boils, friendship blooms." From the German, "Siedet der topf, so blühet die Freundschaft."

Saucepan and after-lunch friends. (τοὺς περὶ τῆγανον καὶ μετ' ἄριστον φίλους.)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. (c. 228 A. D.) The title means "Sophists at Dinner," or more correctly, "Connoisseurs in Dining." They meet at dinner and talk about food in all its aspects.

The friend of the table is variable. (Amy de table | Est variable.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550) "Table friendship soon changes."

Vulgar Friendship seldom lasts longer than the Pot boils. The Friendship of those we call Trencher-Friends, will never survive an empty Plate.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 198. (1709)

Wine-and-pork brothers, wood-and-rice husband and wife. (Chiu jou hsiung ti 'tsai mi fu chi.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 190. (1872)

3 It is in adversity that the good show their friendship most clearly; prosperity always finds friends. (ἐν τοῖς κακοῖς γὰρ ἀγαθοὶ σαφέστατοι φίλοι· τὰ χρηστὰ δ' αὐθ' ἕκαστ' ἔχει φίλους.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 1226. (c. 425 B. C.)

Yes, when my spear is triumphing and God Is on my side, I shall find many friends.

(πολλοὺς, ἐπεὶ δὲ τοῦμόν εὐτυχεῖ δόρυ καὶ Ζεὺς πρὸς ἡμῶν ἐστίν, εὐρήσω φίλους.)

EURIPIDES, Rhesus, l. 319. (c. 450 B. C.)

Wealth finds friends. (Res amicos invenit.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 522. (c. 200 B. C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, cites the equivalent Greek phrase, "εὐτυχία πολὺφίλος."

Friends of my fortune, not of me. (Fortunae, non mea turba fuit.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 5, l. 34. (c. A. D. 9)

Where wealth, there friends. (Ubi opes, ibi amici.)

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 564. (1855)

4 I hate a friend whose gratitude grows old, Who would enjoy his friends' prosperity. But will not in misfortune sail with them.

(χάριν δὲ γηράσκουσιν ἐχθαίρω φίλων, καὶ τῶν καλῶν μὲν ὅστις ἀπολαύειν θέλει, συμπλεῖν δὲ τοῖς φίλοις δυστυχοῦσιν οὐ.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 1223. (c. 420 B. C.)

5 Friends that desert us in the hour of need Are friends in name, not in reality.

(δνομα γάρ, ἔργον δ' οὐκ ἔχουσιν οἱ φίλοι οἱ μὴ 'πὶ ταῖσι συμφοραῖς ὄντες φίλοι.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 454. (c. 410 B. C.)

There is a friend who is a friend in name only (Amicus solo nomine amicus.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxvii, 1. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

A friend in name only is unmasked by misfortune (Amicum un nomen habecae aperit calamitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 41. (c. 43 B. C.)

FRIENDSHIP BUT A NAME, see under FRIENDSHIP.

6 A false Friend and a Shadow attend only while the Sun shines.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

7 Beware, I say, how thou faltest in with indigent friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentium Vol. i, p. 215. (1640)

There is an old time toast which is golden for its beauty. "When you ascend the hill of prosperity may you not meet a friend."

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar. (1893)

8 He ys a trew frend, that loveth me for my love and not for my good[s].

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 131. (c. 1530)

<sup>1</sup> The market-price of friends is low when good men are in need. (Vilis amicorum est annona, bonis ubi quid deest.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xii, l. 24. (20 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> Friends scatter as soon as they have drained our wine-jar. (Diffugiunt cadis | cum faece siccatis amici.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 35. l. 26. (23 B. C.) The Germans say, "Leer Fass, leere Freundschaft" (Empty keg, empty friendship).

Styntynge the cause, the effect styntith eek;
Ne lenger forster [food], ne lenger lemman [mis-tress].

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, l. 1661. (c. 1412)

I laie to such (said she) no longer foster, No longer lemman.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
No longer foster, no longer friend.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 33. (1639)
When good cheare is lacking, our friends will be packing.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 12. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 69. (1670)

The morsel that is eaten gains no friends. (Bocado comido, no gana amigo.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 154. (1814)
A Spanish proverb.

The bread eaten, the company departed. (Pan comido, compañía deshecha.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 236. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "Quand vous renversez la marmite, les amis vous quittent" (When you turn the soup-kettle upside down, your friends leave you), or, "Cuisine mangée, amis dispersés" (Food eaten, friends dispersed).

So vanish friendships only made in wine.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 479. (1886)

<sup>3</sup> By means of misfortune. (δρῦλα.)

NAMARTES, Spartan ambassador. (c. 350 B. C.)
When asked the surest means of testing friends. See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 230B.

Just as yellow gold is tested in the fire, so is friendship to be tested by adversity. (Scilicet ut fulvum spectatur in ignibus aurum, | tempore sic duro est inspicienda fides.)

OID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. v, l. 25. (c. A. D. 9)

One asked him [Diogenes] when he shulde knowe his frende? He sayd, in necessite, for in prosperite eury man is frendly.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 39. (1477)

<sup>4</sup> The vulgar herd estimate friendship by its advantages. (Vulgus amicitias utilitate probat.)

OID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. iii, l. 8. (A. D. 13)

There is love for none, save him whom fortune favors. (Diligitur nemo, nisi cui fortuna secunda est.)

OID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 3, l. 23.

<sup>5</sup> On anyone's financial standing hangs his status with his friends: if his finances are firm, his friends are firm; but once that state begins to waver, his friends co-waver likewise. (Ut cuique homini res paratast, perinde amicis utitur: | si res firma, item firmi amici sunt; sin res laxa labat, | itidem amici conlabascunt.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 520. (c. 200 B. C.)

In prosperity a friend is not known, and in adversity an enemy is not hidden. When a man is in prosperity even an enemy is friendly, but in his adversity even a friend withdraweth.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). xii, 8, 9. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

So long as you are fortunate, you will have friends without number; but if the times become clouded, you will be alone. (Donec eris sospes, multos numerabis amicos: | tempora si fuerint nubila, solus eris.)

OID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 5. (c. A. D. 9) Some texts give "felix" instead of "sospes."

For a full store there are many friends, but for misfortune none can be found.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 32a. (c. 450)

In time of prosperity, friends will be plenty;

In time of adversity, not one amongst twenty.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1659)

Cited also by Ray and Fuller.

In the days of his prosperity he had many friends, so called. Adversity has shaken them all like dead leaves from sapless branches.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night ix, p. 167. (1854)

<sup>6</sup> Prosperity begets friends; adversity proves them. (Amicos res optimae pariunt; adversae probant.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 54. (c. 45 B. C.) A variation is attributed to Cicero. "Amici probantur rebus adversis" (Friends are tested by adversity).

Prosperitie getteth friends, but aduersitie tryeth them.

NICHOLAS LING, Politeuphuia, p. 161. (1597)

Prosperity gets Followers; but Adversity distinguishes them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3962. (1732)

In prosperity our friends know us; in adversity we know our friends.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms. (c. 1905) The French say "C'est la prospérité qui donne les amis; c'est l'adversité qui les éprouve."

<sup>7</sup> He who begins to be your friend because it pays will also cease because it pays. (Qui amicus esse coepit, quia expedit, et desinet, quia expedit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ix, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 64)

That friendship will not continue to the end that is begun for an end.

QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. iv, No. 100. (1640)

'Tis easy to be a friend to the prosperous, for it pays.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Tobin's Palm. (1906)

VIII—Friends and Enemies

1 Be a rose and not a thorn—a friend and not an enemy.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, Invocations. (c. 1075)

2 Who is mighty? He who turns an enemy into a friend.

Babylonian Talmud: Aboth d' Rabbi Nathan, xxiii. (c. 450)

Make your enemy your friend.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 189. (1639)

He is wise that can make a friend of a foe.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595) Henry IV of France is credited with the saying, "Le meilleur moyen de se défaire d'un ennemi est d'en faire un ami" (The best way to defeat an enemy is to make a friend of him).

3 When our love was strong, we slept on the breadth of a sword; but now that our love is weak, a bed of sixty cubits is not wide enough.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7b. (c. 450) A variation of the Arabic proverb (Ali's Sayings; Appendix, sec. 151) "The world is too narrow for two who hate each other." ALCHARIZI, Tachkemoni, expands this to, "The space of a whole province is too narrow for two enemies, whilst a span suffices for a thousand friends."

The space of a needle's eye suffices for two friends, while the universe itself is not wide enough for two enemies.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 281. (1050)

4 For much better it is,
To bide a friendes anger then a foes kisse.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Mirrour of Good Manners, p. 21. (c. 1510)

A friends frown is better than a foes smiles.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 3. (1659)

5 Our friends, the enemy. (Nos amis, les ennemis.)

BÉRANGER, L'Opinion de ces Demoiselles. (1815)

A phrase said to have been ironically applied by the French to the Allies when they marched into Paris after the abdication of Napoleon in 1814.

6 Hold not him thy frende, that praysith thee present. (Tu ne dois pas amy tenir celluy qui te loue en ta presence.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regisme de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

Greatly his foes he dreads, but more his friends; He hurts me most who lavishly commends.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 19. (1761)

Trust not the praise of a friend, nor the contempt of an enemy.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 546. (1855) The French say, "On n'est jamais trahi que par les siens" (One is never betrayed but by his friends).

7 He who loves his Enemies, hates his Friends; This is surely not what Jesus intends.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Everlasting Gospel. Pt. ii, c., l. 19. (c. 1818)

8 Angry friendship is sometimes as bad as calm enmity.

EDMUND BURKE, An Appeal from the New to the Old Whigs. (1791)

9 Men are sometimes better served by their bitter-tongued enemies than by their sweet-smiling friends. (Melius de quibusdam acerbos inimicos mereri, quam eos amicos, qui dulces videantur.)

CATO THE CENSOR. (c. 160 B.C.) Quoted by CICERO, De Amicitia, xxiv, 90, as a well-known saying of Cato. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 76.

10 Our enmities mortal, our friendships eternal. (Mortalis inimicitias, sempiternas amicitias.)

CICERO, Pro Rabirio. Ch. 12, sec. 33. (54 B.C.)

Friendships should be immortal, enmities transient. (Amicitias immortales, inimicitias mortales, esse oportet.)

LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk. x. (c. 20 B.C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, v, 26.

11 We should render a service to a friend to bind him closer to us, and to an enemy in order to make a friend of him. (τὸν φίλον δεῖν εὐεργετεῖν, ὥπως μᾶλλον ἢ φίλος τὸν δὲ ἐχθρὸν φίλον ποιεῖν.)

CLEOBULUS, Aphorism. (c. 600 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus, i, 91.

Be good to thy friend to keep him, to thy enemy to gain him.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Do not beat the wolf, nor cause hunger to the sheep.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 738. (1817) Be kind towards both friends and enemies.

12 If you want enemies, excel others; if you want friends, let others excel you.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 275. (1820)

13 The friend that faints is a foe.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 46. (1611)

14 Friends are as dangerous as enemies.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Essays: Schlosser's Literary History. (c. 1846)

15 As a matter of self-preservation, a man needs to be supplied with good friends or ardent enemies, for the former instruct him and the latter take him to task.

DIOGENES. (c. 350 B.C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 74C and 82A. In sec. 89B he ascribes the saying to Antisthenes.

1 Perish friends, so long as foes fall with them.
(Pereant amici, dum inimici una intercedant.)

ENNIUS (?), Fragment. (c. 175 B.C.) See WARMINGTON, Remains of Old Latin, ii, 601. (Loeb). CICERO, Pro Rege Deiotaro, ix, 25, quotes the line and calls it barbarous, denying the story that Deiotarus repeated it in Greek, ἐπρέτω φίλος σὺν ἐχθρῷ, when he learned that Zela Domitius had been left by Caesar in Asia.

'Tis well a thousand friendships to erase,
Could we thereby avoid our foeman's face.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 5, apologue 7. (c. 1258)
Let a friend go with a foe. A bad proverb! For nothing should ever induce a friend to part with his friend. I would rather spare a foe for a friend's sake.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 241. (1721)

2 Grim to my foes, but kindly to my friends.
(βαρείαν ἐχθροῖς καὶ φιλοῖσιν εὐμενῇ.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 809. (c. 431 B.C.)
To do good to friends and evil to enemies. (τὸ τοὺς φίλους ἀρα εὖ ποιεῖν καὶ τοὺς ἐχθροὺς κακῶς.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. i, sec. 332D. (c. 375 B.C.)
The formula of traditional Greek morality, which Plato was the first to question. See Republic, 335D, 336A, Crito, 49B.

A man's virtue consists in outdoing his friends in kindness and his enemies in mischief. (τοὺς μὲν φίλους εὖ ποιοῦντα, τοὺς δ' ἐχθροὺς κακῶς.)

XENOPHON, Memorabilia. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 35. (c. 375 B.C.)

3 He that can be a worthy enemy, will, when reconciled, be a worthier friend.

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves: Of Reconciling Enemies. (1623)

4 Hatred among friendes is succour unto strangers.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Hatred with friends is succour to foes.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 30. (1633)

5 Hear no ill of a friend, nor speak any of an enemy.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

Speak well of your friend, of your enemy say nothing.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 490. (1855) The Italians say, "Dell' amico bene; del nemico nè bene nè male" (Of a friend good; of an enemy neither good nor evil).

6 If you had had fewer Friends, and more Enemies, you had been a better Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2755. (1732)

7 Nature teaches us to love our Friends, but Religion our Enemies.

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3508. (1732)

8 Do not think that one enemy is insignificant, or that a thousand friends are too many.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim

(Choice of Pearls). No. 253. (c. 1050) The Italians say, "Ad ogni gran stato, un nemico è troppo, e cento amici sono pochi" (How-ever great the man, one enemy is too many, and a hundred friends too few); the Germans, "Ein Feind ist zu viel; und hundert Freunde sind zu wenig." TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 69, cites this, and comments, "The hundred friends will wish you well; but the one foe will do you ill."

I have been gaining enemies by the scores, and friends by the couples, which is against the rules of wisdom, because they say one enemy can do more hurt than ten friends can do good.

SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 30 June, 1711.

One enemy is too much for a man in a great post, and a hundred friends too few.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 468. (1855)
Whatever the number of a man's friends, there will be times in his life when he has one too few; but if he has only one enemy, he is lucky indeed if he has not one too many.

LORD LYTTON, What Will He Do With It? Bk ix, ch. 3. (1858)

He who has a thousand friends has not a friend to spare,

And he who has one enemy will meet him everywhere.

R. W. EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. (1860) Emerson ascribes the couplet to Omar Khayyám, but it is really a paraphrase of an aphorism by Ali Ben Abu Taleb.

The world is large when its weary leagues two loving hearts divide;

But the world is small when your enemy is loose on the other side.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Distance. (1878)

9 The company of a friend seasons the meal, but the presence of an enemy renders it nauseous.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 634. (c. 1050)

10 Know how to use your enemies. A wise man gets more use from his enemies than a fool from his friends. (Saber usar de los enemigos. . . . Al varon sabio más le aprovechan sus enemigos, que al necio sus amigos.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 84. (1647) See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 86B.

11 None of vs I beleue is so vnwise . . . to trust a newe friend made of an old foe.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicle, ii, 84. (1569)

Better to trust an open enemy than a reconciled friend.

ROBERT GREENE, Planetomachia. (1585)

Trust not a reconciled friend, for good turns cannot blot out old grudges.

CHAPMAN, Alphonsus. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1630)

Never trust much to a new friend, or an old enemy.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 262. (1721)

A reconciled Friend is a double Enemy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 379. (1732)

A pardoned enemy and a reconciled friend are not to be trusted. (Versehnter Feindschaft, und geflickter Freundschaft, ist nicht zu trauen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 314. (1856) A German proverb.

Trust not a new friend nor an old enemy.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 459. (1869)

1 Invite your friend to a feast, but leave your enemy alone. (τὸν φιλέοντ' ἐπὶ δαίτα καλεῖν, τὸν δ' ἐχθρὸν ἐλᾶσαι.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 342. (c. 800 B. C.)

2 You may find your worst enemy, or best friend, in yourself.

WILLIAM HONE, Year-Book. Col. 1417. (1831)

3 I can defend myself from my enemies, but not from my friends.

HONEIN BEN ISAAK, Moral Maxims. (c. 870)

Ther was one that praised God to kepe him from the daunger of his frendis.

EARL RIVERS, Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, p. 127. (1477)

Assure me, my frende Parmeno, of those that be dissembling frendes, for I will be ware of them that be my open enemies.

SIR FRANCIS BRIANT, tr., A Dispraise of the Life of a Courtier, sig. D3. (1548) Quoting Alexander the Great.

As good a foe that hurts not, as a friend that helps not.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 19. (1589)

A fained friend God shield me from his danger, For well I'le saue my selfe from foe and stranger.

ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits Fittes and Fancies, p. 50. (1594)

God keep me from false friends.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 1, 16. (1594)

There is a saying that carrieth with it a great deal of caution, "From him whom I trust God defend me, for from him whom I trust not, I will defend myself."

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, letter 75. (1647) From the Italian, "Da chi mi fido mi guardi Iddio; | da chi non mi fido mi guarderò io." The French say, "De qui je me fis Dieu me garde."

From tranquil water God defend me! From the rough I can defend myself. (De l'agua mansa me libre Dios! | que de la brava me guarderè yo.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 2. (1666)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 1668, has, "God defend me from the still Water; and I'll keep my self from the rough."

It is better to have an open foe than a dissembling friend.

UNKNOWN, Country-mans New Commonwealth, p. 13. (1647)

A false friend is worse than an open enemy in man's judgment; and a hypocritical Judas more abhorred by God than a bloody Pilate.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, ii, 27. (1655)

Defend me from my friends; I can defend myself from my enemies.

MARÉCHAL DE VILLARS, to Louis XIV, when taking leave to assume command of the French armies in Flanders, against the Duke of Marlborough, Jan., 1709. Villars is usually considered to be the author of the saying, but it is, of course, much older. It has also been attributed to Voltaire, in slightly different form. See Notes and Queries, ser. vii, x, 428.

God defend me from my friends, I'll keep myself from my enemies.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 311. (1710)

An open foe may prove a curse, But a pretended friend is worse.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Shepherd's Dog and the Wolf. (1727) Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1740.

The zeal of friends it is that razes me, And not the hate of enemies.

(Der Freunde Eifer ist's, der mich

Zu Grunde richtet, nicht der Hass der Feinde.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act iii, sc. 18. (1799)

The Spanish proverb says, "God help me from my friends, and I will keep myself from my enemies," and there is much sense in it.

WALTER SCOTT, in LOCKHART, Life, v. 58. (1821)

The proverb is really an Italian one, "Fra gli amici guardami Iddio, che fra' nemici mi guarderò io." More concisely, "Amico, e guardati" (A friend, and look to yourself)

An open enemy is better than a hollow friend.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 9. (1822)

You are worse than twenty foes, you poisonous friend!

EMILY BRONTË, Wuthering Heights. Ch. 10. (1847)

I can be on my guard against my enemies, but God deliver me from my friends!

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Letter to G. H. Lewes, Jan., 1850.

Against a foe I can myself defend,—

But Heaven protect me from a blundering friend!

D'ARCY THOMPSON, Sales Attici. (1867)

Save a man from his friends, and leave him to struggle with his enemies.

WILLIAM C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 328. (1869)

The person a prisoner has most to fear when he is tried is too often his own counsel . . . called the friend of the prisoner; and I should conclude . . . that the adage "Save me from my friends" originated in this connection.

SIR HENRY HAWKINS, Reminiscences. Ch. 23 (1904)

I am not worried about my enemies It is my friends that keep me awake nights.

WARREN G. HARDING, Remark, June, 1923 See ADAMS, Incredible Era, p. 340.

Deliver me from my friends! You can take care of your enemies, but friends are hell on wheels.

FRANKLIN CHARLES, The Vice Czar Murders, p. 215. (1941)

That man was certainly right who said he could handle his enemies if someone would protect him from his friends.

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Exit Screaming, p. 55. (1942)

An injured friend is the bitterest of foes.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, French Treaties Opinion.
(28 April, 1793)

1 To dye of the meate one lyketh not, is better then to surfet of that he loueth: and I had rather an enemy shoulde bury me quicke, then a friende belye me when I am dead.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 323.

The best friende is worse then a foe, if a man doe not vse him.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 385.

2 Our best friend is a blundering enemy.

JOHN MACY, About Women, p. 82. (1930)

3 Don't tell your secret to a friend, and you'll not fear him when he turns into an enemy.
(μυστήριον σου μὴ κατέλθης τῷ φίλῳ | καὶ μὴ φοβηθῇς αὐτὸν ἐχθρὸν γινόμενον.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag.695K. (c. 300 B. C.)

Give not thy friend so much power that if one day he should become a foe, thou mayst not be able to resist him.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 1, Apologue 27. (c. 1258)

Reveal not every secret to a friend—some day he may become thy enemy. Nor inflict on thy enemy every injury in thy power—some day he may become thy friend.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Apologue 10.

Trust no friend with that you need; fear him as if he were your enemy.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1160. (1640)

4 We read that we ought to forgive our enemies; but we do not read that we ought to forgive our friends.

COSIMO DE' MEDICI, of perfidious friends. (c. 1570) See BACON, Apothegms. No. 206.

Instead of loving your enemies, treat your friends a little better.

ED. HOWE, Plain People. (1929)

5 Our very friendships involve us in enmities. This is what the wise Chilon had in mind when he asked the man who boasted that he had no enemy whether he had no friend either.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Profit by One's Enemies, 86C. (C. A. D. 95) The same anecdote is told in 96A. AULUS GELLIUS refers to it in his Attic Nights, i, 3, 31.

He who has no enemy, neither has he any friend. (Qui neminem habet inimicum, eum nec amicum habet quenquam.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Amicitia. (1524)

It is a misfortune for a man not to have a friend in the world, but for that reason he shall have no enemy.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. Works, p. 243. (1693)

No man's defects sought they to know;
So never made themselves a foe.

No man's good deeds did they commend;
So never rais'd themselves a friend.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Epitaph. (1718)

He will never have true friends who is afraid of making enemies.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 401. (c. 1821)

He makes no friend who never made a foe.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1082. (1870)

6 Forgive an enemy and you win friends without cost. (Cum inimico ignoscis amicos gratis complures acquiris.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 142. (c. 43 B. C.)

So trust a friend as to give no room for an enemy. (Ita crede amico ne sit inimico locus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 300.

He who strives after numerous friends should likewise put up with foes. (Qui numerosis studet amicis is etiam inimicos ferat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 621.

7 While friends are true, what can the foe effect?

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 1, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)

Those are useful friends who continue so when we are in prison, for at our table all our enemies appear friends.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 1, Apologue 16.

8 I weary of my friend's society,
Who my bad qualities as virtues shows;
Give me the pert and watchful enemy,
Who will my faults to me with zest disclose.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 4, Apologue 12. (c. 1258)
Eastwick, tr.

God send me a friend that may tell me my faults;
if not, an enemy, and to be sure he will.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 346. (1678)

God send me a friend that may tell me my faults;
if not, an enemy, and he will.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 238. (1748)

9 No reliance is to be placed in the friendship of friends; how much less in the professions of enemies!

SADI, Gulistan, Ch. 8, Maxim 11. (c. 1258)

Eschew that friend, if thou art wise,
Who consorts with thy enemies.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 13.

10 Better an intelligent enemy than an ignorant friend.

SADI, Pand Namah (Scroll of Wisdom). Sec 10. (c. 1260)

Nothing is so dangerous as an ignorant friend: better have a wise enemy. (Rien n'est si dangereux qu'un ignorant ami; | Mieux vaudroit uz sage ennemi.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 10. (1678)

A courageous Foe is better than a cowardly Friend.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 56. (1732)

11 Crooked and far is the road to a foe,
Though his house on the highway be;
But wide and straight is the way to a friend,
Though far away fare he.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 34. (c. 900) Bellows, tr.

12 I have learnt, though late, this rule; to hate an enemy as one who may become a friend, and serve a friend as knowing that his friendship may not last. (ἐπίσταμαι γὰρ ἀρτίως ὅτι | ὁ τ' ἐχθρὸς ἡμῖν ἐς τοσόνδ' ἐχθαρτέος, | ὡς καὶ φίλῃσιν αὐθις, ἔς τε τὸν φίλον | τοσαύθ' ὑπουργῶν ὠφελεῖν βουλήσομαι, | ὡς αὐτὸν οὐ μενοῦντα.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 678. (c. 409 B. C.)

Regard your friend as if you knew he might become your enemy. (Amicum ita habeas posse ut fieri hunc inimicum scias.)

LABERIUS, Mimes. (c. 60 B. C.)

Treat a friend as if he might easily become a foe. (Ita amicum habeas, posse ut facile fieri hunc inimicum putes.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 284. (c. 43 B. C.) Remember that you may possibly make a friend of an enemy. (Ex inimico cogita posse fieri amicum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. (a. A. D. 64)

Trust the friends of today as though they will be the enemies of tomorrow. (Confiar de los amigos hoy como enemigos mañana.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 217. (1647)

There is not a more prudent maxim than to live with one's enemies as if they may one day become one's friends.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 31 Dec., 1757.

Treat your friend, says the proverb, as though he were one day to become your enemy, and your enemy as though he were one day to become your friend.

A. W. KINGLAKE, Eothen. Ch. 25. (1844)

LOVE AS IF YOU MAY SOME DAY HATE, see under LOVE AND HATE.

Many are friends now and hereafter foes. (ἡ κάρτα πολλοὶ νῦν φίλοι καὶ οὖθις πικροί.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1359. (c. 409 B. C.)

Not even death can make a foe a friend. (οὐτοὶ ποθ' οὐχθρὸς, οὐδ' ὅταν θάνῃ, φίλος.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 522. (c. 441 B. C.)

Better new friend than an old foe, is said.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto ii, st. 27. (1590)

Some great Misfortune to portend,
No Enemy can match a Friend.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 119. (1731)

I no doubt deserved my enemies, but I don't believe I deserved my friends.

WALT WHITMAN. See BRADFORD, Biography and the Human Heart, p. 75. And Whitman also said, "I call the world to distrust the accounts of my friends, but listen to my enemies, as I myself do."

I was wounded in the house of my friends.
(His plagatus sum in domo eorum.)

Old Testament: Zechariah, xiii, 6. (c. 500 B. C.)

Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful. (Meliora sunt vulnera diligentis, quam fraudulenta oscula odientis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 6. (c. 350 B. C.)

The wounds are faithful of a friend.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, House to House. (1862)

6 Provide a fig for thy friend, and a peach for thine enemy.

UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 53. (1629)

Pill [peel] a fig for your friend, and a peach for your enemy. (Al amico cura gli il fico, al inimico il persico.)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Spanish, p. 53. (1678)

FRIENDSHIP

7 The friendships of the world are oft Confederacies in vice, or leagues of pleasure.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act iii, sc. 1. (1713)

Most friendships are formed by caprice or by chance—mere confederacies in vice or leagues in folly.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 19 May, 1784.

8 Many a friendship is lost for lack of speaking. (πολλὰς δὲ φιλίας ἀπροσηγορία διέλυσεν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, ch. 5, sec. 1. Sec. 1157B. (c. 335 B. C.) Aristotle speaks of this as an old saying. The Latin proverb is, "Multas amicitias silentium diremit."

9 Either friendship or death.

Babylonian Talmud: Tzanith, fo. 23a. (c. 450)

Referring to the Talmudic Rip van Winkle, Honi Ha-mëaggel, "the Circle-drawer," who, after a sleep of seventy years, returning home and finding all his friends dead, prayed for death.

Either friends like Job's or death.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 16b.

Job's friends proved their loyalty by visiting him in time of trouble, although they were poor comforters.

10 It redoubleth Joyes, and cutteth Griefes in Halves.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship. (1612)

Friendships multiply Joys, and divide Griefs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1622. (1732)

11 Real friendship is a slow grower, and never thrives unless ingrafted upon a stock of known and reciprocal merit.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.

True friendship is a plant of slow growth, and must undergo and withstand the shocks of adversity before it is entitled to that appellation.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter, 15 Jan., 1783.

12 The sincerity of a friendship is tested by some danger, as gold is by fire. (Quasi aurum igni, sic benevolentia fidelis periculo aliquo perspici possit.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. ix, epis. xvi. (46 B. C.)

13 Friendship is nothing else than an accord in all things, human and divine. (Est enim amicitia nihil aliud nisi omnium divinarum humanarumque rerum.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 6, sec. 20. (44 B. C.)

To desire the same things and to reject the same things, constitutes true friendship. (Idem velle atque idem nolle, ea demum firma amicitia est.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 20, sec. 4. (c. 41 B. C.)

True love and faithful friendship is to will and to nill one thinge.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 104. (1576)

Friendship is a Union of Spirits, a Marriage of Hearts, and the Bond thereof Vertue.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruites of Solitude. No. 106. (1693)

Two friendships in two breasts requires The same aversions and desires.

SWIFT, Life and Character of Dean Swift. (1733)

Friendship! mysterious cement of the soul.

Sweet'ner of life, and solder of society.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, i, 88. (1743)

Friendship is the bond of reason.

R. B. SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2. (1775)

'Tis a French definition of friendship, rien que s'entendre, good understanding.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior. (1860)

Three kinds of friendships are beneficial, and three are harmful. Friendship with the upright, with the sincere, with the well-informed, is beneficial. Friendship with the specious, with the insinuating, with the glib is harmful.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvi, ch. 4. (c. 500 B. C.) Legge, tr.

What is the odds so long as the fire of soul is kindled at the taper of conviviality, and the wing of friendship never moults a feather?

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 2. (1841)

Repeated in different forms in later chapters. May the hinges of friendship never rust, or the wings of love lose a feather.

DEAN E. B. RAMSEY, Reminiscences of Scottish Life. (1858) Quoting a toast.

The condition which high friendship demands is ability to do without it.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Friendship. (1841)

Without friendship life is nothing. (Sine amicitia vitam esse nullam.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Apothegm. (c. 200 B. C.) As quoted by CICERO, De Amicitia. A similar Latin proverb is, "Solem e mundo tollunt qui amicitiam e vita tollunt" (They take the sun from heaven who take friendship from life).

Without confidence there is no friendship. (ἐλὶ δ' ἀπιστων οὐδὲ φιλων.)

EPICURUS, Maxim. (c. 300 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, x, 11.

For when good will is taken away the name of friendship is gone. (Sublata enim benevolentia, amicitiae nomen tollitur.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 5, sec. 19. (44 B. C.)

Friendship stands not in one side.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 34. (c. 1595)

Friendship cannot stand ay on one side.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 103. (1721) Because, Kelly adds, "Friendship is cultivated by mutual good offices."

It takes two to make a friendship as to make a quarrel.

FOWLER, The King's English, p. 65. (1906)

The bird a nest, the spider a web, man friendship.

J. HOOKAM FRERE, The Rovers. (1798) WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

Friendship and importunate Begging feed not at the same Dish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1616. (1732)

Friendship consists not in saying, What's the News?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1617.

There is scarcity of Friendship, but not of Friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4880.

Friendship increases in visiting Friends, but in visiting them seldom.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1618. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

The soil of friendship is worn out with constant use.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 230. (c. 1821) But the American Indians say, "Let not the grass grow on the path of friendship."

There can be no Friendship, where there can be no Freedom.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4865. (1732)

Friendship is a hampering thing at the best of times.

MARGERY ALLINGHAM, The Fashion in Shrouds, p. 106. (1940)

To friendship ev'ry burthen's light.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Hare with Many Friends. (1727)

Her promise of freendship, for any auayle, Is as sure to holde as an ele by the tayle.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Friendship amongst men is to be counted but cold kindnesse, in respect of the fervent affection betweene men and women.

BARNABY RICH (?), Introduction to Pettie's Petite Pallace. (1576)

A woman-friend? He that believes that weakness Steers in a stormy night without a compass.

JOHN FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act ii, sc. 1. (c. 1620)

What's Man's Reward for all his Care and Toil? But One: a female Friend's endearing Smile.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

What lasting joys the man attend

Who has a polished female friend.

CORNELIUS WHURR, The Female Friend. St. 3.

The endearing elegance of female friendship.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 46. (1759)

There is no word in the Latin language that signifies a female friend. Amica means a mistress:

and perhaps there is no friendship between the sexes wholly disunited from a degree of love.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, On Writing and Books. (a. 1763)

1 Friendship is more than is catel.
(E pour ce que nule richece
A valeur d'ami ne s'adrece.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 4943.
(c. 1270) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 5540. (c. 1365)

Friendship is not to be bought at a Fair.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1619. (1732)

2 If a man does not make a new acquaintance, as he advances through life, he will soon find himself left alone. A man, Sir, should keep his friendship in constant repair.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark, to Sir Joshua Reynolds. (1755) See BOSWELL, Life (Glover, ed.), i, 197. Boswell himself, on the same theme, observes, "Friendship, 'the wine of life,' should, like a well-stocked cellar, be continually renewed."

Keep your friendships in repair.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk. (c. 1875)

3 Here you may see . . . the fraude in friendship.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 69. (1579)

Friendship though it is plighted by shaking the hand, yet it is shaken off by fraud of the heart.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 90.

I will cap that proverb with "There is flattery in friendship."

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 7, 124. (1599)

4 Friendship is ye best pearle, but by disdain thrown into vineger, it bursteth rather in peeces, then it wil bow to any softnes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 324. (1580)

Friendships renewed demand more care than those which have never been broken. (Les amitiés renouées demandent plus de soins que celles qui n'ont jamais été rompues.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 560. (1665)

A broken Friendship may be soder'd, but will never be sound.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 27. (1732)

5 Friendship with a man is friendship with his virtue.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. v, pt. ii, ch. 3, sec. 2. (c. 300 B. C.)

Friendship cannot exist except among good men. (Amicitiam nisi inter bonos esse non posse.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Sec. 18. (44 B. C.) Repeated in sec. 65.

Great souls by instinct to each other turn,
Demand alliance, and in friendship burn.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 101. (1705)

6 Let us swear, my fair one, an eternal friendship. (Jurons, ma belle, | Une ardeur éternelle.)

MOLIERE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act iv, sc. 1. (1670)

Let us embrace and from this moment vow an eternal misery together.

OTWAY, The Orphan. Act iv, sc. 2. (1680)

A sudden thought strikes me,—let us swear an eternal friendship.

J. H. FRERE, The Rovers. Act i, sc. 1. (1798)
Frere is parodying a scene from Goethe's Stella, where Stella's paramour, having shot himself in her presence and that of his wife, suddenly remarks to the latter, "Madam, I have an inspiration! We will remain together!"

7 The name of friend is common, but faith in friendship is rare. (Vulgare amici nomen, sed rara est fides.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 9, l. 1. (c. 25 B. C.)

Friendship is but a name. (Nomen amicitia est.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 740. (c. 1 B. C.)

That sacred and venerable name of friendship. (Illud amicitiae sanctum et venerabile nomen.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 15. (c. A. D. 9)

The name of friendship endures as long as there is profit in it. (Nomen amicitiae sic, quatenus expedit, haeret.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 80. (c. A. D. 60)

Friendship is but a word.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act ii, sc. 1. (1625)

Friendship's a specious Name, made to deceive
Those, whose Good Nature tempts them to believe.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

Friendship, like love, is but a name,
Unless to one you stint the flame.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Hare with Many Friends. (1727)

And what is friendship but a name,
A charm that lulls to sleep?

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. Vicar of Wakefield, ch. 8. (1766)

8 A similarity of manners is the strongest cement of friendship. (Connectendas amicitias vel tenacissimum vinculum morum similitudo.)

PLINY, Letters. Bk. iv, epis. 15. (c. A. D. 90)

A likeness of manners is the mother of friendship. (Morum similitudo mater amicitiae.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 117.

(1778) A medieval jingle declares, "Amore, more, ore, re, firmanatur amicitiae" (Love, manners, word, and deed strengthen friendships).

9 Friendship is a creature that seeks a companion. (σύννομον ἢ φίλα ἕζων.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Having Many Friends, 93E. (c. A. D. 95)

10 Friendship is equality. (φίλαν ἰσότητα εἶναι.)

PYTHAGORAS, Aphorism. (c. 525 B. C.) As quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras, sec. 10, and ERASMUS, Adagia, i, 1, 2, with the Latin, "Amicitia aequalita."

Have no friends not equal to yourself. (Moo yaou put eu kee chea.)

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. i, ch. 8. (c. 500 B. C.)

This admonition is repeated in bk. ix, ch. 24. Welcome is the friend whose breeding matches yours. (οὗτω ποθεινὸν ἐστὶν ἀμότροπος φίλος.)

MENANDER, The Girl Who Gets Her Hair Cut. Frag. 391K. (c. 300 B. C.)

Unite to thee friends like thyself. (Amicitias tibi iunge pares.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 44. (c. A. D. 9)

In all degrees of freindship, equality is cheeffy considered.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Sinorix and Camma, p. 21. (1576) He adds (p. 125):

"Perfect love can never bee without equality."

There is little friendship in the world, and least of all between equals.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Followers and Friends. (1597)

Friendship is seldom lasting, but between equals.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 64. (1750)

Full of this maxim, often heard in trade, Friendship with none but equals should be made.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, Fragment. (c. 1760)

Friendship is a disinterested commerce between equals.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man.

Act i, sc. 1. (1768)

There is a maxim indeed which says, "Friendship can only subsist between equals."

THOMAS HOLCROFT, The School for Arrogance.

Act iii, sc. 1. (1791)

Friendship is, at any rate, a relation of perfect equality.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Wednesday. (1849)

Equality makes friendliness. (Gleichheit macht Freundlichkeit.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 318. (1856) A German proverb.

Tigers and deer do not stroll together.

BRIAN BROWN, Wisdom of the Chinese, p. 173. (1938)

<sup>1</sup> Sudden friendship, sure repentance.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 155. (1678) A rendering of the Latin proverb, "Subita amicitia raro sine poenitentia collitur" (Sudden friendship is rarely formed without subsequent repentance).

Sudden Acquaintance | Brings long Repentance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6365. (1732)

Friendship that flames, goes out in a flash.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1623. (1732)

Stunted grain—friendship at sight.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 57. (1842)

Both valueless.

<sup>2</sup> Ceremony . . . where there is true friendship, there needs none.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 2, 15. (1608)

Friendship cannot live with ceremony, nor without civility.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. (1693) Works, p. 243.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

Friendship should be surrounded with ceremonies and respects.

EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Behavior. (1860)

<sup>3</sup> Friendship's full of dregs.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 2, 239. (1608)

<sup>4</sup> The strongest friendship yields to pride, Unless the odds be on our side.

JONATHAN SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift. (1731)

<sup>5</sup> When Competition brings us to the test, Then we find Friendship is self-interest.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

As frost to the bud, and blight to the blossom, even such is self-interest to friendship.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Friendship. (1839)

<sup>6</sup> To the rare few, who, early in life, have rid themselves of the friendship of the many

J. MCNEILL WHISTLER, The Gentle Art of Making Enemies: Dedication. (1890)

<sup>7</sup> An acquaintance that begins with a compliment is sure to develop into a real friendship.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act ii. (1895)

<sup>8</sup> Friendship is to be purchased only by friendship.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 52. (1786)

II—Friendship and Love

<sup>9</sup> As the proverb says, When love puts in, friendship is gone.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Lovers' Progress. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1630)

A friend married is a friend lost.

HENRIK IBSEN, Love's Comedy. Act ii. (1863)

Quoted as a proverb.

<sup>10</sup> He cannot be very fervent in love who is not a little cold in friendship.

APHRA BEHN, The Lover's Watch. (1686) Cited as "a sort of proverb."

<sup>11</sup> Always that love proves lover's richer gain Which grows from friendship's sweet felicity. (L'amor che vien da si fatta amistade È sempre dagli amanti più gradito.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto ii, st. 73. (c. 1250) Cummings, tr.

<sup>12</sup> Friendship is love without wings. (L'amitié est l'amour sans ailes.)

LORD BYRON. Title of poem. (1806) A French proverb, cited by BLAND, Proverbs, i, 2 (1814), who adds that the meaning is that friendship is a more permanent affection than love, having no wings with which to fly away.

Love is only chatter,

Friends are all that matter.

GELETT BURGESS, Willy and the Lady. (1906)

<sup>1</sup> Friendship's a noble name, 'tis love refined.
SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Stolen Heiress. Act ii, sc. 2. (1702)

<sup>2</sup> Friendship often ends in love; but love, in friendship—never.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. (1820)

<sup>3</sup> It is a rule in friendship, when Distrust enters in at the foregate, Love goes out at the postern.

HOWELL, Familiar Letters: To Dr. H. W. (1647)

<sup>4</sup> Time, which strengthens friendships, weakens love. (Le temps, qui fortifie les amitiés, affaiblit l'amour.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 4. (1688)

Love and friendship exclude one another. (L'amour et l'amitié s'excluent l'un l'autre.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 4.

<sup>5</sup> However rare true love may be, it is still less rare than true friendship. (Quelque rare que soit le véritable amour, il l'est encore moins que la véritable amitié.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 473. (1665)

<sup>6</sup> Let love find entrance veiled in friendship's name. (Intret amicitiae nomine tectus amor.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 720.

But, if at first her virgin fear

Should start at love's suspected name,

With that of friendship soothe her ear—

True love and friendship are the same.

JAMES THOMSON, Hard is the Fate. (a. 1748)

<sup>7</sup> It is not safe to praise to a friend the object of your love. (Non tutum est, quod ames, laudari sodali.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 741. (c. 1 B. C.)

Friendship is constant in all other things,

Save in the office and affairs of love.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 1, 182. (1598) See also under WOOING.

<sup>8</sup> What is love? Two souls and one flesh. Friendship? Two bodies and one soul.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest:

Love and Friendship. (c. 1870) Hapgood, tr.

<sup>9</sup> A friend loves you, of course; but one who loves you is not in every case your friend. Friendship, accordingly, is always helpful, but love sometimes even does harm. (Qui amicus est, amat; qui amat, non utique amicus est. Itaque amicitia semper prodest, amor aliquando etiam nocet.)

SENECA, Ad Luciliū. Epis. xxxv, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>10</sup> Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 181. (1600)

<sup>11</sup> But Friendship in its greatest Height,
A constant, rational Delight,

On Virtue's Basis fix'd to last,
When Love's Allurements long are past;
Which gently warms, but cannot burn;
He gladly offers in return.

SWIFT, Cadenus and Vanessa, l. 780. (1713)

When Psyche's friend becomes her lover,
How sweetly these conditions blend!

But, oh, what anguish to discover

Her lover has become—her friend!

MARY ANGE DE VERE, Friend and Lover. (1890)

To offer friendship to the man who wants love is giving a loaf of bread to one who is dying of thirst.

BERTA RUCK, Mock-Honeymoon, p. 80. Quoted as a Spanish proverb.

FROG

<sup>12</sup> The frog by nature is both damp and cold,
Her mouth is large, her belly much will hold.

JOHN BUNYAN, A Book for Boys and Girls. (1686)

<sup>13</sup> The Frog sings; and yet she has neither Hair nor Wool to cover her.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4549. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> The frog in the well knows nothing of the great ocean.

A. LLOYD, Every-Day Japan, p. 147. (1909)

Quoting a Japanese proverb, which is sometimes given as "The frog that has not seen the sea thinks the well a fine stretch of water."

<sup>15</sup> Though boys throw stones at frogs in sport, the frogs do not die in sport, but in earnest.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Land and Water Animals.

Sec. 7. (c. 95 A. D.) Quoting Bion.

Though this be play to you, 'tis death to us.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Fables of Aesop: The Boys and the Frogs. (1692)

<sup>16</sup> The frog cannot out of her bog.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1678)

<sup>17</sup> I am like a frog trying to outvie the crickets. (βάτραχος δὲ ποτ' ἀκρίδας ὥς τις ἐπίσῳ.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. vii, l. 41. (c. 270 B. C.)

<sup>18</sup> O to be a frog, my lads, and live aloof from care!

He needs no drawer to his drink—'tis plenty everywhere.

(εὐκτὸς ὁ τῷ βατράχῳ, παῖδες, βίος, οὐ μελεδάλνει τὸν τὸ πλεῖν ἐχέειντα: πάρεστι γὰρ ἀφθονον αὐτῷ.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl x, l. 52. (c. 270 B. C.)

Edmonds, tr. "To live the life of a frog" passed into a proverb, equivalent to "The life of Reilly."

I geue frogges wine, as the Greke prouerbe speaketh.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus: Preface. (1548)

<sup>19</sup> I don't see no p'int's about that frog that's any better'n any other frog.

MARK TWAIN, The Jumping Frog. (1867)

Twain afterwards translated the story back from the French, and this sentence ran as follows: "I no see not that that frog has nothing of better than another."

<sup>1</sup> He who was a frog is now king. (Qui fuit rana, nunc est rex.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb, from which possibly Grimm's fairy tale of the Frog Prince is derived. KING LOG, see under KING.

FROST

<sup>2</sup> Frost and fraud have always foul ends.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 322. (1605)

Frost and fraud come to foul ends.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 15. (1621)

So true is that proverb, that frost and fraud have dirty ends.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour. Pt. ii, ch. 17. (1657)

It was an ordinary speech in his mouth to say, "frost and fraud both end in foul."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Cheshire, i, 271. (1662)

Frost and falsehood have ay a foul hunder end.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 103. (1721)

Frost and falsehood have both a dirty gangway.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 5. (1846)

<sup>3</sup> What God will | No frost can kill.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 225. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 97. (1670)

<sup>4</sup> The Frost hurts not Weeds.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4550. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> The first and last frosts are the worst.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 952. (1640)

He that is surprised with the first frost, feels it all the winter after.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 990. (1640)

<sup>6</sup> Hoar-frost and gipsies never stay nine days in a place.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 114. (1893)

For other weather proverbs about frost see INWARDS.

<sup>7</sup> Farewel, frost; nothing got, nor nothing lost.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 174. (1670)

<sup>8</sup> O, it sets my hart a-clickin' like the tickin' of a clock,

When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, When the Frost is on the Punkin. (1891)

With the frost upon the bumpkin.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Sad Song from Sanctuary. (1940)

The gilt is on our knocker and the neighbors on our phone.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Song for a Brand-New House (1940)

<sup>9</sup> It's no go; it will be a frost. (Nil est; re-frixerit res.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 233. (160 B. C.)

If the prospect is chilling, come back to us. (Sin autem ista frigeant, recipias te ad nos.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. xi, sec. 3.

(53 B. C.) Cicero is employing a colloquialism in frequent use, the exact equivalent of the modern, "If it proves to be a frost."

When a piece "goes" badly, it is called a "frost." Stage Gossip, p. 70. (1886) Slang, originally theatrical.

This last book . . . is a regular frost.

I. ZANGWILL, Bachelors' Club, p. 209. (1891)

It [the search for a situation] was a perfect frost. CONAN DOYLE, The Stock-Broker's Clerk. (1893)

FRUGALITY

See also Moderation, Saving, Thrift

<sup>10</sup> Frugality was his middle name.

GEORGE ADE, Fables in Slang: The Waist-band that Was Taut. (1902)

<sup>11</sup> Men become wealthier, not only by adding to what they already possess, but also by cutting down expenses. (οὐ γὰρ μόνον πρὸς τὰ ὑπάρχοντα προστιθέντες πλουσιώτεροι γίνονται, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀφαιρούντες τῶν δαπανημάτων.)

ARISTOTLE, The Art of Rhetoric. Bk. i, ch. 4, sec. 8. (c. 330 B. C.)

Men do not realize how great a revenue frugality is. (Non intelligunt homines quam magnum vectigal sit parsimonia.)

CICERO, Paradoxa, vi, iii, 49. (c. 45 B. C.)

Poverty is able to turn itself into riches by summoning frugality. (Possit ipsa paupertas in divitias se advocata frugalitate convertere.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 9, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 45)

According to the proverbe: good husbandrie, and sparyng in an hous, is a great penie rent of yerely reuenues.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apothegms, p. 44. (1542)

Parsimony is the best revenue.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Fr.-Eng., p. 15. (1659)

Frugality is an estate alone.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 97. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1631. (1732)

Frugality and good husbandry . . . is great incomes.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 650. (1681)

Frugality is a handsome income.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, p. 491. (1725)

Economy the poor man's mint; extravagance the rich man's pitfall.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Society, l. 191. (1838)

Thrift which is not only a great virtue but also "a great revenue," as Tacitus told us long ago when he wrote magnum vectigal est parsimonia.

The Times (London), 10 Oct., 1930, p. 13/5.

<sup>1</sup> Frugality embraces all the other virtues. (Reliquas etiam virtutes frugalitas continet.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 8, sec. 16. (45 B. C.)

The frugal man does everything aright. (Hominem frugi omnia recte facere.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iv, ch. xvi, sec. 36. (45 B. C.) Quoting a proverb derived from Euripides, which is also cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 62.

Frugality is the mother of virtue. (Genetrix virtutum frugalitas.)

JUSTINIAN, Corpus Juris. (C. A. D. 560) As cited by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 142.

<sup>2</sup> Though on pleasure she was bent,
She had a frugal mind.

WILLIAM COWPER, John Gilpin. St. 8. (1782)

<sup>3</sup> Frugality is equal to half a subsistence.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 3. (c. 1050)

Let that which is wanting in income be supplied by frugality. (Quod cessat ex redivit, frugalitate suppleatur.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 380. (1869) Or, as the Scots say, "Frae saving comes having."

<sup>4</sup> Without frugality none can be rich, and with it very few would be poor.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 57. (2 Oct., 1750)

<sup>5</sup> All too stingy. (Nimis avarus.)

NAEVIUS, Figulus. Frag. 52, Loeb. (c. 220 B. C.) The French say, "C'est une économie de bouts de chandelle" (It's an economy of candle-ends).

Frugally frugal. (Parce parcus.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 314. (c. 210 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Frugality is the richest treasure of an estate.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Forren Newes: From Venice. (1613)

<sup>7</sup> Frugality is good, if Liberality be join'd with it. The first is leaving off superfluous expences; the last bestowing them to the Benefit of others that need.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 50. (1693)

<sup>8</sup> Frugality is misery in disguise. (Frugalitas miseria est rumoris boni.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 223. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> Frugality is too late at the bottom of the purse. (Sera parsimonia in fundo est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. i, sec. 5. (C. A. D. 64) Frugality is the science of avoiding unnecessary expenditure, or the art of managing our property with moderation. (Parsimonia est scientia vitandi sumptus supervacuus, aut ars re familiari moderate utendi.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. 2, sec. 34. (C. A. D. 60)

Economy is the art of making the most of life. The love of economy is the root of all virtue. SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

FRUIT

<sup>10</sup> Fruit is gold in the morning, silver in the afternoon and lead at night.

BISHOP SHUTE BARRINGTON, Rules of Health. (c. 1800) See Notes and Queries. Ser. x, i, 251. See also under APPLE

<sup>11</sup> If you would enjoy the fruit, pluck not the flower.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 422. (1855)

<sup>12</sup> Taketh the fruyt, and lat the chaf be stille.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 623. (c. 1387)

<sup>13</sup> We cannot eat the fruit while the tree is in blossom.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Alroy. Ch. 4. (1833)

<sup>14</sup> The feast of harvest, the firstfruits of thy labours. (Primitivorum operis tui.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xxiii, 16. (c. 550 B. C.) See also Exodus, xxiii, 19; xxxiv, 22; xxxiv, 26; Leviticus, ii, 14, etc., etc.

The first fruits are mine. (Meus fructus est prior.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 839. (c. 200 B. C.)

But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept. (νυνὶ δὲ Χριστὸς ἐγήγερται ἐκ νεκρῶν, ἀπαρχὴ τῶν κεκοιμημένων.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 20. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Nunc autem Christus resurrexit a mortuis primitiae dormientium."

<sup>15</sup> Fruit out of season, sorrow out of reason.

HENRY FRIEND, Flowers and Fruit Lore, p. 207 (1884)

<sup>16</sup> Much bruit [din, clamor] and little fruit. (Beaucoup de bruit, peu de fruit.)

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy Warre. Bk. ii, ch. 29, p. 87. (1639) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6122.

<sup>17</sup> Few Leaves and bad Fruit.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1526. (1732) There is a Dutch proverb, "Weinig houts, veel vruchten" (Little wood, much fruit).

Fruit ripens not well in the shade.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1632

<sup>18</sup> Who will the fruyte that haruest yeeldes, must take the payne.

JOHN GRANGE, The Golden Aphroditis, sig. M1 (1577)

If you would fruit have,

You must bring the leaf to the grave.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53. (1678)

"That is, you must transplant your trees just about the fall of the leaf, . . . not sooner, because of the motion of the sap, not later, that they may have time to take root before the deep frosts."

He that would have the Fruit, must climb the Tree.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2366. (1732)
See also NO GAINS WITHOUT PAINS, under GAIN.

<sup>1</sup> This bood [bud] Shewth what fruite will folow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
That which doth blossom in the spring, will bring forth fruit in the autumn.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 13. (1633)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1670)
Timely blossom, timely beare.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 171. (1639)
Timely blossom, timely ripe.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 149. (1670)
Timely Blossom, timely Fruit.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5057. (1732)
No Autumn-Fruit, without Spring-Blossoms.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3544. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> He's free of fruit that wants an orchard.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 134. (1721)

"Spoken to them who tell how free and liberal they would be, if they had such things, or were such persons."

<sup>3</sup> When all fruit fa's welcome ha's.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 350. (1721)

"Spoken when we take up with what's coarse, when the good is spent."

When all Fruit fails, welcome Haws.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5544. (1732)

HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 235. (1920)

"Lame of a leg and grey in the head! . . . that's a fancy man for a girl to take!"—"Marg was none too young herself, . . . and when all fruit fails, welcome haws! She wanted some one."

K.F. PURDON, Folk of Furry Farm. Ch. 7. (1914)

<sup>4</sup> Greater charm belongs to early apples. (Pimis sic maior gratia pomis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 29. (c. A. D. 90)

What beautiful fruit! I love fruit, when it is expensive.

A. W. PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act i. (1893)

<sup>5</sup> Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? (ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν αὐτῶν ἐπιγινώσσετε αὐτοὺς· μήτι συλλέγουσιν ἀπὸ ἀκανθῶν σταφυλὰς ἢ ἀπὸ τριβόλων σῦκα;)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 16. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "A fructibus eorum cognoscetis eos. Numquid colligunt de spinas uvas, aut de tribulis ficus?"

By their fruits ye shall know them.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 20. (c. A. D. 50)

Oure Lord Jesu Crist seith thus: "by the fruit of hem ye shul knowen hem."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 6. (c. 1389)

By their fruits ye shall know them, not by their roots.

WILLIAM JAMES, The Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 20. (1902)

THE TREE IS KNOWN BY ITS FRUIT, see under TREE.

<sup>6</sup> Greedily they pluck'd
The Frutage, fair to sight: . . .

Instead of Fruit | Chew'd bitter Ashes.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 560. (1667)

Like to the apples on the Dead Sea's shore,
All ashes to the taste.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 34. (1812)

Like Dead-Sea fruits that tempt the eye
But turn to ashes on the lips.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Work-shippers. (1817) The reference is to the so-called apples of Sodom, a yellow fruit which grows on the shores of the Dead Sea, beautiful to the eye, but bitter to the taste, and filled with minute black seeds not unlike ashes.

<sup>7</sup> Fruite whiche is not ripe, will scarce with strength bee torne from the tree, whereas that which is ripe falleth easely of its owne accord.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 144. (1576)
The ripest fruit first falls.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 1, 153. (1595)

The weakest kind of fruit

Drops earliest to the ground.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 115. (1597)

Fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;

But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 200. (1600)

Fruits that blossom first will first be ripe.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 383. (1605)

There is no worse fruit than that which never ripens. (Non v' ha peggior frutto di quello che mai non si matura.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 197. (1856) An Italian proverb.

<sup>8</sup> Ripest fruit are rifest rotten.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 80. (1576)

Fruites full soon doe rot, which gathered are to sone.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 192.

Ripe fruit is soonest rotten.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 136. (1832)

<sup>9</sup> Sweeter is fruit after many dangers have been undergone for it. (Dulcior est fructus post multa pericula ducta.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. (1533) Quoting a mediaeval proverb. Cited by PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 161, in the form, "Dulcior est semper, post magna pericula, fructus," together with a number of similar proverbs, "Carius est carum, si praegustatur amarum" (Sweeter is the fruit if the first taste is bitter); "Maior post passa voluptas damna venire solet," "Carnibus est dignus, qui bene mandit olus," "Clarius est solito post maxima nubilia Phoebus," and so on.

Forbidden fruit is sweet.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 357. (1855) See under PROHIBITION.

Stolen fruit (figurative). Anything stolen; esp. illicit love: In allusion to the apple "stolen" by Eve.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

All women believe that stolen fruit is the sweetest.

PETER CHENEY, Dark Duet, p. 64. (1943)

The fruit of the Tree of Knowledge is always stolen fruit.

STUART CLOETE, Congo Song. Ch. 8. (1943)

1

'Tis good grafting on a good stock.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5082. (1732)

Graft good Fruit all, Or graft not at all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6335. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745, and 1750.

Let the grafts be very good, or the knife be where it stood.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 441. (1855)

2

The froytes of the erthe make plentuous.

UNKNOWN, Lay Folks Mass Book, p. 392. (c. 1375)

That it may please thee to give and preserve to our use the kindly fruits of the earth.

Book of Common Prayer: Litany. (1549)

FULL

3

As fulle as a tunne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 79, (1633) has, "He is fed as full as a tun."

As full as an egg is of meat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 284. (1678)

I am as full as a jade, quoth the bride.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 285. (1678)

Full as a piper's bag.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 284.

As full as a toad is of poison.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 284.

As full as a tick.

ANNE E. BAKER, Northants Glossary: Tick. (1854)

A tick is a sheep-louse, which has always a full bloated appearance.

JOHN NICHOLSON, Folk-Speech of East Yorkshire, p. 19. (1889)

FUN, see Merriment

FUNERAL

4

The preparation of funerals, the choice of a tomb, the burial pomp, are much more a consolation for the living than a tribute to the dead. (Curatio funeris, conditio sepulturae, pompa exsequiarum, magis sunt vivorum solatia, quam subsidia mortuorum.)

SAINT AUGUSTINE, De Civitate Dei. Bk. i, ch.

12. (A.D. 413) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 3.

Funeral pomp is more for the vanity of the living than for the honor of the dead. (La pompe des enterrements regarde plus la vanité des vivants que l'honneur des morts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 612. (1665)

As griefless as a rich man's funeral.

SIDNEY DOBELL, A Musing on Victory. (a. 1874)

5

One funeral makes many.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 7. (1894)

Blackmore comments that this saying is too often true, and adds, "A strong east wind whistled through the crowd of mourners."

6

The flattery of a funeral sermon.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

(1719) The Germans say, "Leichenpredigt, Lügenpredigt" (Funeral sermons, lying sermons).

Funeral eloquence Rattles the coffin-lid.

R. W. EMERSON, Ode Inscribed to W. H. Channing. (1846)

7

What men prize most is a privilege, even if it be that of chief mourner at a funeral.

J. R. LOWELL, On Democracy. (1884)

8

The funeral baked meats.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 180. (1600) The French say, "Après tout deuil, boit on" (After all mourning, one drinks), the equivalent of the English proverb, "After a funeral, a feast."

A funeral was always a festivity in black.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

9

If you fall into want, it's for you to lament. (Si egabis, tibi dolebit.)

CAECILIUS STATIUS, Fragmentis. Frag. 234, Loeb. (c. 175 B.C.)

A boy said to an outsider who was making a great ado during some impressive mortuary ceremonies, "What are you crying about? It's none of your funeral."

UNKNOWN, Article, in Washington (Oregon) Times, 25 Nov., 1854.

It's "none of my funeral."

ADELIN D. T. WHITNEY, A Summer in Leslie Goldthwaite's Life. Ch. 14. (1866) Nothing for me to worry about, none of my business.

"This is none of your funeral" is heard quite frequently as an indirect rebuke for intermeddling, with the ludicrous undercurrent of thought, that the troublesome meddler has no right to be crying at a strange man's funeral.

MAXIMILIAN DE VERE, Americanisms, p. 239. (1871)

It's his funeral, if anybody's.

E. N. WESTCOTT, David Harum. Ch. 23. (1898)

It's our funeral, ain't it?

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Schools and Schools. (1909)

"It's your funeral," he said with a shrug.

BERNARD DOUGALL, I Don't Scare Easy, p. 20. (1941) In frequent—too frequent—use.

10

The sad office [of carrying a dead comrade to the grave]. (Triste ministerium.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 223. (19 B.C.) Another Latin proverb is, "Apio opus est" (There is need of parsley), to strew upon the grave; used with reference to a dying person.

<sup>1</sup> When we attend a funeral, we are apt to comfort ourselves with the happy difference that is betwixt us and our dead friend.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety. No. 34. (c. 1745)

If a man will observe as he walks the streets, I believe he will find the merriest countenances in the mourning-coaches.

SWIFT, Works. Vol. iii, p. 400. (a. 1745)

Sometimes they [gondolas] contain a deal of fun, Like mourning coaches when the funeral's done.

LORD BYRON, Beppo. St. 20. (1817)

Worldly faces never look so worldly as at a funeral.

GEORGE ELIOT, Janet's Repentance. (1857)

All de buzzards in de settlement 'll come to de gray mule's funer'l.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

FUR

<sup>2</sup> He stroked all the fur the wrong way.

MARY BRIDGMAN, Robert Lynne. Bk. i, ch. 7. (1870) To cause irritation.

<sup>3</sup> I'll make the fur Fly 'bout the ears of that old cur.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 278. (1663)

My father had been taking a few horns, and was in a good condition to make the fur fly.

DAVY CROCKETT, Narrative Life. Ch. 2. (1834)

To make the fur fly. To claw, scratch, wound severely. Used figuratively.

JOHN BARTLETT, Americanisms: Make. (1848)

When we do strike, the fur will fly.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), His Book, p. 230. (1862)

Then we picked and shovelled and made the fur fly.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 36. (1884)

If those other dames knew how she works 'em, the fur would sure fly

GYPSY ROSE LEE, Mother Finds a Body, p. 158. (1942)

FUTURE

See also Past and Future; Present and Future

<sup>4</sup> For my part, I think that a knowledge of the future would be a disadvantage. (Atque ego ne utilem quidem arbitror esse nobis futura-rum rerum scientiam.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 9, sec. 22. (c. 45 B. C.)

Undoubtedly ignorance of future ills is more useful than knowledge of them. (Certe ignoratio futurorum malorum utilior est quam scientia.)

CICERO, De Divinatione, ii, 9, 23.

It is not even an advantage to know what is going to happen, for it is miserable to suffer unavailing torments. (Saepe autem ne utile qui-dem est scire quid futurum sit; miserum est enim nihil proficientem angere.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. iii, ch. 6, sec.

14. (c. 45 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 11. Let the mind of man be blind as to future destiny. (Sit caeca futuri | mens hominum fati.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 14. (c. A. D. 60)

Seek not to know what must not be reveal'd; Joys only flow where Fate is most conceal'd.

DRYDEN, Indian Queen. Act iii, sc. 2. (1664)

O blindness to the future! kindly giv'n.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 85. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Who heeds not the future will find sorrow close at hand.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch. 11. (c. 500 B. C.) Legge, tr.

The wise man guards against the future as if it were the present. (Quod est venturum, sapiens quasi praesens cavet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 615. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> He is wise who places neither fear nor hope in the uncertain future. (Il est sage de ne mettre ni crainte ni espérance dans l'avenir incertain.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, Le Procureur de Judée. (1892)

<sup>7</sup> Hereafter comes not yit.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig. D4. (1577) Hereafter comes not.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly. Prov. 84. (1611)

We'll think on that hereafter.—Hereafter comes not yet, then, it seems?

JOHN TATHAM, The Rump. Act iii, sc. 1. (1660)

<sup>8</sup> Could men divine the future, they'd match Jove. (Nam si quae eventura sunt provideant, aequiperent Iovi.)

PACUVIUS, Fragments, v, 407, Ribbeck. (c.

160 B. C.) Quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, xiv, 1. Make me a Diviner, and I wyll make thee rich. (Fammi Indouino, & io ti faro richo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

<sup>9</sup> The future struggles not to let itself be mastered. (Futura pugnant ne se superari sinant.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 207. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> Full of misery is the mind anxious about the future. (Calamitosus est animus futuri anxius.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 6. (c.

A. D. 64) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 3. See also under TROUBLE.

<sup>11</sup> No one has any right to draw for himself upon the future. (Nihil sibi quisquam de futuro debet promittere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>12</sup> Wisdom still by seeing grows, But no man the unseen knows.

Shall he fare or ill or well
Who of mortals can foretell?

(ἢ πολλὰ βροτοῖς ἔστιν ἰδοῦσιν γρῶναι· πρὶν ἰδεῖν δ' οὐδεὶς μάντις τῶν μελλόντων, ὃ τι πράξει.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1419. (c. 409 B.C.)
The future is hidden from all men. (τὸ μέλλον ἀδηλον πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις.)

DEMOSTHENES, In Leptinem, sec. 162. (355 B.C.)
There is no means of predicting the future.
(μαντικὴ οὐσα ἀνύπαρκτος.)

EPICURUS, Aphorism. (c. 300 B.C.) See DIO-
GENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus, x, 135.

Nature has given us no knowledge of the end of things. (Rerum natura nullam nobis dedit cognitionem finium.)

CICERO, Academica. Bk. ii, ch. 29, sec. 92. (c. 45 B.C.)
The wise god covers with the darkness of night the issues of the future. (Prudens futuri temporis exitum, | calignosa nocte premit deus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 30. (23 B.C.)

1 One of these odd-come-shortly's.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Some day or other in the near future.

2 Do not prepare for the future before it has come.

UNKNOWN, Eloquent Peasant, B1, 183. (c.
2000 B.C.) See also under TROUBLE.

Cease to inquire what the future has in store.
(Quid sit futurum cras, fuge quaerere.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 9, l. 13. (23 B.C.)
Leave hereafter to the spirit and the wisdom of hereafter.

SYDNEY SMITH, Plymley Letters. No. 2. (1807)

3 He knoweth not what the day will bring forth.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
xi, 19. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

What the evening may bring forth is uncertain.
(Quid vesper ferat incertum est.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xlv, sec. 8. (c. 10 B.C.)
None knows what will happen to him before Sunset.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3656. (1732)
This morning knows not this evening's happenings.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs,
p. 647. (1937)

G

GAB

4 There was a Man called Job. . . . He had a good gift of the Gob [mouth].

SAMUEL COLVIL, Whiggs Supplication: To the Reader. (1695)

He knew well enough that he had the gift of the
gab.

WILLIAM GODWIN, Caleb Williams, p. 29. (1794)
The sturdy yeoman has not . . . "the gift of the gab."

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Digby Grand. Ch. 10. (1853)
They have got a man who has the gift of the gab.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 62. (1880)
Paul had the gift of the gab.

HENRY MILLER, The Cosmological Eye, p. 305.
(1939)

You've got the gift of the gab.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 244.
(1942)

5 Nut while the two-legged gab-machine's so plenty.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers, Ser. ii, No. 11.
(1862)

GAD

6 The tribe of Levi [ministers] must have no mind to the tribe of Gad.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 455. (1629)
I think your ladyship is one of the tribe of Gad.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

7 He was always gadding up and downe the world.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 373. (1605)

She's a very great gadder abroad.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

[She] is always upon the gad.

JANE AUSTEN, Persuasion. Bk. i, ch. 6. (c. 1815)
To rush about like an animal stung by gadflies.

8 The gad-about manners of our modern belles.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to Mrs. Clephane, 23
March, 1817.

Your shrew-mice are sad gad-about.

LORD LYTTON, The Caxtons, p. 140. (1849)

He even ran some risk of becoming a gadabout and busy-body.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 3. (1859)

GAFF

9 Gaff, an artificial spur for a Cock.

EDWARD PHILLIPS, *The New World of English
Words: Gaff*. Kersey, ed. (1706)

If he gets the gaff, he'll be flat on his back.

GEORGE ADE, Artie. Ch. 12. (1896)

All we care about now is, will they stand the gaff?

AUGUSTUS THOMAS, Arizona, p. 124. (1899)

Give us the gaff. We deserve it.

LINCOLN STEFFENS, Article, McClure's Magazine, Oct., 1903, p. 563.

You've been standing the gaff like a gamecock.
SAUNDERS, Colonel Todhunter, p. 307. (1911)

10 I wasn't going to blow the gaff.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 43.
(1833) To reveal a plot or secret.

GAIETY

See also Merriment, Mirth

<sup>1</sup> Ther-to she coude skippe and make game,
As any kide or calf folwinge his dame.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Milleres Tale, l. 73. (c. 1386)

Gaiety without eclipse Wearieth me, May Lillian.
ALFRED TENNYSON, Lilian. (1830)

Gayety the best legacy of youth.

P. G. HAMERTON, The Intellectual Life, x, vi, 367. (1875)

The gift of gaiety may be . . . the most serious step toward maturity.

IRWIN EDMAN, in The Bookman, May, 1926.

<sup>2</sup> Whom call we gay? . . . the lark is gay.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task, i, 493. (1784)

I am as gay as a lark.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iv, ch. 5. (1865)

Thou art gay as a goldfinch.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 5. (1821)

<sup>3</sup> A grain of gaity seasons everything. (Un grano de donosidad todo lo sazona.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 79. (1647)

Gaiety makes us gods

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to Voltaire, 21 Sept., 1737.

GAIN

See also Profit

<sup>4</sup> Gain is added with interest unto gain. (κέρδος κέρδος ἄλλα τίκτεται.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 437. (467 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> Mysian booty. (Μυσῶν λείαν.)

ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 21. (c. 330 B. C.) A proverbial phrase meaning an easy prey, because the Mysians were regarded as cowardly and unwarlike.

<sup>6</sup> Who stood to gain? (Cui bono fuerit?)

LUCIUS CASSIUS LONGINUS, Maxim. (c. 125 B. C.) Cassius, the judge, always, when presiding in court, urged the jury to guide their vote by this maxim.

Let Cassius's famous test, "Who stood to gain?" be applied to the characters now before us. (Cassianum, "cui bono fuerit?")

CICERO, Pro Milone. Sec. 32. (52 B. C.)

If any one were to drag you into court, and were to adopt that maxim of Cassius, "To whose advantage was it?" take care you are not embarrassed. (Cassianum, "cui bono fuerit?")

CICERO, Philippics. No. ii, ch. 13, sec. 35. (44 B. C.) "Cui bono," has been very generally misapplied to mean "What good is it?" But of course it means nothing of the sort. Edmund Burke, in his speech demanding the impeachment of Warren Hastings (1786), amplified the phrase into, "What end or object could the party have had in the act with which he is accused?" and added that Cassius was called "Cui bono," because of his constant use of it.

<sup>7</sup> No man should so act as to make a gain out of the ignorance of another. (Neminem id agere, ut ex alterius praedetur inscitia.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 17, sec. 72. (c. 45 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> He gains enough that misses an ill-turn. (Assez gaigne qui malheur perd.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Gaigner. (1611)

<sup>9</sup> Some men make gain a fountain, whence proceeds

A stream of lib'ral and heroic deeds.

WILLIAM COWPER, Charity, l. 244. (1781)

<sup>10</sup> Every Penny that is taken, is not clear Gain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1454. (1732)

Great Gain makes Work easy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1756

<sup>11</sup> Man in pursuit of worldly gain may be compared to a thirsty man within reach of briny waters: the more he drinks, the thirstier he is.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 522. (c. 1050)

Ascher attributes this sentence to Barzujeh, the translator of Bidpai into old Persian.

<sup>12</sup> Every one fastens where there is gain.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 498. (1640)

<sup>13</sup> Com lyght winnynges with blessings or curses, Euermore lyght gaynes make heauy purses.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Light gains make heavy purses.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Ceremonies and Respects. (1597) Promus, fo. 89A. CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe, i, 1. (1605) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1744, etc., etc. Bacon explains the proverb, "For light gains come thick, whereas great come but now and then." The French say, "Le petit gain remplit la bourse" (Small gains fill the purse); the Dutch, "Klein gewin brengt rijkdom in" (Small gains bring in wealth); the Italians, "Poco e spesso empie il borsetto" (Little and often fills the purse); the Germans, "Kleiner Profit und oft, ist besser wie grosser und selten" (Small and frequent gains are better than large and infrequent ones).

Perhaps they did not consider the proverb, that "light gains with quick returns make heavy purses."

JOHN AUBREY, The Natural History of Wiltshire, p. 95. (c. 1685)

Small winnings make a heauie purse.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (c. 1595)

Whether small gains be not the way to great profit?

GEORGE BERKELEY, The Querist. Sec. 52. (1735)

<sup>14</sup> Who lackth a stocke, his gaine is not worth a chip.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

CAMDEN, Remains, p. 335. (1605) RAY, Eng-

- lish Proverbs*, p. 146. (1670) FULLER,
Gnomologia. No. 5731. (1732)
- 1
Soone gotten, soone spent.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)
CAMDEN, Remains, p. 331. (1605) FULLER,
Gnomologia. No. 4227. (1732)
- Soon gained, soon gone.
CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 27. (1849)
- 2
He grows old with the love of gain. (Amore senescit habendi.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7, l. 85. (20 B. C.)
So great an itch and disease for gain. (Scabiem tantam et contagia lucri.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 12, l. 14.
A captive fetter'd to the oar of gain.
WILLIAM FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Canto i,
sec. 1, l. 99. (1762)
- Teach erring man to spurn the rage of gain.
GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 424. (1770)
- A toiling man Intent on worldly gains.
SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc. Bk. i, l. 199. (1795)
- 3
'Tis clear gain that remains by honest gettings.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)
- Seek only honest gain. (Such' Er den redlichen Gewinn!)
- GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 1. (1806)
- 4
Make no distinction between hides and unguents: good is the smell of gain from whatever source. (Neu credas ponendum aliquid discriminis inter | unguenta et corium; lucri
bonus est odor ex re | qualibet.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 203. See also MONEY HAS NO SMELL, under MONEY.
- Smell of gain makes labour sweet.
BRATHWAIT, Natures Embassie, 303. (1621)
- The smell of gain is sweet.
EDMUND GAYTON, Art of Longevity, 46. (1659)
- Gain upon dirt rather than lose upon musk.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 62. (1817)
- 5
There is no greater calamity than desire for gain. (Chiu' mo' ta' yü tè.)
LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Sec. 46. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.
- 6
The gaines would hardly quit the paines. (Vix operae pretium erat.)
LIVY, History. Bk. xxxi, ch. 45. (c. 10 B. C.)
Philemon Holland, tr. (1600)
- Who will the fruyte that haruest yeeldes, must take the payne.
JOHN GRANGE, The Golden Aphroditis, sig. M1.
(1577)
- No gain without pain.
LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 4. (1589)
- Nothing is gotten without toyle and labor.
THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Mirror of Man, sig. A4.
(1594)
- Nor bread, nor ought is gotten without paines.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Peine. (1611)
- Great pain and little gain make a man soon weary.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 221. (1633)
- CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 154. (1639)

- If little labour, little are our gaines:
Mans fortunes are according to his paines.
ROBERT HERRICK, No Paines, No Gaincs. (1648)
- Without pains, no gains.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 129. (1670)
- The Germans say, "Ohne Fleiss, kein Preis."
Nothing gotten but [without] pains, but poverty.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 262. (1721)
- FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3677. (1732)
- Hope of gain lessens pain.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734
- No gains without pains.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745
- You must bear pain if you look for gain. (Feras quod laedit, ut quod podest perferas.)
ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 137. (1814)
- Quoting a Latin proverb, and adding another, "Dii nobis laboribus omnia vendunt"
(The gods sell us all things for labor)
- For the most part, they courageously accept the law of labour, No pains, no gains, no sweat, no sweet, . . . as the appointed law and condition of man's life.
R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch
4, p. 97. (1852)
- Where pain ends, gain ends too.
BROWNING, A Death in the Desert, l. 207. (1864)
- Nothing to be got without pains, but poverty and dirt.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk Ch
7. (1869)
- A wish to have the ha'pence without the kicks.
NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 241 (1941)
- 7
Brief is the opportunity for gain. (Brevis est occasio lucri.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, No. 9. (A. D. 93)
- 8
Verily man was created avid of gain; when evil befalls him, apt to grieve; when good befalls him, grudging.
MOHAMMED, Koran, lxx, 19. (c. 622) Bell, tr.
- 9
All men's gains are the fruit of venturing.
(ἀλλ' ἀπὸ πείρης πάντα ἀνθρώποισι φιλέει γίνεσθαι.)
MARDONIUS, to Xerxes, before the expedition against Athens, 480 B. C. (See HERODOTUS. vii, 9.)
- NOTHING VENTURE, NOTHING HAVE, see under VENTURE.
- 10
They struggle to gain in order that they may spend, and then to re-gain what they have spent. (Quaerere, ut absumant, absumpta re-quirere certant.)
OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 213. (c. A. D. 8)
- To gain teacheth how to spend.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 457
(1640)
- He that gains well and spends well, needs no account book.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 852
See also under GETTING AND SPENDING.
- 11
I maye put my wynnyng in myn eye.
PALSCRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 478. (1530)

That shooter whiche shooteth . . . in rough wether and fayre, shall alwayes put his wyningnes in his eyes.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 151. (1545)
At end I might put my wyning in mine eye, and see neuer the worse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Judas . . . sells his Master to the Pharisees, himself to the Devil. Yet when all is done, he might put his gains in his eye.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 201. (1629)
All that you get you may put in your eye, and see ne'er the worse.

B.E., Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Eye. (c. 1695) See also COWLEY, The Guardian, i, 1. (1650) SWIFT, Polite Conversation, i.

1
Never do anything for money; leave gain to trades pursued for gain. (μηδὲν χρημάτων ἕνεκα πράττειν· δεῖν γὰρ τὰ κερδαντὰ κερδαίνειν.)

PERIANDER, Maxim. (c. 590 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Periander. Bk. i, sec. 97.

2
I do not esteem all gain useful to man. (Non ego omnino lucrum omne esse utile homini existimo.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 324. (c. 200 B.C.)
The cares of gain are threefold: the struggle of getting; the frenzy of increasing; the horror of losing.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 43. (1940)

3
There is no gain so safe as saving what you've got. (Nullus est tam tutus quaestus quam quod habeas parcere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 426. (c. 43 B.C.)
A thing is soner spared then gotten.

MILES COVERDALE, The Christen State of Matrymonye, sig. I3. (1541)

The first gaine or profite, is to spare. (El sparagno, è il primo guadagno.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 29. (1578)
Get what you can, and what you get, hold;
'Tis the stone that will turn all your Lead into Gold.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756. See also under FRUGALITY.

4
I would rather lose honorably than gain basely. (Perdidisse honeste malletm quam accepisse turpiter.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 527. (c. 43 B.C.) Some texts have "perdidisse ad assem"
(I would rather lose to the last farthing).

5
Use the little to get the big; throw a brick to win a gem. (I hsiao tao ta; p'ao chuan yin yü.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 177. (1875)

If small sums do not go out, large sums will not come in.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xlii. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.

6
Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining.
SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece. St. 19. (1594)

7

Gain is pleasant though it be full of lies. (τὸ κέρδος ἡδὺν κἀν ἀπὸ ψευδῶν ἔη.)

SOPHOCLES. (c. 450 B.C.) The attribution is by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 14, who gives the Latin, "Dulce est lucrum, profectum et a mendaciis."

Gain is better than shame. (κέρδος ἀσχύνης ἄμεινον.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, iv, 67. (c. A. D. 130) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 14, "Lucrum pudori praestat."

8

Great gains are not won except by great risks. (μεγάλα γὰρ πρήγματα μεγάλοις κινδύνοις ἐθέλει καταϊρέσθαι.)

XERXES, to Artabanus, before the battle of Thermopylae. (480 B.C.) See HERODOTUS, vii, 50.

No gain is possible without attendant outlay. (Non enim potis est quaestus fieri, ni sumptus sequitur.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 286. (c. 194 B.C.)

No gain, but by its price.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Wealth. (1839)

Boundless risk must pay for boundless gain.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Wanderers. (1868)

II—Gain: Ill-Gotten

9

Nothing is a Man's truly

That he cometh not by duly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6280. (1732)

10

Ill-gotten goods snare the soul and suck out the blood. (Ungerechtes Gut | Befängt die Seele, auszehrt das Blut.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 9. (1806)

11

Do not seek dishonest gains: dishonest gains are losses. (μὴ κακὰ κερδαίνειν· κακὰ κέρδεα ἰσ' ἀάττησιν.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 352. (c. 800 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iii, 52, with the Latin, "Malum lucrum, aequale dispendio" (Base gain is the same as loss). There is another form, "At turpe lucrum adducit infortunium" (Base gain leads to misfortune).

Prefer a loss to a dishonest gain: the one brings pain at the moment, the other for all time. (ζημίαν αλγέσθαι μᾶλλον ἢ κέρδος ἀσχρόν· ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἀπαξ ἐλύπησε, τὸ δὲ διὰ παντός.)

CHILON, Aphorism. (c. 560 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon, i, 70.

Ill-gotten gain brings loss. (κέρδη πονηρὰ ζημίαν ἡμεψατο.)

EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 312. (c. 440 B.C.)

Trust not in unrighteous gains for they profit nothing in the day of wrath.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), v, 8. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

Ill-gotten gain should be called loss. (Damnum appellandum est cum mala fama lucrum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 158. (c. 43 B.C.)

Well-gotten gain may be lost, but ill-gotten is lost, itself, and its owner likewise. (Lo bien ganado se pierde, y lo malo, ello y su dueño.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 54. (1615)

Bad Gains are truly Losses.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

<sup>1</sup> The fortune ill-gotten rarely rejoices the third generation. (De male quaesistis, vix gaudet tertius haeres.)

JUVENAL, Satires. (c. A. D. 120) As quoted by BLAND, Proverbs, i, 171. HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 77, renders it, "A third heir seldom profits by ill-gotten wealth." The Latin is sometimes given as "De rebus male acquisistis non gaudebit tertius haeres."

What's ill-got scarce to a third heir descends, Nor wrongful booty meets with prosperous ends. (De male quaesistis vix gaudet tertius haeres.)

Nec habet eventus sordida praeda bonos.)

THOMAS WALSINGHAM, Historia Anglicana, p. 260. (c. 1422)

Here mayst thou se, euyl-wunne thyng

Wyth eyre [heir] shal neuer make gode endyng.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 9436. (1303)

For thys men se, and sey alday,

"The threde eyre [third heir] selleth alle away."

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 9479. (1303)

It is a common prouerbe, . . . Of euyl gotten goods the thyrd heyre vnneth hath joy.

UNKNOWN, Dives and Pauper. (1493)

Ill-gotten goods neuer touche the third heyre.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart) iv, 146. (1593)

Of piles of wealth, rais'd by unjust extortion,

The third heir seldom does enjoy his portion.

UNKNOWN, Helpe to Discourse, 70. (1619)

Of good ill got The third heir joyeth not.

JOSEPH BURROUGHS, Sermons: On Hosea. (c. 1750)

Ill gotten gear Wilna enrich the third heir.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 101. (1875)

THREE GENERATIONS FROM SHIRT-SLEEVES TO SHIRT-SLEEVES, see under ANCESTRY.

<sup>2</sup> Ill-gotten, ill-spent. (Male parta, male dilabuntur.)

NAEVIUS, Fragments. Frag. 38, Loeb. (c. 220 B. C.) PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 844. (c. 194 B. C.) has, "Male partum male disperit." CICERO quotes the phrase from Naeuius in the second Philippic, sec. 27 (44 B. C.), but says he does not know which poet said it. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia i, vii, 81 (1508), and included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus (1550), with the rendering, "Euyl gotten good go euyl awaye." A later Latin form is, "Quod male lucratur, male perditur et nihilatur" (What is evilly gained, is easily lost and reduced to nothing), the last two words having been added to fill out the hexameter.

And that with gyle was gete, ungraciousliche be dispended.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text C, passus xvii, l. 278. (1362)

Male quesisti et male perdidisti; hit is ryght that it be euil lost that is euil wonne.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart, p. 8. (1481)

Euyl gotten ryches wyll neuer proue longe.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 77. (1519)

Euyl gotten, worse kept.

MILES COVERDALE, The Christen State of Matrymonye, sig. 12. (1541)

Things badly acquired, badly waste away. (Les choses mal acquises, mal deperissent.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1545)

Some translators give the Latin, "Iuxta illud male parta, male dilabuntur."

Euill gotten neuer proueth well.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Soone gotten, soone spent, yll gotten, yll spent.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6.

Euill gotten goodes are euill spent, saied our curate vpon Sondaie.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 72. (1564)

Wee must not mervaille if things ill gotten are ill spent.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 177. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Good ill got, so little time endure.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Dulce Bellum. (1575)

But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear

That things ill-got had ever bad success?

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, ii, 2, 45. (1591)

Ill might it prosper, that ill gotten was.

SPENSER, Mother Hubberds Tale, l. 1149. (1591)

Ill win, ill warit [spent].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 60. (c. 1595)

Evil gotten, evil spent.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 305. (1605)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1670) The French say, "Mal gagné, mal dépensé."

Ill-gotten goods ne'er thrive;

I play'd the thief, and now am robb'd myself.

BEN JONSON, The Case Is Altered. Act iv, sc. 1. (1609)

It is but reasonable that what's Ill got should be Worse spent.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Select Colloquies of Erasmus, p. 55. (1680)

Ill gotten goods seldom prosper.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3070. (1732)

Ill got, ill gone.

ARTHUR MURPHY, Citizen. Act i, sc. 2. (1751)

That ill-gotten gain never prospers. . . . It is the trite consolation administered to the easy dupe, when he has been tricked out of his money or estate.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Popular Fallacies. No. 2. (1826)

<sup>3</sup> Be not allured, my friend, by cunning gains. (μὴ δολωθῆς, ὦ φίλος, κέρδεσιν εὐτράπλοισι.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. Ode i, l. 92. (470 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> So got, so gone.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 349. (1678)

The Germans have the same proverb, "Wie gewonnen, so zerronnen," as well as several variations, "Uebel gewonnen, uebel zerronnen" (Ill won, ill spent), "Unrecht Gut thut nicht gut" (Ill-gotten goods do no good),

"Unrecht Gut gedieht nicht" (Ungodly gain never flourishes) and "Kein Wucher kann jemals bestehn" (No ill-gotten gain can ever last). They also say, "Ungerechter Pfennig verzehrt gerechten Thaler" (The unrighteous penny corrupts the righteous dollar), which resembles the Scottish proverb cited by RAY, p. 229, "An ill-wan penny will cast down a pound." The French say, "Les biens mal acquis s'en vont à vau-l'eau" (Goods ill-got vanish down the stream, or down the pipe, or into thin air), which is very like the Italian, "Vien presto consumato l'inguista mente acquistato." The Italians also say, "Della roba di mal acquista non se ne veda allegrezza" (Ill-gotten goods never give any happiness). The Spanish form is, "Lo ageno siempre pia por su dueño" (That which is another's always yearns for its lord), and quickly flies back to him.

1
Though by ill-gotten gain the few may thrive.
The many come to ruin and disgrace.

(ἐκ τῶν γὰρ αἰσχροῦν λημμάτων τοὺς πλείονας ἀτωμένους ἴδοις ἂν ἢ σεωσμένους.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 313. (c. 441 B.C.)

Ill-gotten gains work evil. (τὰ δειλὰ κέρδη πημονὰς ἐργάζεται.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 326. (c. 441 B.C.)

A sordid gain can bring no good in the end. (Non habet eventus sordida praeda bonos.)

OVID, Amores, Bk. i, eleg. 10, l. 48. (c. 13 B.C.)

Avoid dishonest gain; no price

Can recompence the pangs of vice.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

Unrighteous Gain is the curs'd Seed of Woe,
Predestin'd to be reap'd by them who sow.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

2
A little with honesty is better than a great deal with knavery.

UNKNOWN, London Chanticleers. Sc. 1. (1659)

In HAZLITT, Old Plays, xii, 325. Cited as "the precise axiom."

A little well-gotten will do us more good,
Than lordships and scepters by Rapine and Blood.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

An honest shilling is better than a knavish sovereign.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 100. (1875)

THE DEVIL'S MEAL IS HALF BRAN, see under DEVIL.

III—Gain and Loss

See also Profit and Loss; Winning and Losing

3
What the gauntlet gains, the gorget consumes.
(Ce que le gantelet gagne le gorgerin mange.)

CHEVALIER BAYARD, attr. (c. 1520) See D'IS-RAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs.

4
There is a gain that turneth to loss. (ἔστιν εὖρεμα ἐς θάλατταν.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xx, 9. (c. 190 B.C.)

5
What we lose in hake, we shall have in herring.

RICHARD CAREW, The Survey of Cornwall, p.

105. (1602) A variation of the Latin proverb,

"Quod alibi diminutum, exaequatur alibi"

(What is lost in one way may be gained in another).

What I lost in the salt fish I gained in the red herrings.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 17. (1639)

What I make on d' peanut I lose on d' damn banan'.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, quoting the remark of an Italian fruit-vendor in New York City.

(c. 1890)

What's lost upon the roundabouts we pulls up on the swings.

PATRICK CHALMERS, Roundabouts and Swings.

(1910)

If I lose on the swings, I'll get back on the roundabouts.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Theatre. Ch. 11. (1937)

In money matters, as in most other things, one is prepared to make up on the swings what one loses on the roundabouts.

F. B. YOUNG, A Man About the House, p. 32.

(1942)

I lost on the swings what I gained on the roundabouts.

BERNARD SHAW, Everybody's Political What's

What. Ch. 15. (1944)

WON IN THE COUNTY, LOST IN THE SHIRE, see under WINNING AND LOSING.

6
Make moderate use of gains: when all is cost.

What took long time to get is quickly lost.

(Utere quaesitis modice: cum sumptus abund-

at, labitur exiguo quod partum est tempore longo.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 17. (c. 175 B.C.)

7
Quickly come and quickly go.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 10. (c. 400 B.C.)

Right as a mirour nothing may enpresse,

But, lightly as it cometh, so mot it pace.

CHAUCER (?), Balade Against Women Uncon-

stant. (c. 1380)

For-why men seyth, "impressiouns lighte

Ful lightly been ay redy to the flighte."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1238.

(c. 1380) Paraphrasing the Latin proverb.

"Levis impressio, levis recessio."

As lightly as it comth, so wol we spende.

CHAUCER, Pardoners Tale, l. 453. (c. 1387)

Lightly it cam and lightly went a-way.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. ii, l. 4635.

(c. 1415)

Wyte thou wele it schall be so,

That lyghtly cum, schall lyghtly go.

UNKNOWN, The Debate of the Carpenters

Tools, l. 27. (c. 1450) In HAZLITT, Early

Popular Poetry, i, 79.

Light come, light go.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3213. (1732)

Experience taught me that easely wonne was lightly loste.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, Sig. E2. (c. 1580)

That is lightly to bee gained, is as quickly lost.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), ii, 25. (1583)

"Lightly come," we say, "doth lightly goe."

R. C., The Times' Whistle, l. 2828. (1616)

Quickly be wonne, and quickly be lost.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 29. (1631)

What comes by the pipe goes by the drum. (Ce qui vient de la flute s'en va au tambour.)

UNKNOWN, Ballet of Proverbs. (1654) Performed at the French court with Louis XIV participating. The Haytians have a somewhat similar proverb, of which the bastard French is, "Gambette ous trouvé nen gan chimin, nen gan chimin ous va pèdè li" (The knife you find in the highway you'll lose in the highway).

Lightly come, lightly go.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 110. (1678)

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 261. (1869)

What lightly comes, as lightly goes,

With all such pretty fellows.

GARRICK, The Sick Monkey, ad fin. (1765)

As extravagance and good luck, by long custom, go hand-in-hand, he spent as fast as he acquired.

FANNY BURNEY, Camilla. Bk. v, ch. 13. (1796)

Our honestest customers are the thieves.

With them and with their purses 'tis lightly come, and lightly go.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 37. (1861)

Lightly got, lightly spent.

WALTER BESANT, The Orange Girl. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1898)

EASY COME, EASY GO, see under EASY.

1 Bring the head of the sow to the tail of the grice [pig].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 62. (1721)

"That is, balance your loss with your gain."

An I am to lose by ye, I'se ne'er deny I hae won by ye mony a fair pund sterling. Sae, an it come to the warst, I'se e'en lay the head o' the sow to the tail o' the grice.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 24. (1818)

2 Come with the wind, go with the water.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 83. (1721)

Ye'd put your ill-gotten gains to a right use; they might come by the wind but they wouldna gang wi' the water.

HENLEY AND STEVENSON, Deacon Brodie. Act i, sc. 2. (1892)

By river come, by water go.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 375. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

3 On the one hand, loss implies gain; on the other hand, gain implies loss. (Kwo' 'sun tzu | erh yi'; hwo' yi' tzu | erh 'sun.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 42. (c. 550 B.C.) Carus, tr.

4 The loss will be outweighed by the greatness of your gain. (Esse solent magno damna minora bono.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 672. (c. 1 B.C.)

Ovid is counselling the lover to permit the discarded mistress to retain his gifts.

5 There are times when it is undoubtedly better to incur loss than to make gain. (Est etiam ubi profecto damnum praestet facere quam lucrum.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 327. (c. 200 B.C.)

Sometimes the best gain is to lose.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 226. (1640)

There are some losses that may be gains.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 47. (1850)

6 Gain cannot be made without another's loss. (Lucrum sine damno alterius fieri non potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 337. (c. 43 B.C.) HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 448, cites another form, "Unius dispendium alterius est compendium" (One man's gain is another man's loss). The Germans say, "Des Einen Gewinn ist des Andern Schaden."

No one gains save by another's loss. (Nulli nisi ex alterius iniuria quaestus est.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (c. A.D. 55)

Can one be exalted without another's wrack?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 163. (1576)

Whatsoever is some where gotten is some where lost.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions and Troubles. (1597)

7 The public loss swallows up the private benefit. (Auecques le commun est aussy le propre perdu.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 46. (1534)

8 No great loss but [without] some small profit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1670)

"As, for instance, he whose sheep die of the rot, saves the skins and wool."

9 Little gain and great loss. (Paulum lucri quantum damni.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 747. (163 B.C.)

He likened those who grasped at small gains with great risk to those who fished with a golden hook (aureo hamo piscantibus), the loss of which could not be made good by any catch.

SUETONIUS, Deified Augustus. Ch. xxv, sec. 4. (A.D. 120) See under FISHING.

Waxe, lynnén cloth, & fustian, a fayre shop, and litle gaine. (Cera, tela, e fustagno, bella botega, poco guadagno.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

For the bleating, we have lost the neighing. (διὰ τὴν βληχὴν καὶ ὁ χρεμετισμὸς ἀπέδρα.)

ALEXANDER NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 25. (1831) In the same class as "Penny wise, pound foolish," "Save at the spigot and lose at the bung-hole," "Fishing with a golden hook," or as thieves who, in attempting to steal little, sometimes lose much. It originates from the fable of the peasant who went one day on horseback to steal a sheep, and approaching the fold where the sheep were enclosed, tied his horse to the hedge and entered. But some savage dogs drove him away before he could release the horse, and when he returned home on foot he explained to his wife that for the bleating he had lost the neighing.

GALL

<sup>1</sup> It was on gall thy mother reared thee. (χόλη δ' αὖ σ' ἔτρεφε μήτηρ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 203. (c. 850 B.C.)

To smear with gall. (χολή δ' ἀλείφειν.)

DIPHILUS OF SINOPE. Frag. (c. 350 B.C.) To give one a distaste for anything. Gall was smeared by a mother on her nipples when she wished to wean her child.

Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 5, 48. (1606)

<sup>2</sup> Remembering mine affliction and my misery, the wormwood and the gall. (Recordare paupertatis, et transgressionis meae, absinthii, et fellis.)

Old Testament: Lamentations, iii, 19. (c. 600 B.C.) Both gall (bile) and wormwood are very bitter, and the phrase "gall and wormwood" has become proverbial for bitterness of spirit.

Thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity. (In felle enim amaritudinis.)

New Testament: Acts, viii, 23. (c. A.D. 70)

BITTER AS GALL, see under BITTERNESS.

<sup>3</sup> You have more pure gall to the superficial foot than anybody we ever heard of.

BILL NYE (EDGAR WILSON NYE), Baled Hay, p. 58. (1884) Bold assurance, impudence.

You got plenty of gall.

C. E. MULFORD, Bar-20 Three, p. 195. (1921)

<sup>4</sup> Let there be gall enough in thy ink, though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 2, 52. (1599)

No gall has ever poisoned my pen. (Aucun fiel n'a jamais empoisonné ma plume.)

CRÉBILLON, Discours de Réception. (1731)

<sup>5</sup> He rubbed sum on the gall.

JOHN SKELTON, Works (Dyce), i, 365. (c. 1520)

When a thief or a briber heareth this, it rubbeth him on the gall.

HUGH LATIMER, Works (P.S.), li, 211. (1552)

THE GALLED HORSE, see under HORSE.

<sup>6</sup> 'Tis sweetness tempts the insects from the skies;

Gall needeth not a flapper for the flies.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Pindariana. (1795)

GALLEY-WEST

<sup>7</sup> Your verdict has knocked . . . [me] galley-west.

MARK TWAIN, Letters, i, xv, 250. (1875)

She grabbed up the basket and slammed it across the house, and knocked the cat galleywest.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 37. (1884)

I'll be darned if this establishment of yours, Huse, don't knock any one of them galleywest! —galleywest, sir, that's what it does.

FRANCIS, Saddle and Moccasin. Ch. 11. (1887)

Ef anything should happen, it 'ould knock me galley west.

R. E. ROBINSON, Danvis Folks, p. 306. (1894)

GALLOWES

<sup>8</sup> Let the tree on which they hang us be, at least, of decent wood. (κάν τι σφαλῆτ'. ἐξ ἀλίου γούυ τοῦ ἐύλου.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 737. (405 B.C.)

Murray, tr. A variation of the proverb quoted by Scholiast, "If you feel that you must hang yourself, at least pick a good tree" (ἀπὸ καλοῦ ξύλου κἀν ἀπάγξασθαι).

Theophrastus actually had a book written against him by a woman—which was the origin of the proverb about "Choosing your tree to hang from" (suspendio arborem eligendi).

PLINY, Naturalis Historia: Prefatio. Sec. 29. (A.D. 77)

If I be hang'd Ile chuse my gallowses.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

If I must be hanged, I won't go far to choose my gallows; It shall be around your fair neck.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>9</sup> The gallows will have its own at last.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 506. (1855)

To show the gallows before they show the town.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 543.

Cited as a Spanish proverb.

<sup>10</sup> Yf ye kepe a man fro the galhows he shalle neuer loue yow after.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesop, i, 10. (1484) See under THIEF.

<sup>11</sup> When every one gets his own, you'll get the Gallows.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5550. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> It is not only the gallows-clappers that say so.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Calvin on Deuteronomie, li, 305. (1583) From the swinging of the body to and fro like the clapper of a bell.

Come, come, ye Gallows-clappers.

BROME, The Antipodes. Act ii, sc. 9. (1620)

Fusty Crackropes and Gallowclappers.

MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 7. (1708)

Gallows bird, one that deserves hanging.

FRANCIS GROSE, Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Gallowes Bird. (1785)

Young gallows bird.

SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 2. (1828)

- 1 Widdie [gallows] hold thine own.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 353. (1721)
It's nae laughing to girn [grin] in a widdy.
ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)
- 2 You'll ride on a horse that was foal'd of an acorn.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 253. (1678)
As pretty a Tyburn blossom as ever was brought up to ride a horse foaled by an acorn.
LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 82. (1827)
- 3 He hath been five thousand years a boy.—
Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 12. (1595)
Though he be a notable gallows, . . . his master did turn him away.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act i, sc. 3. (1611)
Gallows, a wicked rascal.
BENJAMIN MARTIN, English Dictionary: Gallows. (1749)
"Now, young gallows!" This was an invitation for Oliver to enter.
DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 11. (1838)
- 4 This fellow . . . hath no drowning mark upon him: his complexion is perfect gallows.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 1, 32. (1611)
Hold him fast, the dog: he has the gallows in his face.
GOLDSMITH, Good-Natured Man. Act v. (1768)
He had gallows written on his brow in the hour of his birth.
SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 6. (1819)
There's gallows marked in his face.
MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 8. (1835)
- 5 Your happe may be to wagge
Upon a wooden nagge.
JOHN SKELTON (?), A Pore Helpe, l. 256. (c. 1520)
Others . . . vaile and couch it, when riding the wooden horse.
EDMUND GAYTON, Pleasant Notes upon Don Quixot, p. 119. (1654)
I'de ride the wooden horse e'er be troubled with her impertinence.
THOMAS D'URFEY, The Virtuous Wife. Act ii, sc. 1. (1680)
- 6 The gallows grones for this wage as iust rope rife.
UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act i, sc. 4. (1577)
One for whom ye gallows grones.
SIR HENRY MANWAYRING, Sea-mans Dictionary, p. 525. (c. 1620)
Thus, then he scaped hanging, And made no more moan;
But yet for his presence the gallows did groan.
SHIRBURNE Ballads, xxxii, 131. (c. 1590)
Go hang yourself in your own garters, for I'm sure the gallows groans for you.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

GAMALIEL

- 7 Brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel.
(ἐν τῇ πόλει ταύτῃ παρὰ τοὺς πόδας Γαμαλιήλ.)
New Testament: Acts, xxii, 3. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Secus pedes Gamaliel eruditus."
"A Gamaliel" came to be a proverbial phrase for a distinguished teacher (sometimes for a pedant), after the Jewish teacher of St. Paul, just as "A Daniel," or "A second Daniel," meant a man of keen judgment and intelligence.
I will sit at the feet of Gamaliel.
BERNARD SHAW, Devil's Disciple. Act iii. (1897)

GAMBLING

See also Cards, Chance, Dice

- 8 The gambling known as business looks with austere disfavor upon the business known as gambling.
AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)
- 9 The devil goes share in gaming.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 501. (1855)
- 10 Gaming is a principle inherent in human nature.
EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780.
Man is a gaming animal.
CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Mrs. Battle's Opinions on Whist. (1823)
- 11 Fools for arguments use wagers.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 298. (1663)
Your actions verifie a proverb among you, none but fools lay wagers.
UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Visions, p. 16. (1677)
See the virtue of a wager, that new philosophical way, lately found out, of deciding all hard questions.
APHRA BEHN, The Rover. Act iii, sc. 1. (1677)
It's an old saying (and I think a true one), That none but knaves or fools lay wagers.
The British Apollo. No. 146, col. 4. (1711)
A Wager is a Fool's Argument.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 452. (1732)
Do not trust nor contend,
Nor lay Wagers, nor lend,
And you'll have Peace to your Life's End.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6351. (1732)
For most men (till by losing render'd sager),
Will back their own opinions with a wager.
LORD BYRON, Beppo, St. 27. (1817)
- 12 In play there are two pleasures for your choosing—
The one is winning, and the other losing.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 12. (1824)
- 13 He that plays more than he sees, forfeits his eyes to the King.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 324. (1605) JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 132. (1670)

1 No gambler was ever yet a happy man.
WILLIAM COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch. 1. (1829)

2 You never accumulate if you don't speculate.
DAVID DODGE, Death and Taxes, p. 233. (1941)

3 NOTHING VENTURE NOTHING HAVE, see VENTURE.

4 If a gambler can reform, then there is a cure for leprosy. (Tu 'chien nêng pien shêng lai yu yao.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 184. (1872)
Win here, win there, the banker is all right. (Ying lai ying 'chü ku chia 'hao.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 182.

5 The less play the better.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595)
Keep flax from fire, youth from gaming.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

6 A Man gets no Thanks for what he loseth at Play.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 275 (1732)

7 Could fools to keep their own contrive,
On what, on whom could gamesters thrive?
JOHN GAY, Fables: Pan and Fortune. (1727)

8 In his proverbe seith the wise,
Whan game is best, is best to leave.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. viii, l. 3087. (1390)

When game is best, Hit is tyme to rest.
UNKNOWN, Douce MS, p. 52. (c. 1440)
The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 4, 39. (1595)
Away, begone; the sport is at the best.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 5, 121
If yet thou love game at so dear a rate,
Learn this, that hath old gamesters dearly cost:
Dost lose? rise up: dost win? rise in that state.
Who strive to sit out losing hands are lost.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 34. (1633)

Leave your luck while winning. (Sabarse dejar ganando con la fortuna.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 38. (1647)

Gie o'er when the play is gude.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 260. (1678)
The French say, "Il faut bon laisser le jeu tant qu'il est beau" (One does well to leave the play while it is good).

Leave off while the play is good.
KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 233. (1721)
When I saw our host break ranks, . . . I e'en pricked off by myself while the play was good.
WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 13. (1820)

9 I know the saying, . . . small stake makes colde play.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Nugae Antiquae, i, 205. (c. 1597)

I'll not play with you for shoe-buckles.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 195. (1639)

He'll play a small game rather than stand out.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 174. (1678)

10 He that plays his money, ought not to value it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 203. (1640)

He that is thrown, would ever wrestle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 798.

11 At the game's end we shall see who gains.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 540. (1640)

At the End of the Game, you'll see who's the Winner.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 826. (1732)

He knew a wise old Saying, which maintain'd,
That 'twas bad Luck to count what one had gain'd.

JOHN BYROM, The Pond. (1773)

12 Gamesters and race-horses never last long.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 753. (1640)

A Race-Horse is an open Sepulchre.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 376. (1732)

We all put our money upon the wrong horse.

MARQUIS OF SALISBURY, Speech, House of Lords, 19 Jan., 1897.

We cannot expect to have an honest horse race until we have an honest human race.

Attributed to CHARLES EVANS HUGHES, but denied by him in a letter to the compiler. Besides "To bet on the wrong horse," horse racing has given rise to many other proverbial phrases, such as, "To be out of the running," "To be left at the post," "To hold the whip hand," "To have the inside track," "To win by a head," "To be a dark horse." "The blue ribbon of the turf," referring to the Derby, is credited to Benjamin Disraeli. See Life of Lord George Bentinck, ch. 26. (c. 1870) COMPETITION MAKES A HORSERACE, see under HORSE.

13 He playeth best that wins.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Three Hundred Epigrams. No. 230. (1562)

He plays well that wins.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 122. (1639)

14 A good candle-holder proves a good gamester.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 13. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670)

A good Candle-Snuffer may come to be a good Player.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 138. (1732)

15 Gaming is the mother of lies and perjuries. (Mendaciorum et periurium mater est alea.)

JOHN OF SALISBURY, Polycraticus. Bk. i. (1175)

Hasard is verray moder of lesinges [lying].

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Pardoner's Tale, l. 263. (c. 1387)

By gaming we lose both our time and treasure, —two things most precious to the life of man.

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves. (c. 1623)

One begins by being a dupe, one ends by being a rascal. (On commence par être dupe, On finit par être fripon.)

MADAME DESHOULIÈRES, Réflexions sur le Jeu, (c. 1688)

Gaming, the vice of Naves and Fools, detest,
Miner of Time, of Substance, and of Rest.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.
A man may play with decency; but if he games,
he is disgraced.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Feb., 1750.

Who games, is felon of his wealth,
His time, his liberty, his health.

NATHANIEL COTTON, Pleasure. (1751)

Gaming corrupts our dispositions, and teaches us a habit of hostility against all mankind.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Martha Jefferson, 1787.

[Gambling] is the child of avarice, the brother of iniquity, and the father of mischief.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Bushrod Washington, 15 Jan., 1783. Washington was perhaps paraphrasing the French proverb, "Le jeu est le fils de l'avarice et le père du désespoir."

Gambling is the child of avarice, but the parent of prodigality.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. (1820)

1
It is play, wine and wantonnesse, that feedeth
a lover as fat as a foole.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues, p. 118. (1579) Arber,
ed. After the Latin proverb, "Alea, vina, Venus, per quae sum factus egenus" (Gaming, wine, and women, through which I have become a beggar).

Gaming, women, and wine, while they laugh they make men pine.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

The Italians say that "play, wine, and women consume a man laughing." It is true of all pleasurable sins.

WILLIAM GURNALL, *The Christian in Compleat
Armour*, ii, 239. (1658)

Play, women, and wine undo men laughing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)

Play, women, and wine are enough to make a prince a pauper.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures.
Ch. 2. (1880) See also WINE AND WOMEN.

2
Lest he should lose, the gambler ceases not to lose. (Sic, ne perdiderit, non cessat perdere lusor.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 451. (c. 1 B. C.)

3
The better the gambler, the worse the man.
(Aleator quanto in arte est potior, tanto est nequior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 33. (c. 43
B. C.) See also under DANCING.

A gamester, the greater master he is in his art,
the worse man he is.

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. (c. 1600)

The better gamester the worsen man.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 96. (1639)

4
Hasty gamesters oversee.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 151. (1678)

Hasty Gamesters oversee themselves.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1803. (1732)

5
Play wi' your play fairs.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 253. (1678)
"Play with your peers."

6
If you stick to gambling you will have to sell your house. (Hsin liao tu mai liao wu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
762. (1875)

The players are blind; the lookers-on see clearly.
SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 767.

7
The most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, ii, 3, 2. (1609)

Why they call a feller that keeps losin' all the time a good sport gits me.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 28.
(1930)

8
I'll lay my head to any good man's hat.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 310.
(1595)

I'll lay all Lombard-street to an egg-shell.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Gray's Inn Journal.
No. 11. (30 Dec., 1752) Lombard Street, in London, has many banks. The American equivalent would be Wall Street.

All Lombard Street to ninepence.

THOMAS MOORE, Tom Crib's Memorial, p. 38.
(1819)

I'll bet Lombard Street to a Brummagem sixpence.

GEORGE DANIEL, Sworn at Highgate. Act i, sc.
4. (1826) Brummagem: made in Birmingham; counterfeit.

All Lombard Street to a China orange.

MARRYAT, Newton Forster. Ch. 47. (1832)

"It is Lombard Street to a China Orange," quoth
Uncle Jack. "Are the odds . . . so great?"

LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. iv, ch. 3. (1849)

You can bet a dollar to a doughnut.

F. W. BRONSON, Nice People Don't Kill, p. 55.
(1940) NASH, Said with Flowers, p. 4. (1942)

You can bet your bottom dollar.

MARGARET FISHBACK, Men Get It in the Neck
(1940) LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 4

You can bet your boots and put your shirt on it.
NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 284. (1940)

9
Now, Criticks, do your worst, that here are met;

For, like a Rook, I have hedg'd in my Bet.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, The Rehearsal, p. 31. (1672)

He began to think . . . that he had betted too deep . . . and that it was time to hedge.

T. B. MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. iv, ch. 17. (1855)

10
You ain't goin' to fool female Young America much. You may gamble on that.

ARTEMUS WARD, In Washington. (1866)

Whatever is found in its company may be gambled on as being the petrified truth.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 50.
(1883)

GAME

See also Sport

<sup>1</sup> Sine periculo friget lusus. (Without danger the game grows cold.)

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act iii. (1605)
Quoting a Latin proverb.

<sup>2</sup> Canstow pleyen raket, to and fro,
Nettle in, dokke out, now this, now that?

CHAUCER, Troilus. Bk. iv, l. 460. (c. 1380)
You base foot-ball player.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 94. (1605)
Those athletic brutes whom undeservedly we call heroes.

JOHN DRYDEN, Fables: Preface. (1700)
The flannelled fools at the wicket or the muddled oafs at the goals.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Islanders, l. 32. (1902)
The beautiful but pernicious game of billiards.

WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae, March, 1827.
To play billiards well is the sign of a misspent youth.

HERBERT SPENCER, quoting from an unknown source. (c.1860) See DUNCAN, Life and Letters.
It's one, two, three strikes you're out,

At the old ball game.
JACK NORWORTH, Take Me Out to the Ball Game. (1908)

<sup>3</sup> I . . . told him two could play at that game.
EDWARD FITZGERALD, Letters, 12 June, 1845.

Two can play at that game, old fellow.
J. C. HUTCHINSON, Crown and Anchor. Ch. 20. (1896) The proverb, of course, is "That is a game that two can play at."

<sup>4</sup> Good bye, captain. . . . die game, captain.
JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera, Act iii. (1727)
You're game, egad—too much for such a cur.

EDWARD THOMPSON, The Meretriciad, 20. (1765)
I shall die game.

MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch. 43. (1840)
She was evidently game to the backbone.

MAYNE REID, Scalp Hunters. Ch. 23. (1851)

<sup>5</sup> There are games which it is better to lose than win. (Est etiam, ubi profeto damnum praestet facere, quam lucrum.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 102. (1869) Quoting Plautus.

It is a silly Game, where no Body wins.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2880. (1732)

It is an ill game that hath not one trump.
ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 357. (1740)

<sup>6</sup> 'Tis not for money they contend but for glory. (οὐ περὶ χρημάτων τὸν ἀγῶνα ποιεῖνται ἀλλὰ περὶ ἀρετῆς.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. viii, ch. 26. (c. 445 B.C.) Tigranes, a Persian, speaking of the Greeks, when he found that the prize contended for in the Olympian games was a crown of olive.

And eek men shal nat make ernest of game.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Prologue, l. 78. (c. 1386)

The true honor of virtue consists more in fighting than in winning. (Consiste l'honneur de la vertu à combattre, non à battre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 30. (1580)
Sport is sweetest when there be no spectators.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 326. (1639)
The best of the sport is to do the deed, and say nothing.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 813. (1640)
It's the fight that gives us pleasure, not the victory. (C'est le combat qui nous plaît, et non pas la victoire.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. ix, No. 34. (c. 1660)

And who, 'mid e'en the Fools, but feels that half the joy is in the race.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. viii, st. 18. (1880)

To love the game beyond the prize.
HENRY NEWBOLT, Clifton Chapel. (1898)

The game is more than the player of the game, And the ship is more than the crew!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Song in Storm. (1918)
It's not the kill that counts but the cast.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Corpse Without a Clue. p. 36. (1944)

<sup>7</sup> When the rules of the game prove unsuitable for victory, the gentlemen of England change the rules of the game.

HAROLD LASKI, Address, before the Communist Academy, Moscow, July, 1934.

<sup>8</sup> They were indeed fair game for the laughers.
MACAULAY, Essays: Milton, p. 23. (1825)

As to the unfortunate Jews, each party considered them fair game.

C. M. YONGE, Cameos. Bk. i, ch. 30. (1852)

<sup>9</sup> I fly at higher game.
FREDERICK MARRYAT, Children of the New Forest, Ch. 7. (1847)

She is game much too high for him.
CHARLES GIBBON, For the King. Ch. 16. (1872)

<sup>10</sup> We must play the game. (προφάσεις ἀγῶν δέχεσθαι.)

PLATO, Cratylus. Sec. 421D. (c. 375 B.C.) A proverbial phrase.

For what man that is entred in a pley,
He nedes moot unto the pleye assente.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerk's Prologue, l. 10. (c. 1386)

Play the game, don't talk.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Maltese Cat. (1898)

Men do not talk about honour nowadays—they call it "playing the game."

London Daily Chronicle, 2 May, 1904, p. 4/5

Ive played the game. Ive fought the good fight.
SHAW, The Doctor's Dilemma. Act iii. (1906)

Youre not playing the game.
BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 94. (1910)

<sup>11</sup> Go hunt your hare, you've only got a hedgehog so far. (I modo, venare leporem: nunc irim tenes.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 184. (c. 200 B.C.)

Honey is not worth the price of a sting.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 6, apologue 7. (c. 1257)

The game is not worth the candle. (Le jeu ne vault pas la chandelle.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580)

It is a poor sport that is not worth the candle.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 754. (1640)

The noise is greater than the nuts.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1071. When the light of life is so near going out, and ought to be so precious, Le jeu ne vaut pas la Chandele, The play is not worth the expence of the candle.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Essays. No. 10. (1668)

The play won't pay the candles.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1678)

The Germans say, "Geld um Dienst ist nicht Danks werth" (The pay for the toil is not worthy of thanks).

Surely the game is hardly worth the candle.

A. CONAN DOYLE, The Sign of the Four. Ch. 1. (1890)

I don't think the game's worth the candle.

CLYDE FITCH, The Girl With the Green Eyes. Act i. (1902)

The game isn't really worth the candle.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 13. (1942) On p. 90, "Sometimes he wondered whether the game was worth the candle."

1

You skin me at my own game. (Meo me ludo lambras.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 743. (c. 195 B. C.)

The skin game . . . is played in the thousand low hells of New York.

M. H. SMITH, Sunshine and Shadow, p. 405. (1868)

We've been overrun with "rollers" and "skin-game" men.

HAMLIN GARLAND, Eagle's Heart, p. 239. (1900)

2

This isn't their game. (Ce n'est icy leur gibier.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, Prologue. (1545)

3

Whanne I speke aftir my beste avise,

Ye sett it nought, but make ther-of a game.

SIR RICHARD ROS, tr., La Belle Dame Sans Merci, l. 226. (c. 1460)

Those sweete wits . . .

Are now despiz'd and made a laughing game.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Teares of the Muses, l. 204. (1591)

Do they not seek occasion . . .

[To] make a game of my calamities?

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1329. (1671)

4

The devil, or the world, or the flesh, will play the small game, as we use to say, before they will sit out.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons (1866) ii, 108. (a. 1591) He will play small game, before he sit out.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 323. (1605)

Now for the divel, he ha's so much to do With roaring boys, he'll slight such babes as thou.

Yet be not too secure, but put him to't,
For he'll play at small game, e'er he sit out.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimzies (1859), p. 148. (1631)

The devil himself will rather chuse to play
At paltry small game, than sit out, they say.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains (1759), i, 253. (a. 1680)

You will play small game before you stand out.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 391. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3882. (1732)

5

The game's up. (Ilicet.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 208. (161 B. C.)

The game is up.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 3, 107. (1609)

I plainly see that the game is up.

SIR JOHN MOORE, Letter to Lord Castlereagh, 26 Nov., 1808.

6

And now pray let's see your game.

VANBRUGH AND CIBBER, The Provok'd Husband. Act ii, sc. 1. (1728) Plan of action; scheme.

He was playing a deep game.

WILLIAM WINDHAM, Speech, in Parliament, 27 May, 1795.

Now, gentlemen, I have another game to play.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Pt. v, ch. 13. (1826)

He was . . . playing a double game.

BISHOP CONNOP THIRLWALL, History of Greece. Bk. viii, ch. 62, p. 188. (1844)

These three thousand men . . . [design to] overthrow the Greek empire! That was their little game!

RUSKIN, Pleasures of England, p. 108. (1885)

They determined to spoil my little game.

W. T. WAWN, The South Sea Islanders, p. 94. (1893)

James . . . could not play a losing game.

G. J. W. WOLSELEY, Life of Marlborough Vol. ii, ch. 49, p. 44. (1894)

No man ever knew better how to play a waiting game.

WOLSELEY, Life of Marlborough, ii, 91, 434

You're playing some sort of a deep game.

A. A. FAIR, Double or Quits, p. 183. (1941)

7

For one point, Martin lost his ass. (Ob unum punctum, cecidi Martini asellus.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb. "One wrong move lost the game."

8

John Wolfe entered . . . the newe and most pleasant game of the goose.

UNKNOWN, Stationers' Register. June, 1597. A game played with counters on a board divided into compartments, in some of which a goose was depicted.

I am like those who play at Goose.

G.H., History of the Cardinals, iii, iii, 294. (1670)

The Royal Game of Goose.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 232. (1770)

For good society is but a game,

"The royal game of Goose," as I may say.

BYRON. Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 58. (1823)

GAPING

1 Another hour of music was to give delight or the gapes, as real or affected taste for it prevailed.

JANE AUSTEN, Persuasion. Ch. 20. (c. 1815)
What gave me the gapes was the scenes [at the theatre].

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), The Clock-maker. Ser iii, ch. 3. (1840)

2 Gaping is catching.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Gaping. (1736)

3 You may gape long enough ere a bird fall in your mouth.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 153. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1670)

You may gape long enough, e're a Bird fly into your Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5945. (1732)
Do you gape for preferment?—Faith, I may gape long enough, before it falls into my mouth.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

4 To go idly loytring vp and downe as we say, to go seeking for a halfepeenie of gaping seede.

FLORIO, A Worlde of Wordes: Anfanare. (1598)
They sow but gape seed, which being harvested yields them a goodly crop of wonders.

OBADIAH WALKER, Of Education, p. 195. (1673)
She is fond of gape-seed.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 431. (1830) "Of staring at everything that passes."

5 He that gapeth till he be fed,
Maie fortune to fast and famishe for hunger.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

Hee that doth gape vntill he be fedd,
Well may he gape vntill he be dead.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, 399. (1611)

He that still gapeth, till he be fed,
Well may he gape, untill he be dead.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6459. (1732)
He that gapes till he be fed, will gape till he be dead.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 7. (1869)

6 A man ought not to chide with a foole, nor gape over an oven.

RABIAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles, ii, 389. (1577)
It is ill gaping before an oven.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)
No gaping against an oven.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1670)

7 You gape for gudgeons.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)

8 Gape while you get it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 119. (1721)
"Spoken to those who expect a thing without reason."

9 She will gape like a pig on a spit.

UNKNOWN, The British Apollo. Vol. ii, No. 62. (1709)

GARDEN

10 In the garden more grows than the gardener sows. (Nace en la huerta lo que el hortelano no siembra.)

CORREAS, Spanish Vocabulary, 207. (c. 1627)
Cited by HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 6. (1659)

Many things grow in the garden were never sown there.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3363. (1732)

More springs in the garden than the gardener ever sowed . . . is a proverb . . . for parents and teachers, that they lap not themselves in a false security.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 4. (1852)

11 Who loves a garden loves a greenhouse too.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 566. (1784)

Who loves a garden still his Eden keeps.

A. B. ALCOTT, Tablets: The Garden. (1868)

12 As is the Gardener, so is the Garden.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 701. (1732)
The first Men in the World, were a Gardener, a Ploughman, a Grasier.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4529. See also under ADAM.

13 And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden. (Plantaverat autem Dominus Deus Paradisum voluptatis a principio.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 8. (c. 550 B.C.)
God Almighty first Planted a Garden. And indeed, it is the Purest of Humane pleasures.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Gardens. (1597)
God the first garden made, and the first city Cain.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Garden. Essay v. (c. 1650) See also under CITY.

14 The gardener knows, when branches greenly fall, that fruit and flowers will show what time can do. (Weiss doch der Gärtner, wenn das Bäumchen grünt, Dass Blüt' und Frucht die künft'gen Jahre zieren.)

GOETHE, Faust: Prolog im Himmel. (1806)
MacIntyre, tr.

15 A garden must be looked unto and dressed as the body.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 134. (1640)

16 The Market is the best Garden.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 745. (1640)
Cheapside being called the best garden only by metaphor.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 333. (1662)

At London they are wont to say, Cheapside is the best garden.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

Covent Garden is the best garden.

FRANCIS GROSE, Provincial Glossary. (1790)

17 You may be on land, yet not in a garden.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 962. (1640)

- 1 She had been led up the garden before now.
MICHAEL INNES, The Spider Strikes, p. 226. (1939)
You fairly led me up the garden.
J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p.228.(1940)
He put it in court I'd been led up the garden.
H. C. BAILEY, Orphan Ann, p. 172. (1941) On p. 191, "We were left feeling he'd led us up the garden"; p. 212, "I was led up the garden." Bailey is fond of the phrase. He uses it in Meet Mr. Fortune, p. 296, and twice in Nobody's Vineyard, pp. 54 and 192.
She took me up the garden.
ETHEL WHITE, Fear Stalks the Village, p. 30. (1942) The French say, "Faire voir à quelqu'un des étoiles en plein midi" (To make some one see stars in full midday).
- 2 A garden was the primitive prison, till man, with promethean felicity and boldness, luckily sinned himself out of it.
CHARLES LAMB, Letter to William Wordsworth, 22 Jan., 1830.
- 3 In al gardeins, some flowers, some weedees.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 196. (1579)
No garden so well tilled but some noxious weedees grow up in it.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, memb. 1, subsec. 3. (1621)
The finest garden is not free from weedees.
EDWARD WARD, Female Policy Detected, p. 89. (1716)
A good Garden may have some Weedees:
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 152. (1732)
No Garden without its Weedees.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3576.(1732)
There is no garden but what produces weedees.
ROBERT SOUTHEY, Letter to his daughters, 19 July, 1826.
- 4 This rule in gardening never forget, to sow dry and set wet.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 36. (1678)
- 5 He that hires one garden (which he is able to look after) eats birds; he that hires more than one will be eaten by birds.
JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 399. (1678)
- 6 Your Garden's better worth your noble Pain, Hence Mankind fell, and here must rise again.
SWIFT, Ode to Sir William Temple, l.176.(1689)
- 7 That is well said, replied Candide, but we must cultivate our garden. (Cela est bien dit, répondit Candide, mais il faut cultiver notre jardin.)
VOLTAIRE, Candide. Ch. 30. (1767) We must attend quietly to our own affairs.
One should cultivate letters or his garden. (Il faut cultiver les lettres ou son jardin.)
VOLTAIRE, Letter to D'Alembert, July, 1773.
I must work the garden—I must work the garden.
HENRY JAMES, The Aspern Papers.Ch.2.(1888)

- 8 What a man needs in gardening is a cast-iron back, with a hinge in it.
C. D. WARNER, My Summer in a Garden. Ch. 3. (1870)
Oh, Adam was a gardener, and God who made him sees
That half a proper gardener's work is done upon his knees.
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Glory of the Garden. (c. 1911)

GARLIC

- 9 The smel of Garlick takes away the stink of dunghills.
JOHN MELTON, A Six-Folde Politician, p. 35. (1609) Quoted as a proverb.
- 10 Garlick makes a man winke, drinke, and stinke.
THOMAS NASHE, Unfortunate Traveller. (1594)
And scorne not Garlicke like to some that thinke It onely makes men winke, and drinke, and stinke.
SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Englishman's Doctor, 86. (1607)
- 11 Our apothecary's shop is our garden full of pot-herbs, and our doctor is a clove of garlic.
UNKNOWN, A Deep Snow (1615)

GARTER

- 12 I bet she snaps a mean garter.
RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 129. (1940)
- 13 And what a worthy woman must she needs be her self, whose very garter hath given so much honour to Kings and Princes?
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 20. (1642) Of Joan, Countess of Salisbury, wife of Edward the Black Prince, who is supposed to have dropped her garter while dancing with the King. See under EVIL.
- 14 He thinks I'm the sand-fly's garters.
NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 123. (1941)
On p. 173 the phrase is repeated, with the addition, "I'm not well up in Americanese, but I had the distinct impression that Mr. Garnette regards Mr. Ogden as fair and easy game."

GATE

- 15 They say a creaking gate goes longest upon its hinges.
THOMAS COGAN, John Bunce, Jr., i, 239. (1776)
"A creaking gate hangs longest on the hinges." Used figuratively of an invalid, who outlives an apparently healthier person.
ANNE BAKER, Northants Glossary: Gate.(1854)
Your mother . . . may live yet a score of years. Creaky gates last longest.
S. BARING GOULD, Mehalah. Ch. 22. (1880)
A creaking cart goes long on the wheels.
Notes and Queries. Ser. ix, vol. vi, p. 298.(1900)
A creaking door hangs long on its hinges.
Folk-Lore. Vol. xxiv, p. 76. (1913)

GATH

<sup>1</sup> Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon. (Nolite annunciare in Geth, neque annuncietis in compitis Ascalonis.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 20. (c. 600 B.C.) The fact is—but tell it not in Gath—I was happier without them!

MARIE CORELLI, God's Good Man. Ch. 20. (1904) "Tell it not in Gath!"; often misquoted as "whisper . . ." Do not make it public!

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clickés: Tell. (1941)

GAUNTLET

<sup>2</sup> Make not a gauntlet of a hedging-glove.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 5. (1639) RAY, Proverbs, p. 96. (1670)

<sup>3</sup> To print, is to run the gauntlet, and to expose ones self to the tongues strapado.

JOSEPH GLANVILL, The Vanity of Dogmatizing: Preface. (1661) In Europe, running the gauntlet was a military punishment, in which the culprit, stripped to the waist, ran between two rows of men, who struck at him with sticks or knotted cords. In America, it was adopted by the courts as a legal punishment as early as 1676 (See Plymouth Laws, 176) and quickly became very popular with the Indians as an ordeal to which their white captives were subjected. "To run the gauntlet" became a proverbial phrase for passing through any kind of critical ordeal.

They stripped them naked and forced them to run the Gauntlet.

INCREASE MATHER, King Philip's War, p. 137. (1676)

The Court Marshall doth adjudge that the said Melchior Classen shall run the Gantlope once, the length of the fort.

ALICE MORSE EARLE, Colonial Days in Old New York, p. 245, quoting a decree of c. 1681.

Your miscellanies have safely run the gauntlet, through all the coffee-houses.

POPE, Letter to Wycherley, 17 May, 1709

The case has run the gauntlet of the courts.

LORD BROUGHAM, Historical Sketches of Statesmen of the Time of George III: Eldon, p. 254. (1839)

They have run the gauntlet of the years.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, p. 138. (1858)

They descended the Mississippi, running the gauntlet between hostile tribes.

FRANCIS PARKMAN, France and England in North America, p. 12. (1880)

<sup>4</sup> He threwe downe his gauntlet.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicles, p. 376. (1548) The context is, "Makyng a proclamacion, that whosoeuer would saie that kyng Richard was not lawfully kyng, he would fighte with hym at the vtterance, and threwe downe his gauntlet." "To throw down the gauntlet," then, is to give a challenge.

I cast them my Gauntlet, take it vp who dares.

THOMAS NASHE, Pasquil's Apologie. (1590)

And casting out as it were, his gantlet of defiance . . . he challengeth them all.

WILLIAM HINDE, Life and Death of John Bruen, lxi, 205. (1641)

This [challenge] the Poet communicated to some of his military friends; two or three of whom . . . took up the gauntlet.

ANDREW KIPPIS, Biographia Britannica: Bentley. (1784) "To take up the gauntlet" is, of course, to accept the challenge.

The Duchess of Drinkwater appeared upon the field of fashion, and threw down the gauntlet of defiance to Belgrave.

T. S. SURR, A Winter in London, ii, 204. (1806)

[She] had thrown down her gauntlet to him, and he had not been slow in picking it up.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Bk. ii, ch. 67, p. 249. (1867)

GEESE, see Goose

GENERAL

<sup>5</sup> A drunken general is a bad commander.

THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760), iii, 256. (a. 1704) Quoted as "an old proverb."

<sup>6</sup> We can make majors and officers every year, but not scholars.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 15. (1621)

I made all my generals out of mud.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon. (c. 1815)

I am sorry it was not a general—I could make more of them.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Remark, when he heard of the death of a private. (1862)

<sup>7</sup> Turenne's small change. (La monnaie de M. Turenne.)

MADAME DE CORNUEL, referring to the eight generals appointed to take Turenne's place. (1649) See Nouvelle Biographie Universelle.

<sup>8</sup> A thousand soldiers are easily got, but a single general is hard to find. ('Chien ping i tê i chiang nan 'chui.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 192. (1872)

<sup>9</sup> Oh, he is mad is he? Then I wish he would bite some other of my generals.

GEORGE II OF ENGLAND, Retort, to some one who complained that General Wolfe was a madman. (1758) See THACKERAY, History of William Pitt. Vol. i, ch. 15, note.

Get me the brand, and I'll send a barrel to my other generals.

Retort, ascribed to Abraham Lincoln, when told that General Grant was drinking too much whiskey. The story, however, was the invention of a reporter for the New York Herald, appearing in the issue for 26 Nov., 1863.

1 One bad general is better than two good ones. To escape divided counsels.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 72. (1904)

2 I have heard, in such a way as to believe it, of your recently saying that both the army and the government needed a dictator. . . . Only those generals who gain successes can set up dictators. What I now ask of you is military success, and I will risk the dictatorship.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to General "Fighting Joe" Hooker, whom he had just placed in command of the Army of the Potomac, 26 Jan., 1863.

3 A general who sees with the eyes of others will never be able to command an army as it should be commanded.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, to Barry O'Meara, at St. Helena, 9 Dec., 1817.

Soldiers generally win battles; generals get the credit for them.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, at St. Helena, to Gaspard Gourgaud. (1817)

4 That which makes the real general is to have mastery over his fingers. (στρατηγικὸν ἀληθῶς ἢ περὶ τὰς χεῖρας ἐγκράτεια.)

PERICLES, Remark, to Themistocles, when the latter said that in his opinion the greatest excellence in a general was anticipation of the plans of his enemies. (c. 475 B.C.) Sometimes rendered, "to have clean hands." See PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 24, sec. 4.

It is the part of a good general to talk of success, not of failure. (ἐπεὶ στρατηλάτου | χρηστοῦ τὰ κρείσσω μὴδὲ ταρδεᾶ λέγειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1429. (c. 408 B.C.)

The proper qualities of a general are judgment and deliberation. (Ratio et consilium propriae ducis artes.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iii, sec. 20. (c. A.D. 109)

The greatest general is he who makes the fewest mistakes.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon. (c. 1810)

The highest authority tells us that he is the best general who makes the fewest mistakes.

SIR IAN HAMILTON, Staff-Officer's Scrap-Book, ii, 347. (1907)

To know when to retreat and to dare to do it.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, when asked what was the best test of greatness in a general. (c. 1818) See FRASER, Words on Wellington, p. 35.

A good retreat is esteemed, by experienced officers, the masterpiece of a general.

Encyclopædia Britannica (ed. 3), xvi, 141/1. (1797)

5 Soldiers' valour depends on their general's strategy. (Ducis in consilio posita est virtus militum.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 159. (c. 43 B.C.)

Under a powerful general there are no weak soldiers. (Ch'iang chiang shou hsia wu jo ping.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1203. (1875)

6 Soldiers only make risings and riots; they are generals and colonels who make rebellions.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Mrs. Carter, 25 July, 1789.

GENERALITIES

7 It being the nature of the mind of man, to the extreme prejudice of knowledge, to delight in the spacious liberty of generalities, as in a champaign region, and not in the enclosures of particularity.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii, sec. 69. (1605) There is a law maxim, "Fraus latet in generalibus" (Deceit lurks in generalities).

We fear the glittering generalities of the speaker have left an impression more delightful than permanent.

F. J. DICKMAN, Review, of a lecture by Rufus Choate, in the Providence (R.I.) Journal, 14 Dec., 1849.

The glittering and sounding generalities of natural right which make up the Declaration of Independence.

RUFUS CHOATE, Letter, to the Maine Whig Convention, 9 Aug., 1856.

"Glittering generalities!" They are blazing ubiquities.

R. W. EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Books. (1860) Referring to Choate's letter.

GENEROSITY

See also Liberality

8 What virtue is beyond generosity?

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 55. (c. A.D. 100)

Besides generosity there is nothing in the world.

SADI, Pand Namah (Scroll of Wisdom). Sec. 4. (c. 1260)

9 The best generosity is that which is quick.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 240. (1817)

HE GIVES TWICE WHO GIVES QUICKLY, see under GIFT.

10 Nothing is generous, if it is not at the same time just. (Nihil est liberale, quod non idem iustum.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 14, sec. 43. (c. 45 B.C.)

Generosity is the flower of justice.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 19 Dec., 1850.

11 Our generosity should never exceed our means. (Ne benignitas maior esset quam facultates.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 14, sec. 44. (c. 45 B.C.)

Bounty has no bottom. (Largitionem fundum non habere.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 15, sec. 55. Quoted as "a common proverb."

<sup>1</sup> Generosity goes with good birth; pity accompanies it, and gratitude. (La générosité suit la belle naissance; La pitié l'accompagne et la reconnaissance.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Héraclius, Empereur d'Orient. Act v, sc. 2. (1647)

<sup>2</sup> You are not generous: it's your disease. You love to give. (οὐ φιλόανθρωπος σύ γ' ἐσσι· ἔχεις νόσον, χαιρείς διδοῦς.)

EPICHRMUS. Frag. 274. (c. 550 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 510C.

Generosity invents even a cause for giving. (Benignus etiam causam dandi cogitat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 78. (c. 43 B.C.)

Generous almost to a fault.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night ii, p. 33. (1854)

I am generous to practically any fault.

OGDEN NASH, Two and One Are a Problem. (1939)

<sup>3</sup> Generous Minds are all of kin.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

<sup>4</sup> Tho' the generous Man care the least for Wealth, yet he will be the most gall'd with the Want of it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5009. (1732)

The generous Mind least regards Money, and yet most feels the Want of it.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

<sup>5</sup> Be generous, yet not too free;

Don't give the Fox the Henhouse Key.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 89. (1924)

<sup>6</sup> She loosened up like a Marcel wave in the surf at Coney.

O. HENRY (WILLIAM SYDNEY PORTER), The Enchanted Profile. (1909)

<sup>7</sup> The truly generous is the truly wise.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act iii, sc. 1. (1756)

<sup>8</sup> Who in adversity would succour have,
Let him be generous while he rests secure.

SADI, Gulistan, i, 6. (c. 1258) Eastwick, tr

<sup>9</sup> Generosity gives less of advice than of help. (La générosité donne moins de conseils que de secours.)

MARQUIS DE VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 491. (1746)

Great generosity produces great ingratitude. (Les grandes générosités produisent les grandes ingratitude.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 578.

<sup>10</sup> One cannot be too generous. Very few try; and none succeed.

PERCIVAL CHRISTOPHER WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 161. (1941)

GENIUS

I—Genius: What It Is

<sup>11</sup> Genius is mainly an affair of energy.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Literary Influence of Academies. (1865)

<sup>12</sup> Genius, that power which dazzles mortal eyes, Is oft but perseverance in disguise.

HENRY AUSTIN, Perseverance Conquers All. (c. 1613)

<sup>13</sup> What is genius? It is the power to be a boy again at will.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel, p. 249. (1900)

<sup>14</sup> A genius is simply a fellow who's been there before in some other world and knows his business.

DAVID BELASCO, The Return of Peter Grimm. Act ii. (1911)

<sup>15</sup> Genius is patience. (Le génie, c'est la patience.)

GEORGE-LOUIS LECLERC DE BUFFON, Discours sur le Style. (1753) This is the form quoted by STEVENS, Study of the Life and Times of Madame de Staël, ch. 3. HÉRAULI DE SÉCHELLES, Voyage à Montbard, p. 15, gives a longer form, "Le génie n'est qu'une plus grande aptitude à la patience" (Genius is nothing but the greatest aptitude for patience), sometimes given as "Le génie n'est autre chose qu'une plus grande aptitude à la patience" (Genius is nothing else than, etc.).

<sup>16</sup> Genius is fostered by industry. (Ingenium industria alitur.)

CICERO, Pro Caelio. Ch. 19, sec. 45. (55 B.C.) No man's genius, however shining, can raise him from obscurity, unless he has industry. (Neque enim cuiquam tam clarum statim ingenium, ut possit emergere, nisi illi materia.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vi, epis. 23. (c. A.D. 100)

You must have no dependence on your own genius. If you have great talents, industry will improve them: if you have but moderate abilities, industry will supply their deficiency. . . . Assiduity . . . will produce effects similar to those which some call the result of natural powers

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, Discourse, to the students of the Royal Academy, 11 Dec., 1769. Hogarth (c. 1750) is credited with saying, "Genius is nothing but labour and diligence," while a century earlier, Jan Walaeus, the Dutch physician, is said to have written, "Genius is an intuitive talent for labor."

Genius is the father of a heavenly line; but the mortal mother, that is industry.

THEODORE PARKER, Ten Sermons on Religion: Culture of the Religious Powers. (1853)

Genius is one per cent. inspiration and ninety-nine per cent. perspiration.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Newspaper Interview. See Golden Book, April, 1931, and Life, ch. 24.

1 Genius is the power to labor better and more availably.

R. W. EMERSON, The Transcendentalist. (1842)

2 Genius is the capacity of evading hard work.
ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 114. (1901)

3 Genius . . . that energy which collects, combines, amplifies, and animates.

JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Pope. (1779)

Genius is nothing more than knowing the use of tools.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Frances Burney, 25 Nov., 1784.

4 Men of genius are ethereal chemicals operating on the mass of neutral intellect.

JOHN KEATS, Letter to Benjamin Bailey, 22 Nov., 1817.

5 The cleverest thing in the world is taking pains. (ἡ πείρα.)

LASUS OF HERMIONE. (c. 545 B.C.) From the Maxims of Aristotle, as quoted by STOBÆUS, xxix, 70. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 229.

Practise with zeal whatever art you've scanned: As pains help talent, so training helps the hand. (Exerce studio quamvis perceperis artem: ut cura ingenium, sic et manus adiuvat usum.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 21. (c. 175 B.C.) "Genius" (which means transcendent capacity of taking trouble, first of all).

THOMAS CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1860) SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER (Note-Books, p. 174) comments on this, "Genius has been defined as a supreme capacity for taking trouble. . . . It might be more fitly described as a supreme capacity for getting its possessors into trouble of all kinds." ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Infinite, says, "An infinite capacity for taking pains, whether as a definition of genius or as a plodding virtue, is an adaptation or a misquotation of Carlyle. . . . How often that 'first of all' is forgotten."

Genius, I often think, only means an infinite capacity for taking pains.

JANE ELLICE HOPKINS, Work Amongst Working Men. (1870) According to a letter in Notes and Queries for 13 Sept., 1879, p. 213, Miss Hopkins was the first to use the exact phrase, "Genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains." She was a social worker, and her article referred to her work among navvies at Cambridge. SOMERSET MAUGHAM, in his Cakes and Ale, p. 4, says this: "Charles Dickens in an after-dinner speech stated that genius was an infinite capacity for taking pains," but he offers no proof of the assertion. J. M. BARRIE, in his Chancellor's Address, at the University of Edinburgh, changed it to, "Genius is an infinite love of taking pains."

Few truer statements have been made than that genius is the capacity for taking infinite pains.

KENT, Jason Burr's First Case, p. 196. (1941)

6 Genius is a vagabond.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On Vagabonds. (1863) "A genius is a man who can make you see stars in the daytime" is credited to Edward Simmons.

7 Genius seems to be the faculty of having faith in everything, and especially one's self.

ARTHUR STRINGER, The Devastator, p. 116. (1944)

8 Genius is no snob. It does not run after titles or seek by preference the high circles of society.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, at Hodgenville, Ky., 4 Sept., 1916. Birthplace of Lincoln.

II—Genius: Apothegms

9 There was never a great genius without a tincture of madness. (Nullum magnum ingenium sine mixtura dementiae fuit.)

ARISTOTLE, Aphorism. (c. 330 B.C.) As quoted by SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi, i, 15. I have heard, madam, your greatest wits have ever a touch of madness.

JOHN DRYDEN, Sir Martin Mar-All. Act v, sc. 1. (1667)

"Eccentricities of genius, Sam," said Mr. Pickwick.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 30. (1836)

10 Improvement makes straight roads; but the crooked roads without improvement are the roads of Genius.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

11 Since when was genius found respectable?

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vi, l. 275. (1856)

12 An evil genius. (δύσσορα.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 72. (1508) Erasmus gives the Latin, "Genius malus," and cites PLUTARCH, Moralia, 474B, who quotes Empedocles as affirming that at birth the Fates, a good and bad, receive everyone into their care.

The strongest suggestion Our worser Genius can. SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iv, 1, 27. (1611) A tradition of two Genii, which attend every man, one good, the other evil.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, His Pilgrim, 365. (1613)

My better genius, thou art welcome.

JAMES SHIRLEY (?), Andromana, Act iii, sc. 5. (1660)

Thou . . . art an evil genius to thyself.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Tamerlane. Act iv, sc. 1. (1704)

13 Genius without Education is like Silver in the Mine.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750. An echo of Chateaubriand's "Sans le goût, le génie n'est qu'une sublime folie" (Without taste, genius is nothing but sublime folly).

<sup>1</sup> Men of genius do not excel in any profession because they labour in it, but they labour in it because they excel.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 416. (c. 1821)

<sup>2</sup> Adversity reveals genius, prosperity hides it. (Ingenium res | adversae nudare solent, celare secundae.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 73. (35 B.C.)
Ill fortune is often an incentive to genius. (Ingenium mala saepe movent.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 43. (c. 1 B.C.)
The worship of genius never makes a man rich. (Amor ingenii neminem unquam divitem fecit.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 83. (c. A.D. 60)
Fortune has rarely condescended to be the companion of genius.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Poverty of the Learned. (1791)

Hunger is the handmaid of genius.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar. (1893) See also POETS AND POVERTY.

<sup>3</sup> Genius, as an explosive power, beats gunpowder hollow.

T. H. HUXLEY, Administrative Nihilism. (1871)

<sup>4</sup> A genius never can be quite still.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, To Hester Thrale, 17 July, 1775.

The man of genius makes no mistakes. His errors are volitional.

JAMES JOYCE, Ulysses (Random), p. 188. (1922)

<sup>5</sup> I have always thought geniuses much inferior to the plain sense of a cookmaid, who can make a good pudding and keep the kitchen in order.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to the Countess of Pomfret, March, 1739.

<sup>6</sup> Poor is the field I plough. (Tenuis mihi campus aratur.)

OVID, Tristia, ii, 327. (c. A.D. 9) Admitting the slightness of his genius.

<sup>7</sup> Give your genius a chance. (Indulge genio.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 151. (c. A.D. 58)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 74.

<sup>8</sup> How often the greatest geniuses lie hidden in obscurity! (Ut saepe summa ingenia in occulto latent!)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 165. (c. 200 B.C.)

<sup>9</sup> For genius renown endures deathless. (Ingenio stat sine morte decus.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 2, l. 26. (c. 26 B.C.)
The memory of genius is immortal. (Immortalis est ingenii memoria.)

SENECA, Ad Polybium. Sec. 37. (c. A.D. 60)
Genius survives: all else is claimed by death. (Vivitur ingenio: caetera mortis erunt.)

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: Decem- ber: Colin's Emblem. (1579) Quoted probably from Consolatio ad Liviam, written shortly after the death of Maecenas by an anonymous author. See Notes and Queries, Jan., 1918, p. 12.

Vivitur ingenio: that damn'd motto there
Seduced me first to be a wicked player.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle: Epilogue. (1699) The motto, "Vivitur ingenio," was probably displayed in Drury Lane Theatre.

<sup>10</sup> When genius is punished, its fame is exalted. (Punitis ingeniis, gliscit auctoritas.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 35. (c. A.D. 116)
Tacitus is telling how the books written by Cremutius Cordus were burned by order of the Roman Senate, and derides the stupidity which thinks it can suppress books by burning them, an action which, Tacitus says, has always resulted in infamy to the persons who ordered the burning, and in glory to the victims.

<sup>11</sup> The public is wonderfully tolerant. It forgives everything except genius.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. (1891)

GENIUS LOCI, see under GODS.

III—Genius and Talent

<sup>12</sup> Doing easily what others find difficult is talent; doing what is impossible for talent is genius.

HENRI AMIEL, Journal, 27 Oct., 1856.

Mediocrities sweat blood to produce rubbish. Geniuses create wonders without an effort.

ANATOLE FRANCE, See Opinions of Anatole France, p. 100.

<sup>13</sup> You ain't got no genius: you has just talent. J. M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy. Ch. 5. (1896)

<sup>14</sup> The eagle never lost so much time as when he submitted to learn of the crow.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

Men ov genius are like eagles, tha live on what tha kill, while men ov talents is like crows, tha live on what has been killed for them.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Talent and Genius. (1858)

<sup>15</sup> Talent finds its models, methods, and ends in society. . . . Genius is its own end, and draws its means and the style of its architecture from within.

R. W. EMERSON, The Method of Nature. (1841)
Talent is that which is in a man's power; genius is that in whose power a man is.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books. Ch. 1. (1870)

<sup>16</sup> Genius is a gift of the Gods, but Talent is our affair; and with untiring patience one can acquire talent in the end.

GUSTAVE FLAUBERT, Letters. See SMITH, Unforgotten Years, p. 216.

<sup>1</sup> You've got a talent for genius.
O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Unprofitable Servant. (1911) "Talent is an infinite capacity for imitating genius," is a definition by an unknown author, as is "Genius is the talent of dead men."

<sup>2</sup> There is the same difference between talent and genius that there is between a stone mason and a sculptor.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Shakespeare. (1891)

<sup>3</sup> Genius begins great works; labor alone finishes them. (Le génie commence les beaux ouvrages, mais le travail seul les achève.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 335. (1810)

<sup>4</sup> Between genius and talent there is the proportion of the whole to its part. (Entre esprit et talent il y a la proportion du tout à sa partie.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Caractères: Des Jugements. (1688)

<sup>5</sup> Genius knows better than talent how to hide its barrel-organ. Yet it too can only play its seven old pieces over and over again.

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Human All-too-Human. Ch. 2. (1878)

<sup>6</sup> Talent repeats; Genius creates. Talent is a cistern; Genius a fountain. . . . Talent jogs to conclusions to which Genius takes giant leaps. . . . Talent is full of thoughts, Genius of thought.

E. R. WHIPPLE, Literature and Life: Genius. (1850)

Talent convinces, Genius but excites; This tasks the reason, that the soul delights. Talent from sober judgment takes its birth, And reconciles the pinion to the earth. Genius unsettles with desires the mind, Contented not till earth be left behind.

LORD LYTTON, Talent and Genius. (c. 1870)

The Germans say, "Das Talent arbeitet, das Genie schafft" (Talent works, genius creates), or as Weber put it, "Der Genie erfindet, der Witz findet bloss" (Genius invents, Intelligence merely discovers).

GENTILITY

<sup>7</sup> A man can buy nothing in the market with gentility.

WILLIAM CECIL, LORD BURGHEY, Advice to His Son. (c. 1560) See PECK, Desiderata Curiosa, p. 47.

Gentry alone . . . (as the plain proverb saith) sent to market will not buy a bushel of wheat.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 441. (1662)

Gentry sent to market will not buy one bushel of corn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1670)

Gentility is all very well to talk about, but it gets you nothin' at the market.

R. S. SURTEES, Ask Mama. Ch. 10. (1858)

<sup>8</sup> Crist wol, we clayme of him our gentillesse, Nat of our eldres for hir old riches.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 261. (c. 1386)

Gentility is nothing but antient riches.

WILLIAM CECIL, LORD BURGHEY, Advice to His Son. (c. 1560) See PECK, Desiderata Curiosa, p. 48. HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1031. (1640)

An-other of an excellent worlds wit . . . would say, that honour was but antient riches.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Courtier and Countryman, p. 190. (1618)

What tell you me of gentry? 'tis nought else . . . But ancient riches.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Devil's Law-Case. Act i, sc. 1. (1623)

Nobility is nothing but ancient riches.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 52. (1737)

<sup>9</sup> Gentility is only a more select and artificial kind of vulgarity.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk. Vol. i, ch. 16. (1822) "There is nothing so vulgar as gentility."—Punch, 18 May, 1872, p. 202/2.

<sup>10</sup> Shabby gentility has nothing so characteristic as its hat.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 8. (1858)

Too proud to beg, too honest to steal,
I know what it is to be wanting a meal;
My tatters and rags I try to conceal,
I'm one of the Shabby Genteel.

HARRY CLIFTON, Shabby Genteel. (c. 1870)

What all men should avoid is the "shabby genteel." Better be in rags.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 23. (1880)

<sup>11</sup> Who cares for comfort when gentility's con-sarned!

F. M. WHITCHER, Widow Bedott Papers. (1855)

<sup>12</sup> Gentility without wealth staggers like a sicke man.

UNKNOWN, London Love. Act i. (1641)

Gentility without ability is worse than plain beggary.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1670)

GENTLEMAN

I—Gentleman: Definitions

<sup>13</sup> A gentleman will do like a gentleman.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentleman, p. 148. (1630) Quoted as "a common saying."

<sup>14</sup> Though he be not gentil born,
Thou mayst well seyn, this is a soth,
That he is gentil, bicause he doth
As longeth to a gentilman.

CHAUCER (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 2194. (c. 1365)

Loke who that is most vertuous alway,
Privee and apert, and most entendeth ay

To do the gentil dedes that he can,
And tak him for the grettest gentil man.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 257.

Redeth Senek, and redeth eek Boece
Ther shul ye seen expres that it no drede is,
That he is gentil that doth gentil dedis.

CHAUCER, The Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 312.

Trauth, pettee, fredome, and hardynesse . . .
Off thisse virtues iiii, who lakkyth iii,
He aught never gentylmane called to be.

UNKNOWN, Qualities of a Gentleman. (c. 1420)

In Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 252.

He is a Gentleman, because his nature
Is kind and affable to every creature.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content.
St. 41. (1594)

A soft, meeke, patient, humble, tranquill spirit,
The first true Gentleman that ever breath'd

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i.
(1604)

We must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, v, 2, 164. (1610)
Gentle is that gentle does.

J. W. WARTER, Last of the Old Squires, p. 43.
(1854) Referred to as "a common saying"

1 A gentleman makes no noise; a lady is serene.
R. W. EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Man- ners. (1844)

2 Diogenes, who being asked, who were the best
Gentlemen, answered, those which set naught by riches, honours, pleasures, and life, and which overcame their contraries, to wit, poverty, ignominie, payne, and death.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 176. (1574) Pettie, tr.

If you can shoot like a South Carolinian, ride like a Virginian, drink like a Kentuckian, make love like a Georgian, and be proud of it as an Episcopalian, you're a Southern gentleman.

CLARE BOOTHE, Kiss the Boys Good-bye. Act ii,
sc. 2. (1939)

3 According to my mild way of thinking, it is not essential that a gentleman should be bright.

CORRA HARRIS, What Makes a Gentleman?
(1930)

4 What's a gentleman but his pleasure?

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 15. (1573)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1670)

You shall find in an old tracte printed by Winkin de Woorde, this olde sayd sawe: Whats a gentleman but his pleasure?

UNKNOWN, Maroccus Extaticus, p. 10. (1595)

5 It is not ye decent of birth but ye consent of conditions that maketh Gentlemen, neither great manors but good manners that expresse
the true Image of dignitie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 191. (1579)
Gentlemen you are no lesse I perceiue by your manners.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 252.

The Appellation of Gentleman is never to be affixed to a Man's Circumstances, but to his Behaviour in them.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 207. (1710)

6 A right Gentleman is sooner seene by the tryall of his vertue then blasing of his armes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 191. (1579)

He that would be a gentleman, let him go to an assault.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 877. (1640)

Who would be a gentleman, let him storm a town.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670)

7 He cannot be a gentleman which loveth not a dog.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Against Dicing. (1577)

8 Nature, not rank, makes the gentleman. (Vi-rum bonum natura non ordo facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 713. (c. 43 B.C.)

9 The qualifications of a fine gentleman are to eat à la mode, drink champagne, dance jigs, and play at tennis.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act
ii, sc. 3. (1668)

10 The fatal reservation of a gentleman is that he sacrifices everything to his honor except his gentility.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

11 A man may wear a red necktie, a green vest and tan shoes, and still be a gentleman.

E.M. STATLER, Statler Hotel Service Code. (1921)

12 The only infallible rule we know is, that the man who is always talking about being a gentleman never is one.

R. S. SURTEES, Ask Mamma. Ch. 1. (1858)

13 A gentleman never looks out of the window.

OSCAR WILDE, Remark, when one called attention to the interesting view from his windows in the Hôtel Voltaire, on the Quai
Voltaire, at Paris, 1883.

A gentleman is one who is never rude unintentionally.

H. F. HEARD, A Taste for Honey, p. 36. (1941)

Quoted as "Oscar Wilde's silly remark"

II—Gentleman: Apothegms

14 I am a gentleman, though spoiled i' the breeding. The Buzzards are all gentlemen. We came in with the Conqueror.

RICHARD BROME, The English Moor. Act ii,
sc. 4. (c. 1650)

I think she was cut out for a gentlewoman, but she was spoild in the making.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

15 The gentleman of honour, ragged sooner than patched. (Hidalgo honrade, antes roto que remendado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1615)

1 It is not the gay coat that makes the gentleman.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 124. (1639)
It is not the fine Coat that makes the fine Gentleman.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3002. (1732)

2 Gentleman is written legibly on his brow.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Heir-at-Law. Act iii, sc. 1. (1797)

Though modest, on his unembarrass'd brow
Nature had written "gentleman."

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ix, st. 83. (1821)

3 Wherever I go the world cries "that's a gentleman, my life on't a gentleman!" and when y've said a gentleman, you have said all.

JOHN CROWNE, Sir Courtly Nice. (1685)

4 The complaints against the maids are as well masculine as feminine, and very applicable to our gentlemen's gentlemen.

DEFOE, Everybody's Business, p. 20. (1725)
You gentlemen's gentlemen are so hasty.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act ii, sc. 2. (1775)
The gentlemen's gentlemen and two impudent Englishmen had been examined.

LADY GRANVILLE, Letters, i, 136. (1820)
"Here's grandeur!" said Mrs. Harley. "Maids, cockades, footmen, and gentlemen's gentlemen."

MALLOCK, The Old Order Changes, i, 193. (1836)

5 Once a gentleman, and always a gentleman.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. ii, ch. 28. (1857)

6 His tribe were God Almighty's gentlemen.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 645. (1681)

A Christian is God Almighty's gentleman.

A. W. AND J. C. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

7 I have not yet spoken with the gentleman in the black pantaloons; you know he seldom walks abroad by daylight.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Wild Gallant. Act iii, sc. 1. (1663) Referring to the devil.

Give way to the old gentleman in black [the friar].—No! t'other old gentlemen in black shall take me if I do.

DRYDEN, The Spanish Fryar. Act v, sc. 2. (1681)
The little gentleman in black velvet.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 11. (1814)

8 It is a vulgar error to suppose that a gentleman must be ready to fight. The utmost that can be demanded of him is that he be incapable of a lie.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 14 Dec., 1850.

9 A Gentleman ought to travel abroad, but dwell at Home.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 127. (1732)

A Gentleman should have more in his Pocket, than on his Back.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 128.

10 Modest Assurance, good Humour, and Prudence, make a Gentleman.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3430. (1732)
Manners and Money make a Gentleman.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3333.
Money and good manners make the gentleman.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742

11 Gentlemen of three outs, i. e., without money, without wit, and without manners.

FRANCIS GROSE, Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Gentlemen. (1785)

A gentleman of three outs—"out of pocket, out of elbows, and out of credit."

LORD LYTTON, Paul Clifford. Ch. 4. (1830)

12 A right Gentleman is not borne as the Poet, but made as the Oratour. . . . Philosophy received not Plato a Gentleman, but made him one.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 182. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Education begins a Gentleman, Conversation compleats him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1359. (1732)
Knowledge begins a Gentleman, but 'tis Conversation that compleats him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3136.

13 [He] was accompted a tyraunt, and no gentleman.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, fo. 183B (1548)

14 When Adam dalfe and Eve spane, . . .

Whare was than the pride of man?

RICHARD ROLLE DE HAMPOLE, Religious Pieces, fr. Thornton MS, 79. (c. 1330) The first line had been long in use as a proverb, but this is its first known appearance in English literature.

When Adam dolve and Eve span.

Who was then the gentleman?

JOHN BALL, Text, used by him for his speech at Blackheath to the rebels in Wat Tyler's insurrection, 12 June, 1381. Ball was afterwards hanged. "A spirit fatal to the whole spirit of the Middle Ages breathed in the popular rime which condensed the levelling doctrine of John Ball."—J. R. GREEN, Short History of England, ii, 484. See also HUME, History of England, vol. i, ch. 17, note.

When Adam dalf and Eve span who was then a gentleman?

Harleian Miscellany, 3362, fo. 5a. (c. 1470)

Whan Adam delfid and Eve span, who was than a gentilman?

HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 131. (c. 1530)

When old Adam delv'd, and Evah span,

Where was my silken velvet Gentleman?

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Hell's Broke Loose, 15. (1605)

When Adam delv'd, and Eve span,

Pray where was then the Gentleman?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6421. (1732)

A proverb in many languages. The Germans say, "Als Adam henkte und Eva spann, | Wer war der Edelmann?" The French equivalent is, "Au temps passé, Berthe filait" (In times past Bertha span), Berthe being the wife of Pepin and mother of Charlemagne. (d. 783)

<sup>1</sup> A gentleman may make a king and a clerk may prove a pope.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. v. (1591) "According to the old proverb."

I can make a lord, but only God Almighty can make a gentleman.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, to his old nurse, when she begged him to make her son a gentleman. (c. 1600)

The king cannot make a gentleman of blood, nor God Almighty, but he can make a gentleman by creation.

SELDEN, Table-Talk: Gentleman. (c. 1640)

The King can make a Serjeant [at law], but not a Lawyer.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4613. (1732)

Somebody has said that a king may make a nobleman, but he cannot make a gentleman.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to William Smith, 29 Jan., 1795.

Any king or queen may make a lord, but only the devil himself—and the graces—can make a Chesterfield.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 23. (1841)

The king may make a knight, but not a gentleman.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 128. (1902)

<sup>2</sup> A gentleman without money is a pudding without suet.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

A gentleman without living, is like a pudding without suet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 96. (1670)

A Gentleman without an Estate, is a Pudding without Suet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 129. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Gentlemen of the first head, or ironice to be applied to such as would be esteemed a gentleman, having no poynt or qualitie of a gentleman, nor gentleman borne.

RICHARD HULOET, Abcedarium Anglico Latino, sig. N5. (1552)

Notwithstanding he be a dunghill gentleman, or a gentleman of the first head, as they use to term them.

STUBBES, Anatomie of Abuses, p. 122. (1583)

Gentilhomme de ville, a Gentleman of the first head, an upstart Gentleman.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Gentilhomme. (1611)

To be made . . . a Gentleman o' th' first house.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Woman's Prize. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1620)

A gentleman of the first head; Novus homo.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 710. (1681)

<sup>4</sup> A gentleman who lives ill is a monster in nature. (Un gentilhomme qui vit mal est un monstre dans la nature.)

MOLIÈRE, Dom Juan. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 50. (1665)

<sup>5</sup> I pray God the olde prouerbe be not found true, that gentlemen and riche men are venison in Heauen (that is), very rare and daintie to haue them come thither.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Against Dicing, p. 22. (1577)

<sup>6</sup> It takes three generations to make a gentleman.

SIR ROBERT PEEL. (c. 1841) See BAGEHOT, Biographical Studies, p. 47.

Whatever may be the causes, . . . the dictum, "It takes three generations to make a gentleman," is no longer in quotation.

DEAN SAMUEL R. HOLE, Then and Now, iii, 37. (1902)

It has always been possible to make a gentleman in three generations; nowadays the thing is done in two.

INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 1. (1940)

<sup>7</sup> He goes directly to the Mayor, tells him he was a Scholler and a Gentleman.

GEORGE PEELE, Merrie Conceited Jests, p. 11. (1607)

As becommed a Gentleman and a Scholar.

BISHOP RICHARD MONTAGU, Diatribes on Tithes, p. 181. (1621)

Matthew Feilde belonged to that class of modest divines who affect to mix in equal proportion the gentleman, the scholar, and the Christian.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Christ's Hospital. (1820)

His lockèd, letter'd, braw brass collar

Shew'd him the gentleman an' scholar.

ROBERT BURNS, The Two Dogs. (1786)

A gentleman by nature, and a scholar by education.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. (1822)

<sup>8</sup> [He] was a gentleman from his skin out.

REX STOUT, Black Orchids, p. 86. (1942)

Walter Winchell. Every other inch a gentleman.

MANNING LONG, False Alarm, p. 208. (1943)

<sup>9</sup> Nature's gentlemen are the worst type of gentlemen I know.

WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii. (1892)

I call you one of Nature's gentlemen.

SHAW, The Admirable Bashville. Act ii. (1926)

<sup>10</sup> One's duty as a gentleman should never interfere with one's pleasure in the slightest degree.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act iv. (1895)

GENTLENESS

See also Mildness

<sup>11</sup> That man was gentler than mulberries are soft. (δυνήν δ' ἑκείνους ἢν περὶ αὐτοὺς μύρων.)

AESCHYLUS, Ransom of Hector. Frag. 147, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) See ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai, ii, 36, 51C; EUSTATHIUS on Iliad, 211, 16. The verse refers to Hector, and was probably spoken by Priam.

When he's at his hottest, I make him gentle as a ewe. (Quom fervit maxime, tam placidum quasi ovem reddo.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 534. (160 B. C.)
Gentler than a dove. (πρῶτερος περιστέρης.)

DIAGENIANUS, Adagia, vii, 64. (c. A. D. 125) A Greek proverbial phrase.

Ageyn the faukon—gentil of nature.

LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. ii, l. 6605. (1412)
Gentyll as faucoun.

JOHN SKELTON, Garland of Laurell. (c. 1520)

Lythe [gentle] as lasse of Kent.

SPENSER, Shepheardes Calender, Feb., l. 74.
(1579) DRAYTON, Dowsabell. (1593)

I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 5, 45. (1595)

My lady is as gentle as a lamb.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 12. (1620)

She isn't always as gentle as a lamb, with mint sauce.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), A War Meeting. (1861)

1 With gentleness the fracture is repaired.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 247.
(1817) Politeness may bring about a reconciliation.

2 Gentle in method, strong in performance.
(Suaviter in modo, fortiter in re.)

CLAUDIO AQUAVIVA, Industrie ad Curandos Animae Morbus, ii, 1. (1606) The phrase is adapted. Aquaviva, who was General of the Society of Jesus, actually wrote, "Fortes in fine consequendo, et suaves in modo." A similar Latin proverb is, "Si possis suaviter: si non, quocunque modo" (If you can, gently; if not, by any other means).

3 Gentleness is able to accomplish what violence can not. (Peragit tranquilla potestas, | quod violenta nequit.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus Dictus Manlio Theodoro Consuli, l. 239. (A. D. 399)

Rather by gentleness then by rigour.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, fo. 34b. (1548)

Your gentleness shall force
More than your force move us to gentleness.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 102. (1600)

Let gentleness my strong enforcement be.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 118.

Gentleness accomplishes more than violence.
(Plus fait douceur que violence.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Phébus et Borée. Bk. vi, fab. 3. (1668) This is the fable of the wager between wind and sun as to which could deprive the traveller of his cloak. The harder the wind blew, the more closely the traveller wrapped his cloak about him, but when the sun came out, he soon had it off.

Might there not be
Some power in gentleness we dream not of?

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act i. (1901)

4 Gentle-mindedness is the better part.
(φιλοφροσύνη γὰρ ἀμείνων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 256. (c. 850 B. C.)

5 To become gentler one needs only to grow old.
(Man darf nur alt werden, um milder zu sein.)
GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

6 The gentlest thing in the world will override the strongest. (T'ien hia' chi jeu ch'i ch'ing t'ien hia chi chi' chien.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Sec. 43. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

To remain gentle is to be invincible. (Sheu jeu yueh ch'iang.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 52.

Gentleness brings victory to him who attacks, and safety to him who defends. (Ts'z' 'i chen' tseh shäng; 'i 'sheu tseh liu')

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 67.

Gentleness will blunt the sharpest sword.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 4, Apologue 15. (c. 1257)

GEORGE

7 I will not stand like a lion on a cheese-grater.
(οὐ στήσομαι λέαινα ἐπὶ τυροκνήστιδος.)

ARISTOPHANES, Lysistrata, l. 231. (412 B. C.) A cheese-grater was a knife with bronze or ivory handle, on which figures of animals were often carved.

Saint George, who is euer on horsebacke, yet neuer rydeth.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 125. (1579)
I feare me thou wilt use them as saint George doth his horse, who is euer on his back but neuer rideth.

JOHN LYL, Euphues, p. 186.

[Satan] is not . . . like St. George, which is always on horseback and never rides.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, ii, 32. (c. 1585)

Like Saint George. they are always mounted, but neuer moue.

THOMAS NASHE, Pierce Penilesse. (1592)

Saint George, that swing'd the dragon, and e'er since

Sits on his horse back at mine hostess' door.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, ii, 1, 288. (1596)

He is not like S. Georges statue, euer on horsebacke, and neuer riding.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 358. (1630)

Defer not thy well doing; be not like St. George, who is always a-horseback, and never rides on.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

8 Let George do it, he is the man of years.
(Laissez faire à George, il est l'homme d'age.)

LOUIS XII OF FRANCE, referring satirically to his prime minister, Cardinal Georges d'Amboise. (c. 1500) See SLAUGHTER, Two Children in Old Paris, p. 233. Translated into modern slang as meaning "Let the other fellow do it." The traditional explanation in America is based on "George" as a name used in addressing Pullman porters.

George can take it—let George do it.

C. & G. LITTLE, The Black Thumb, p. 221. (1942)
He was not familiar with the fine old slogan,

"Let George do it."

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 165. (1942)

- <sup>1</sup> Saint George to borrowe,
Ye shall have schame and sorrowe.
JOHN SKELTON, The Doughty Duke of Albany,
l. 506. (1529) Saint George being security for one's good faith.
Now sent George to borowe, let us set forward.
EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, l. 416. (1548)
Saint George to borow, our Ladies Knight.
UDALL, Roister Doister. Act iv, sc. 8. (1566)

GERMANY AND THE GERMANS

- <sup>2</sup> Let us set Germany, so to speak, in the saddle. It will soon know how to ride.
OTTO VON BISMARCK, Speech, in the North-German Reichstag, 11 March, 1867.
- <sup>3</sup> An Anglo-Saxon is a German that's forgot who was his parents.
F.P. DUNNE, Decline of National Feeling. (1900)
All a German knows is what some wan tells him.
F. P. DUNNE, Education of the Young. (1900)
- <sup>4</sup> Austria over all, if it only will. (Oesterreich über Alles wann es nur will.)
P. W. VON HORNICK. Title of pamphlet published in 1684.
Germans, Germany over all, over all the world. (Deutschland, Deutschland über Alles, über Alles in der Welt!)
A. H. HOFFMAN VON FALLERSLEBEN, Das Lied der Deutschland. First published in 1841, this song became very popular with the German troops as a marching song during the first World War.
- <sup>5</sup> German fury. (Furor teutonicus.)
LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 255. (c. A.D. 60) The French have a proverbial phrase, "Querelle d'Allemand" (A German quarrel), meaning an unjust quarrel.
In all the maritime regions of Western Europe the churches resounded daily with one doleful addition to the litany: "From the fury of the Danes, good Lord, deliver us."
ELSIE THALHEIMER, History of England, p. 26. (1875) Referring to the Danish invasions.
Furore Teutonico Diruta; Dono Americano Restituta. (Destroyed by German fury; restored by American generosity.)
WHITNEY WARREN, Inscription, for the library at Louvain, Belgium, destroyed by the Germans in 1914, and rebuilt after the war by American contributions. Warren was the architect of the new building, but his inscription was rejected, after long debate, and a milder one substituted.
- <sup>6</sup> Ile have them wall all Iermany with brasse.
MARLOWE, Dr. Faustus, l. 116. (1604)
- <sup>7</sup> Der Kaiser auf der Vaterland
Und Gott on high, all dings gommand,
Ve two, ach, don'd you understand?
Meinself—und Gott.
ALEXANDER MACGREGOR ROSE, Kaiser & Co.

First published in the Toronto Herald in 1897. Usually called, "Hoch der Kaiser."
See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems, p. 32.

- <sup>8</sup> Dear Fatherland, no danger thine
Firm stand thy sons to watch the Rhine!
(Lieb Vaterland, magst ruhig sein, Fest stet und treu die Wacht am Rhein!)
MAX SCHNECKENBURGER, Die Wacht am Rhein. (1840)
- <sup>9</sup> The Northern-man, whose wit in's fingers settles.
JOSHUA SYLVESTER, tr., Du Bartas' Divine Weekes and Workes. Wk. ii, day 2. (1605)
The Germanes have their wit at their fingers ends.
THOMAS CORYAT, Crudities, ii, 81. (1611)
The German's wit is in his fingers.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 37. (1640)
The Germanes have their wits at their fingers ends, viz., are good artificers.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 17. (1659) The French say, "Les Allemands ont l'esprit aux doigts."
- <sup>10</sup> A German can grind corn on the butt of his hatchet, as the proverb puts it.
TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. i, ch. 16. (1865) Dole, tr.

GETTING

- <sup>11</sup> After great getters come great spenders.
THOMAS BELL, Survey of Popery. Pt. i, bk. 2. ch. 4 (1596)
Narrowly gathered, widely spent.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 257. (1721)
How many a hand weak in getting is prodigal in spending.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 567. (1817)
- <sup>12</sup> Getting is got by getting—we know the saw.
S. V. BENET, Western Star. Bk. i, l. 79. (1943)
- <sup>13</sup> What he gets, he gets out of the fire.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 246. (1678)
- <sup>14</sup> Revolve the Getter's Joy, the Loser's Pain.
And think if it be worth thy while to gain.
NICHOLAS ROWE, tr., Pythagoras' Golden Verses, 44. (1707)

II—Getting and Keeping

- <sup>15</sup> He who gets doth much, but he who keeps doth more.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 399. (1855)
- <sup>16</sup> A warie keeper is better than a careful getter.
COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Amasseur. (1611)
- <sup>17</sup> There is paine in getting, care in keeping, and grieffe in losing riches.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 181. (1633)
Pains to get, care to keep, fear to lose.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 973. (1640)

1 Get what you can, and what you get hold;
'Tis the stone that will turn all your lead into gold.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Way to Wealth. (1736)

2 Get what you can, and keep what you get.
(Lucri quidquid est, id domum trahere oportet.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 801. (c. 220 B.C.)

To get goods is the benefit of Fortune, to keep them the gift of Wisdom.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 192. (1579)

3 Fortune is more easily gotten than kept. (Fortunam citius reperias quam retineas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 198. (c. 43 B.C.)
Nor is it less a virtue to take care of property than to acquire it. In the latter, there is chance; the former demands skill. (Nec minor est virtus quam quaerere, parva tueri: | casus inest illic; hoc erit artis opus.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 13. (c. 1 B.C.)
As greet a craft to kepe wel as winne.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 1633. (c. 1380)

Litel is woorth thing ygoten, if after the getinge it ne be kept.

G. DE GUILLEVILLE, Pilgrimage of the Lyf of the Manhode, 74. (c. 1430)

Experience teacheth that there is no lesse praise to be geuen to the keeper then to the getter.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, Henry V, p. 81. (1548)

According to the saying of the Poet, The virtue is no lesse to keepe, then for to get.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 187. (1574) Pettie, tr.

It is no less praise to keep than to win.

WILLIAM BERCHER, The Nobility of Woman, p. 97. (1559)

A kingdom is more easily gotten than kept. For to get is the gift of fortune, but to keepe is the power of prudency and wisdom.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 78. (1576)

The cunning to keepe is no lesse commendable than the courage to get.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 252.

It is easier to make a fortune than to keep it. (Ch uang yeh i, shou yeh nan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2705. (1875)

4

Gear is easier gain'd than guided.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 235. (1678)

5

He will have need of getters and keepers.

LEW WALLACE, Ben-Hur, p. 238. (1880)

GHOST

6

Ghosts, like the ladies, "never speak till spoke to."

R. H. BARRHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: The Ghost. (c. 1840) The Germans say, "Gespenster sind für solche Leute nur | Die sie seh'n wollen" (Ghosts only come to those who look for them).

7

Ghost: The outward and visible sign of an inward fear.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

8

To wrestle with ghosts. (Cum larvis luctare.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 53. (1508)

We are not to . . . fight with ghosts and antiquated errors.

THOMAS MANTON, Commentary on Jude, p. 16. (1658)

9

Williams hadn't the ghost of a chance with Tom at wrestling.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1857)

10

Man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?

Old Testament: Job, xiv, 10. (c. 350 B.C.) In the Vulgate, the phrase is, "Consumptus, et quaeso est?"

He bubbled up the ghost. (Ille quidem animam ebullit.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 4. (C. A. D. 55)

I nearly breathed out the ghost. (Paene animam ebullivi.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 62. (C. A. D. 60)

He said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost. (παρέδωκεν τὸ πνεῦμα.)

New Testament: John, xix, 30. (C. A. D. 100)

The Vulgate is "Tradidit spiritum."

He gave up the ghost. (ἀφῆκε τὴν ψυχὴν.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Ch. 29, sec. 5. (C. A. D. 110) Frequent in English literature.

11

Ghosts fear men much more than men fear ghosts. (Jên yu san fên p'a kuei, kuei yu ch'i fên p'a jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2708. (1875)

Ha'nts don't bodder longer hones' folks, but you better go roun' de grave-yard.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

12

That affable familiar ghost,
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. 86. (1609)

Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 933. (1593)

13

When no salaries are forthcoming on Saturday the "ghost doesn't walk."

UNKNOWN, see Household Words, 24 Sept., 1853, p. 77/1.

Instead of enquiring whether the treasury is open, they generally say, "Has the ghost walked?"

J. C. COLEMAN, in BARRÈRE AND LELAND, Slang, p. 405. (1889)

The ghost walked here last night. . . . It seems the paymaster has been around.

RUTH WALLIS, Too Many Bones, p. 53. (1943)

14

Ghosts do fear no laws,
Nor do they care for popular applause.

UNKNOWN, Thomas Nash His Ghost. (c. 1600)

GIANT

<sup>1</sup> First kill th' enormous Gyant, your Disdaine.
JOHN DONNE, The Dampe. (c. 1625)
Honour, the fool's gyant.

RICHARD LOVELACE, Poems (1864), p. 175. (c. 1650)

The owner [of the castle] was Giant Despair.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)
Giant Vanity urged Giant Energy to make use of Giant Duplicity.

MEREDITH, Tragic Comedians, p. 175. (1880)

<sup>2</sup> A Giant will starve with what will surfeit a Dwarf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 209. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> There were giants in the earth in those days.
(Gigantes autem erant super terram in diebus illis.)

Old Testament: Genesis, vi, 4. (c. 550 B.C.)
There were the giants famous from the beginning. (Ibi fuerunt gigantes nominati illi, qui ab initio fuerunt.)

Apocrypha: Baruch, iii, 26. (c. 320 B.C.)
A fellow thirteen cubits high. (ἀνὴρ τρισκαδεκάπαυς.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xv, l. 17. (c. 270 B.C.)
There had been giants in those harsh full-blooded days.

F.B. YOUNG, A Man About the House, p. 5. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> Even among men, giants are commonly the real dwarfs. (Aun entre los hombres, los gigantes suelen ser los verdaderos enanos.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 27. (1647)

<sup>5</sup> And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak. (Ibi vidimus monstra quaedam filiorum Enac.)

Old Testament: Numbers, xiii, 33. (c. 550 B.C.)

GIFTS AND GIVING

See also Benefit, Generosity, Liberality

<sup>6</sup> Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee. (ἀργύριον καὶ χρυσὸν οὐχ ὑπάρχει μοι, ὃ δὲ ἔχω τοῦτό σοι δίδωμι.)

New Testament: Acts, iii, 6. (c. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Argentum et aurum non est mihi: quod autem habeo, hoc tibi do."

'Twas all he gave, 'twas all he had to give.

SAMUEL ROGERS, The Pleasures of Memory. Pt. i, l. 132. (1792)

<sup>7</sup> He who divides his property among his sons during his lifetime buys a master for himself.
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 78. (c. 450)

Salomon seith: "never in thy lyf, to thy wyf, ne to thy child, ne to thy freend, ne yeve no power over thyself. For bettre it were that thy children aske of thy persone thinges that hem nedeth, than thou see thy-self in the handes of thy children."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 14. (c. 1387)

He that takes all the geir fra himself and gives it to his bairns, it were weill ward to take a mell [mallet] and knock out his harmes [brains].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595) JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 156, cites this saying, and then explains its origin: "John Bell, having given his whole substance to his children, was by them neglected; after he died there was found . . . a mallet with this inscription, 'I John Bell, leaves here a mell, the man to fell, who gives all to his bairns, and keeps nothing to himself.'"

In holy Scripture it be written, . . . Give not away thy living to another while thou art alive, least thou afterwards repent it.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 69. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He that gives all before he dies provides to suffer.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 854.

(1640) From Spanish proverb, "Quien de lo suyo antes de morir, | Apareje se a bien sufrir" (He who gives away his property before he dies, will learn well how to suffer)

Who gives away his goods before he is dead.

Take a beetle and knock him on the head.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 78. (1670)

This also is a Spanish proverb, "Quien de lo suyo antes de su muerte, que le den con un mazo en la frente." The Germans say, "Wer seinen Kindern gibt das Brot, | Und leidet selbst im Alter Noth, | Den schlage mit der Keule tot" (Who gives his children bread, and suffers want in old age, should be knocked dead with a club). A beetle is a paving rammer.

The old man has given all to his son. O fool! to undress thyself before thou art going to bed.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733

He gives his daughters his estate:

The daughters give him—what? The gate.

UNKNOWN, Our Book Review Department: King Lear.

<sup>8</sup> What shulde he yeve that likketh his knyf?

CHAUCER (?), Romaunt of Rose, l. 6502. (c. 1365)

He can give little to his servant that licks his knife.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 845. (1640)

He can give little to his servant who licks his own trencher.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1678)

<sup>9</sup> He giveth little and upbraideth much. (ὀλίγα δώσει καὶ πολλὰ θνειδῶσει.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xx, 15. (c. 190 B.C.) Quoted in the Jerusalem Talmud: Berakhoth, iv, 2: "Their giving is small and their reproaching great."

<sup>10</sup> To treat a poor wretch with a bottle of Burgundy, and fill his snuff-box, is like giving a pair of laced ruffles to a man that has never a shirt on his back.

THOMAS BROWN, Laconics. (1701)

But hang it—to poets who seldom can eat,
Your very good mutton's a very good treat;

Such dainties to them, their health it might hurt:
It's like sending them ruffles, when wanting a shirt.

GOLDSMITH, Haunch of Venison, l. 31. (1776)

1 He who gives to the unworthy loses doubly.
(Chi dona all' indegno, due volte perde.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 186. (1856) An Italian proverb. There is another, "Spesso i doni sono danni" (Gifts are sometimes losses).

He to whom something is given has no choice.
(A quien dan, no escoge.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 240. BEGGARS
MUST NOT BE CHOOSERS, see under BEGGAR.

2 Give often, when you know your gifts well placed. (Saepe dato, quom te scieris bene ponere dona.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. Zurich MS., 3. (c.
175 B.C.)

In giving, always keep near to yourself. (Dando semper tibi proximus esto.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 40. Never forget your own interests.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME, see under CHARITY.

3 Consider to whom you give. (Cui des videto.)
CATO (?), Disticha: Prologus. No. 17. (c. 175
B.C.)

Giving calls for genius. (Res est ingeniosa dare.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 62. (c. 13 B.C.)

Senek among his othere wordes wyse
Seith that a man oghte him right wel avyse,
To whom he yeveith his lond or his catel.

CHAUCER, Marchantes Tale, l. 279. (c. 1388)

What he has he gives, what thinks he shows;
Yet gives he not till judgement guide his bounty.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, 5, 101.
(1601)

To give or to forbear requires judgment.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Give. (1736)

If you wish to give a man a sense of poverty, give him a thousand dollars. The next hundred dollars he gets will not be worth more than ten that he used to get. Have pity on him. Withhold your gifts.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 20 Jan., 1856.

4 When they offer thee a heifer, run with a halter. (Que me den la vaquilla, corro con la soguilla.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 4, 41, 50,
62. (1615)

Whan the pigge is proferd to holde vp the poke.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. I, ch. 3. (1546)

5 Gifts break rocks. (Dadivas quebrantan piedras.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 35. (1615)

Gifts will break through stone walls.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Exemplary Novels, ii, 169.
(1640)

Gifts break a Rock.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1649. (1732)

Gifts burst rocks.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736

6 There is no end of giving. (Largitionem fundum non habet.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 15, sec. 55. (c.
45 B.C.) Quoted as "a common proverb."
Sometimes rendered, "Bounty has no bottom."

To give always, there is never no end.

JOHN WODROEPHE, *The Spared Houres of a
Souldier*, p. 475. (1623)

7 Every man has his proper gift.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 89. (1639)

8 Great gifts are for great men.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 188. (1639)

Great gifts are from great men.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 98. (1670)

9 He that gives me all denies me all: viz. He that offers me all, meanes to give me nothing.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Donner. (1611)

Who gives to all, denies all.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 39. (1640)

Neither give to all nor contend with fools.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 458. (1855)

10 What thou sparest from giving for God's sake, the devil will carry another way.

MILES COVERDALE, tr., The Christen State of Matrymonye, sig. 14. (1541) Cited as "the common prouerbe."

11 It that God will give, the devil cannot reave
[rob] us of.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 66. (c. 1595)

12 He giveth oft who gives what's oft refused.

CRASHAW, Epigrammata Sacra, l. 103. (1634)

13 Gifts enter without knocking.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 19. (1633)

Gifts enter everywhere without a wimble.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 953. (1640)

You may drive a gift without a gimblet.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742

14 Nether all thynges, nor in all places, nor of all men. (Nec omnia, nec passim, nec ab omnibus.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iv, No. 16.
(1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 36. (1550) Taverner comments: "There be some thynges, whiche is not semying for a man to take."

What gyft so ever one gyueth the, allowe it, and take in worthe. (Donum quodcunque dat aliquis, proba.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. i, No. 15.
(1508) Taverner, tr. fo. 67. (1550) Taverner adds: "A gyuen horse (we say) maye not be looked in the mouthe." See under HORSE.

15 The gifts of a bad man bring no good with them. (κακοῦ γὰρ ἀνδρὸς δῶρ' ἐνέσθαι οὐκ ἔχει.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 618. (c. 431 B.C.)

A wicked man's gift hath a touch of his master.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 168. (1640)

<sup>1</sup> He bestows his gifts as broom yields honey.
LEWIS EVANS, Revised Withals Dictionary, sig. D4. (1586)

He bestows his gifts as broom doth honey. Broom is so far from sweet that it's very bitter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 246. (1678)

<sup>2</sup> Thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous. (Nec accipies munera, quae etiam excaecant prudentes, et subvertunt verba iustorum.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xxiii, 8. (c. 550 B. C.)

A gift destroyeth the heart.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 7. The Vulgate does not follow this rendering, but has, "Calumnia conturbat sapientem, et perdet robur cordis illius" (Calumny confounds a wise man and destroys the strength of his heart). The literal meaning of "robur" is a very hard kind of oak, and the phrase may be the origin of "hearts of oak."

<sup>3</sup> Euery one is liberal in speach, but fewe are franke in geuing. (Ogniuno è liberale in parlare, ma pochi franche in donare.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 68. (1578) See also WORD AND DEED.

<sup>4</sup> He would not take it of gift.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine, iii, i, 359. (1650)

Wouldn't have them as a gift.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1857)

<sup>5</sup> A Man's Gift makes room for him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 308. (1732)

Gifts make Beggars bold.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1651

<sup>6</sup> And is thair oucht, sayis thow, frear than gift?

ROBERT HENRYSON, tr., Aesop's Fables: Fox, Wolf, and Husbandman, 38. (c. 1470)

A gift that is freely giuen . . . wherof the prouerbe is, what is so free as gift?

WILLIAM FULKE, Defence of the Scriptures, xv, 403. (1583)

What is freer than a gift?

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 80. (1633)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 222. (1639) RAY, Proverbs, p. 93. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia.

Nothing freer than a gift.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 267. (c. 1595)

<sup>7</sup> He that gives thee a capon, give him the leg and the wing.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 114. (1640)

To steal the Hog, and give the feet for alms.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 239.

Steal the goose and give the giblets in alms.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1678)

<sup>8</sup> Poor and liberal, rich and covetous.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 341. (1640)

To give is the business of the rich. (Denn Geben ist Sache des Reichen.)

GOETHE, Hermann und Dorothea. Canto i, l. 15. (1796)

One must be poor to know the luxury of giving.

ELIOT, Middlemarch. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1872)

<sup>9</sup> Gifts move the gods, gifts persuade dread kings. (δῶρα θεῶν πείθει, δῶρ' ἀδολοῦς βασιλῆας.)

HESIOD (?), Fragments. Frag. 6. (c. 800 B. C.)

Loeb, p. 282. Quoted by PLATO, Republic, iii, 390E; EURIPIDES, Medea, 964; OVID, Artis Amatoriae, iii, 653: "Munera, crede mihi, capiunt hominesque deosque."

Gifts beguile men's minds and their deeds as well. (δῶρα γὰρ ἀνθρώπων νοῦν ἤπαφεν ἥδ' ἐργα.)

STASINUS OF CYPRUS (?), The Returns. No. 5. (c. 675 B. C.) Quoted by PLATO, Republic, iii.

Alone of Gods Death hath no love for gifts. (μόνος θεῶν γὰρ θάνατος οὐ δῶρων ἐρά.)

AESCHYLUS. (c. 475 B. C.) As quoted by SCHOLIAST ON SOPHOCLES, Electra, 139. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, iii, 439. The comment is on the lines, "Neither prayer nor lamentation will bring your father back from beside the waters of Hades."

Gifts sway the Gods, they say;

Gold weigheth more with men than countless words.

(πείθειν δῶρα καὶ θεῶν λόγος· χρυσὸς δὲ κρείσσων μυρίων λόγων βροτοῖς.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 964. (c. 431 B. C.)

Gifts blind the eyes of the judge, and are a muzzle in his mouth. (Xenia et dona excaecant oculos iudicum, et quasi mutus in ore avertit correptiones eorum.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xx, 31. (c. 190 B. C.)

Gifts ensnare bluff admirals, too. (Munera navium | saevos inlaqueant duces.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode xvi, l. 15. (23 B. C.)

By gifts even the gods are taken captive. (Muneribus vel dii capiuntur.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iii, No. 18.

(1508) The Latin proverb derived from Hesiod and Euripides.

The Goddesses themselves are pleased with gifts.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 151. (1576)

<sup>10</sup> As free of gift as a poore man of his eie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 205. (1659)

As we say, he is as true of his promise, as a poore man of his eie.

JOHN BARET, An Alvearie, D994. (1580)

As free of his guift, as a Iewe of his eye.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 92. (1633)

As free as a blindman is of his eye.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 205. (1670)

<sup>11</sup> Not to be flung aside are the gifts of the gods. (οὐ τοι ἐπὶ βλήτ' ἐστὶ θεῶν ἐρικυδέα δῶρα.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 65. (c. 850 B. C.)

Be careful you don't lose the blessings the gods give you. (Quod di dant boni cave culpa tua amissis.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 1188. (c. 190 B. C.)

These heavenly gifts the gods bestowed. (Contulerunt caelestia munera divi.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 3, l. 25. (c. 24 B. C.) Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above. (πᾶσα δόσις ἀγαθὴ καὶ πᾶν δῶρημα τέλειον ἀνωθεν ἐστίν.)

New Testament: James, i, 17. (A. D. 44) The Vulgate is, "Omne datum optimum, et omne donum perfectum desursum est."

God has given some gifts to the whole human race, from which no one is excluded. (Deus quaedam munera universo humano generi dedit, a quibus excluditur nemo.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 28. (c. A. D. 54) O gifts of the gods, not yet understood. O munera nondum intellecta deum!

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. v, l. 528. (c. A. D. 60) Duff renders it, "How blind men still are to Heaven's gifts!"

Gifts come from above in their own peculiar forms. (Die Gaben kommen von oben herab, in ihren eignen Gestalten.)

GOETHE, Hermann und Dorothea. Canto v, l. 69. (1796)

1 A gift, though small, is welcome. (δόσις δ' ὀλίγη τε φίλη τε.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 208. (c. 850 B. C.) Who gives me a little gift, he wishes that I live. (Qui petit me done, il veut que je vive.)

UNKNOWN, Les Proverbes au Vilain, p. 8. (c. 1190)

That me lutel geveth, he my lyf ys on.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. (c. 1320) In Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 112. (1841)

He that gives thee a bone, would not have thee die.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 357. (1640) He that gives me small gifts, would have me live.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 998.

A little given seasonably, excuses a great gift.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 833. (1640) Small gifts make friends, great ones make enemies. (Aes debitorem leve, grave inimicum facit.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 11. (1869)

2 'Twere no good thing to refuse a gift. (χαλεπὸν κεν ἀνῆρασθαι δόσιν εἶη.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 651. (c. 850 B. C.)

Throw no gyft agayne at the geuers head, For better is halfe a lofe than no bread.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546) See also under BREAD.

A man must not throw a gift at the givers head. THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 80. (1633)

3 I will eat Noman last of all. (Οὐτὶν ἐγὼ πύματον ἔδομαι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ix, l. 369. (c. 850 B. C.)

The Cyclops, who held Odysseus and his shipmates captive, had asked Odysseus' name and the latter had answered, "Noman (Οὐτις) is my name," and demanded a gift which the Cyclops had promised, and Cyclops answered, "Noman I will eat last; this shall be my gift." So the Cyclops' gift passed into a proverb for prolonged agony or deferred suffering. LUCIAN, Cataplus, sec. 14, says, "I have no liking for such gifts as the famous one of the Cyclops."

4 There is no restraint or scruple in giving freely of another's goods. (ἐπεὶ οὐ τις ἐπίσχεσις οὐδ' ἐλεητὴς | ἑλλοτρίων χαρίσασθαι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 451. (c. 850 B. C.)

The derivative Latin proverb is, "Ex alieno tergore lata secantur lora" (From the leather of another broad thongs are cut). See under LEATHER.

5 A gift worthy of Apollo. (Munus Apolline dignum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 216. (20 B. C.)

Referring to a book or poem.

The deadly gift of Minerva. (Donum exitiale Minervae.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 31. (19 B. C.) Referring to the gift of the wooden horse, which led to Troy's downfall. There is a related Latin proverb, "Sylosontis chlamys" (The mantle of Syloson), referring to the garment sent by Syloson to Darius, to obtain a favor.

6 What shall I give? What shall I not give? (Quid dem? quid non dem?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 63. (20 B. C.)

7 Weigh not what thou givest, but what is given thee.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

8 Some men give of their means and others of their meanness.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 230. (1902)

9 Every one loveth gifts and followeth after rewards. (Omnes diligunt munera, sequuntur retributiones.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 23. (c. 725 B. C.)

Acceptable is a gift to every living man.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vii, 33. (c. 190 B. C.) Oosterley, tr.

They that give are euer welcome.

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, 235. (c. 1530) Quoted as "a sayenge."

10 He acquires honor who gives gifts. (Honorem acquirit qui dat munera.)

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman, Text B, passus iii, l. 333. (1377) Quoted from an unknown source. The French say, "Par don on a pardon" (By giving comes forgiving).

11 Excellent alwayes are the gifts which are made acceptable by the virtue of ye giuer.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 75. (1579)

12 There is nothing more sordid than you who call your enticements gifts. So the perfidious hook flatters greedy fish, so the crafty bait deceives foolish wild beasts. (Sic avidas fallax indulget piscibus hamus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 56. (c. A. D. 90) See also under BENEFIT.

Gifts are like hooks. (Imitantur hamos dona.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 18. "I abhor," says Martial, "the crafty trickery of presents." And in epig. 59 he adds, "He who gives great presents, desires greater presents in return."

"He sent out great gifts indeed." But he sent them on a hook, and is it possible that the fish can love the fisherman? ("Munera magna tamen misit." Sed misit in hamo; | et piscatorem piscis amare potest?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 63.

His gifts are armed with hooks. (Sua munera mittit cum hamo.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 111. (1814)

The French say "It's baiting your hook with a small fish to catch a large one" (C'est mettre un petit poisson, pour en avoir un gros). Bismarck's favorite maxim is said to have been "Do ut das" (I give that you may give).

They give that they may ask. (Cum donant, petunt.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 69.

(1869) "To give an egg to get an ox"; "Give a loaf and beg a shive." A series of similar proverbs is built around the basic one, "Giving is fishing": "One must lose a minnow to catch a salmon," and "He who does not bait his hook catches nothing." See under GAIN.

1 Gifts, however great, lose their value when the giver boasts of them. (Quamvis engentia, dona | auctoris pereunt garrulitate sui.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, No. 52. (c. A. D. 85) He that gives to be seen, would never relieve a Man in the dark.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2115. (1732) I never loved meat that crowed in my crop.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 206. (1721)

Of people who remind one of conferring a benefit.

Do not give, as many rich men do, like a hen that lays her egg and then cackles.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 112. (1887)

2 When you give, Give not by halves.

MASSINGER, Bashful Lover. Act ii, sc. 3. (1636)

3 Unto every one that hath shall be given. (τῷ γὰρ ἕχοντι παντὶ δοθήσεται καὶ περισσευθήσεται.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 29. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Omni enim habenti dabitur, et abundabit." See under POSSESSIONS.

4 To send a man a gift when he has no need of it is to bribe him.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, pt. ii, ch. 3, sec. 5. (c. 300 B. C.)

5 Neither the Gods nor honest men, says Plato, will accept the gift of a rascal. (Ny les dieux, ny les gents de bien, dict Platon, n'acceptent le present d'un meschant.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays Bk. i, ch. 56. (1580)

6 I find nothing so dear as that which is given me (Je ne trouve rien si cher, que ce qui m'est donné.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

To a right-minded man, nothing costs more dear than what is given him. (No hay cosa más cara para el hombre de bien que la que se le da.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 272. (1647)

What is bought is cheaper than a gift.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1678) The Italians say, "Caro costa che con preghi si compra" (What is got by begging costs dear). A proverb in many languages.

Nothing costs so much as what is given us.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3660. (1732)

The generous Man pays for nothing so much as what is given him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4555.

Another's bread costs dear. (Pan ajeno caro cuesta.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 269. (1856)

7 Let your portal be deaf to prayers, but wide to the giver. (Surda sit oranti tua ianua, laxa ferenti.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 77. (c. 13 B. C.)

Ovid's advice to a woman.

God loveth a cheerful giver. (ἰλαρὸν γὰρ δότην ἀγαπᾷ ὁ θεός.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, ix, 7. (c. A. D.

55) The Vulgate is, "Hilarem enim datorem diligit Deus." Mohammed incorporated this sentence in the Koran, xxx, 37.

The carping of the thunderer outweighs the aspect of the giver. (Affectum dantis pensat censura tonantis.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545)

We do not quite forgive a giver. The hand that feeds us is in some danger of being bitten.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts. (1844)

8 Blessed is he who gets the gift, not he for whom it is intended. (Cui datum est, non cui destinatum.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 60)

9 I am the laying-up and giving-out man, the superintendent of supplies. (Conduis promus sum, procurator peni.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 608. (195 B. C.)

A giver-out rather than a storer-up. (Promus magis quam conduis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iv, No. 73. (1523)

10 A man can give no more than he has. (Mola tantum salsa litant, qui non habent tura.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia: Praefatio. (A. D. 77)

The usual proverbial form is, "Nil dat quod non habet" (A man cannot give what he hasn't got).

Non can reue that he hath not. (Nessuno da quello che non ha.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

This is an old axiom which no man has yet thought fit to deny, Nil dat quod non habet.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Boswell, Life, 6 May, 1775.

1 He that can make many a gift can have full many a love. (Qui dare multa potest, multa et amare potest.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 26, l. 28. (c. 24 B. C.)

2 A gift is as a precious stone in the eyes of him that hath it. (Gemma gratissima, expectatio praestolantis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 8. (c. 350 B. C.)

3 A man's gift maketh room for him, and bringeth him before great men. (Donum hominis dilatat viam eius et ante principes spatium ei facit.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 16. (c. 350 B. C.)

A Man's Gift makes room for him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 308. (1732)

4 A gift in secret pacifieth anger. (Munus absconditum extinguit iras.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxi, 14. (c. 350 B. C.)

Quoted in Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 9b.

5 Every man is a friend to him that giveth gifts. (Amici sunt dona tribuentis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 6. (c. 350 B. C.)

6 Twice welcome is the gift if offered unasked. (Bis fiet gratum quod opus est si ultro offeras.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 57. (c. 43 B. C.)

It is a mistake to think one is given what has been extorted. (Errat datum qui sibi quod extortum est putat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 195.

The most curteys gyuer is he that gyueth without axing.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 100. (1477)

To give is honor, to ask is grief. (El dar es honor, Y el pedir dolor.)

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Proverbs: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (c. 1800) A Spanish proverb.

He gives too late who waits to be asked. (Sero dat, qui roganti dat.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 406. (1869)

7 He who is always giving invites robbery when he says "no." (Cui semper dederis ubi neges rapere impetres.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 103. (c. 43 B. C.)

He who sends a gift to a dead man gives him nothing, but deprives himself. (Mortuo qui mittit munus, nil dat illi, adimit sibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 362.

A gift is lost, not presented, unless it is remembered. (Perdit non donat qui dat nisi sit memoria.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 515.

8 I thought I would give him one, and lend him another. i. e. I would be quit with him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 177. (1670)

9 To the wise give gold, that they may study the more; to the devout give nothing, that they may remain devout.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 33. (c. 1258)

The devout man does not accept gifts; he who accepts them is not devout.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 33.

When holy men accept of coin from thee, Leave them, and seek some better devotee.

SADI, Gulistan, ii, 33. (Eastwick, tr.)

10 Liberty is of more value than any gifts; and to receive gifts is to lose it.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 33. (c. 1258)

Bounden he is that gifte takithe.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife, l. 70. (c. 1460)

She that takes gifts her self she sels,

And she that gives, does not ells.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (c. 1595)

The Italians say, "Chi prende, si vende" (He who takes, sells himself); the Germans,

"Geld genommen, um Freiheit gekommen"

(Money taken, freedom forsaken).

They that money take Must pay all the charges.

UNKNOWN, Roxburgh Ballads, iii, 253. (c. 1640)

11 Giuen is dead, and restored is nought.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Houres of Recreation, p. 103. (1572)

Geuyng is dead, and restoring is y<sup>l</sup> at ease. (Donato è morto, ristoro sta malle.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firte Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

Giving is dead, restoring very sick.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 575. (1640)

Giving is dead nowadays, and restoring very sick.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670)

Giving is dead, and restoring is deadly sick.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1661. (1732)

From the French, "Donner est mort est prêter est bien malade."

They used to say that 'Give' is dead, and 'Restore' is buried, but I do not believe it.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures. Ch. 35. (1880)

12 In giving is the true enlightenment.

SANTIDEVA, Sikhāsammuccaya: Ratnamegha. (c. 650)

13 I am not in the giving vein today.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 2, 119. (1592)

Sure the duke is In the giving vein.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act v, sc. 3. (1627)

14 When they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian.

SHAKESPEARE, Tempest, ii, 2, 34. (1611) Dolt: small Dutch coin, worth half a farthing; proverbial for anything small or trifling.

<sup>1</sup> The gifts of a foe are no gifts and have no value. (ἐχθρῶν δῶρα δῶρα οὐκ δῶρησιν.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 665. (c. 409 B.C.)

The gyftes of enemyes be no gyftes. (Hostium munera, non munera.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iii. No. 35.

(1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 53. (1550) Taverner adds that Erasmus confirms the danger of receiving gifts from enemies by many examples, but that nevertheless the idea is a superstition.

The gifts of an enemy seemed to them much to be feared. (Les dons d'un ennemi leur semblaient trop à craindre.)

VOLTAIRE, Henriade. Ch. 2. (1716)

Gifts from Enemies are dangerous.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1650. (1732)

GREEKS BEARING GIFTS, see under GREECE.

<sup>2</sup> Enhance our gift with words as much as you can. (Munus nostrum ornato verbis, quod poteris.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 214. (161 B.C.) The proverbial form, used by Pliny, is, "Benefacta sua verbis adornant" (They give charm to their gifts by words).

The most acceptable gifts always are those which the giver makes precious. (Acceptissima semper munera sunt, auctor quae pretiosa facit.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 71. (c. 10 B.C.)

There is a similar proverb, "Aliquando gratius est quod facili quam quod plena manu datur" (Sometimes more acceptable is that which is given with a kindly hand than that which is given with a full hand).

The gift derives its value from the rank of the giver. (Maiestatem res data dantis habet.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 9, l. 68. (A.D. 13)

A gift is estimated according to the mind of the giver. (Eodem animo beneficium debetur, quo datur.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. i, sec. 4. (c. A.D. 60)

When you look at what is given, look also at the giver. (Cum quod datur spectabis, et dantem adspice.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 416. (c. A.D. 60)

For men that yift [wol] holde more dere

That yeven is with gladsome chere.

(Car l'en doit chose avoir mout chiere Qui est donee a bele chiere.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, l.

2261. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 2383. (c. 1365)

With a gift the good will is the most important. (ἐξελον δὲ τὸ τοῦ δῶτος ἀριστος.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. vii, No. 5.

(1508) Citing a Greek proverb, which he refers to PHURNUTUS, De Natura Deorum, of which he gives the Latin, "Munerum animus optimus," and the explanation that what makes a gift valuable is not its intrinsic value, but the good will and intention of the giver, as Xerxes found a draught of water, presented to him by a soldier in battle, of inestimable value. TAVERNER, Trans- lations from Erasmus, fo. 26, has the rendering, "The mynde of gyftes is best," and the comment "Christ preferred the wydowes two fardynages afore all the ryche mens of-ferynges."

Woorthy myndes looke not vnto what is geuen them, but vnto the geuers mynd. (Gli animi Generosi non mirano a quanto gli vien donato, ma a la intentione del donatore.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 89. (1578)

Some one may give more that giveth not so much. The obligation of a gift hath reference wholly to the will of him that gives it. (Telle peut donner, plus, qui ne donne pas tant. L'obligation du bienfait se rapporte entièrement à la volonté de celui qui donne.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 101. (1600)

Gifts are scorn'd where givers are despis'd.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. iii, l. 64. (1687)

It's boorishness to give with bad grace: the hardest part is to give; what does it cost to add a smile? (C'est rusticité que de donner de mauvaise grâce: le plus fort et le plus pénible est de donner; que coûte-t-il d'y ajouter un sourire?)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De la Cour. (1688)

The will and not the gift makes the giver. (Denn der Wille und nicht die Gabe macht den Geber.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act i, sc. 5. (1779)

<sup>3</sup> There is no love that gifts will not master. (Donis vincitur omnis amor.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. v, l. 60. (19 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> He gaue as good as he brought.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus, i, 139. (1542)

Give them two for one.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 146. (1576)

To him! give him as good as he brings.

GEORGE ETHEREGE, Man of Mode. Act i. (1676)

You shall have as good as you bring.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 230. (1709)

Everywhere we try at least to give the adversary as good as he brings.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1843)

Return gift for gift. (I ch'ing 'huan ch'ing.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.

1569. (1875) There is a Latin proverb, "Qui suadet, sua det" (Let him who exhorts others to give, give himself).

<sup>5</sup> One makes his court badly to misers with gifts. (On fait mal sa cour aux économes par des présents.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 488. (1746)

<sup>6</sup> Good guifts ever-more make way, for the worst persons.

WEBSTER, Dutchesse of Malfy. Act v, sc. 2. (1614)

<sup>7</sup> Whatever a man has, is in reality only a gift. (Denn was ein Mensch auch hat, so sind's am Ende Gaben.)

WIELAND, Oberon. Pt. ii, l. 19. (1780)

<sup>1</sup> Such are not to be lyked that giue a man a shoulder of mutton, and breake his head with the spitte when they haue done.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 131. (1560)

Give a dog roast and beat him with the spit.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 322. (1636)

You give me roast and beat me with the spit.

HOTTEN, ed., Musarum Deliciae, i, 280. (1658)

He gave me roast meat and beat me with the spit.

ANTHONY WOOD, Life, ii, 296. (1674)

To give one Roast-meat, and Beat him with the Spit, to do one a Curtesy, and Twit or Upbraid him with it.

B.E., Dictionary of the Canting Crew. (c. 1695)
 "Never invite a friend to a roast and then beat him with the spit," do not confer a favor and then make the obligation felt.

F. K. ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary, p. 182. (1876)

II—Giving Quickly

<sup>2</sup> Greater is he who lends [in time] than he who performs an act of charity.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 63a. (c. 450)

For who-so yeveth a yift, or doth a grace,
 Do hit by tyme, his thank is wel the more.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 451. (c. 1385)

<sup>3</sup> Whatever you give give quickly. (Quidquid des celere.)

ENNIUS, Satires. Bk. i, frag. 2. (c. 180 B. C.)

In giving, and receiving too,

In every deed you have to do,

Act quickly; if you wait a bit,

Then time will suck the juice of it.

BHARTRIHARI. (c. 100 B. C.) Ryder, tr.

Bounty is doubled when speed is added. (Duplex fit bonitas simul accessit celeritas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 164. (c. 43 B. C.)

He gives twice who gives quickly to the needy. (Inopi beneficium bis dat qui dat celeriter.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 274. (c. 43 B. C.) Usually quoted "Bis dat qui cito dat."

Erasmus cites it in this form, Adagia, i, viii, 91, crediting it to Seneca, but Publilius Syrus antedated Seneca by a hundred years, and he himself undoubtedly got the proverb from the Greek, perhaps in some such form as that quoted by Ausonius, infra.

He giueth twice that giueth sone and cherefully.

WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 119. (1560)

He who gives quickly, gives twice. (El que luego da, da dos veces.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 34. (1605)

Another Spanish form is, "Quien da presto, da dos veces," or "A la par es negar y tarde dar" (To refuse and to give tardily is all the same). The Italians say, "Chi dà presto, dà il doppio"; the French, "Qui tôt donne, deux fois donne"; the Germans, "Wer bald [or schnell] gibt, der doppelt gibt," or "Eine Gutthat, die bei Zeit geschicht, Dieselb' ist doppelt ausgericht's" (One good deed, done in time, doubles its value).

He that gives timely gives twice.

FRANCIS LENTON, Characterismi, sig. H2. (1631)

He giveth twice that gives in a trice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670)

Bis dat qui cito dat: He gives twice that gives soon; i. e. he will soon be called upon to give again.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

I did really ask the favour twice; but you have been even with me by granting it so speedily. Bis dat qui cito dat.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 19 Jan., 1775.

<sup>4</sup> He that's long a giving knows not how to give.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 496. (1640)

He gives by halves, who hesitates to give.

WILLIAM BROOME, Letter to Lord Cornwallis. (c. 1745)

<sup>5</sup> Thanks are not forthcoming for a service which has come late through delay. (Gratiague officio, quod mora tardat, abest.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 4, l. 52. (A. D. 13)

Long tarrying takes all the thank away.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 70. (c. 1595)

He loses his thanks who promises and delays

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670)

<sup>6</sup> If thou be willing to yeue eny thing to eny nedy body, tary not till to morouwe, for thou knowest not what may befall to the.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 61. (1477) Quoting Plato

<sup>7</sup> Unwelcome is the gift which is held long in the hand. (Ingratum est beneficium, quod diu inter manus dantis haesit.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (c. A. D. 60)
 Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 91, as well as the similar, "Gratia quae tarda est, ingrata est" (A favor which is late is not a favor), and "Tardum beneficium, ingratum est" (A tardy benefit is unwelcome). Perhaps the nearest expression of the idea is "Ingratum gratia tarda facit" (Slowness makes the gift unwelcome).

Favors slow-footed are unfavored favors. (ἄχαρις ἀ βραδύπους ἄχαρις χάρις.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. xvi. (c. A. D. 380)

Paraphrasing an epigram from the Greek Anthology, x, 30, and giving the Latin, "Gratia, quae tarda est, ingrata est." In the succeeding epigram he says the same thing in another way, "Si bene quid facias, facias cito" (If you do good, do it quickly).

<sup>8</sup> To loiter well deserued Gifts, is not to giue but sell.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albion's England, v, 26 (1597)

A gift much expected is paid, not given.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 576. (1640) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1753.

A gift long looked for, is sold, not given. (Dono molto aspettato, è venduto non donato.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 76. (1666)
 Cited by both Ray and Fuller.

1 Better is one "take it" than two "You shall have it." (Micuz ain un "tien" que dous "tu l'avras.")

UNKNOWN, Les Proverbes au Vilain. (c. 1190) One "Take it" is worth more than two "I'll give you." (Más vale una "toma" que dos "te dare.")

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. ii, chs. 7, 35, 71. (1615) The Germans say, "Ein 'Nimm hin' ist besser als zehn 'Helf Gott'" ("One 'Take this' is better than ten 'God-help-you's'").

Better is one Accipe than twice to say, Dabo tibi.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1077. (1640) Do not say that you will give, but give. (Sage nicht dass du geben willst, sondern gib!)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

III—Giving and Receiving

2 It is more blessed to give than to receive. (μακάριόν ἐστιν μάλλον διδόναι ἢ λαμβάνειν.)

New Testament: Acts, xx, 35. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Beatius est magis dare, quam accipere." Quoted by RABELAIS, Pantagruel, bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545)

It is more blisful to give than to take.

UNKNOWN, Dives and the Pauper, fo. 2. (1536) Better to give than take.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546) Wherof the prouerbe began, geue and be blessed, take awaie and bee accursed.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 16. (1548)

3 Giving and keeping require brains. (El dar y el tener seso ha menester.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, chs. 43, 58. (1615) Motteux renders this, "To give and keep what is fit, requires a share of wit."

Jarvis paraphrases it, "What to give and what to keep, Requires an understanding deep."

To give and keep there is need of wit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1678)

To give and to have, Doth a Brain crave.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6353. (1732)

4 What's given shines, what's receiv'd is rusty.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

5 The making of a gift is superior to the acceptance of a gift.

Mahabharata, xiii, 63, 13. (c. 200 B. C.)

6 Who gives does a good and honest deed; who receives, does a profitable one only. (Qui bien fait, exerce une action belle et honneste; qui receoit, l'exerce utile seulement.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1580)

To give is of more cost than to take. (Le donner est de plus de coust que le prendre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8.

7 To apply the old proverb to a new situation, "What I gave I regret, what is left I shall keep." (Quod dedi datum non vellem, quod relicuomst non dabo.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 506. (c. 200 B. C.)

8 The sovereign good is not in taking and receiving, but in giving and bestowing. (Le bien souverain, non en prendre & recevoir, ains en eslargir & donner.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 47. (1552)

9 What resemblance is there between the hand that gives and that which receives?

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19. (c. 1258)

A hand accustomed to take is far from giving.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 536. (1817)

10 Measure thy gift by thy getting.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 146. (c. 900)

11 He that will only Give, and not Receive, Enslaves the Person whom he would Relieve.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

That man may last, but never lives,
Who much receives, but nothing gives;
Whom none can love, whom none can thank,
Creation's blot, creation's blank.

THOMAS GIBBONS, When Jesus Dwelt. (c. 1780)

IV—Giving and Taking

12 Let not thy hand be stretched out to take and closed in the time of giving back.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iv, 31. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

In giving and taking, it is easy mistaking.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 424. (1855)

13 If we can dish it out, we should be able to take it.

E. S. GARDNER, The D. A. Goes to Trial, p. 185. (1940)

They can dish it, but they can't take it.

PHOEBE TAYLOR, Deadly Nightshade, p. 210. (1941)

I'll say this for him—he not only dishes it out, he can take it.

ROBERT G. DEAN, Layoff, p. 22. (1942)

The Huns were always better at dishing it out than taking it.

GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 75. (1942)

14 Ye come o' the M'Taks, but no o' the M'Gies.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 147. (1832)

15 Give is a good girl, but Take is bad and she brings death. (δὸς ἀγαθή, ἀρπὰξ δὲ κακή, θανάτιο δότειρα.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 356. (c. 800 B. C.)

The Greek form for "Give and take" is δός τι, καὶ λάβε τι.

Better to geue then take.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546) Where they give they take. (Donde las dan las toman.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 65. (1615)

Give and Take is fair in all nations.

FRANCES BURNEY, Evelina. Ch. 25. (1778)

Give and take is fair play.

MARRYAT, Newton Forster. Ch. 47. (1832)

The great law of give and take runs through all nature, and if we see a hook, we may be sure that an eye is waiting for it.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 7. Introduction. (1848)

<sup>1</sup> He who has given this to-day, may, if he pleases, take it away to-morrow. (Qui dedit hoc hodie, cras, si volet, auferet.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 33. (20 B. C.) The good that can be given, can be taken. (Dari bonum quod potuit, auferri potest.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. viii, sec. 10. (C. A. D. 64) What can be given can also be taken away. (Quod dari posset, et eripi posse.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium, Epis. xcvi, sec. 13.

<sup>2</sup> Take the bit, and the buffet with it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 311. (1721) "Bear some ill usage," Kelly explains, "of them by whom you get advantage. Asinus esuriens fustem negligit."

A fellow, whom he could either laugh with, or laugh at, . . . who would take, according to the Scottish phrase, "the bit and the buffet."

SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 21. (1819)

<sup>3</sup> As children put it, you cannot take back a gift once fairly given. (καθάπερ οἱ παῖδες, δὲ τῶν ὁρθῶς δοθέντων ἀφαιρέσεις οὐκ ἔστι.)

PLATO, Philibus. Sec. 19E. (c. 350 B. C.) Quoted by FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iii, ch. 25. (1642)

To offer and take back at the same time. (ἀμα δίδου καὶ λάμβανε.)

ARISTOTLE. (c. 350 B. C.) As quoted by DIOGENIANUS, ii, 77.

To give a thing and take a thing;
To wear the diuell's gold-ring.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Retirer. (1611)

A proverb among our children, To give a thing and take a thing is fit for the devil's darling.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 288. (1629)

Fie! give a thing and take a thing?

THOMAS KILLIGREW, The Parson's Wedding. Act iii, sc. 5. (1663)

Give a thing and take again,

And you shall ride in hell's wain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 146. (1678)

Of bairns' gifts be not fain,
No sooner they give them but they seek them again.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 274. (1721)

We Americans well know what is meant by an Indian gift—that is, to make a present but expect more in return than we give.

NATHANIEL AMES, Letter to Dr. Mather, 26 March, 1764. See Essays, Humor and Poems of Nathaniel Ames, p. 25.

An Indian gift is a proverbial expression, signifying a present for which an equivalent return is expected.

THOMAS HUTCHINSON, The History of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay, i, 469 note. (1764)

When an Indian gives anything, he expects an equivalent in return, or that the same thing may be given back to him. The term is applied by Children . . . to a child who, after having given away a thing, wishes to have it back again.

JOHN BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms: Indian Giver. (1848)

If an American child, who has made a small gift to a playmate is indiscreet enough to ask that the gift be returned, he (or she) is immediately accused of being an Indian-giver, or, as it is commonly pronounced, Injun-giver.

Journal of American Folk-Lore, v, 68. (1892)

V—What I Gave I Have

<sup>4</sup> Give and spend, And God will send.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs. (1855)

Giving to God is no loss.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 126. (1875)

<sup>5</sup> A gift goes on a donkey and returns on a camel.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 519 (1938) An Egyptian proverb.

BREAD CAST UPON THE WATERS, see under BREAD

<sup>6</sup> The wise man does not lay up treasure. The more he gives to others, the more he has for his own.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Aph. 81. (c. 600 B. C.)

Who shuts his hand, hath lost his gold;

Who opens it, hath it twice told.

GEORGE HERBERT, Charms and Knots. (c. 1635)

The hand that gives gathers.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 34.

(1659) RAY, Proverbs, p. 268. (1678) The Hindus say, "They who give have all things; they who withhold have nothing," or "Did anyone ever become poor by giving alms?" See also under ALMS.

In giving, a man receives more than he gives, and the more is in proportion to the worth of the thing given.

MACDONALD, Mary Marston. Ch. 5. (1881)

If you continually give, you will continually have

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs No. 455. (1937)

<sup>7</sup> Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. (δίδετε, καὶ δοθήσεται ὑμῖν.)

New Testament: Luke, vi, 38. (C. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Date et dabitur vobis."

<sup>8</sup> Go and sell what thou hast, and give to 'the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven. (ἔξεις θησαυρὸν ἐν οὐρανοῖς.)

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 21. (C. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Habebis thesaurum in caelo."

The poor work miracles every day: we give them; and they give us treasures in heaven.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 29. (c. 1750)

Giving much to the poor, doth enrich a man's store.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640) Cited by RAY, p. 146, with "increase" for "enrich." A man there was, though some did count him mad,

The more he cast away, the more he had.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. (1684) A riddle put forth by Honest.

He that bestows his goods upon the poor, Shall have as much again, and ten times more.

BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. The solution offered by Gaius.

1
Whatever you grant to the good, you give partly to yourself. (Quicquid bono concedas, des partem tibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 582. (c. 43 B. C.) What we give to the wretched is given to Fortune. (Misero datur quodcumque, fortunae datur.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 697. (c. A. D. 60) He that gives to a worthy Person, bestows a Benefit upon himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2114. (1732) One Gift well given, recovereth many Losses.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3752.

2
Whatever I have given that I still possess. (Hoc habeo, quodcumque dedi.)

CAIUS RABIRIUS, Apothegm. (c. 65 B. C.) As quoted by SENECA, de Beneficiis, vi, 3, 1. What you give away is the only wealth which you will always have. (Quas dederis solas semper habebis opes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, No. 42. (c. A. D. 90) Thou hast nothing more from thy wealth, save what thou hast spent from it during life.

ALGAZILI, Ethics. Bk. ii, ch. 21, Maxim 101. (c. 1100)

What I formerly expended, I had; what I gave away, I have. (Quod expendi habui; Quod donavi, habeo.)

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale xvi. (c. 1400) The tale begins, "We read of a certain Roman emperor, who built a magnificent palace. In digging the foundation, the workmen discovered a golden sarcophagus, ornamented with three circlets, on which were inscribed, 'I have expended—I have given—I have kept—I have possessed—I do possess—I have lost—I am punished. What formerly I expended, I had; what I gave away, I have.'"

What we gave, we have;

What we spent, we had;

What we left, we lost.

EDWARD COURTENAY, EARL OF DEVON, Epitaph. (1419) See CLEVELAND, Genealogical History of the Family of Courtenay, p. 142.

That I spent, that I had:

That I gave, that I have:

That I left, that I lost.

ROBERT BYRKES, Epitaph. (1579) In the church at Doncaster, England. The Latin of the third line is, "Quod servavi perdidit." Similar inscriptions are to be found on many old tombstones.

The goods we spend we keep; and what we save we lose; and only what we lose we have.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Fancies. Bk. iv, sec. 70. (1632) An apothegm which occurs in various forms in many writers.

So much is mine as I enjoy, and give away for God's Sake.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4198. (1732) For all you can hold in your cold, dead hand is what you have given away.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Peter Cooper. (1883) Paraphrasing a Sanscrit proverb.

No POCKETS IN A SHROUD, see under RICHES.

3
Them ez gives, lives.

E. R. SILL, A Baker's Duzzen uv Wise Sawz. (1883)

GINGERBREAD

4
Buy any gingerbread, gilt gingerbread.

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fayre. Act ii, sc. 2. (1614)

It will take the gilding off the gingerbread.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 432. (1830)

For him the gilt was yet on the gingerbread, the paint on the toy, the dew on the flower.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Uncle John. Ch. 12. (1874) He was always rubbing the gilt off some gingerbread theory.

JAMES PAYN, The Canon's Ward. Ch. 11. (1884) Some of the gilt comes off the gingerbread.

SHAW, Jitta's Atonement. Act iii. (1926)

So many years, and the gilt wears off the gingerbread.

NOEL COWARD, Cavalcade. Pt. ii, sc. 5. See also CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 197. (1940)

CHENEY, Dark Duet, p. 171. (1943) etc., etc. To take the gilt off the gingerbread. To lessen the value or attractiveness of something.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Take. (1941) That takes the icing off old Ackrington's gingerbread.

NGAIO MARSH, Colour Scheme, p. 287. (1943)

5
Thou wert a knight of ginger-bread.

WILLIAM WAGER (?), Triall of Chevalry, iv 1 (1605) Showy and unsubstantial.

If I marrie, I promise you it will not be Tyro. 'Tis such a piece of Ginger bread!

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act iv, sc. 5. (1664) Ile behave myself like any Ginger-bread.

JOHN CROWNE, English Friar. Act ii. (1690) Quite a man of Gingerbread.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost, iv, 634. (1763) Those Lords of Gingerbread, a gaudy crew.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), A Poetical Epistle to a Falling Minister. (1789)

GIRDLE

6
Hee . . . hath all Princes neckes vnder hys gyrdell.

ROBERT BARNES, Works (1573), p. 203/2. (1541) I wis it is long hence I must liue . . . with my head vnder anothers girdle.

RICHARD BERNARD, tr., Andria. Act i, sc. 1. (1598)

He is curst in his Mothers Belly that would overtop such Princes, and bring their heads under his Girdle.

RICHARD BURNES, Κέρδιον Δώρον, p.80.(1660)

<sup>1</sup> Vngyrt, vnbllyssed. serving atte table
Me semeth hym a seruant nothing able.

WILLIAM CAXTON, The Book of Curtesye, p. 45. (1477)

Fie on the man, that did it first inuent,
To shame vs all with this Vngirt Vnblest!

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto v, st. 18. (1596)

Dost think I'll fear thee as I fear thy father?
nay, an I do, I pray God my girdle break.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 3, 169. (1597)
"Ungirt, unblest," was the old word; as not ready till they were girded.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations. Bk. iv, ch. 12. (1612)

As we usually say, they are unblest until they put on their girdle.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica. Bk. v, ch. 22. (1646)

It was accounted before ve civill warres a very undecent and dissolute thing for a man to goe without his girdle in so much that 'twas a proverbe, "Ungirt and unbles't."

AUBREY, Remaines of Gentilisme, p. 43. (1687)

<sup>2</sup> Below the girdle all, but little else above.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-olbion: Blazons of the Shires. Song 23. (1622) Cited as the blazon of Northamptonshire.

No wisdom below the girdle.

SIR MATTHEW HALE (?), Apothegm. (c. 1670)

<sup>3</sup> That Girdle will not gird me.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4343. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, ii, 1, 175. (1596)

Great seamen . . . in tall ships ribbed with brass,
To put a girdle round about the world.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy D'Ambois. Act i, sc. 1. (1607) Proverbial for a voyage around the world.

He hath put a girdle 'bout the world.

And sounded all her quicksands.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act iii, sc. 1. (1614)

Sir Francis Drake . . . did cast a girdle about the world.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Sunne in Aries. (1621)
As famous as their Countryman

That putt a girdle round about the world.

UNKNOWN, Dick of Devon. Act ii, sc.5. (c.1626)

<sup>5</sup> Bot gefe thaim up the girdill.

UNKNOWN, Alexander, l. 181. (c. 1400)

The other [French] proverb is, Il a quitté sa ceinture, he hath given up his girdle; which intimated as much as if he had become bankrupt, or had all his estate forfeited.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Sec. ix, No. 19. (1655)

TO TURN THE GIRDLE, see under ANGER.

GIRL

See also Maiden

<sup>6</sup> Let every girl attend to her spinning. (Cada puta hile.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 46. (1605)

<sup>7</sup> I grudge no expense in your education, but I will positively not keep you a Flapper.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Sept., 1749.

Chesterfield is referring to SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Laputa. According to Swift, the Laputans were so absent-minded that a "flapper" was necessary to brush their eyelids from time to time, to arouse their attention, etc.

I saw young teals taken alive . . . along with flappers, or young wild ducks.

GILBERT WHITE, Natural History of Selborne.

Ch. 39. (1773) The original meaning of flapper, as applied to a young thing.

See the three skirts in the back? That's the Missus and the two squabs. Young one's only a flapper.

H. L. WILSON, Bunker Bean. (1912) "Flapper" as a name for a young girl was popularized by Scott Fitzgerald in 1920.

"Who's the pippin?" asked one of the men.

ELLIOT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 50. (1940)

Just another bit of fluff.

MARY RENALT, Kind Are Her Answers, p. 246. (1940)

<sup>8</sup> Girls, mark my Words; and know, for Men of Sense,

Your strongest Charms are native Innocence.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747. The Arabs say, "The whisper of a pretty girl can be heard farther than the roar of a lion."

<sup>9</sup> They are not young ladies, they are young persons.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i. (1885)

<sup>10</sup> A girl's a girl, and fun is fun. (Zwar Kind ist Kind, und Spiel ist Spiel.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 8. (1806)

<sup>11</sup> This all girls learn before their alphabet
(Hoc discunt omnes ante alpha et beta puellae.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 209. (c. A. D. 120)
Referring to love of money

<sup>12</sup> There was a little girl Who had a little curl
Right in the middle of her forehead,
And when she was good She was very, very good,

But when she was bad she was horrid.

HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW (?). The attribution is by Longfellow's son, ERNEST W. LONGFELLOW, Random Memories, p. 15, who states that these lines were composed (c. 1856) by the poet while he was walking up and down his garden, carrying his second daughter, "Edith with the golden hair," in his arms. See also BLANCHE ROOSEVELT TUCKER-MACHETTA, Home Life of Longfellow, p. 90. There is no manuscript of the poem at Craigie House, and some commentators believe that Longfellow was merely repeating an old nursery rhyme. It has been included in some recent editions of Mother Goose, but it does not appear in any of the older ones, nor is it in HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes of England.

<sup>1</sup> Only one girl in the world for me,
Only one girl has my sympathy.

DAVE MARION, Only One Girl in the World for Me. (1895)

I want a girl just like the girl that married dear old dad.

WILLIAM DILLON. Title of popular song. (1911)

<sup>2</sup> Your Rome has as many girls as the sky has stars. (Quot caelum stellas, tot habet tua Roma puellas.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 59. (c. 1 B.C.)
Dear to the heart of girls is their own beauty. (Virginibus cordi grataque forma sua est.)

OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 32. (c. 1 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> Men seldom make passes
At girls who wear glasses.

DOROTHY PARKER, News Item. (1926)

The girl who is bespectacled
Don't even get her nectacled.

OGDEN NASH, Variation on an Old Theme.

<sup>4</sup> Can you (sayd I) not care for sutch a golden girl?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 165. (1576)
Poor little Ritz girl.

S. N. BEHRMAN, End of Summer. Act ii, sc. 1. (1936)

Above all, she was expensive-looking, which is how the boys like their girls to look.

MICHAEL ARLEN, The Flying Dutchman, p. 19. (1939)

<sup>5</sup> Girls are said to be sooner women than boys are men.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1753)

A girl of seventeen is a woman, when a man of seventeen is a boy.

THEODORE HOOK, Gilbert Gurney. Ch. 7. (1836)

<sup>6</sup> You may tempt the upper classes
With your villainous demi-tasses,
But Heaven will protect the working-girl!

EDGAR SMITH, Heaven Will Protect the Working-Girl. (1909)

<sup>7</sup> Sweet girl-graduates in their golden hair.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Prol., l. 142. (1847)

<sup>8</sup> The girl I left behind me.

UNKNOWN. Title and refrain of song dating from 1759. Published in The Charms of Melody. No. 72. (c. 1810)

GIZZARD

<sup>9</sup> He frets his gizzard, he harasses his imagination.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary: Gizzard. (1755)

<sup>10</sup> I find my wife has something in her gizzard that only wants an opportunity of being provoked to bring up.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 17 June, 1668

Don't let that stick in your gizzard.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>11</sup> That little one, she warms my gizzard.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Faust. Pt. ii, act ii, sc. 3, l. 134. (1871)

<sup>12</sup> There was some grumbling of the Gizard.

ROBERT WILD, Liberty of Conscience, p. 11. (1672)

I was going home, grumbling in the gizzard.

THOMAS FLLOYD, tr., Tartarian Tales, p. 47. (c. 1765)

"To grumble in the gizzard," to complain and be dissatisfied.

WILLIAM CARR, Craven Glossary: Gizzard. (1828)

GLADNESS, see Happiness

GLASS, see Mirror

GLORY

See also Fame

<sup>13</sup> It is upon glory's ladder that men seem to scale even heaven. (Hanc denique esse cuius gradibus etiam in caelum homines viderentur ascendere.)

CICERO, Pro Milone. Sec. 97. (52 B.C.)

<sup>14</sup> Glory follows virtue as if it were its shadow. (Gloria virtutem tamquam umbra sequitur.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 45, sec. 110. (45 B.C.)

Honour ever is the reward of vertue, and doth accompany it as duly as the shadow doth the body.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 29. (1576)

Pettie's source was probably ERASMUS, Similia, "Ut umbra nos vel invitor comitatur: Ita gloria virtutem sequitur."

He who first thought of the resemblance between a shadow and glory, did better than he knew. (Celuy qui premier s'advisa de la ressemblance de l'ombre à la gloire, feit meulx qu'il ne vouloit.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1580)

<sup>15</sup> I have nothing to glory of. (Non est mihi gloria.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 16. (A.D. 57) The origin of the Latin proverb, "Gloriari non est meum" (It is not mine to glory).

<sup>1</sup> He who scorns false glory shall possess the true. (Vanam gloriam qui spreverit, veram habebit.)

QUINTUS FABIVS MAXIMVS, to Lucius Aemilius. (216 B. C.) See LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk. xxii, ch. 39, sec. 20.

<sup>2</sup> Hasty Glory goes out in a Snuff.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1804. (1732) Sudden Glory soon dies out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4282.

<sup>3</sup> Go then, Patroclus, where thy glory calls.

GRANVILLE, Heroic Love. Act iv, sc. 1. (1697) Go where glory waits thee;

But, while fame elates thee,
O, still remember me!

THOMAS MOORE, Go Where Glory Waits Thee. (c. 1830)

This goin' ware glory waits ye haint one agreeable feetur.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 2. (1848)

<sup>4</sup> To please great men is not the lowest glory. (Principibus placuisse viris non ultima laus est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 17, l. 35. (20 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> Love of Glory drags all, bound to her glittering car. (Fulgente trahit constrictos Gloria curru.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. vi, l. 23. (35 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Glory's no compensation for a belly-ache.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Life's Handicap: The Courting of Dinah Shadd. (1891)

<sup>7</sup> The glory of great men should always be measured by the means which they have used to acquire it. (La gloire des grands hommes se doit toujours mesurer aux moyens dont il se sont servis pour l'acquérir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 157. (1665)

<sup>8</sup> When I rush on, sure none will dare to stay; 'Tis Beauty calls and Glory shows the way.

NATHANIEL LEE, The Rival Queens. Act iv, sc. 2. (1677) Usually quoted, "Glory leads the way," as in the text of the stage editions of the play.

<sup>9</sup> The glory of man is as the grasse.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 112. (1579) Glory is a thing worthy to be followed, but as it is gotten with great trauale, so is it lost in a small time.

JOHN LYL, Euphues, p. 135.

<sup>10</sup> From rank showers of blood,
And the red light of blazing roofs, you build
The Rainbow Glory.

LORD LYTTON, Richelieu. Act i, sc. 2. (1838) Military glory—that attractive rainbow that arises in showers of blood.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, against the war with Mexico, House of Representatives, 12 Jan., 1848.

<sup>11</sup> To the ashes of the dead glory comes too late. (Cineri gloria sera venit.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 25. (c. A. D. 85)

On the title-page of the posthumous poems of Richard Lovelace (1619) there was used a paraphrase of this epigram, "Those glories come too late | That on our ashes wait."

Seldome comes Glorie till a man be dead.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides: Glorie. (1648)

<sup>12</sup> Glory, the most unprofitable, vain, and counterfeit coin which is in use among us. (La gloire, la plus inutile, vaine, et faulse monnoye qui soit en nostre usage.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1580)

Glory and rest are things that cannot live in the same house. (La gloire et le repos sont choses qui ne peuvent loger in mesme giste.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38.

We should learn to be no more greedy of glory than we are capable of achieving it. (Apprenons à n'estre non plus avides, que nous sommes capables, de gloire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1595)

<sup>13</sup> Glory possesses a mighty spur. (Inmensum gloria calcar habet.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, No. ii, l. 36. (c. A. D. 15)

Glory and honour serve as goads and spurs to virtue.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. vi, ch. 3. (1605)

<sup>14</sup> Give me glory for my reward. (Merces mihi gloria detur.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iii, l. 389. (c. A. D. 8)

<sup>15</sup> Steep is the road by which glory scales the heights. (Ardua per praeceptis gloria vadit iter.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iv, eleg. 3, l. 74. (c. A. D. 9)

No path of flowers leads to glory. (Aucun chemin de fleurs ne conduit à la gloire.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 14. (1678)

One doesn't go to heaven in a carriage. (No se va al cielo en coche.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 233. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>16</sup> I climb a difficult road, but glory gives me strength. (Magnum iter ascendo, sed dat mihi gloria vires.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iv, eleg. 10, l. 3. (c. 26 B. C.)

Glory gives the heart strength. (Animo dat gloria vires.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 12, l. 37. (c. A. D. 9)

The Germans say, "Viel Ehr, viel Muth" (Many honors, much courage).

<sup>17</sup> For men to search their own glory is not glory. (Qui scrutator est maiestatis, opprimetur a gloria.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 27. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>18</sup> Alas, how difficult to retain glory! (Heu quam difficilis gloriae custodia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 240. (c. 43 B. C.)

To be able to harm without wishing to do it is the greatest glory. (Nocere posse et nolle laus amplissima est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 442.

To be beaten by a better man is a kind of glory. (Superari a superiore pars est gloriae.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 689.

1 He gained glory without giving bribes. (Nihil largiundo gloriam adeptus est.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 54, sec. 3. (c. 41 B.C.) Sallust is referring to Cato. But Suetonius, Divus Julius, 19, 1, says Cato connived at bribery to secure the election of Bibulus.

Do not seek glory. Nothing so expensive as glory. SYDNEY SMITH. LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Ch. 4.

2 The nearest way to glory—a short-cut, as it were—is to strive to be what you wish to be thought to be. (Viam ad gloriam proximam et quasi compendiarium dicebat esse, si quis id ageret, ut, qualis haberi vellet, talis esset.)

SOCRATES, Apothegm. (c. 410 B.C.) See CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, 12, 43.

The nearest way to come at glory, is to do that for conscience which we do for glory.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

3 What price glory, now?

STALLINGS AND ANDERSON, What Price Glory? Act ii. (1924)

4 Tell her you found me going into glory.

H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 41. (1852) To go to glory: to go to heaven; to die.

He hev been in glory twenty year.

C. E. CRADDOCK, In the Tennessee Mountains. Ch. 1. (1884)

Had we got caught in this, we should have . . . gone to glory.

MARY KINGSLEY, Travels in West Africa, p. 179. (1897)

5 How swiftly passes away the glory of the world! (O quam cito transit gloria mundi!)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 5. (c. 1420) "Sic transit gloria mundi" is a sentence from the Service of the Pope's Enthronement, and at the moment when it is uttered, a handful of flax is burned to indicate the transitoriness of earthly grandeur. A similar rite is said to have been used in the triumphal processions of the Roman Republic. See ZONARAS, Chronicon.

Short is the glory that is given and taken by man. (Brevis gloria, quae ab hominibus datur et accipitur.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 2. (c. 1420)

Rapid transit gloria mundi.

O. HENRY, A Philistine in Bohemia. (1908)

Sic venit gloria mundi.

O. HENRY, The Unprofitable Servant. (1911)

6 The glory of good men is in their conscience, and not in the mouths of men. (Bonorum gloria in conscientiis eorum, et non in ore hominum.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 2. (c. 1420)

7 Vain glory will flower, but it will produce no grain. (Gloria vana florece, y no grana.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 65. (1852)

8 So great is their love of glory. (Tantus amor laudum.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 113. (29 B.C.)

Slight is the field of toil, but not slight the glory. (In tenui labor, at tenuis non gloria.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 6.

9 Glories, like glow-worms, afarre off shine bright,
But lookt too neare, have neither heat nor light.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act v, sc. 1. (1612)

LAST INFIRMITY OF NOBLE MINDS, see under FAME.
OLD GLORY, see under FLAG.

GLOVE

10 Thereto I caste to the my gloue and taken thou it vp I shal haue right of the or deye therfore.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe, p. 102. (1481) See under GAUNTLET.

11 He was, in fact, a mere kid-glove sportsman.
H. H. DIXON, Post and Paddock. Ch. 7. (1856)
European politics are worked, to use the common phrase, "with kid gloves."

JAMES BRYCE, The American Commonwealth. Vol. ii, ch. 3. (1888)

12 We should not treat living creatures like shoes or pots and pans, casting them aside when they are bruised and worn out with service. (ὁ γὰρ ὡς ὑποδήμασιν ἢ σκεύεσσι τοῖς ψυχὴν ἔχουσι χρηστέον, κοπέντα καὶ κατατριβέντα ταῖς ὑπηρεσίαις ἀπορριπτοῦντας.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 5, sec. 5.

When they want you no longer, they throw you aside like an old shoe.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 25. (1857)

When he got fed up he cast her aside like a worn-cut glove.

HUGH PENTECOST, I'll Sing at Your Funeral, p. 49. (1942)

Men no good. They take your money. Then they got no use for you. . . . Throw you out like an old dish mop.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 115. (1942)

13 Marion County has been handled without gloves.

ADIEL SHERWOOD, A Gazetteer of the State of Georgia, p. 94. (1827)

The prophets . . . are here handled without gloves.

UNKNOWN, Review, The Nation (N.Y.), 5 May, 1892, p. 345/2.

<sup>1</sup> The boots . . . fitted me like a glove.

SMOLLETT, Humphrey Clinker, 10 June, 1771.

Let. 1.

The language fitting either "like a glove" as we say.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Letters, i, 389. (1876)

GLUTTONY

See also Eating

<sup>2</sup> A dish-licker. (ματτιβολιχός.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 451. (423 B.C.)

Scart the cog [bowl] would hae mair.

ANDREW HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 34. (1832) "He that scrapes the inside of his dish wishes for more."

<sup>3</sup> The learned glutton forgets his learning.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 49. (c. 450)

Wisdom is not welcomed at the banquet and the revel.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 9. (c. 1050)

FAT PAUNCHES HAVE LEAN PLATES, see under BELLY: THE FULL BELLY.

<sup>4</sup> No vessel is more despised in the eyes of the Creator than an overloaded stomach.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth. Ch. vi, sec. 4. (c. 450) Quoted in ALGAZALI'S Ethics, p. 135. On p. 136 he adds: "The wise man eats sufficient for one stomach, but the glutton for seven."

<sup>5</sup> In much eating lurketh sickness.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxvii, 30. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

Much meat much maladies.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 120. (1670)

He that eats till he is sick, must fast till he is well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2094. (1732) After the Spanish, "Quien come hasta entermar, Ha de ayunar hasta sanar" (Who eats himself sick must fast himself well)

<sup>6</sup> A glutton is never generous.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 287. (1855)

<sup>7</sup> He who eats too much knows not how to eat.

BRILLAT-SAVARIN, Physiologie du Goût. Ch. 36. (1825)

<sup>8</sup> Since 'tis no sin of books to be a glutton.

I truck'd St. Austin for a leg of mutton.

THOMAS BROWN, Satire on the French King. (c. 1700)

We talk of a thirst of knowledge, a glutton of books.

ABRAHAM TUCKER, Light of Nature, ii, 484. (1768)

The elder Pliny, . . . the most voracious literary glutton of ancient times.

GEORGE P. MARSH, Lectures on the English Language. Ch. 21, p. 464.

<sup>9</sup> His eye upon the cupboard, his ear towards the crier of sweetmeats.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 438. (1817)

<sup>10</sup> Better fill a glutton's belly than his eye.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 319. (1605)

EYE BIGGER THAN THE BELLY, see under EYE.

<sup>11</sup> Indulge not gluttony, the belly's friend. (Indulgere gulae noli, quae ventris amica est.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 10. (c. 175 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> It is better to die of indigestion than of starvation. (Satius est cruditate, quam fame.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. ix, epis. xviii, sec. 4. (46 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> Over-feeding breeds ferocity. (Satietas ferocitatem parit.

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 53. (1523)

He that overfeeds his Senses, feasteth his Enemies.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2243. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> At breakfast and diner I eete little meate, And two hongry meales make the thyrd a gluten.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Three hungry meales, makes the fourth a glutton.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 331. (1605)

Two ill meals make the third a glutton.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 577. (1640)

The abbot . . . verified the proverb, that "two hungry meals make the third a glutton."

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Pt. vi, ch. 2. (1655) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 302, with the comment, "Spoken when one eats greedily after long fasting."

Two good Meals make the third a Glutton

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5329. (1732)

<sup>15</sup> Non sigheth so sore as the gloton that mai no more.

RICHARD HILLS, Commonplace-Book, p. 129. (c. 1530)

<sup>16</sup> Gluttony closed Paradise; it beheaded John the Baptist. (Gula paradisum clausit; decolavit Baptistam.)

POPE INNOCENT III, De Contemptu Mundi. Bk ii, ch. 18. (c. 1200)

O glotonye, ful of cursednesse,

O cause first of our confusioun,

O original of our dampnacioun!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Pardoner's Tale, l. 170. (c. 1386)

<sup>17</sup> O what gluttony is his who has whole boars served up for himself, an animal born for banquets. (Quanta est gula quae sibi totos | ponit apros, animal propter convivia natum!)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 140. (c. A.D. 120)

What slaughter'd hecatombs, what floods of wine, Fill the capacious Squire and deep Divine!

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 203. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Gluttony is an abomination; therein is the quality of a beast.

KE'GEMNI, Instructions. No. 2. (c. 4000 B.C.)
Piasse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

Let him herd with the dumb brutes—an animal whose delight is in fodder. (Mutis adgregetur animal pabulo lactum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis.xcii,sec.7.(a.A.D.64)

And we shall feed like oxen at a stall.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 2, 14. (1597)

What is a man

If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 4, 33. (1600)

Swinish gluttony . . .

Cramms and blasphemes his feeder."

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 776. (1634)

<sup>2</sup> Double charge will rive a cannon.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (1721)

"Spoken when people urge upon you more than you can bear, be it meat, drink, work, or so."

I'm welly brosten [almost burst], as they say in Lancashire.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>3</sup> Ingenious is gluttony. (Ingeniosa gula est.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 119. (c. A.D. 60)

Cited by MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig.
62. (c. A.D. 85) Ingenious, that is, in devising luxuries to tempt the appetite. Sometimes rendered, "Gluttony is a fine art."

<sup>4</sup> To live a plover's life. (χαπαδριῶ βίον.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 494B. (c. 385 B.C.) Plato is speaking of the gluttons who cram their bellies and then vomit up the food. The comparison refers to the plover's habit of drinking water and then rejecting it.

The hote cormeraunt of glotonye.

CHAUCER (?), The Parlement of Foules, l. 362.
(c. 1382) CROBYLUS, Frag. i, 4, uses the phrase, κάμινος οὐκ ἀνθρώπος (A furnace, not a man) in describing a glutton.

<sup>5</sup> The glutton for two nights no sleep can get:
The first from surfeit, the second from regret.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 52. (c. 1258) Eastwick, tr.

<sup>6</sup> With eager feeding, food doth choke the feeder.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 1, 37. (1595)

Who hastens a glutton chokes him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 857.
(1640)

<sup>7</sup> A glutton young, a beggar old.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures.
Ch. 2. (1880) Referred to as "an old saying."

<sup>8</sup> He who distinguishes the true savor of his food can never be a glutton; he who does not cannot be otherwise.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 11. (1854)

II—Digging the Grave with the Teeth

<sup>9</sup> Greedy eaters dig their graves with their teeth.
(Les gourmands font leurs fosses à leurs dents.)

HENRI ESTIENNE, Précélence du Langue François. (c. 1550) "Greedy eater" seems the best translation of gourmand, who, in French, is more voracious than a gourmet, but less so than a glouton.

Voluptuousness and intemperance, as the French proverb hath it, digs its own grave with the teeth.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 137. (1629)

King Edward . . . by intemperance in his diet, in some sort, digged his grave with his own teeth.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain.
Vol. iv, ch. 3. (1655)

How many People daily dig their own Graves either with their Teeth, their Tongues, or their Tails.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p.173.(1709)

More people dig their graves with their teeth than we imagine.

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 2. (1854)

We each day dig our graves with our teeth.

SAMUEL SMILES, Duty, p. 418. (1880)

With his knife and fork he digs his own grave.

JULE BROUSSEAU, Episode on 8th Street, p. 5.
(1941)

III—Gluttony Kills More than the Sword

<sup>10</sup> Gluttony kills more than the sword, and is the kinder of all evils. (Gula plures occidit quam gladius, estque fomes omnium malo-rum.)

FRANCESCO PATRIZZI, Discussiones Peripateticæ.
(1571) There are many forms to the Latin proverb. HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, cites two, "Plures crapula quam gladius" (More are killed by gluttony than by the sword) and "Ense cadunt multi, feriunt sed crapula plures" (Many fall by the sword, but more by gluttony). KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p.
299, gives another, "Plures necat gula quam gladius," and FYNES MORYSON, An Itinerary, i, 1 (1617) still another, "Plures crapula
quam ensis."

Many moo people be glotonye is slayne,
Then in batell or in fight, or with other payne.

UNKNOWN, Dialogues of Creatures. (c. 1535)

More perish by a surfeit than the sword.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Ar-ber), p. 275. (1580)

By gluttony more die than perish by the sword.
NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 302.
(1597)

Surfeits destroy more than the sword.

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act
i, sc. 2. (c. 1613)

Gluttony kills more than the sword.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 505.
(1640) The Danes say, "Flere Folk draebes af Nadver end af Svaerd" (More people are killed by supper than by the sword).

IV—More Die from Food than Famine

1 More die from the pot than from poverty.
Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 33a. (c. 450)
 THERE IS DEATH IN THE POT, see under POT.

2 I saw few die of hunger, of eating—100,000.
 FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.
 After the Spanish, "De hambre a nadie vi morir, de mucho comer a cien mil."

3 Hunger and thirst kill scarcely any,
 But gluttony and drink kill a great many.
 ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 101.
 (1869) There are many English variants.
 "Feasting is the doctor's harvest," "Feed sparingly and defy the physician."

4 Hence [from gluttony] come sudden deaths and intestate old age. (Hinc subitae mortes atque intestata senectus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 144. (c. A. D. 120)

5 Surfeit has killed many more men than famine.
 (πολλῶ τοι πλεονας λιμοῦ κόρος ὤλεσεν ἄνδρας.)

THEOGNIS, Sententiae. (c. 600 B. C.) HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 233, gives the Latin,
 "Multo plures satietas quam fames perdidit viros."

The Greek poet Theognis most truly hath written, that surfeit hath destroyed more than famine.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, p. 219. (1588)

More die by Food than Famine.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3433. (1732)

GNAT

6 Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel. (ὁδηγοὶ τυφλοὶ, διυλίζοντες τὸν κῶνωπα τὴν δὲ κάμηλον καταπίνοντες.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 24. (c. A. D. 50) The Vulgate is, "Duces caeci, excolantes culicem, camelum autem glutientes," and the correct reading, as both the Greek and Latin indicate, and as used not only in the Coverdale and other early versions, but also in the Revised Version, is "strain out a gnat," an allusion to the custom of straining wine before drinking it, lest insects be inadvertently swallowed. It is probable that the translators of 1611 did not make a mistranslation, but simply adopted a rendering which had already gained currency in the popular speech of the time, meaning, "which strain the liquor if they find a gnat in it." However, the phrase was soon misapprehended, and was taken to mean to make a difficulty of swallowing or accepting something. See O.E.D., x, 1067/1.

Blind fools, clensing forth the knatt, but swelowyng the camely.

UNKNOWN, Apology for Lollard, 45. (c. 1400)

Most vnjustly straining at a gnat, and letting past an elephant.

ROBERT GREENE, Mamillia, ii, B 3 b. (1583)

They have verified the old proverbe in straying at gnats and swallowing downe camells.

BISHOP JOHN KING, On Jonas, p. 284. (1594)
 Many stumble at a strawe and leape over a blocke.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 328. (1605)
 Doth so small a gnat stick in your throats, while ye swallow such a camel of flagitious wickedness?

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations. Bk. iv, ch. 31. (1615)

To strain at a gnat. To make a difficulty of accepting (some point, theory, etc.); esp. after accepting readily a much greater difficulty.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)
 Shall we, the renowned camel-swallowers, now boggle at a gnat?

ANTHONY BOUCHER, The Case of the Seven Sneezes, p. 68. (1942)

GO

7 I'm going to "go it" a bit before I settle down.
 I have gone it a bit already, and I'm going to "go it" a bit more.

HENRY J. BYRON, Our Boys. Act i. (1875)

8 No man goes further than the man who does not know whither he is going.

OLIVER CROMWELL. As quoted by PEARSON, G.B.S., p. 224.

9 He that goeth, and returneth, maketh a good voyage. (Chi va & ritorna, fa bon viaggio.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

He that goes and comes makes a good voyage.
 UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 90. (1629)

Without going there is no returning.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 362. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

10 He's gone, and forgot nothing but to say farewell to his creditors.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

Gone where the woodbine twineth.

JAMES FISK, at the Congressional investigation of Black Friday (24 Sept., 1869), referring to the money he had lost in the attempt to corner gold. When somebody asked him what that meant, he is said to have answered, "Up the spout."

Question: What became of the $50,000,000 gold carried for Mrs. Grant?

Jim Fisk: Oh! that has gone with all the rest. Where the woodbine twineth.

New York Tribune, 24 Jan., 1870, p. 1/4.

11 Where do we go from here? (Wohin soll es nun gehn?)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, Studierzimmer. (1806)

So where do we go from here?

CLARE BOOTHE, Margin for Error. Act ii. (1939) TAYLOR, The Deadly Sunshade, p. 159. (1941) etc., etc.

12 As fast as one goth an other comthe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

<sup>1</sup> You . . . might haue gone further, and haue faren wurs.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
That ancient check of going far and faring worse.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Recollection of Treaties, p. 412. (1614)

I may go farther, and fare worse.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Love in a Maze. Act ii, sc. 2. (1632)

Come, Sir John, you may go further and fare worse.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
If there be no Purgatory, the Dean may have gone farther and fared worse.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 8. (1834)
She's just as rich as most of the girls who come out of India. I might go farther and fare worse.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 4. (1847)

To go further and fare worse. Not content with something available or offered, to pass on and experience bad fortune or inferior treatment.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Go. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> Ye maie walke this waie, but sure ye shall fynde

The further ye go, the further behynde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

<sup>3</sup> I better go while the going's good.

JOHN O'HARA, Appointment in Samarra, p. 270. (1934)

The guilty party had better go while the going is good.

MICHAEL INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 222. (1940)

She ought to go while the going is good.

DOROTHY BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony p. 101. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> Go here away, go there away, quoth Madge Whitworth, when she rode the mare in the tedder.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 85. (1678) A tedder is a machine for spreading out new-mown hay to dry.

<sup>5</sup> Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge. (Quocumque enim perrexeris, pergam.)

Old Testament: Ruth, i, 16. (c. 600 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> Without going you can get nowhere. (Lu pu hsing pu tao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 21. (1875)

Better to go than to send. (Shih k'ou pu ju tzū tsou.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1988. See under SELF-HELP.

<sup>7</sup> Stand not upon the order of your going, But go at once.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 118. (1606)

<sup>8</sup> I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a bear.]

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, iii, 3, 57. (1610)

<sup>9</sup> "And you won't be angry? . . . Then fire away, Flannagan!" cried Titmouse joyfully.

SAMUEL WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 31. (1841)

Let her go, Gallagher!

WILLIAM W. DELANEY. Title and refrain of song. (1887)

<sup>10</sup> He that by husbandry will tryue and tre [thrive and prosper],

Must not trust in "go," but in "now gaw we."

UNKNOWN, Pilgrim's Tale, l. 38. (c. 1540)
Do not say go, but gaw.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)
There is a great deal of difference between go and gaw [an abbreviation of go we]. i. e. between ordering a person to do a thing, and going with him to see him do it, or do it with him.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 432. (1830)

GOAL

<sup>11</sup> The winning of the gole crownes each mans race.

THOMAS DEKKER, If It Be Not Good, the Duel Is in It. (1612)

<sup>12</sup> Do not turn back on reaching the frontier. (μὴ ἐπιστρέφεισθαι ἐπὶ τοὺς ὁροὺς ἐλθόντας.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Education of Children. Sec. 12F. Quoting one of the precepts of Pythagoras, quoted also by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, viii, 17-18, who explains that it means that those who approach the boundary of life should not set their hearts on living, and try to turn back.

<sup>13</sup> This must be the goal toward which my foaming steed shall press. (Has meus ad metas sudet oportet equus.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iv, eleg. i, l. 70. (c. B. C. 16) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 10, the French being, "C'est vers ce but que doivent tendre mes coursiers."

<sup>14</sup> Whatsoever you attempt, consider your goal. (Quicquid conaris, quo pervenias cogites.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 561. (c. 43 B. C.)

GOAT

<sup>15</sup> A Skyrian goat. ( αἰξ Σκυπλᾶ.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, iii, 3. (c. A. D. 125) The goats of Skyros were renowned as milk-givers, but were very fractious. A similar phrase is ἡ Κανπλά βοῦς (A Kaunian cow), for Kaunian cows gave abundant milk, but often kicked over the pail.

The goat gives a good milking, but she casts it all down with her foot.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 310. (1721)

<sup>16</sup> An old Goat is never the more revered for his Beard.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 646. (1732)

Contend not about a Goat's Beard.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1151. (1732)

1 Goats are not sold at every Fair.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1667. (1732)
You have no Goats, and yet you sell Kids.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5922. (1732)

They that sell kids, and have no goats, how came they by them?

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 527. (1855)

2 The goat must browse where she is tied.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 59. (1640)

Where the buck is bound there he must bleat.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 343. (1721)

"Men must bear these hardships to which they are bound, either by force or compact."

"The goat must browse where she is tied." Poverty . . . surrounds a man with ready-made barriers.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius: Poverty. (1872)

3 [He] stopped at third with a mocking smile on his face which would have gotten the late Job's goat.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON, Pitching, p. 28. (1912)

"To get one's goat": to disgust one, or make one lose one's temper.

She got Martha's goat from the jump.

JACK LONDON, The Valley of the Moon. Ch. 10. (1913)

Are you deaf, or are you tryin' to get my goat?

J. C. LINCOLN, Shavings, p. 147. (1918)

That always got his goat.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 87. (1939)

4 Why is it, whenever a group of internationalists get together, they always decide that Uncle Sam must be the goat [i. e. the victim]?

BERTRAND H. SNELL, Interview, 7 May, 1931.

If disease spread among the livestock, the goats would get it first and die. That gave rise to the expression, "I'll be the goat."

ALFRED E. SMITH, Interview, New York Herald Tribune, 5 March, 1935, p. 38.

She made you the goat.

RAYMOND CHANDLER, The High Window, p. 235. (1942)

GOD

5 Man's extremity is God's opportunity.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 96. (1629)

LORD BELHAVEN, Speech on Union, in Scottish Parliament, 2 Nov., 1706. SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 21. (1822)

Our own proverb, Man's extremity is God's opportunity, or as we sometimes have it, When need is highest, help is nighest.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 61. (1853) See also under NEED.

6 God looks late into his book. (<δ> Ζεὺς κατεῖδε χρόνιος εἰς τὰς διημέρας.)

ÆSCHYLUS (?), Fragments. Frag. 251, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) Cited by ZENOBIOUS, iv, 11;

PSEUDO-DIOGENIANUS, iv, 95A. Referring to the delayed but certain punishment of the wicked. The proverb is sometimes given, "God is slow looking into his book, but he always looks."

Slow are the hands of the Gods, but mighty at last to fulfil. (χρόνια μὲν τὰ τῶν θεῶν πῶς, εἰς τέλος δ' οὐκ ἀσθενῇ.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 1615. (c. 419 B.C.)

The gods wait long. (μενετοὶ θεοί.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 1620 (414 B.C.)

Sometimes paraphrased, "By their long memories the gods are known."

God metes out justice in his own good time. (νέμει τοι δίκαν θεός, δταν τύχη.)

EURIPIDES, Electra l. 1169. (c. 413 B.C.)

The power of heaven moves slowly, but at the same time surely. (ὀρμάται μῶλιν, ἀλλ' ὅμως | πιστὸν τι τὸ θεῖον | σθένος.)

EURIPIDES, The Bacchantes, l. 882. (c. 410 B.C.)

God delays but does not forget. (ὁ θεὸς ἀργεῖ, ἀλλὰ δὲν ἀλησμονεῖ.)

ALEXANDER NEGRIS, Greek Proverbs. Quoting

a proverb of unknown date and origin. The Latin proverb is, "Habet Deus suas horas et moras" (God has his own times and his own delays), while the Spanish form is, "Dios consiente, pero no para siempre" (God permits, but not forever).

In the end comes Punishment on noiseless feet. (Sera tamen tacitis Poena venit pedibus.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 4. (19 B.C.)

The divine wrath is slow indeed in vengeance, but it makes up for its tardiness by the severity of the punishment. (Lento quidem gradu ad vindictam divina procedit ira, sed tarditatem supplicii gravitate compensat.)

VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Facta et Dicta Memorabilia. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 3. (C. A. D. 15)

Will not Jupiter call upon himself, think you? Do you imagine he has condoned everything because, when it thunders, the sacred fire rends an oak tree in twain sooner than you and your house? (At sese non clamo Iuppiter ipse? | ignovisse putas, quia, cum tonat, ocus illex | sulphure discutitur sacro quam tuque domusque?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 23. (C. A. D. 58)

The wrath of the gods may be great, but it assuredly is slow. (Ut sit magna, tamen certe lenta ira deorum est.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 100. (C. A. D. 120)

The angry gods have their feet shod with wool. (Dii irati laneos pedes habent.)

MACROBIUS, Saturnalia. Bk. i, ch. 8. (C. A. D.

400) They come silently and unperceived to exact vengeance. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 82. EMERSON, The Over-Soul, quotes as a proverb, "God comes to see us without bell."

Though God have iron hands which when they strike pay home, yet hath he leaden feet which are as slow to overtake a sinner.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 172. (1579)

Though these punishments fall not suddenly, yet certainly. . . . God hath leaden feet, but iron hands.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 214. (1629) In another place Adams says, "He will strike with iron hands, that came with leaden feet."

God stays long but strikes at last.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 19. (1659)
God cometh with leaden feet, but striketh with iron hands.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670)
And though circuitous and obscure,
The feet of Nemesis, how sure!

WILLIAM WATSON, Europe at the Play. (1906)
THE MILLS OF THE GODS GRIND SLOWLY, see under MILL.

<sup>1</sup>
Seat thyself on the arms of God.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. 22, l. 7; col. 23, l. 10. (c. 700 B.C.) Budge, tr.
The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms. (Subter brachia sempiterna.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxiii, 27. (c. 650 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup>
God can abide no man to be wiser than himself. (οὐ γὰρ ἐὰ φρονεῖν ὁ θεὸς μέγα ἄλλον ἢ ἑωυτόν.)

ARTABANUS, to Xerxes. (c. B.C. 470) See HERODOTUS, vii, 10. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12.

Gods should be wiser than mortal men. (σοφωτέρους γὰρ χρὴ θνητῶν εἶναι θεούς.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 120. (c. 428 B.C.)
Ouer God there is no Lord. (Supra Dio non è Signore.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

<sup>3</sup>
God writes straight with crooked lines.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Apothegm. (c. A.D. 400) A Portuguese proverb, quoted by Paul Claudel as the theme of his play, The Satin Slipper. (1931)

<sup>4</sup>
All that God does is for the best.

Babylonian Talmud: Bechoroth, fo. 60b. (c. 450)

<sup>5</sup>
God says to man, "If you come to my house, I will come to your house."

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 53a. (c. 450)
Who stands with God, God stands with him. (Chi sta con Dio, Iddio sta con lui.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 187. (1856) An Italian proverb. "Hear God and God will hear you" is an English variant.

God provides for him that trusteth.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 730. (1640)

<sup>6</sup>
God protects three sorts of persons, fools, children, and drunkards. (Dieu aide à trois sortes de personnes, aux fous, aux enfans, et aux ivrognes.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 63. (1814)

<sup>7</sup>
God with his finger strikes, and not his arme.

JOHN BODENHAM, Belvedere. (1600)

God strikes not with both hands, for to the sea he made heavens, and to rivers fords.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 317. (1640)
From the Spanish proverb, "No hiere Dios con dos manos."

God strikes with his finger, and not with all his arm.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1112.

Nor otherwise with the Spanish: God never wounds with both hands; . . . for He ever reserves one with which to bind up and heal.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 132. (1852)

<sup>8</sup>
It is the modest, not the presumptuous, inquirer who makes a real and safe progress in the discovery of divine truths. One follows Nature and Nature's God; that is, he follows God in his works and in his word.

LORD BOLINGBROKE, Letter to Mr. Pope. (c. 1730)

Slave to no sect, who takes no private road, But looks thro' Nature up to Nature's God.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 331. (1734)
The famous line inspired, probably, by Bolingbroke's letter.

And not from Nature up to Nature's God, But down from Nature's God look Nature through.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, Luther. (1828)

<sup>9</sup>
The porter calls upon God only when he is under the load.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 632. (1817) He never thinks of God except when he is suffering from misfortune.

He walks upon the highest part of the wall, and says, "For safety we trust in God."

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 755. He demands safety while exposing himself to danger.

<sup>10</sup>
God knows the truth, and let it rest there. (Dios sabe la verdad, y quédese aquí.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 47. (1605)

<sup>11</sup>
God who gives the wound gives the salve. (Dios que da la llaga da la medicina.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. ii, ch. 19. (1615)
See also under MEDICINE.

To whom God gives the task, he gives the wit. (Wem Gott gibt den Amt, dem gibt er auch Verstand.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 302. (1856) A German proverb.

<sup>12</sup>
May God hear it and sin be deaf. (Dios lo oiga y el pecado sea sordo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 58, 65. (1615)

<sup>13</sup>
Yet, pardee, god shal helpe us at the laste.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l. 1047 (c. 1380)

God be thyn help, I can no better seye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 630. (c. 1388)

<sup>14</sup>
He that loveth god kepeth his lawe and his word.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 6. (c. 1389)

For wel ye knowe, a lord in his houshold,
He hath nat every vessel al of gold;
Somme been of tree, and doon hir lord servyse.
God clepeth folk to him in sondry wyse.

CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 99.

1 Thou seest not God, nevertheless thou recognizest him from his works. (Deum non vides, tamen deum agnoscis ex operibus eius.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 28, sec. 70. (45 B.C.)

The constancy of the benefit of the years in their seasons argues a Deity.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 775. (1640) There is a Latin proverb, "Praesentemque refert quaelibet herba Deum" (And every herb reveals a present God).

Suppose I had found a watch upon the ground. . . . The mechanism being observed, . . . the inference we think is inevitable that the watch must have a maker.

WILLIAM PALEY, Natural Theology. Ch. 1. (1784)

The world embarrasses me, and I cannot think that this watch exists and has no Watchmaker. (Le monde m'embarrasse, et je ne puis pas songer que cette horloge existe et n'a pas d'Horloger.)

VOLTAIRE, Epigram. Both Paley and Voltaire probably derived the idea from NIEUWENTYT, The Religious Philosopher, translated into English from the Dutch in 1718.

2 Not God above gets all men's love.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 147. (1639)

RAY, p. 97. (1670) FULLER, No. 6105. (1732)

EVEN GOD CAN'T PLEASE EVERYONE, see under PLEASING.

3 I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase. (ἐγὼ ἐφύτευσα. Ἀπολλῶς ἐπότισεν, ἀλλὰ ὁ θεὸς ἡύξανεν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, iii, 6. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Ego plantavi, Apollo rigavit: sed Deus incrementum dedit."

4 God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform.

WILLIAM COWPER, Light Shining Out of Darkness. (1779)

God moves in a mysterious way.

H. C. BAILEY, Orphan Ann, p. 71. (1941)

Miss Emily murmured that God moved in a mysterious way.

CHRISTIE, The Moving Finger, p. 61. (1942)

God moves in a mysterious way his blunders to perform.

LODWICK, Running to Paradise, p. 294. (1943)

5 The Lord alone did lead him. (Dominus solus dux eius fuit.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxii, 12. (c. 650 B.C.)

6 The Lord is judge, and with him is no respect of persons. (Dominus iudex est, et non est apud illum gloria personae.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxv, 12. (c. 190 B.C.)

There is no respect of persons with God. (οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν προσωπολήψια παρὰ τῷ θεῷ.)

New Testament: Romans, ii, 11. (c. A. D. 57)

God is no respecter of persons. (οὐκ ἔστιν προσωπολήπτῃς ὁ θεός.)

New Testament: Acts, x, 34. (c. A. D. 65)

Vulgate is, "Non est personarum acceptor Deus."

To be no respecter of persons. To make no distinctions of rank or wealth.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: No. (1941)

7 Don't wear the image of God in a ring. (In anulo Dei figuram ne gestato.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 2. (1508)

Don't use the name of God lightly.

8 All things come from God. (πάντα δῶρα δαιμόνων.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 663. (c. 412 B.C.)

Steep is the path toward God. (αἰπεινὰ τοῖς μαντεῖα.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 739. (c. 419 B.C.)

God turns everything upside down. (θεὸς πάντ' ἀναστρέφει πάλιν.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 331. (c. 421 B.C.)

9 Whoso hath Gods for friends
Hath the best divination in his home.

(τοὺς θεοὺς ἔχων τις ἄν φίλους ἀρίστην μαντικὴν ἔχει δόμοις.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 759. (c. 412 B.C.)

To whom God wishes well, his house knows it. (A quien Dios quiere bien, la casa le sabe.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

Whom God loves, his House is savoury to him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5724. (1732)

10 [God] intervenes in matters grown too great,
But small things he lets pass and leaves to Fate. (ἀντρεται, | τὰ μικρὰ δ' εἰς τύχην ἀφείλεται.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 974 Nauck. (c. 450 B.C.) Helmbold, tr. Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 464A, 811D.

Let no god intervene unless a knot come worthy of such a deliverer. (Nec deus intersit, nisi dignus vindice nodus | incidit.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 191. (c. 20 B.C.)

Providence will never stoop so low as to bother with the life and death of trifles such as you. (Numquam sic cura deorum | se premet, ut vestrae morti vestraeque saluti | fata vacent.)

LUCAN, Civil War. Bk. v, l. 340. (c. A. D. 60)

The gods are careful about great things, but neglect small ones. (Magna di curant, parva neglegunt.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 66, sec. 167. (c. B. C. 45) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12.

God, who is a perfect craftsman in great things, is not less so in small things. (Deus ita artifex magnus in magnis, ut minor non sit in parvis.)

SAINT AUGUSTINE, De Civitate Dei. Bk. xi, ch. 22. (c. 425)

11 God said unto Moses, I am that I am. (Dixit Deus ad Moysen: Ego sum qui sum.)

Old Testament: Exodus, iii, 14. (c. 550 B.C.)

I am all that was or is or will be. (ἐγώ εἰμι πᾶν τὸ γεγονὸς καὶ ὄν καὶ ἐσόμενον.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Of Isis and Osiris. Sec. 354C. (c. A. D. 95) Quoting an inscription on a statue of Athena.

Thou art. (εἶ.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The E at Delphi. Sec. 394C. "An utterance," writes Plutarch, "addressed in awe and reverence to the god as existent through all eternity."

Tell them I AM, Jehovah said

To Moses; while earth heard in dread.

CHRISTOPHER SMART, Song to David. (c. 1771)

1 Have God and have all.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595)

He looseth nothing, that looseth not-God.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 36. (1640) From the French, "Il ne perd rien qui ne perd Dieu."

He loseth nothing, that keepeth God for his Friend.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1876. (1732)

2 It is little of God's might, to make a poore man a knight.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595)

3 God is not a cosmic bell-boy for whom we can press a button to get things.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, Prayer. (1933)

4 Heb Ddnw heb ddim, a Dnw, a digon. (Without God without ought, God and enough.)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

A noddo Duw, rhy nodder. (Assurance hath he doubly sure, who by his God is kept secure.)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

5 If a sparrow cannot fall without God's knowledge, how can an empire rise without His aid?

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, proposing that the sessions of the Constitutional Convention, May, 1787, be opened with prayer.

6 God, when he means to shave clear, chooses a razor with a sharp edge, and never sendeth a slug on a message that requireth haste.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State: The Life of Jehu. Bk. v, ch. 9. (1642) The Poles say, "God can shave without soap."

7 God gives whole Days to the Fortunate, and but some Hours to the Unhappy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1671. (1732)

God is always at Leisure to do good to those that ask it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1676.

God who made the world so wisely, as wisely governs it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1690.

8 Let him say what he will, Men have spoken well of God, before now.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3180. (1732)

And almost everyone, when age,
Disease, or sorrows strike him,

Inclines to think there is a God,
Or something very like Him.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Dipsychus. Pt. i, sc. 5. (1850)

9 To the gods all things are possible. (θεοὶ δὲ τε πάντα δύναται.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. x, l. 306. (c. 850 B. C.)

Is any thing too hard for the Lord? (Numquid Deo quidquam est difficile?)

Old Testament: Genesis, xviii, 14. (c. 550 B. C.)

When a god works, all is possible. (γένοιτο μὲντ' ἂν πᾶν θεοῦ τεχνωμένον.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 86. (c. 409 B. C.)

If thou knowest God, thou knowest that everything is possible for God to do. (εἰ θεὸν οἶσθα, | ἴσθ' ὅτι καὶ βέβαιαι δαίμονι πᾶν δυνατόν.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragments. Frag. 27. (c. 250 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, sec. 880F.

There is nothing which God cannot effect. (Nihil esse quod deus efficere non possit.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. iii, ch. 39, sec. 92. (45 B. C.)

To God nothing is impossible. (À Dieu rien soit impossible.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 42. (1552)

10 God will provide. (Dominus providebit.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xxii, 8. (c. 550 B. C.)

Until our child shall die, He who gave him teeth will send him bread.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 6, Apologue 8. (c. 1257)

God neuer sendth mouth but he sendth meate.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

God never made mouth but he made meat.

THOMAS BECON, A New Catechism, p. 602. (c. 1560) Cited as a proverb "no less true than common."

God never sends mouth but the meat with it.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 36. (c. 1595)

They say nature brings forth none but she provides for them.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Scornful Ladie. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1612)

There comes not a mouth into the world, but there's meat for't.

RICHARD BROME, New Academy. Act iv. (1658)

God never sends Mouths, but he sends Meat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1681. (1732)

As sure as ever God puts His children in the furnace, He will be in the furnace with them.

C. H. SPURGEON, Privileges of Trial. (1880)

Children are sometimes spoken of as "sent," and improvident parents excuse themselves by saying that "if God sends mouths, He will send food to fill them."

LORD AVEBURY, Use of Life. Ch. 12. (1894)

11 No one against God, except God himself. (Nemo contra Deum nisi Deus ipse.)

GOETHE, Autobiography. Ch. 19. (c. 1830)

Quoted as "that strange but striking proverb."

You can't fight God, I know the facts.

HORACE GREGORY, Advice. (1930)

<sup>1</sup>
To the greater glory of God. (Ad maiorem Dei gloriam.)

POPE GREGORY THE GREAT, Dialogues. Sec. 1. (c. 593) Adopted as the motto of the Jesuits, 1539. On every bottle of Benedictine liqueur appear the letters D.O.M., an abbreviation of their motto, "Deo optimo maximo" (To God, most good, most great).

<sup>2</sup>
The beginning of wisdom, is the feare of god.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 53. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>3</sup>
That which God kills, is better than that killed by man.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1869)

<sup>4</sup>
God complains not, but doth what is fitting.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 184. (1640)
The river past, and God forgotten.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 209. See under DANGER.

<sup>5</sup>
God comes to see without a bell.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 386. (1640)

God comes to visit us without a bell, viz. without noise.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 2. (1659)
"God came to visit him without a bell."—It intimates that a man has had some unexpected good fortune. It is the custom in Spain, when a person is dying, to carry the viaticum to the house, preceded by an attendant ringing a bell; . . . which gave rise to the proverb of God paying a visit.

JOHN COLLINS, Spanish Proverbs, p. 385. (1823)

<sup>6</sup>
In time comes he, whom God sends.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 399. (1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2831. (1732)

In time comes she whom God sends.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 51. (1670)

<sup>7</sup>
God is at the end, when we think he is furthest off it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 600. (1640)
God comes at last when we think he is furthest off.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 7. (1659) RAY, Proverbs, p. 11. (1670)

<sup>8</sup>
God, and Parents, and our Master, can never be requited.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 806. (1640)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670)

God, Parents, and Instructors, can never be requited.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

<sup>9</sup>
When God is made the master of a family, he orders the disorderly.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 981. (1640)

He that follows the Lord, hopes to go before.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 992.

<sup>10</sup>
God has his whips here to a twofold end,
The bad to punish, and the good t' amend.

ROBERT HERRICK, Whips. (1647)

God pardons those, who do through frailty sin;
But never those that persevere therein.

ROBERT HERRICK, Pardon.

<sup>11</sup>
Who hopeth in God's helpe, his helpe can not starte.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

God's help is neier nor the fair evin.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 36. (c. 1595) A variant is, "God's help is nearer than the door."

God's help is nearer than early rising.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34. (1620) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1685. (1732)

<sup>12</sup>
God is no botcher, syr, saide an other,
He shapeth all partes, as eche part maie fyttte other.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

Nature is no botcher.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 224. (1639)

What God made, he never mars.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 24. (1659)

What God does he does well. (Dieu fait bien ce qu'il fait.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ix, fab. 4. (1678) Repeated xii, 8, in slightly different form, "Dieu fit bien ce qu'il fit."

<sup>13</sup>
Here is God in th' ambrie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

An ambry is a pantry or cupboard.

There is God in the almery.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

<sup>14</sup>
God hath done his part: she hath a good face.

JOHN HEYWOOD, The Spider and the Flie, p. 4. (1556)

As the prouerbe is, "God hath done his part."

THOMAS HARMAN, A Caveat or Warening, p. 48. (1567)

God hath done his part in thee.

CHAPMAN and MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 2. (1605)

<sup>15</sup>
Serve God in thy calling, it is better than praying.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

Better God than gold.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16.

<sup>16</sup>
Who has God for his friend has the saints in his pocket.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 108. (1902) An Italian proverb. The French say, "Vaut mieux avoir affaire à Dieu qu'à ses saints" (Better to trust in God than in his saints); The Germans, "Wo Gott nicht hilft, da hilft kein Heiliger" (Where God does not help, no saint avails).

<sup>17</sup>
Trust ye in the Lord for ever. (Sperastis in Domino in saeculis aeternis.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxvi, 4. (c. 725 B.C.)

Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him. (Etiam si occiderit me, in ipso sperabo.)

Old Testament: Job, xlii, 15. (c. 350 B.C.)

In the Lord put I my trust. (In Domino confido.)
Old Testament: Psalms, xi, 1. (c. 250 B. C.)
 In thee, O Lord, do I put my trust. (In te Domine speravi.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxi, 1. (c. 250 B. C.)
 Trust I in my Master still,
 Even though He slay me.

J. G. WHITTIER, Barclay of Ury. St. 7. (1850)

1 Since the beginning of the world, men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him.

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiv, 4. (c. 725 B. C.)
 Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. (ἀ ὀφθαλμὸς οὐκ εἶδεν καὶ οὖς οὐκ ἤκουσεν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, ii, 9. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate version of the first phrase is, "Quod oculus non vidit, nec auris audivit."

2 One that feared God, and eschewed evil. (Timens Deum, et recedens a malo.)

Old Testament: Job, i, 1. (c. 350 B. C.)

3 The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord. (Dominus dedit, Dominus abstulit; . . . sit nomen Domini benedictum.)

Old Testament: Job, i, 21. (c. 350 B. C.)

Happy is the man whom God correcteth. (Beatus homo qui corripitur a Deo.)

Old Testament: Job, v, 17. (c. 350 B. C.)

5 No man hath seen God at any time. (θεὸν οὐδεὶς ὥρακεν πώποτε.)

New Testament: John, i, 18. (c. A. D. 110) The Vulgate is, "Deum nemo vidit umquam."

6 God is a spirit. (πνεῦμα ὁ θεός.)

New Testament: John, iv, 24. (c. A. D. 95) The Vulgate is, "Spiritus est Deus."

7 God is love. (ὁ θεὸς ἀγάπη ἐστίν.)

New Testament: I Epistle of John, iv, 16. (c. A. D. 95) The Vulgate is, "Deus caritas est."

God! Thou art love! I build my faith on that.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. v, l. 52. (1835)
 God, from a beautiful necessity, is love.

M. F. TUPPER, Of Immortality. (1844)

And man is hate, but God is love!

J. G. WHITTIER, The Chapel of the Hermits. St. 75. (1853)

One unquestioned text we read,
 All doubt beyond, all fear above;
 Nor crackling pile nor cursing creed
 Can burn or blot it: God is Love.

O. W. HOLMES, What We All Think. (1858)

God is Love, I dare say. But what a mischievous Devil Love is.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note Books: God Is Love. (a. 1902)

8 From thee, great God, we spring, to thee we tend,

Path, motive, guide, original, and end.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 7. (1750)
 Paraphrasing Boethius.

9 They are well guided that God guides.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 337. (1721)

10 The very impossibility in which I find myself to prove that God is not, discloses to me His existence. (L'impossibilité où je suis de prouver que Dieu n'est pas, me découvre son existence.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 16. (1688)

11 The workings of the Almighty have neither sound nor smell.

LIN YUTANG, The Wisdom of Confucius, p. 134. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

12 In great contests each party claims to act in accordance with the will of God. Both may be, and one must be, wrong. God cannot be for and against the same thing at the same time.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Memorandum, 30 Sept., 1862.

13 God works in moments. (En peu d'eure Dex labore.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 20.
 Citing a proverb of c. 1250. A more modern form is, "En peu d'heures Dieu labore."
 The rendering is Emerson's.

14 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men. (δόξα ἐν ὑψίστοις θεῷ καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς εἰρήνη ἐν ἀνθρώποις εὐδοκίας.)

New Testament: Luke, ii, 13, 14. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Gloria in altissimis Deo, et in terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis."

We praise thee, O Lord. (Te Deum laudamus.)

ST. AMBROSE (?), Te Deum Laudamus. (c. 380) Tradition assigns this famous hymn to St. Ambrose, but without proof.

All people that on earth do dwell,
 Sing to the Lord with cheerful voice;
 Him serve with fear, His praise forth tell,
 Come ye before Him, and rejoice.

WILLIAM KETHE, Daye's Psalter. (1560) This is Old Hundredth, usually, and wrongly, called Old Hundred, a metrical rendering of the hundredth Psalms, "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands," etc. SHAKESPEARE, in The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 63 (1601) mentions it, "They do no more adhere and keep place together than the Hundredth Psalm to the tune of 'Green Sleeves.'" Praise God from whom all Blessings flow.

THOMAS KEN, Morning and Evening Hymn. (1695)

God be with you till we meet again.

JEREMIAH EAMES RANKIN, Mispah. First sung in 1882; popularized by Moody and Sankey.

<sup>1</sup> Whatever may be God's future, we cannot forget His past.

W. H. MALLOCK, Is Life Worth Living? (1879)

<sup>2</sup> Every one is in a small way the image of God. (Exemplumque dei quisque est in imagine parva.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Pt. iv, l. 895. (c. 25 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Just are the ways of God,
And justifiable to Men.

JOHN MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 293. (1671)

<sup>4</sup> Your God is a good paymaster.

MOHAMMED, Koran, ii, 202. (c. 622)

The servant of God hath a good master.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Maître. (1611)

He who serves God, serves a good master.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 138. (1852)

<sup>5</sup> Alif Lam Mim. Allah, there is no god but He, the Living, the Eternal.

MOHAMMED, The Koran. Surah iii, sec. 1. (c. 622) Bell, tr. The first clause of the Mohammedan confession of faith is "La illah illa allah" (There is no god but God).

There is no god but God!

BYRON, Child Harold. Canto ii, st. 59. (1812)

All the thousands of gods are but one God. (Ch'ien shên wan shên tu shih yi shên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2367. (1875)

<sup>6</sup> There is no Patron for mankind save God.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xiii, 11. (c. 622)

<sup>7</sup> They try to deceive Allah, but they deceive only themselves without knowing it.

MOHAMMED, The Koran. Surah ii, sec. 7. (c. 622) Bell, tr.

We must not make a fool of God, as the saying is. (Il ne faut point faire barbe de foarre à Dieu, comme on dict.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580) Montaigne is quoting an old proverb, sometimes given as "lui faire barbe de paille."

God isn't a dupe. (Iupiter n'et pas dupe.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 1. (1668) You can't fool God.

You've got to git up airy

If you want to take in God.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 1. (1848)

He who thinks to deceive God has already deceived himself.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 137. (1902)

<sup>8</sup> What hath God wrought!

Old Testament: Numbers, xxiii, 23. Quoted by S. F. B. Morse in first message over the electric telegraph from Supreme Court room in the Capitol at Washington to his partner, Alfred Vail, in Baltimore, 24 May, 1844.

<sup>9</sup> There is a God within us, and intercourse with heaven. (Est deus in nobis: et sunt commercia caeli.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 549. (c. 1 B. C.)

Milton's "Looks commercing with the skies" (Il Penseroso, l. 39) is said to be derived from this line.

There is a god within us, and we glow when he stirs us. (Est deus in nobis: agitante calescimus illo.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. vi, l. 5. (c. A. D. 8)

<sup>10</sup> If God be pleased, I can not be wretched. (Placato possum non miser esse deo.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 3, l. 40. (c. A. D. 9)

Let that please man which has pleased God. (Placeat homini, quicquid deo placuit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiv, sec. 20. (a. A. D. 64)

<sup>11</sup> More powerful than human strength is the wrath of a god. (Plus valet humanis viribus ira dei.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. xii, l. 14. (c. A. D. 9)

And one of the four beasts gave unto the seven angels seven golden vials full of the wrath of God. (ἑνὴν τετράων χυρσῶν γεμούσας τοῦ θεοῦ.)

New Testament: Revelation, xv, 7. (c. A. D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Septem phialas aureas, plenas iracundiae Dei."

And I heard a great voice out of the temple saying to the seven angels, Go your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

New Testament: Revelation, xvi, 1. (c. A. D. 90)

God gives his wrath by weight, and without weight his mercy.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1113. (1650)

God giveth his Wrath by Weight, but his Mercy without Measure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1672. (1732)

See also under MERCY

<sup>12</sup> Never despayre, man, God is there as he was.

JEHAN PALSgrave, La Langue Françoise, p. 519. (1530)

Take no thought in no case, God is where he was.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

God is where he was, he hath called me home.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 12. (1602)

God is where he was. Spoken to encourage people in any distress.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 147. (1678)

God's in his heaven.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes: Morning. (1841)

<sup>13</sup> God himself is the help of the helpless.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 4. (1842)

<sup>14</sup> Tell me, priests: of what use is gold inside the sanctuary? (Dicite, pontifices: in sancto quid facit aurum?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 69. (c. A. D. 58)

He that serves God for money, will serve the devil for better wages.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables. Fab. 105. (1692) Referred to as "the old saying." The Germans say, "Kupfernes Geld, kupferne Seelmass" (Copper money, copper soul-mass).

A powerful god has fat priests. (Shên ling muao chu fei.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2374. (1875)

Wherever you find a God you'll find somebody waiting to take charge of the burnt offerings.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), He Also Serves. (1909)

<sup>1</sup> Man, with his human mind, is not able to search out the counsels of the gods. (οὐ γὰρ ἔσθ' ὅπως τὰ θεῶν βουλευμάτων ἐρευνάσει βροτέα φρενί.)

PINDAR, Dithyrambs. Frag. 61, Sandys. (c. 480 B. C.) See STOBÆUS, Anthology, ii, 4 Wachsmuth.

Canst thou by searching find out God? (Forsitan vestigia Dei comprehendes?)

Old Testament: Job, xi, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

Ask not if gods exist or are Heaven's kings: As thou art mortal, think of mortal things. (An di sint caelumque regant, ne quaere doceri: cum sis mortalis, quae sunt mortalia cura.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 2. (c. 175 B. C.)

What God intendeth seek not to divine: His plans for thee require no aid of thine. (Quid deus intendat, noli perquirere sorte: quid statuat de te, sine te deliberat ille.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 12.

It is more religious and more reverent to believe in the works of the Deity than to comprehend them. (Sanctiusque ac reverentius visum de actis deorum credere quam scire.)

TACITUS, Germania. Sec. 34. (A. D. 98)

God is best known in not knowing Him. (Deus scitur melius nesciendo.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Ordine. Pt. ii, sec. 16. (c. 425)

I thought ay wel how that it sholde be! Men sholde nat knowe of goddes privetee.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale. l. 267. (c. 1386)

Dangerous it were for the feeble brain of man to wade far into the doings of the Most High.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiastical Politie. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 3. (1594)

It were better to have no opinion of God at all, then such an opinion as is unworthy of him.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition. (1612)

This is an echo of a sentence in his chapter on superstition in De Augmentis Scientiarum, "Praestat nullam habere de dis opinionem, quam contumeliosam."

God is above the sphere of our esteem, And is the best known, not defining Him.

ROBERT HERRICK, What God Is. (1647)

<sup>2</sup> If any man hopes, in whatever he does, to escape the eye of God, he is grievously wrong. (εἰ δὲ θεὸν ἀνὴρ τις ἑλπεταί τι λαθόμεν ἔρδων, ἀμαρτάνει.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode i, l. 64. (476 B. C.)

There is indeed a God who hears and sees what-e'er we do. (Est profecto deus, qui, quae nos gerimus, auditque et videt.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 313. (c. 200 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> He was a wise man who invented God. (σοφὸς ἦν τις, ὃς τὸ θεῖον εἰσηγήσατο.)

PLATO (?), Sisyphus. (c. 375 B. C.) Although this dialogue is included in some editions of Plato, it is generally thought to be spurious. It has been attributed to Aeschines and to Euripides.

If God were not a necessary being of himself, he might almost seem to have been made on purpose for the use and benefit of man. (Dei immortales ad usum hominum fabricati paene videntur.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 4. (45 B. C.) This is Archbishop Tillotson's rendering. (See Works, vol. i, p. 696, sermon 93. c. 1690) However the context does not entirely support it. Rackham's rendering is, "They [certain philosophers] adduce a number of things which are of such a nature as almost to appear to have been constructed by the immortal gods for the use of man," arguing that the gods take an active interest in the affairs of earth.

If God did not exist, it would be necessary to invent him. (Si Dieu n'existait pas, il faudrait l'inventer.)

VOLTAIRE, Épître à M. Saurin, 10 Nov. 1770.

Voltaire was very proud of this line. "Though I am seldom satisfied with my lines," he wrote to Frederick the Great, "I must confess that I feel for this one the tenderness of a father."

If there were no Bagration, we should have to manufacture one—it faudrait l'inventer.

TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. ii, pt. i, ch. 2. (1865) Dole, tr. Parodying Voltaire's wit-ticism.

You know, dear boy, there was an old sinner in the eighteenth century who declared that if there were no God he would have to be invented. And man has actually invented God. And what's strange, . . . is not that God should really exist; the marvel is that such an idea, the idea of the necessity of God, could enter the head of such a savage, vicious beast as man. . . . As for me, I've long resolved not to think whether man created God or God man.

FEODOR DOSTOEVSKY, The Brothers Karamazov. Bk. v, ch. 3. (1880)

If there were no God, said the eighteenth century Deist, it would be necessary to invent Him.

BERNARD SHAW, The Revolutionist's Handbook. Sec. 1. (1903)

<sup>4</sup> God willing. (ἐὰν θεὸς θέλῃ.)

PLATO, Laches. Sec. 201C. (c. 375 B. C.)

God willing. (Volente deo.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 303. (19 B. C.)

God decreed it otherwise. (Dis aliter visum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 428. (19 B. C.)

The gods so willed it. (Sic di voluistis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 50. (19 B. C.) "Deus id vult" (God wills it) was the crusaders' war-cry before Jerusalem. There are a number of Latin proverbial phrases somewhat similar to this: "Deo iuvante" (God helping); "Deo favente" (God favoring); "Dominus vobiscum" (The Lord be with you); "Domine, dirige nos" (Lord, direct us).

<sup>1</sup> It is right to deem light and vision sunlight, but never to think that they are the sun.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. vi, sec. 509A. (c. 375 B.C.) It is the essence of this discussion, in secs. 506-510, which has been summed up in the aphorism, "God is truth and light his shadow," usually ascribed to Plato.

The Lord is my light. (Dominus illuminatio mea.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxvii, 1. (c. 250 B.C.) God is a light that is never darkened.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, emb. 14. (1635)

<sup>2</sup> God is a geometrician. (ὁ θεὸς γεωμέτρης.)

PLATO. (c. 375 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Symposium, as a traditional saying of Plato. God is like a skillful Geometrician, who, when more easily and with one stroke of his Compass he might describe or divide a right line, had yet rather do this in a circle or longer way, according to the constituted and fore-laid principles of his Art.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 16. (1643)

God acts the part of a Geometrician. . . . His government of the world is no less exact than his creation of it.

JOHN NORRIS, Practical Discourses. Vol. ii, p. 228. (1691)

<sup>3</sup> When the gods are propitious to a man, they throw money in his way. (Quoi homini di sunt propitii, lucrum ei profecto obiciunt.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 532. (c. 200 B.C.)

God provides for him that trusteth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

The French say, "Dieu n'oublie pas les siens" (God does not forget his own); the Germans, "Gott gibt's den Seinigen in Schläfe" (God gives to his own in their sleep).

Whom God loves, his bitch brings forth pigs.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Spanish, p. 45. (1678)

<sup>4</sup> God is brave hope, not cowardly excuse. (ἀρετὴς γὰρ ἐλπίς ὁ θεὸς ἐστίν, οὐ δειλίας πρόφασις.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia. Sec. 169C. (c. A.D. 95)

<sup>5</sup> The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge. (Timor Domini principium sapientiae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, i, 7. (c. 350 B.C.)

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. (Principium sapientiae timor Domini.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, ix, 10.

The fear of the Lord, that is wisdom. (Timor Domini, ipsa est sapientia.)

Old Testament: Job, xxviii, 28.

The fear of the Lord prolongeth days. (Timor Domini apponet dies.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 27.

In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence. (In timore Domini fiducia fortitudinis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 26.

The fear of the Lord is the instruction of wisdom. (Timor Domini, disciplina sapientiae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 33.

The fear of the Lord tendeth to life. (Timor Domini ad vitam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 23.

Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. (Finem loquendi pariter omnes audiamus. Deum time, et mandata eius observa: hoc est enim omnis homo.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 13. (c. 250 B.C.)

The fear of the Lord maketh a merry heart, and giveth joy, and gladness, and a long life. . . . To fear the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), i, 12, 14. (c. 190 B.C.)

Put the fear of God into them. (Illis Iupiter iratus esset.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A.D. 60)

Fear God. Honour the king. (τὸν θεὸν φοβέσθε, τὸν βασιλέα τιμᾶτε.)

New Testament: I Peter, ii, 17. (c. A.D. 63)

Had I feared the Most High God as thou dost the Sultan, I should have been of the number of the just.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 1, Apologue 29. (c. 1258)

The beginning of wisdom is fear of God. (El principio de la sabiduría, el temor de Dios.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 20. (1615)

The French say, "Il a bien appris qui a appris à craindre Dieu" (He has learned well who has learned to fear God).

I fear God, yet am not afraid of him.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Bk. i, sec. 52. (1643)

I fear God, my dear Abner, and I have no other fear. (Je crains Dieu, cher Abner, et n'ai point d'autre crainte.)

RACINE, Athalie. Act i, sc. 1. (1691)

Fear God, and your Enemies will fear you.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

Henceforth the majesty of God revere;

Fear Him, and you have nothing else to fear.

JAMES FORDYCE, To a Gentleman Who Apologized for Swearing. (1765)

Fear God, and take your own part.

GEORGE BORROW, The Romany Rye. Ch. 16. (1857)

<sup>6</sup> Whom the Lord loveth he correcteth. (Quem enim diligit Dominus, corripit.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, iii, 12. (c. 250 B.C.)

Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth. (ὃν γὰρ ἀγαπᾷ Κύριος παιδεύει.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xii, 6. (c. A.D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Quem enim diligit Dominus, castigat."

Heaven is not always angry when he strikes.

But most chastises those whom most he likes.

JOHN POMFRET, Verses to a Friend Under Affliction, l. 89. (c. 1700)

<sup>7</sup> The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. (Dixit insipiens in corde suo: Non est Deus.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xiv, 1. (c. 250 B.C.)

They said in their heart, that there is no God.

Apocrypha: II Esdras, viii, 58. (c. A. D. 90)

If there be a God, from whence proceed so many evils? And if there be no God, from whence cometh any good? (Si quidem deus est, unde mala? Bona vero unde, si non est?)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. i, ch. iv, l. 105. (A. D. 524)

<sup>1</sup> God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. (Deus noster refugium, et virtus: adiutor in tribulationibus.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xli, 1. (c. 450 B. C.)

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress. (Dicet Domino: Susceptor meus es tu, et refugium meum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xci, 2. (c. 450 B. C.)

The name of the Lord is a strong tower. (Turris fortissima, nomen Domini.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 10. (c. 250 B. C.)
A mighty fortress is our God. (Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Ein Feste Burg. (c. 1530)
God is our fortress.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, ii, 1, 26. (1591)

<sup>2</sup> In God have I put my trust. (In Deo speravi.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lvi, 11. (c. 250 B. C.)

Trust in the living God. (ἐλπικένοι . . . ἐπὶ θεῷ τῷ παρόντι.)

New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 17. (c. A. D. 62)

The Vulgate is, "Sperare in Deo vivo."

And this be our motto, "In God is our trust."

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY, The Star-Spangled Banner. (1814)

<sup>3</sup> I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. (Elegi abiectus esse in domo Dei mei: magis quam habitare in tabernaculis peccatorum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxxiv, 10. (c. 300 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O Lord. Lord, hear my voice. (De profundis clamavi ad te, Domine: Domine exaudi vocem meam.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxx, 1, 2. (c. 250 B. C.)

De Profundis is the title of Oscar Wilde's last poem, written after his imprisonment and published five years after his death.

<sup>5</sup> It is granted to few to comprehend what God gives. (Paucorum est intellegere quid donet deus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 528. (c. 43 B. C.)
God alone brings punishment, though many intend it. (Unus deus poenam affert, multi cogitant.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 702.

<sup>6</sup> [God] whose centre is everywhere, and whose circumference nowhere in the universe. (Le centre de laquelle est en chacun lieu de l'univers, le circumference point.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1545)

"According to the doctrine of Hermes Trismegistus," Rabelais adds.

That intellectual sphere, whose center is everywhere, and circumference nowhere, whom we call God. (Ceste sphere intellectuelle, de laquelle en tous lieux est le centre, & n'a en lieu aucun circonference, que nous appellons Dieu.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 47. (1552)

It is an infinite sphere whose center is everywhere, its circumference nowhere. (C'est une sphere infinie dont le centre est partout, la circonference nulle part.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 72. (c. 1660) Referring to the universe.

The nature of God is a circle whose center is everywhere and its circumference nowhere.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles. (1841) Quoting St. Augustine.

<sup>7</sup> Beware of him whom God hath marked.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347. (1678)

Take heed of him that God has mark'd.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 113. (1710)

<sup>8</sup> If God be for us, who can be against us? (εἰ ὁ θεὸς ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, τίς κατ' ἡμῶν;)

New Testament: Romans, viii, 31. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Si Deus pro nobis, quis contra nos?" Marvin notes that the reverse of this question is sometimes heard in Western India, when human skill does not avail to save life: "If God be against us, who can be for us?" or, "If God kill, who can save?" Henderson cites a Latin proverb, "Quorsum opus amicis, si modo faveat Deus" (We need no friends, if God smiles).

He whom God aideth need never grieve nor worry.

Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 22b. (c. 450)

The French say, "À qui Dieu ayde nul ne peut nuire" (He whom God aids, no one can injure).

If Allah help you, no one can overcome you.

MOHAMMED, Koran. Surah iii, sc. 154. (c. 622)

Therfore is seide proverbe, that god will haue saued, no man may distroye.

UNKNOWN, Merlin, 524. (c. 1450)

Seldam is the house pore there God is styward.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wiif Taughte Hir Doughtir, l. 14. (c. 1460)

He whom God wyll haue kept, may not be peryshed.

CAXTON, tr., Blanchardyn, p. 155. (1489)

It is a commune prouerbe sayde, "whome that god wyll ayde, no man can hurt."

BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, cxxx, 480. (c. 1530)

Whom God will help none can hinder.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 357. (1721)

GRACE OF GOD GEAR ENOUGH, see under GRACE

<sup>9</sup> Call it nature, fate, fortune; all these things are names of the one and selfsame God. (Naturam voca, fatum, fortunam; omnia eiusdem dei nomina sunt.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 54)

1 Nothing is void of God. (Nihil ab illo vacat.)
SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 54)
Whatever we see is God, and wherever we go.
(Iuppiter est, quodcumque vides, quodcumque moveris.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 580. (c. A. D.
60) The summation of the doctrine of Pantheism.

God is near you, he is with you, he is within you.
(Prope est a te deus, tecum est, intus est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xli, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 64)
If God is not in us, He never existed. (Si Dieu n'est pas dans nous, il n'exista jamais.)

VOLTAIRE, La Loi Naturelle: Exordium. (c. 1754)
There is no difference between myself and Buddha. (Shên fo wu pieh.)

J. L. DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 227.
(1872) A Buddhist proverb. God is within me.

Why burn incense? You yourself are the sanctuary. (Shên shih tao 'chang.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 227.
Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.

TENNYSON, The Higher Pantheism, l. 11. (1869)

2 God never repents his first decision. (Nec umquam primi consilii deos paenitet.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vi, sec. 23. (c. A. D. 54)

He who knows God reverences him. (Deum colit qui novit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, sec. 48. (c. A. D. 65)

4 God save the mark.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 3, 56. (1597)

God bless the mark.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

5 Beware of the man whose god is in the skies.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

6 Only God has the medicines for all ills. (Zeûs πάντων αὐτῶν φάρμακα μόνος ἔχει.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 100. (c. 475
B. C.) Quoted by STOBÆUS, i, 28.

7 God will I ever hold for my protector. (θεὸν οὐ λήσω ποτὲ προστάτην ἰσχυῶν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 882. (c. 409 B. C.)

8 I am as God made me.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

9 Of all things the most ancient is God, for he is uncreated. (πρεσβύτατον τῶν ὄντων θεός ἀγέννητον γάρ.)

THALES, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIO-
GENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Bk. i, sec. 35. Also,
PLUTARCH, Moralia, sec. 153E.

10 The proverb is true that says, "One may live without father or mother, but one cannot live without God."

LEO TOLSTOY, What Men Live By. (c. 1885)

11 When God loathes aught, men presently loathe it too. (Wenn Gott ein Ding verdrœuft, so verdrœuft es auch bald die Menschen.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p.
122. (1853)

Oft have I heard, and now believe it true,
Whom man delights in, God delights in too.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination. (1875) Quoting Pons Capdueil.

12 No leaf moves, but God wills it. (No se mou la fulla, que Deu no ha vulla.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p.
124. (1855) A Catalan proverb.

13 He is indeed poor whom God hates. (Celuy est bien pauvre que Dieu hait.)

J. DE LA VEPRIE, Proverbes Communs. (c. 1550)
The French also say, "Celui est bien riche que Dieu aime" (He is indeed rich whom God loves), and have a number of the same sort: "Celui est bien gardé qui de Dieu est gardé" (He is well guarded who is guarded by God); "Il est bien vengé qui Dieu venge" (He is well avenged whom God avenges), and so on.

They are poor whom God hates.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 162. (1633)

There's none poor but such as God hates.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)
RAY, English Proverbs. (1670)

He's poor indeed, whom God hates.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2470. (1732)

14 Yield to God. (Cede deo.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 467. (19 B. C.)

Where God and hard fortune call us, let us follow.
(Quo deus, et quo dura vocat Fortuna, sequa-mur.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 677. (19 B. C.)

15 God is on our side. (Iuppiter hac stat.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 565. (19 B. C.)

God is with us. (Nobiscum Deus.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, viii, 10. (c. 725 B. C.)

The German, of course, is "Gott mit uns."

The Lord is on my side. (Dominus mihi adiutor.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxviii, 6. (c. 250 B. C.)

Quoted by ST. JEROME, Epistles, i, 12.

16 God is a big beneficent trustee,
Who asks well-bred professors in to tea.

EDMUND WILSON, Disloyal Lines to an Alumnus. (1943)

17 A God all mercy is a God unjust.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. iv, l. 233. (1742)

God is justice and the only justice is of God. The Arab will tell you that.

HEBERDEN, Lobster Pick Murder, p. 91. (1941)

18 This only is to be a God, to help men.

JOHN WILSON, tr., The Praise of Folly. Sec. 7.
(1668)

He is a god that helps a man.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Colloquies, p. 517. (1725)

<sup>1</sup> God is from the beginning, and He hath been from the beginning.

UNKNOWN, Book of the Dead. (c. 4000 B.C.)

See BRUGSCH, Religion und Mythologie, p. 96.

God giveth life to man; He breatheth the breath of life into his nostrils.

UNKNOWN, Book of the Dead. See BRUGSCH, p. 97.

God is the creator of the heavens, and the earth, and of the deep.

UNKNOWN, Book of the Dead. See BRUGSCH, p. 98.

<sup>2</sup> God was better pleased with adverbs than with nouns; and more approved what was done well and lawfully than what was otherwise good.

UNKNOWN, Complete History of England. Vol. ii, p. 502. (1570)

God loveth adverbs; and cares not how good, but how well.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Holy Observations. Sec. 18. (1607)

This man not only liues but liues well, remembering always the old adage, that God is the rewarder of aduerbes, not of nownes.

JOHN FORD, The Line of Life, p. 64. (1620)

<sup>3</sup> There came on which sayde yt god was a good man.

UNKNOWN, Hundred Merry Tales. No. 85, p. 140. (1526)

He will say that God is a good man.

R. WEVER, Lusty Iuventus. (c. 1565)

Well, God's a good man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 5, 39. (1598)

It is enough for mee to know, that God is a good man.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Works (Grosart), i, 79. (1646)

II—God Helps Those Who Help Themselves

<sup>4</sup> To the man who himself strives earnestly, God also lends a helping hand. (ἀλλ' ὅταν σπεύδῃ τις αὐτός, ὡς θεὸς συνάπτειται.)

AESCHYLUS, Persae, l. 742. (472 B.C.)

God loves to help him who tries to help himself. (φιλεῖ δὲ τῷ κάμνοντι συσπεύδειν θεός.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 223, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) STOBÆUS, Anthology, iii, 29, 31.

<sup>5</sup> If thou wilt lift the load, I will lift it too.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. (c. 450)

<sup>6</sup> God doth helpe those in their affaires, which are industrious.

JOHN BARET, An Alvearie, i, 136. (1580)

<sup>7</sup> In awaiting water from heaven, don't stop irrigating. (Por agua del cielo, no dejes tu riego.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 277. (1856) A Spanish proverb. A similar one is, "A Dios rogando, y con el mazo dando" (Pray God, but keep on knocking with your mallet). The French say, "Dieu ne nous point bâti de ponts, mais il nous donne des mains" (God never builds us bridges, but he gives us hands); the Germans, "Hilft euch selbst, so hilft euch Gott" (As each helps himself, so God helps each), or "Gott hilft dem Fleiss" (God helps the industrious), or "Gott giebt die Kuh, aber nicht das Seil dazu" (God gives the cow, but not the rope for it). "God gives the milk but not the pail" is an English variant.

<sup>8</sup> God helps everyone with what is his own. (Ayude Dios con le suyo a cada uno.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch. 26. (1615)

Another Spanish proverb is, "A quien ma-druga, Dios le ayuda" (God helps those who rise early in the morning).

<sup>9</sup> Do not lie in a ditch, and say God help me; use the lawful tools he hath lent thee.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, May-Day. Act i, sc. 1. (1611)

Don't lie still and cry God help you.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 94. (1710)

We must not lie down, and cry, God help us.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5449. (1732)

There's no good in lying down and crying "God help us!"

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 7. (1869)

<sup>10</sup> Begin to helpe thy selfe, and God will helpe thee.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Ourdi. (1611)

<sup>11</sup> God helps them that help help themselves.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

Heaven helps those who help themselves.

SAMUEL WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 21. (1941)

The pitiless reply still is that God helps those who help themselves.

SHAW, Back to Methusaleh: Preface. (1921)

The Joneses hold Jehovah helps

The ones that help themselves.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Go On, You Scintillate. (1940)

The Lord looks out for those who look out for themselves.

W. T. BALLARD, Say Yes to Murder, p. 197. (1942)

<sup>12</sup> God reaches us good things, by our own Hands.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1683. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> Help thyself, and God will help thee.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

<sup>14</sup> But can thim that helps others help themselves?

RUDYARD KIPLING. Quoted by O. HENRY, Helping the Other Fellow, 1908; who adds, "If every man could do as much for himself as he can for others, every country in the world would be holding millenniums instead of centennials."

1 Help yourself, heaven will help you. (Aide-toi, le ciel t'aidera.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Chartier Embourbé. Bk. vi, fab. 18. (1668) Or, "Aide toi, dieu t'aidera." The Italians say, "Chi s'aiuta, Dio l'aiuta"; the Russians, "Pray to God, but row to shore." There is a longer old French proverb, "À qui se lève matin Dieu aide et prête sa main" (To him who rises early in the morning, God gives help and lends his hand). The Spanish form is, "Quien se muda, Dios le ayuda" (To him who amends, God help lends).

Help thyself, and God will help thee.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 539. (1640)

2 Even God lends a hand to honest boldness. (τόλημ δικάια καὶ θεὸς συλλαμβάνει.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 572K. (c.300 B. C.)

3 God assisteth only him who assisteth Him.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xxii, 40. (c. 622) Naish, tr. Another saying is attributed to Mohammed which drives in the lesson that God helps only those who help themselves. He heard one of his followers say, "I will loose my camel and commit it to God." "Friend," said Mohammed, "lie thy camel and commit it to God." See TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 98.

4 To complete the design of the Gods we have to put a stitch here and there.

GEORGE MOORE, Aphrodite in Aulis, p.28. (1930)

5 Use your own hand instead of calling upon fortune. (τὰν χεῖρα ποτιφέροντα τὰν τύχην καλεῖν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Customs of the Spartans, 239A. (c. A. D. 95) Quoting an ancient proverb.

6 Sallust makes M. Portius Cato say that the help of the Gods is not obtained by idle vows and womanish complaints. (En Saluste, l'ayde (dist M. Portius Cato) des Dieux n'est impetré par veuz ocieux, par lamentations muliebres.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 23. (1548)

7 Get thy spindle and thy distaff ready and God will send thee flax.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670)

8 God help us indeed! Well, why not? We help ourselves.

H. J. SMITH, Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh. Act i. (1911)

9 God cannot give us any other than self-help.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 13 Oct., 1840.

I am not in haste to help men more than God is. If they will not help themselves, shall I become their abettor?

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 21 Jan., 1841.

10 God is a good worker, but he loves to be helped.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 98. (1853) A Basque proverb.

11 God sends every bird its food, but He does not throw it into the nest.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 484. (1940)

12 The gods help the doers. (Dii facientes adiuvant.)

VARRO, De Re Rustica. Bk. i. (c. 50 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 17.

13 Call Minerva to aid, but bestir thyself. (σὺν Ἀθηνῇ καὶ χεῖρα κίνη.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, (c. A. D. 100)

14 The whole trouble is that we won't let God help us.

MACDONALD, Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 27. (1877)

III—God Tempers the Wind to the Shorn Lamb

15 These terms, God measures the cold to the shorn sheep, are the correct terms of the proverb. It is true that it is also put in two other ways, of which one is, God gives the cold according to the dress. (Ces termes, Dieu mesure le froid à la brebis tondue, sont les propres termes du proverbe. Vray est qu'on le dit encore en deux autres sortes: dont l'une est, Dieu donne le froid selon la robe.)

HENRI ESTIENNE, Les Prémices, p. 47. (1594)

To a close shorn sheep, God gives wind by measure.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 866. (1640) She . . . had travell'd over all Lombardy without money—and through the flinty roads of Savoy without shoes—how she had borne it, and how she had got supported, she could not tell—but God tempers the wind, said Maria, to the shorn lamb. Shorn indeed! and to the quick, said I.

LAURENCE STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: Maria. Ch. 8. (1768) This is the form in which, in English, the proverb is most familiar, and it is undoubtedly Sterne's own, though of course it is a rendering of the French form. A great many people believe wrongly that it is from the Bible.

God help her, and temper the rough wind to the lamb!

LORD LYTTON, Rienzi. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1835)

Although we cannot turn away the wind, we can soften it; we can temper it, if I may say so, to the shorn lambs.

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 56. (1841) How true it is that "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," or in other words, that he renders the worst of human conditions tolerable.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Miss Mary Speed, 27 Sept., 1841.

Science tempers the educational wind to the shorn lamb and the shivering ape.

EARNEST A. HOOTEN, Why Men Behave Like Apes and Vice Versa, p. 5. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> God sendth colde after clothes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1687. (1732)

God sends men cauld as they have clothes to.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 34. (c. 1595) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 113, turns this around, "God sends men cloth, according to their cold," and adds, "God supports and supplies men according to their circumstances."

God sends me the cold according to my cloak. (Dieu me donne le froid selon la robe.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6. (1595) The usual French form of the proverb is, "God sends the cold according to the cloth" (Dieu donne le froid selon le drap). The Spaniards have the same proverb, "Cada cual siente el frio como anda vestido," or "Dios da el frio conforme a la ropa." The Italians say, "Dio manda il freddo secondo i panni." The Germans put it a little differently, "Gott giebt die Schultern nach der Bürde" (God gives the shoulder according to the burden), the English form being, "God suits the back to the burden."

God sends men cold according to their cloath; viz. afflictions according to their faith.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Dieu. (1611)

God sends cold according to clothes.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 34. (1640)

<sup>2</sup> God helps the badly clothed. (Dieu aide les mals vestus.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550)

<sup>3</sup> God moderates all things to his pleasure. (Dieu modere tout à son plaisir.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1532)

<sup>4</sup> God builds the nest of the blind bird, says the Turkish proverb.

UNKNOWN, The Spectator (London), 2 Jan., 1909, p. 12/2.

IV—Man Proposes, God Disposes

<sup>5</sup> The words which men say are one thing; the things which God doeth are another.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xix, l. 16. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.

The tongue of a man is the rudder of a boat, (but) the Universal Lord is its pilot.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xx, l. 5.

A man's heart deviseth his way: but the Lord directeth his steps. (Cor hominis disponit viam suam: sed Domini est dirigere gressus eius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 9. (c. 350 B.C.)

The mind is hopeful; success is in God's hands. (Sperat quidem animus: quo evenat dis in manu.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 144. (c. 190 B.C.)

Man intends one thing, Fate another. (Homo semper aliud, Fortuna aliud cogitat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 253. (c. 43 B.C.) It is otherwise decreed by the gods. (Dis aliter visum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 428. (19 B.C.)

We do nothing without the consent of God. (Nil facimus non sponte Dei.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 574. (c. A.D. 60)

<sup>6</sup> That which we expected is not accomplished, While for the unexpected God finds out a way.

(καὶ τὰ δοκηθέντ' οὐκ ἐτελέσθη, τῶν δ' ἀδοκήτων πόρον εὔρε θεός.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 1286. (c. 430 B.C.)

This ending is repeated in The Bacchae, Medea, and Alceste.

By many forms of artifice the gods

Defeat our plans, for they are stronger far.

(πολλαῖσι μορφαῖς οἱ θεοὶ σοφισμάτων σφάλλουσιν ἡμᾶς κρείσσονες πεφυκότες.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 972. (c. 440 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 21A.

Man thinks, God decides. (Homo cogitat, Deus iudicat.)

ALCUIN, Epistles. (c. 790) Ordericus Vitalis, in his Ecclesiastical History of England and Normandy, bk. iii (c. 1140), has "Homo cogitat, Deus ordinat" (Man thinks, God directs).

Homo proponit, quod a poete, and Plato he hyght,

And Deus disponit, quod he, let God done his wille.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, passus xi, l. 36. (1377) Though Langland attributes the saying to Plato, the nearest thing to it found in Plato's works is that from the Greater Hippias, given below.

Man proposes, but God disposes. (Homo proponit, sed Deus disponit.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 2, fin. (c. 1420) The author indicates that the saying is founded upon Proverbs, xvi, 9, given above, and Jeremiah, x, 23, "O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." A proverb in many languages. The Italians say, "Ordina l'uomo, e dio dispone" (ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Canto xlvii, st. 35. 1532); the Spaniards, "El hombre pone y Dios dispone" (CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 55. 1615); the French, "L'homme propose, le ciel dispose"; the Germans, "Der Mensch denkt's, Gott lenkt's"; the Dutch, "De mensch wikt, maar God beschikt"; the Swedes, "Menniskan spår och Gud rår."

As the wyse man saith, The fole proposeth and god dysposeth.

JEAN D'ARRAS, tr., Melusine. (c. 1500)

It is a common prouerbe . . . Man purposeth and god dysposeth.

JOHN FISHER, English Works, p. 222. (1509)

We think one thing, but God does another. (Nous pensons l'un, mais Dieu fait l'autre.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1532)

Man purposeth, and God disposeth, men determine, but the destinies doo: for what shalbe, shalbe.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 243.

Man dooth purpose, and God dooth dispose. (L'huomo propone, e Dio dispone.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

Though men determine, the gods too dispose.

ROBERT GREENE, Perimedes. (1588)

The Zelanders . . . coined money . . . with this sentence: Man purposeth, God disposeth.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, Purchas His Pilgrim, xix, 506. (1625)

Man proposeth, God disposeth.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 2. (1640)

Whatever will thou makest, God is sure to be thy executor. Man may propose and purpose, but God disposeth.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, ii, 360. (1655)

1 The camel has his plans, and the camel driver has his plans.

JOHN LEWIS BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 198. (1817)

The lentil boils against its will. (ἡ φακὴ μὲ τὸ στονιὸν τῆς βράζει.)

ALEXANDER NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 55. (1831)

2 Planning pertains to man, completing to Heaven. (Mou shih tsai jên 'chéng shih tsai 'tien.)

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 188. (1872)

Man contrives; Heaven decrees.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 280.

Men would have things so and so—

But Heaven says no, no.

(Jên pien ju tz'ü ju tz'ü, t'ien li wei jan wei jan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2313. (1875) Scarborough translates another jingle, "Jên wu shên ling, ts'un pu nan hsing," as "Men, without divine assistance, Cannot move an inch of distance."

It is for me to strive to the uttermost; it is for Heaven to give success. (Chin ch'i tsai wo; t'ing ch'i tsai t'ien.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2336

What Heaven has ordained man cannot oppose.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 121. (1937) No. 126 is, "Man may plan, but Heaven executes."

3 Man doth what he can and God what He will.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 80. (1633)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 78. (1639)

4 Man moves himself, but God leads him. (L'homme s'agite, mais Dieu le mène.)

FÉNELON, Epiphany Sermon, 1685. Goethe, in Faust, says, "Du glaubst zu schieben, und du wirst geschoben" (You think that you are pushing, and you are pushed).

Sail. quoth the King: hold, saith the Wind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4064. (1732)

5 Zeus fulfilleth not for men all their purposes. (οὐ Ζεὺς ἀνδρεσσι νοήματα πάντα τελευτᾷ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 328. (c. 850 B. C.) It is God that bringeth all things to their issue. (θεὸς διὰ πάντα τελευτᾷ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xix, l. 90. (c. 850 B. C.)

The gods are mightier than men. (θεοὶ δὲ τε φέρτεροι ἀνδρῶν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxi, l. 264. (c. 850 B. C.)

6 Human affairs are not what a man wishes, but what he can bring about, as the proverb says. (τοιαῦτα τὰ ἡμέτερά ἐστιν, οὐχ ὅσα βούρηναι τις, φασίν.)

PLATO, Greater Hippias. Sec. 301C. (c. 375 B. C.)

Suidas gives the proverb in a shorter form, "We live not as we would, but as we can"

(ζῶμεν γὰρ οὐχ ὡς θέλομεν, ἀλλ' ὡς δυνάμεθα).

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 43, gives the Latin: "Non uti libet, sed uti licet, sic vivimus."

TERENCE, Andria, l. 805 (166 B. C.), gives the saying a twist of his own, "Ut quimus, aiunt, quando ut volumus non licet" (We do as we can, as the saying is, since we can't do as we would). The accepted Latin form, cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 43, is "Ut possumus, quando ut volumus non licet"

(As we can, when we can't as we would)

7 What God hath commanded, even that thing cometh to pass.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 6. (c. 3550 B. C.)

Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

8 I will cast, but the issue rests with Zeus. (ἥσω γὰρ καὶ ἐγὼ, τὰ δὲ κεν Διὶ πάντα μελήσει.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 515. (c. 850 B. C.)

The issue is in God's hands. (ἐν θεῷ γε μὰν τέλος.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode xiii, l. 104. (464 B. C.)

That soon happens which the gods wish. (Cito fit, quod di volunt.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 76. (c. A. D. 60)

God, under whose guidance everything proceeds (Qui imperatorem gemens sequitur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cvii, sec. 10. (a. A. D. 64)

Man goes as God pleases. (Va el hombre como Dios es servido.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 22. (1605)

Events of all sorts creep or fly exactly as God pleases.

WILLIAM COWPER, Letter to Lady Hesketh, 11 June, 1792.

That happens which pleases God. (Esa so hace que a Dios place.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes. p. 242. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

9 What the gods send us, we mortals bear perforce, although we suffer. (θεῶν μὲν δῶρα καὶ ἀχνημενὸν περ ἀνάγκη | τέτλαμεν ἀνθρώποι.)

UNKNOWN, Homeric Hymns: To Demeter, l. 147. (c. 650 B. C.)

What fates the gods allot to men they needs must bear. (ἀνθρώποισι τὰς μὲν ἐκ θεῶν | τύχας δοθείσας ἔστ' ἀναγκαῖον φέρειν.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 1316. (c. 409 B. C.)

V—God and the Big Battalions

<sup>1</sup> I have always noticed that God is on the side of the big battalions. (J'ai toujours vu Dieu du côté des gros bataillons.)

MARSHAL DE LA FERTÉ-SENNETERRE, Remark, to Anne of Austria. (c. 1652) See BOURSALUT, Lettres Nouvelles, p. 384.

Providence is always for the big battalions. (La fortune est toujours pour les gros bataillons.)

MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, Letter to Madame de Grignan, 22 Dec., 1673.

God is generally for the big squadrons against the little ones. (Dieu est d'ordinaire pour les gros escadrons contre les petits.)

ROGER, COMTE DE BUSSY-RABUTIN, Letters, 18 Oct., 1677.

As regards Providence, he cannot shake off the idea that in war, God is on the side of the big battalions, which at present are in the enemy's camp.

EDUARD ZELLER, Frederick the Great as Philosopher, referring to a letter written by Frederick to the Duchess of Gotha, 8 May, 1760. See CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, v, 606.

It is said that God is always for the big battalions. (On dit que Dieu est toujours pour les gros bataillons.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to M. le Riche, 6 Feb., 1770. Moreau expressed a fact of general application, explained according to the irreligious ideas of the French Revolution, when he said that "Providence was always on the side of the dense battalions."

ARCHIBALD ALISON, History Of Europe, ch. 78. (1842)

If Providence, as Napoleon scornfully said, is on the side of the strongest battalions, it provides also . . . that the strong battalions shall be found in defence of the cause which it intends shall conquer.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies, ii, 397. (1870) Some one has observed that Providence is always on the side of the big dividends.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald at the Carlton. (1904)

The old sneer, that "Providence is always on the side of the strongest battalions," is . . . the very opposite of the truth.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Exposition, Deut.-I Sam., p. 238. (1906)

Our statesmen . . . ought to have learned years ago that Providence is always on the side of the big battalions.

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 69. (1943)

<sup>2</sup> Git thar fustest with the mostest.

GENERAL NATHAN BEDFORD FORREST, Military Maxim. (1862) Forrest was a Confederate cavalry leader, whose maxims are legendary. See News Week, 6 May, 1900, p. 20.

<sup>3</sup> The winds and waves are always on the side of the ablest navigators.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 68. (1776)

<sup>4</sup> Nations are judged by Providence according to the strength of their soldiers.

ADOLF HITLER, Speech, 10 March, 1940.

<sup>5</sup> O God, assist our side: at least, avoid assisting the enemy, and leave the rest to me.

PRINCE LEOPOLD OF ANHALT-DESSAU, before his last battle. (1751) "Prayer mythically true."

—CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Bk. xv, ch. 14.

It is more important to know that we are on God's side.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Retort, during the Civil War, to a delegation of Southerners whose spokesman had remarked, "We trust, Sir, that God is on our side."

<sup>6</sup> Providence is always on the side of the last reserve.

NAPOLEON I, Sayings of Napoleon. (c. 1812)

<sup>7</sup> The gods are on the side of the stronger. (Deos fortioribus adesse.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iv, sec. 17. (c. A. D. 109)

Let fools the name of loyalty divide:

Wise men and gods are on the strongest side.

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, The Death of Marc Antony. Act iv, sc. 2. (a. 1701) The Germans say, "Gott hilft dem Stärksten" (God helps the strongest).

VI—God and the Devil.

<sup>8</sup> God asketh corn and the devil mars the sack.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 4. (1633)

God sends corn and the devil mars the sack.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 97. (1670)

<sup>9</sup> God hath few friends, the devil hath many.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Mooncalf. (c. 1610)

<sup>10</sup> Ye wald do little for God an the Devil were dead.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (c. 1595)

<sup>11</sup> The duches thinkyng to haue gotten God by the foote, when she had the deuell by the tayle.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 462. (1548)

If they may match their daughters so as they may say, my lord my sonne, they thinke they haue God almightie by the toe (as the prouerbe saith).

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xlv, notes. (1591)

He hath got God Almighty by the toe.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 125. (1639)

GODS AND GODDESSES

<sup>12</sup> Make not my path offensive to the Gods By spreading it with carpets.

(μηδ' ελμασι στρώσας' ἐπιφθονον πόρον τίθει.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 921. (458 B. C.)

May the gods fight on our side. (ἐνυμμάχους εἶναι θεούς.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 266. (467 B. C.)

1 He is to be feared who fears the gods. (δεινός ὁς θεοὺς σέβει.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 596. (467 B.C.)

2 It is not in the power of a man to lift up his foot and put it down without the gods.

AIKAR, Teachings. Col. viii, l. 122. (c.550 B.C.)

3 Blindness comes even upon the gods. (τε θεοὺς ἐπιτίσσεται ἄτη.)

APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica. Bk. iv, l. 817. (c. 225 B.C.)

4 The gods of the greater clans. (Maiorum gentium di.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 29. (45 B.C.) That is, the greater gods, the superior deities, such as Juno, Minerva, Diana, Venus, Mars and Apollo. The phrase is borrowed from the division of senators into "maiorum" and "minorum gentium." Hence "Minorum gentium di" were the lesser gods. "Di penates" were the household gods; "Lares and penates" the tutelary and household gods. The Chinese have similar gods, and there is a Chinese proverb, "Better be civil to the kitchen-god than to the god of the inner sanctum," though Confucius, in his *Analec*s, explains to one of his disciples that this adage is false, since "he who sins against Heaven can rely on the intercession of none." (Giles, tr., p. 95.)

To every kind of tradesman a god. (À chaque race d'artisans, un dieu.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

5 Human murmurs never touch the gods. (Humanæ superos numquam tetigere querellæ.)

CLAUDIAN, Epigrams. Epig. xxii, l. 9. (C.A. D.395)

6 As if from the machine. (ὥσπερ ἀπὸ μηχανῆς.)

DEMOSTHENES, Against Boeotus. Sec. 1025. (c. 350 B.C.) In some Greek tragedies, the denouement was effected by the appearance on the stage of a god, who was lowered, as if from the sky, by a machine. "A god from the machine," therefore, came to mean metaphorically divine help or intervention from some unseen or unexpected source.

A god from the machine. (ἀπὸ μηχανῆς θεός.)

MENANDER, The Woman Possessed with a Divinity. Frag. 227K. (c. 300 B.C.)

The god from the machine. (θεός ἐκ μηχανῆς.)

LUCIAN, Hermotimus. Sec. 86. (c. A.D. 170)

Like a god from the machine, as the saying is. (τὸ τοῦ λόγου, θεὸν ἀπὸ μηχανῆς.)

LUCIAN, Philopseudes. Sec. 29. (c. A.D. 180)

Usually quoted in its Latin form, "Deus ex machina." SUIDAS, Lexicon (c. 950) gives the phrase as θεός ἀπὸ μηχανῆς ἐπιφανείς (A god appearing from the machine), and this is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 68, with the Latin, "Deus ex improviso apparens" (A god appearing unexpectedly).

Nor let a god intervene. (Nec deus intersit.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 191. (20 B.C.)

Horace was all for the labor of the file in solving a difficulty, and not for sidestepping the problem by introducing divine intervention.

She . . . descended into that room full of company, as a miracle appearing in a machine from above.

DANIEL DEFOE, Life and Adventures of Mr. Duncan Campbell, p. 177. (1720)

7 The gods are athirst. (Les dieux ont soif.)

CAMILLE DESMOULINS, Vieux Cordelier, 3 Feb., 1794; closing words of final issue. Title of novel by Anatole France dealing with the French Revolution. (1913)

8 Slowly but surely withal moveth the might of the gods. (ὀρμάται μόλις, ἀλλ' ὅμως πιστόν τι τὸ θεῖον σθένος.)

EURIPIDES, Bacchæ, l. 882. (c. 410 B.C.)

Let us beware the jealousy of the gods. (μὴ τις θεῶν φθόνος ἔλθῃ.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia at Aulis. l. 1098.

9 In many a guise the gods appear. (πολλὰ μορφαὶ τῶν δαιμονίων.)

EURIPIDES. From the stock lines at the end of *Alce*stis, Andromache, Helen, and Bacchæ. (c. 410 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 58A, 497D.

Heartily know, When half-gods go,

The gods arrive.

R. W. EMERSON, Give All to Love. (1867)

10 We must obey the gods, whatever those gods be. (δουλεύομεν θεοῖς, ὅ τι ποτ' εἰσὶν οἱ θεοί.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 418. (c. 410 B.C.)

11 The Little Tin Gods on Wheels.

ROBERT GRANT. Title of story. (1879)

The billet of "Railway Instructor to Little Tin Gods on Wheels."

RUDYARD KIPLING, Public Waste. (1891)

She thinks you're a little tin god on wheels.

WALLACE STEGNER, The Big Rock Candy Mountain, p. 67. (1938)

12 Whom the gods honor, mortals also praise. (ὃν ἀθάνατοι τιμῶσι, τοῦτω καὶ βροτῶν φήμαν ἔπessθαι.)

HESIOD, Fragments. Frag. 23. (c. 800 B.C.) A condensation of Theogony, 81ff.

13 Whoso obeys the gods, to him do they gladly give ear. (ὅς κε θεοῖς ἐπιτείθεται, μάλα τ' ἔκλινον αὐτοῦ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 218. (c. 850 B.C.)

14 Ox-eyed Clymene. (Κλυμένη τε βοῶπις.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 144. (c. 850 B.C.) With large, full eyes. In bk. vii, l. 10, Homer refers to "ox-eyed Phylomedusa," and in bk. xviii, l. 40, to "ox-eyed Halie." Hera is usually described as queenly or white-armed.

She is one goddess—what you call one ox-eyed Juno. You mean a peroxide Juno, don't you?

O. HENRY, The Gold that Glittered. (1910)

<sup>1</sup> Long-robed Helen, a goddess among women. (Ἑλένη πανύπεπλος, δια γυναικῶν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 228. (c. 850 B.C.) Pope renders this, "She moves a goddess, and she looks a queen."

Oh! a goddess surely! (O dea certe!)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 328. (19 B.C.)

By her gait one knew the goddess. (Incessu patuit dea.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 405. (19 B.C.)

By her gait the goddess is revealed.

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 262. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> By no means do the gods to men grant all things at one time. (ἀλλ' οὐ πως ἅμα πάντα θεοὶ δόσαν ἀνθρώποισιν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 320. (c. 850 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> Hard is a god for a mortal man to master. (ἀργαλέος γὰρ τ' ἐστὶ θεὸς βροτῷ ἀνδρὶ δαμῆναι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 397. (c. 850 B.C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 69, gives the Latin equivalent as "Cum principe non pugandum" (No fighting with a prince).

He endureth not for long who fights with the gods. (οὐ δηναὶς δὲ θανάτοισι μάχεται.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 407. (c. 850 B.C.)

It is not well to be confident when the gods are adverse. (Nihil invitis fas quemquam fidere divis!)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 402. (19 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> Plain to be known are the gods. (ἀρίγνωτοι δὲ θεοὶ περ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiii, l. 72. (c. 850 B.C.)

It is expedient there should be gods, and, since it is expedient, let us believe that gods exist. (Expediit esse deos, et, ut expedit, esse putemus.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 637. (c. 1 B.C.)

The first way to worship the gods is to believe in the gods. (Primus est deorum cultus deos credere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, sec. 50. (A.A. D. 64)

It is pleasant to die if there be gods; and sad to live, if there be none. Nay, but there are gods. (ἀλλὰ καὶ εἰσὶ.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 11.

(c. A. D. 174) The translation is EMERSON'S, Conduct of Life: Worship.

<sup>5</sup> These things lie on the knees of the gods. (ἀλλ' ἡ τοι μὲν ταῦτα θεῶν ἐν γούνασι κείται.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 514. (c. 850 B.C.) A phrase frequently repeated, as in xx, 435; Odyssey, i, 267, 400; xvi, 129, etc.

That lies on the knees of the gods. (θεῶν ἐν γούνασι.)

DIOGENES. (c. 350 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, sec. 67.

The event is in the hands of the gods. (Quo evanet dis in manu.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 144. (190 B.C.)

The rest leave to the gods. (Permitte divis cetera.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 9, l. 9. (23 B.C.)

The conduct of an inquest is on the knees of the coroner. Sometimes he has housemaid's knees.

NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 262. (1941)

<sup>6</sup> All men have need of the gods. (πάντες δὲ θεῶν χυτέουσ' ἀνθρώποι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 48. (c. 850 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup> Easy it is for the gods, who hold broad heaven, both to glorify a mortal man and to abase him. (ῥῆτιδον δὲ θεοῖσι, τοὶ οὐρανὸν εὐρὺν ἔχουσιν, ἡμὲν κυθεῖναι θνητὸν βροτὸν ἤδὲ κακῶσαι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvi, l. 211. (c. 850 B.C.)

<sup>8</sup> The deities of one age are the by-words of the next.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, in Boston, 23 April, 1880.

<sup>9</sup> Walk with the gods. (συζῆν θεοῖς.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 27. (c. A. D. 174)

<sup>10</sup> Man is indeed mad! he knows not how to make a worm, and yet he makes gods by dozens! (L'homme est bien insensé! il ne sauroit forger un ciron, et forge des dieux à douzaine!)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

<sup>11</sup> The gods are a law unto themselves. (Sunt superis sua iura!)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ix, l. 500. (A. D. 7)

<sup>12</sup> Swift is the achievement, short are the ways of the gods, when bent on speed. (ὥκεια δ' ἐπειγομένων ἤδη θεῶν | πρᾶξις ὁδοὶ τε βραχεΐαι.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. ix, l. 67. (474 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> The gods play games with us men as balls. (Di nos quasi pilas homines habent.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi: Prologue, l. 22. (c. 200 B.C.)

In amazing ways the gods make sport of mortals (Miris modis di ludos faciunt hominibus.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 225. (c. 200 B.C.) Repeated in Rudens, l. 593. An older Latin proverb says, "Non est bonum ludere cum diis" (It is not good to sport with the gods).

The gods play hand-ball with us. (Les dieux esbattent de nous à la pelotte.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods;

They kill us for their sport.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 1, 38. (1605)

<sup>14</sup> The gods and goddesses be with you. (Ita di deaque faxint.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 172. (c. 200 B.C.)

The gods are with me and love me. (Di me servant atque amant.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 613. (c. 195 B.C.)

Those whom the gods care for are gods. (Cura deum di sunt.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. viii, l. 724. (A. D. 7)

1 The gods, though absent, are witnesses. (Deos absentis testis.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 627. (c. 200 B.C.)

The gods are my witness. (Ita me di iuvent.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. i, epis. 16. (61 B.C.)

2 It is folly to upbraid whom the gods esteem. (Stultitia est insectari quem di diligunt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 682. (c. 43 B.C.)

3 Make a mock of the gods. (Faisoyt gerbe de feu aux dieux.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

4 Would you win over the gods? Then be a good man. Whoever imitates them is worshipping them. (Vis deos propitiare? Bonus esto. Satis illos coluit, quisquis imitatus est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 50. (c. A.D. 64)

The gods are best to those who are best. (Dii optimos optimis.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 1, sec. 5. (c. A.D. 45)

5 When gods do ill, why should we worship them? (ὅταν τὰ θεῶν ἐπαινῶν τοὺς θεοὺς εὖρω κακοῦς.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 451. (c. 409 B.C.)

6 Accept what the gods give, since they don't give all you long for. (Patere quod dant, quando optata non danunt.)

CAECILIUS STATIUS, Plodium. Frag. 170, Loeb. (c. 175 B.C.)

7 What a god! He "whose thunder shakes the highest realms of heaven." (Quem deum! qui templa caeli summa sonitu concutit.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 590. (161 B.C.)

8 I have with me two gods, Persuasion and Necessity. (πειθῶ τε καὶ ἀναγκῇ.)

THEMISTOCLES, when the Andrians refused to pay him a tribute. (c. 478 B.C.) To which the Andrians replied that they were protected by two great gods, Penury and Powerlessness (πενίην τε καὶ ἀμύχανιην). See HERODOTUS, History. Bk. viii, ch. 111. PLUTARCH repeats the story in his Life of Themistocles, ch. 21, sec. 1, using slightly different words, Πειθῶ καὶ Βίαν (Persuasion and Force), and Πενίαν καὶ Ἀπορίαν (Penury and Need).

9 Let no one find fault with the gods. (μηδεὶς τὰ θεῶν ἐνόςαιτο.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xxvi, l. 38. (c. 270 B.C.)

10 Many meet the gods, but few salute them. (Occurrit cuicunque Deus paucique salutant.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, ch. 6. (1852)

11 He calls the gods to arms. (Vocat in certamina divos.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 172. (19 B.C.)

12 He prays to the genius of the place. (Genium-que loci invocat.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 136. (19 B.C.)

The God of the Place. (Deus loci.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 31. (19 B.C.) To the Romans, every village, every nook, had its presiding genius, or divinity, and so they set up monumental stones inscribed "Genio loci" or "Deo loci" or "Ignoto Deo" to propitiate this God whose name they did not know.

Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. (ΑΓΝΩΣΤΩ ΘΕΩ.)

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 22, 23. (c. A.D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Ignoto Deo." What Paul had seen was one of the monumental stones referred to above.

The pleasure-grounds are . . . not so well laid out according to the genius loci.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 8 Aug., 1771.

A white marble bust of the genius loci, the noble poet, shone conspicuously from its pedestal.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Crayon Miscellany: Newstead Abbey. (1835)

13 The likeness of two-faced Janus. (Ianique bifrontis imago.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 180. (19 B.C.)

14 First and foremost, reverence the gods. (Imprimis venerare deos.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 338. (29 B.C.)

Be warned: learn justice, and not to despise the gods. (Discite iustitiam moniti et non temnere divos.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 620. (19 B.C.)

15 Even the gods have dwelt in the woods. (Habitarunt di quoque silvas.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Elc. ii, l. 60. (37 B.C.)

16 Woe's me! I suppose I am becoming a god! (Vae, puto deus fio!)

EMPEROR VESPASIAN, as he was dying. (A.D. 79)
See Suetonius, Vespasian. Sec. 23.

17 The servant whose business it is, as Homer says, "To shake the regions of the gods with laughter."

UNKNOWN, The Adventurer. No. 3. (1752)

The high regions assigned to that part of the audience called the "gods"; namely, the galleries.

THOMAS S. SURR, A Winter in London, ii, 108. (1806)

Each one shilling God within reach of a nod is, And plain are the charms of each Gallery Goddess.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: Drury Lane Hustings. (1812)

FEAR BROUGHT GODS INTO WORLD, see under FEAR.

WHOM GODS LOVE DIE YOUNG, see under DEATH.

WHOM THE GODS LOVE THEY FIRST MAKE MAD, see under MADNESS.

GOLD

See also Money, Riches

<sup>1</sup> All else but gold is naught. (χρυσὸν ὡς οὐδὲν ἄλλα.)

ANANIUS, Fragments. Frag. 2. (c. 535 B.C.)
Gold is the most adorable of possessions. (κρεάνων δὲ χρυσὸς αἰδοίστατος.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode iii, l. 42. (476 B.C.) In Ode i, l. 1, Pindar speaks of gold as "gleaming more brightly than all other lordly wealth."

Epicarmes custome was amongst the Gods to place

The earth, the water and the winde and Sunne with shining face,

The starres and the fire, but as for mee I take Silver and golde to be the Gods which most for men doe make.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 187. (1574) Pettie, tr. Referred to as "an Epigram translated out of the greeke."

<sup>2</sup> Though wisdom cannot be gotten for gold, still less can it be gotten without it. . . . No gold, no Holy Ghost.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 172. (a. 1900)

<sup>3</sup> If . . . eating gold, as the old saying is, can make thee happy, thou shalt be so.

SUSANNA CENTILIVRE, The Busie Body. Act iii, sc. 4. (1708)

If she would eat gold he would give it her.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

You'd have given me pearls and diamonds to eat, if I could have swallowed them.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Mrs. Caudle's Curtain Lectures. No. 21. (1845)

<sup>4</sup> Yet hadde he but litel gold in cofre.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 300. (c. 1386)

Gold in phisik is a cordial.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 445.

<sup>5</sup> Gold dust blinds all eyes.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 98. (1875)

<sup>6</sup> By the touchstone gold is tried, and by gold is the mind of good and evil men brought to the test. (ἐν λιθίναις ἀκόναϊς ὁ χρυσὸς ἐξετάζεται, . . . ἐν δὲ χρυσῷ ἀνδρῶν ἀγαθῶν τε κακῶν τε νοῦς ἔδωκ' ἔλεγχον.)

CHILON, Apothegm. (c. 560 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon, i, 71.

As golde is tried by the touchstone, so riches do shew what is in a man.

FRANCIS MERES, Palladis Tamia, fo. 204. (1598)
Chilon would say, "That gold was tried with the touchstone, and men with gold."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 225. (1625)
Men have a touch-stone whereby to trie gold, but gold is the touch-stone whereby to trie men.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Judge. Sec. 5. (1642)

As the touch-stone trieth gold, so gold trieth the hearts of men.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 130. (1669)

As the Touchstone tryeth Gold, so Gold tryeth Men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 736. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> Nothing is so well-fortified that money cannot overcome it. (Nihil tam munitum quod non expugnari pecunia possit.)

CICERO, In Verrem, ii. (70 B.C.) An English paraphrase is, "If the walls were adamant, gold would take the town."

Gold delights to walk through the midst of sentinels, and to break through rocks, more powerful in its blow than the thunderbolt. (Aurum per medios ire satellites | et perumpere amat saxa, potentius | ictu fulmineo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 9. (23 B.C.)

Gold is an unseen tyrant. (χρυσὸς ὁ ἀφανὴς τυραννός.)

GREGORY NAZIANZEN, Sententiae. (c. A.D. 375)

An English variant is, "Gold is the sovereign of all sovereigns." The Dutch say, "Geld beheert de wereld" (Gold rules the world).

See also under MONEY.

Fight with silver spears and you will overcome everything. (Argenteis hastis pugna, et omnia expugnabis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chiliadis ii, century vii, No. 43. (1508)

O god golde, what canst thou not do? but O divel woman, that will doe more for golde then goodwill?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 201. (1576)
But there is an Italian proverb, "L'oro non compra tutto" (Gold will not buy everything).

The strongest castle, tower, and town,

The golden bullet beats it down.

SHAKESPEARE, The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 327. (1599)

Everyone strives for gold, everyone clings to gold. (Nach Golde drängt, | Am Golde hängt.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 8, last lines. (c. 1815)

Schiller has, "Allmächtig ist doch das Gold" (Gold is almighty).

<sup>8</sup> That is gold that is worth gold.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Or. (1611) HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 840. (1640)

We say, "That is gold which is worth gold"—which we may anywhere exchange for gold.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour. Pt. ii, ch. 9.

Gold's worth is gold. (Oro è, che oro vale.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 79. (1852) Citing an Italian proverb. The French say, "Or est qu'or vaut."

<sup>9</sup> Why is gold pale? Because it has so many thieves plotting against it. (ὅτι πολλοὺς ἔχει τοὺς ἐπιβουλεύοντας.)

DIOGENES, Epigram. (c. 325 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, vi, 51.

- 1 Gold and iron are good To buy iron and gold.
R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Politics. (1841)
- 2 Gold of Toulouse. (Aurum Tolosanum.)
ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 111. (1511)
The extremity of ill fortune.
It is aurum Tholosanum, and will produce no better effects.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, memb. iii, subs. 15. (1621)
More unfortunate to the gentry of England than was the gold of Tholossa to the followers of Scipio.
THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 507. (1629)
Servilius Caepio . . . gained an evil reputation by the sack of Tolosa. . . . The Plunder he took was immense: but the greater part was seized by robbers on the way to Marseilles, and "Toulouse gold" became a proverbial expression for ill-gotten but unprofitable gains.
H. G. LIDDELL, Studies in the History of Rome. (1871)
- 3 The purest gold is most ductile: it is commonly a good blade that bends well.
OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves: Humility. (1620)
- 4 He that has gold may buy land.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595) MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, 83. (1683)
- 5 I have never seen the Philosopher's stone that turns lead into gold, but I have known the pursuit of it turn a man's gold into lead.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.
- 6 A golden Dart kills where it pleases.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 132. (1732)
A golden Shield is of great Defence.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 133.
- 7 As one has money, so one has brains. (Und wär' ich bei Geld, | So wär' ich bei Sinnen.)
GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 6: Hexenküche. (1806)
- 8 It is said, that golde breaketh the gates of Diamant, and that the tongue hath no force when gold speaketh.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 187. (1574) Pettie, tr.
Gold were as good as twenty orators.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 2, 38. (1592)
Gold is a deepe-perswading orator.
RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Affectionate Shepherd. (1594)
Where gold speaks, every tongue is silent.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 179. (1666)
"Man prates, but gold speaks."
You may speak with your gold, and make other tongues dumb.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670)
What words won't do, gold will.
EDWARD WARD, The London Spy, p. 400. (1700)
Called an "old saying."
- When Gold speaks, you may e'en hold your Tongue.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5555. (1732)
MONEY TALKS, see under MONEY.
- 9 The balance distinguisheth not between gold and lead.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 631. (1640)
If gold knew what gold is, gold would get gold, I wis.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1010.
- 10 A man may buy gold to deere.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 292. (1732)
You may buye golde too deare.
EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepherds Calendar: August, l. 123. (1579)
Men will not, as our common proverb is, buy gold too dear.
JOHN GOODWIN, Filled with the Spirit, p. 124. (c. 1660)
Gold may be bought too dear.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 21. (1642) FULLER, Worthies: Kent, ii, 143. (1662)
The fact is, in my opinion, that we often buy money very much too dear.
THACKERAY, Barry Lyndon. Ch. 13. (1844)
A wise proverb tells us that gold may be bought too dear.
SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, The Pleasures of Life, ii, 2. (1887)
- 11 Gold is but muck.
BEN JONSON, The Case Is Altered. Act iii, sc. 3. (c. 1598) Cited as "the old proverb."
I collect gold from Ennius's dung. (Aurum e stercore.)
ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Bibliomania. (1791) Quoting Vergil. "I find in some neglected authors," D'Israeli explains, "particular things, not elsewhere to be found."
- 12 Although the Loadstone draw yron, yet it cannot moue gold.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 84. (1579)
- 13 Who is so ignorant that knoweth not, gold [to] be a key for euery locke.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 293. (1580)
Gold goes in at any gate except heaven's.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 97. (1670)
No lock will hold against the power of gold.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 319. (1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6236. (1732)
Every door is barr'd with gold, and opens but to golden keys.
TENNYSON, Locksley Hall. St. 50. (1842)
There is no lock which a key of gold will not open. (No hay cerradura, si es do oro la ganzua.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 267. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "L'argent est un bonne passe-partout" (Money is a good pass-key), i. e.

it gains admittance everywhere. Other English proverbial forms are, "A gold key opens every door," and "A silver key can open an iron lock."

<sup>1</sup> Like liberty, gold never stays where it is undervalued.

J.S. MORRILL, Speech, U.S. Senate, 25 Jan., 1878.

<sup>2</sup> When a ship sinks, gold weighs down its possessor. (Sic rate demersa fulvum deponderrat aurum.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Frag. 80. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>3</sup> What good doth golde to him that careth not for it?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 196. (1576)

<sup>4</sup> Is it so difficult that not even an ass laden with gold can approach it? (ὥστε μηδὲ ὄνον προσελθεῖν χρυσίον κομίζοντα;)

PHILIP OF MACEDON, when his scouts reported that a certain stronghold was impregnable. (c. 350 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Kings. Sec. 178B.

Those that Philip said could storm any fort to which an ass laden with gold could climb. (Quibus Philippus omnia castella expugnari posse dicebat, in quae modo asellus onustus auro posset ascendere.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. i, epis. 16. (61 B. C.) The cities of Greece were taken not by Philip but by Philip's gold. (τὰς πόλεις αἰρεῖ τῶν Ἑλλήνων οὐ Φίλιππος, ἀλλὰ τὸ Φιλίππου χρυσίον.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aemilius Paulus. Ch. 11, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 110)

You must be the ass charged with crowns to make way to the fort.

CHAPMAN, Widow's Tears. Act i, sc. 4. (1612) The usual proverb is, "An ass laden with gold will go lightly uphill."

SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote, ii, 35. (1620)

Philip was wont to say that an ass laden with gold would enter the gates of any city.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 143. (1629)

There is not any place so high, whereunto an asse laden with gold will not get up.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 72. (1631)

There's no fence or fortress against an ass laden with gold.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 2, let. 9. (1622)

An Ass laden with Gold overtakes every thing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 387. (1732)

An Ass loaded with Gold, climbs to the Top of a Castle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 588.

<sup>5</sup> Even what before appeared ugly will appear beautiful when adorned with gold. (πρότερον αἰσχροὺν φαίνεται, καλὸν φανέται χρυσῷ γε κοσμηθέν.)

PLATO, Greater Hippias. Sec. 289E. (c. 375 B. C.) Gold gives to the ugliest a certain pleasing charm. (L'or donne aux plus laids certain charme pour plaire.)

MOLIÈRE, Sganarelle. Sc. 1, l. 49. (1660)

Gold, even to ugliness, gives a touch of beauty. (L'or même à la laideur donne un teint de beauté.)

BOILEAU, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 209. (1666)

Old Women's Gold is not ugly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2730. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Testing them more carefully than gold in the fire. (βασανίζοντας πολὺ μάλλον ἢ χρυσὸν ἐν πυρὶ.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 413E. (c. 411 B. C.)

Fire proves gold. (Ignis aurum probat.)

SENECA, De Providentia, v, 9. (c. A. D. 54) Cited by EASMUS, Adagia, iv, i, 58, in the form "Aurum igni probatum" (Gold is proved by fire).

By the assay one tests gold. (À la touche l'on epreuve l'or.)

J. DE LA VEPRIE, Proverbes Communs. (c. 1498)

Fine gold must be purified in the flaming fire.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 107. (1576) [It is] harde golde yat is not to be mollified with fire.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 325. (1580)

Now do I play the touch,

To try if thou be current gold indeed.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 2, 9. (1592)

Pure gold dreads not the fire. (Chên chin pu 'pa 'huo.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 184. (1872)

<sup>7</sup> Do you suppose this company has come here to prospect for gold? (χρυσοχοήσοντας οἷε τοῦσδε νῦν ἐνθάδε ἀφίχθαι;)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. v, sec. 450B. (c. 411 B. C.) Literally "to smelt ore," a proverbial phrase, based upon the anecdote of Athenians trying to get gold from silver ore, hence anyone failing in a silly speculation.

Men dig in the earth for gold, seed of unnumbered ills. (Effodiuntur opes, inritamenta malorum.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 140. (A. D. 7)

Gold is procured from the earth by digging out the vein, and from the miser by digging out his soul.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 94. (c. 1258)

<sup>8</sup> I despise gold; it has persuaded many a man into many an evil. (Odi ego aurum; multa multis saepe suasit perperam.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 328. (c. 200 B. C.)

Gold hath been the ruin of many. (Multi dati sunt in auri casus.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). xxxi, 6. (c. 190 B. C.)

Deadly gold is the substance that makes vice. (Materies vitiis aurum letale parandis.)

RUTILIUS NAMATIUS, De Reditu Suo. Bk. i, l. 357. (c. A. D. 416) Rutilius goes on to say that "gold corrupts wedded brides or buys a maid's embraces; it saps loyalty, and betrays the walled town."

Gold is one of the things for the non-existence of which man would probably be all the better.

Midrash: Exodus Rabbah, 37. (c. A. D. 550)

Is it not a by worde amongst vs, that gold maketh an honest man an ill man?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 63. (1579)
Gold is the most cowardly and treacherous of all metals. It makes no treaty that it does not break. It has no friend whom it does not sooner or later betray.

SENATOR JOHN J. INGALLS, Speech, on the coinage of silver dollars, U.S. Senate, 15 Feb. 1878. See Congressional Record, 45th Cong., 2d. sess., p. 1052.

1 And gold but sent to keep the fools in play,
For some to heap, and some to throw away
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 5. (1732)

What Nature wants, commodious gold bestows;
'Tis thus we eat the bread another sows.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 21.

2 Piety is vanquished and all men worship gold.
(Aurum omnes victa iam pietate colunt.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 13, l. 47. (c. 26 B.C.)

To all gods and men an ingot of gold seems more beautiful than anything those poor crazy Greeks, Apelles and Phidias, ever made. (Omnibus diis hominibusque formosior videatur massa auri, quam quicquid Apelles Phidiasque, Graeculi delirantes, fecerunt.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 89. (c. A.D. 60)

Saint-seducing gold.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 1, 220. (1595)

Every generous, nay, every just sentiment, is absorbed in the thirst for gold.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Ogilvie. (1811)

3 Look to the gold, not to the hand that brings it. (Aurum spectato, non quae manus afferat aurum!)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iv, eleg. v, l. 53. (c. 22 B.C.)

4 When we have gold we are in fear; when we have none we are in danger.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670)

5 Gold is pure of rust. (κόθαρος γὰρ ὁ χρῆστος ἰω.)

SAPPHO, Fragments. Frag. 109. (c. 610 B.C.)

Quoted by PAUSANIUS, viii, 18, 5.

Gold is a child of God; neither moth nor rust devoureth it; but the mind of man is devoured by this supreme possession. (Διὸς παῖς ὁ χρυσός· | κείνον οὐ σὴς οὐδὲ κίς | δάπτει <δὲ> βροτῶν φρένα κάρτιστον <κτεάνων>.)

PINDAR, Fragments. Frag. 222, Sandys. (c. 480 B.C.) Scholiast on Pindar ["that immortal coverlet," i.e. the Golden Fleece] quotes this as from Sappho, but Scholiast on Hesiod ascribes it to Pindar, as does EDMONDS, in Lyra Graeca, i, 261.

6 More golden than gold. (χρῶσω χρυσότερα.)

SAPPHO, Fragments. Frag. 60. (c. 610 B.C.)

Quoted by DEMETRIUS, On Style, 161. Gregorius quotes it as "More precious than gold" (χρυσωτέρη), and adds that such phrases are erotic. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 225.

Yelwe and brighte as any gold.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 1283. (c. 1386)

7 When any family has gold, outsiders have money-scales. (Chia yu 'huang chin, wai yu têng ch'êng.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2651. (1875)

8 A golden bit does not make a better horse. (Non faciunt meliorem equum aurei freni.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xli, sec. 6. (c. A.D. 64)

9 Thou gaudy gold, Hard food for Midas!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 101. (1597)

Gold defiles with frequent touch;
There's nothing fouls the hand so much.

JONATHAN SWIFT, The Fable of Midas. (1712)

10 Upon the Water cast thy Bread
And after many Days thou'lt find it,
But Gold upon this Ocean spread
Shall sink, and leave no trace behind it.

SWIFT, The Bubble, l. 133. (1720)

11 Gold and power, the chief causes of war. (Aurum et opes, praecipuae bellorum causae.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. 4, sec. 74. (c. A.D. 109)

Gold begets in Brethren hate,
Gold in Families debate;
Gold does Friendship separate,
Gold does Civil Wars create.

These the smallest harms of it!
Gold, alas, does Love beget.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Anacreonatics: Gold. (1656)

12 To what dost thou not drive the hearts of men, O accursed hunger for gold! (Quid non mortalia pectora cogis, | auri sacra fames!)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iii, l. 56. (19 B.C.)

Oh love of gold! thou meanest of amours!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. iv, l. 350. (1742)

The lust of gold succeeds the rage of conquest;
The lust of gold, unfeeling and remorseless!
The last corruption of degenerate man.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene, Act i, sc. 1. (1749)

FETTERS OF GOLD, see under FETTERS.

GOLD BRICK, see under BRICK.

GOLDEN AGE, see under AGE.

GOLDEN RULE, see under RULE.

II—All is Not Gold that Glitters

13 Do not hold everything gold that shines like gold,

Nor every beautiful apple to be good.

(Non teneas aurum totum quod splendet ut aurum, Nec pulchrum pomum quodlibet esse bonum.)

ALANUS DE INSULIS, Parabolae, c. iii. (c. 1175)

Winchester College Hall-book, 1401. Alanus de Insulis, or Alain de Lille, was a French monk of the 12th century, and so far as known was the first to put the proverb in anything like its modern form. But of course the idea that appearances are deceitful has been current as long as language has. It is found in the earliest writings. Six hundred years before Christ, Aesop embodied it in two of his fables, The Crow and the Snake, and The Vain Jackdaw. See under APPEARANCE.

Nis hit nower neh gold al that ter schineth.

UNKNOWN, Hali Meidenhad, p. 9. (c. 1220)

All is not gold that one sees shine. (Tout n'est pas ors c'on voit luire.)

RUTEBEUF, De Frere Denise, l. 15. (c. 1250)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 263.

Nis not nout al gold, that shineth.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. No. 18. (c. 1300)

Hit is not al gold, that glareth.

CHAUCER (?), The Hous of Fame. Bk. i, l. 272. (c. 1383)

But al thing which that shyneth as the gold

Nis nat gold, as that I have herd it told;

Ne every appel that is fair at yē

Ne is nat good, what-so men clappe or crye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 410. (c. 1389) Evidently derived from Alanus de Insulis.

Al is not golde that shewyth goldishe hewe.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Churl and the Bird. (c. 1400)

Al is not gold that shyneth briht.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Fall of Princes. Bk. iv. l. 2944. (c. 1440)

Yt ys not al gold that glowyth.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 140. (c. 1530)

All is not golde that glisters by tolde tales.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

All is not golde that glistereth.

THOMAS BECON, Reliques of Rome, 207. (1553)

PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 245. (1576) GREENE, Hamillia. (1583) HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 308. (1640) etc., etc.

Al that glistreth is not gold. (Tutto quel che luce, non è oro.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

Florio is giving one Italian form; another is, "Oro non è tutto quel che risplende." (CERVANTES, Don Quixote, pt. ii, chs. 33 and 48 (1615) gives the Spanish, "No es oro todo que reluce." The French say, "Tout ce que reluit n'est pas or"; the Germans, "Nicht alles was glänzt ist Gold." A Latin form is, "Non omne quod nitet aurum est," and still another, "Auri natura non sunt splendentia plura"—a striking example of the clumsy construction necessary to fill out the hexameter verse. There are countless variations in English. The Irish say, "All that's yellow is not gold, and all that's white are not eggs"; the Scots, "All are not maidens that wear their hair," it being at one time the fashion for Scottish maidens to go bareheaded. Among similar proverbs are, "You can't judge of the horse by the harness," "You can't judge of the wine by the barrell," "Every light is not the sun," "All are not saints that go to church," and so on. The Dutch say, "All are not friends who smile on us"; the Armenians, "Every grain is not a pearl"; the Arabians, "Every crooked neck is not a camel." Contradicting all these are, "By the husk you may guess at the nut," and "You may know the whole sack by a handful." There are few proverbs that cannot be countered by another proverb of exactly opposite meaning.

Yet gold al is not, that doth golden seeme.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto viii, st. 14. (1590)

All that glisters is not gold;

Often have you heard that told.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 7, 65. (1597)

All is not gold that glitters.

DAVID GARRICK, Prologue to GOLDSMITH's She Stoops to Conquer. (1773) This is the first known use of "glitters," and apparently the first appearance of the saying in the form now most familiar. It was adopted as the best form almost at once. Dr. Johnson used it in 1784 in preference to the older ones (See BOSWELL, 2 Oct., 1784), and its use thereafter was very common, varied sometimes by "All that glitters is not gold."

All is not gold that glitters, but it is a wise child that keeps the stopper in his bottle of testing acid.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Gold that Glittered. (1910)

All that glisters, I've been told,

May not be eighteen-caret gold.

MARGARET FISHBACK, McNutt, Apollo of Politics. (1940)

All is not gold that glitters; all isn't garbage that smells.

BAKER AND BOLTON, Dead to the World, p. 154. (1944)

<sup>1</sup> Dirt glitters when the sun happens to shine. (Der Schmutz ist glänzend, wenn die Sonne schneinen mag.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

<sup>2</sup> Philautus thinking al to be gold that glistered, and all to be Gospell that Euphues vttered.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 67. (1579)

If thy glasse glister it must needs be gold.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 321.

<sup>3</sup> All that glitters is sold as gold.

OGDEN NASH, Look What You Did, Christopher. (1933)

GOOD

<sup>1</sup> May the good prevail! (τὸ δ' εὖ νικάτω.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 139. (458 B. C.) Repeated in l. 159. In l. 349 it is varied to τὸ δ' εὖ κπαρόν.

<sup>5</sup> I placed it where it would do the most good. OAKES AMES, Letter to Henry S. McComb, referring to Crédit Mobilier stock distributed to members of Congress in 1872.

<sup>1</sup> The Italians have an ungracious proverb, Tanto buon che val niente, So good that he is good for Nothinge.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Goodness. (1607)
The Spanish form is the same, "Es tan bueno, que a serlo mas no valiera nada." The French say, "Pour être assez bon il faut l'être trop" (To be good enough one must be too good).

So good as good for nothing.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 78. (1639)

You breed of Lady Mary, when you're good you're o'er good.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 363. (1721)

Lady Mary, helping the drunken man to mount his horse, gave him such a vigorous leg up that she threw him over to the other side.

Lady S.: Ah, colonel! you'll never be good.

Lord S.: Which of the goods d'ye mean? good for something, or good for nothing?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Too good is stark naught.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

Men have a singular desire to be good without being good for anything.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday. (1849)

It is still . . . the practice to cultivate the weakness of woman rather than her strength. . . . She incurs the risk of becoming the embodiment of the Italian proverb—"so good that she is good for nothing."

SAMUEL SMILES, Character, p. 301. (1871)

Reason teaches us that what is good is good for something, and that what is good for nothing is not good at all.

F. H. BRADLEY, Ethical Studies. Ch. 2. (1876)

<sup>2</sup> Good is good, but better is better.

BAILEY, Dictionary: Good. See under BETTER.

Good is good, but better carrieth it.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 364. (1855)

<sup>3</sup> As riseth my good so riseth my blood.

THOMAS BECON, New Catechisme, p. 599. (c. 1560)

GOOD ENEMY OF BEST, see under BEST.

<sup>4</sup> By all that's good and glorious.

LORD BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2. (1821)

<sup>5</sup> The good must be chosen for its own sake. (τὸ καλὸν δι' αὐτὸ αἰρεῖν.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. xv, epis. xvii, sec. 3. (45 B.C.) Quoting a Stoic dogma.

<sup>6</sup> None so good that it's good to all.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 16. (1639)

<sup>7</sup> I tried to get it from Claudine, but it was no good.

HUGH CONWAY, Living or Dead. Ch. 9. (1886)

He is no good, I tell you.

MARIE CORELLI, Sorrows of Satan. Ch. 10. (1895)

<sup>8</sup> Nothing is so good as it seems beforehand.

GEORGE ELIOT, Silas Marner. Ch. 18. (1861)

<sup>9</sup> He is good that failed never.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595)

<sup>10</sup> Good that comes too late, is as good as nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1730. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> It is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing. (καλὸν δὲ ζηλοῦσθαι ἐν καλῷ πάντοτε.)

New Testament: Galatians, iv, 18. (c. A. D. 53)

The Vulgate is, "Bonum autem aemulamini in bono semper."

We know that all things work together for good to them that love God. (οἶδαμεν δὲ ὅτι τοῖς ἀγαπῶσι τὸν θεὸν πάντα συνεργεῖ.)

New Testament: Romans, viii, 28. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Scimus autem quoniam diligentibus Deum omnia cooperantur in bonum."

<sup>12</sup> Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? (ἐκ Ναζαρέτ δύναται τι ἀγαθὸν εἶναι;)

New Testament: John, i, 46. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "A Nazareth potest aliquid boni esse?" It is probable that Nathaniel was repeating a popular proverb of the day—a jibe at Nazareth and its people. Such railery at a neighboring village or people the French call "blason populaire," and the Germans "Ortsneckereien."

<sup>13</sup> Of good things I think the more common the more commendable.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Germanicus and Agrippina, p. 69. (1576) Perhaps from the early unidentified Latin, "Bonum, quo communis eo melius." Pettie adds (p. 251, Hartman ed.), "A good thinge can not bee to much used, and the more common it is, the more commendable it is."

Only good things can be abused. (On ne peut abuser que des choses qui sont bonnes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1580)

<sup>14</sup> We begun a newe counte for good and all.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 208. (1519)

I do resolve even to let him go away for good and all.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 23 June, 1663.

You may take him for good and all.

CONGREVE, Old Batchelor. Act i, sc. 1. (1687)

Going away for good and all.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 2. (1850)

<sup>15</sup> Good, though long stayed for, is good.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 3. (1659)

<sup>16</sup> We see the wisdom of Solon's remark, that no more good must be attempted than the nation can bear.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Dr. Walter Jones. (1801)

<sup>17</sup> Look round the Habitable World, how few Know their own Good; or knowing it, pursue.

(Omnibus in terris, . . . pauci dinoscere pos-sunt Vera bona atque illis multum diversa.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 1. (c. A. D. 120) (Dryden, tr.)

1 So far, so good.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 300. (1721)

"So far, so good," said Aunt Eleanor.

RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, v, x, 389. (1753)

Not the most gallant way of putting it, perhaps; but so far, so good.

HEWLETT, Wiltshire Essays, p. 108. (1921)

2 What he speneth more I make the good hereafter.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus xvii, l. 77. (1377)

If anie thing was stolne awaie, I euer made it good.

JOHN BARET, An Alvarie, 823. (1573)

Making good, or undertaking for another.

RICHARD PERCIVAL, Bibliotheca Hispanica: Abono. (1591)

This letter doth make good the friar's words.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, v, 3, 286. (1595)

Some . . . take by admittance that, which they cannot make good.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seeming Wise. (1607)

Nature makes good her Engagements.

EUSTACE BUDGELL, The Spectator. No. 404. (1712)

It'll play the devil with us if we can't make good.

MERWIN AND WEBSTER, Calumet 'K', p. 20. (1901)

No matter how big the job . . . he has invariably made good.

R. L. DUNN, William Howard Taft, p. 4. (1908)

It's up to us to make good.

W. McL. RAINE, Bucky O'Connor, p. 159. (1910)

3 The common good. (Commune bonum.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 958. (c. 45 B. C.)

The highest good at which we all aim. (Bonum summum quo tendimus omnes.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. vi, l. 26. (c. 45 B. C.)

The common good of all is the supreme law.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, De Legibus Naturae. Pt. i. (1672)

THE GREATEST GOOD OF THE GREATEST NUMBER, see under HAPPINESS.

4 It is good for us to be here. (καλὸν ἐστὶν ἡμᾶς ὦδε εἶναι.)

New Testament: Matthew, xvii, 4. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Bonum est nos hic esse."

5 As good as doone.

RANDLE PALSgrave, Dictionary, p. 861. (1530)

As good as dead.

MEREDITH HANMER, Ecclesiastical Historie, viii, 7, 149. (1577) BYRON, Beppo, St. 35. (1817)

I doubt not but I shall be as good as my word.

OLIVER CROMWELL. (1638) See CARLYLE, Cromwell's Letters and Speeches, App. ii.

To be as good as my word, I bade Will get me a rod.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 28 Feb., 1662.

He had been as good as his promise.

ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 136. (1713)

6 Now this was a good one.

J. K. PAULDING, John Bull and Brother Jonathan. Ch. 5. (1812)

Mittens, that's a good one!

CARL SANDBURG, Smoke and Steel, p. 45. (1920)

7 Twice and even thrice we should repeat that which is good. (καὶ δις καὶ τρίς τό γε καλῶς ἔχον ἐπαναπολεῖν τῷ λόγῳ δεῖν.)

PLATO, Philebus. Sec. 59E. (c. 350 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 49, who gives the Latin, "Bis, ac ter, quod pulchrum est." The usual form of the Greek proverb is, δις ἢ πρὶς τὰ καλὰ.

8 I would far rather be called good than fortunate. (Bonam ego quam beatam me esse nimio dici mavolo.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 304. (c. 194 B. C.)

He may be called good whan other fare the bettir for his goodnesse.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 16. (1477)

9 The good must merit God's peculiar care; But who but God can tell us who they are?

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 135. (1732)

10 Good enough is never ought.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1678)

11 Some good things I do not love, a good long mile, good small beer, and a good old woman.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1678)

There is no such thing as good small beer, good brown bread, or a good old woman.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

12 I am a fool, I love everything that is good.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 247. (1678)

I'm like all fools; I love everything that's good.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

13 Your good qualities should face inwards. (Introsus bona tua spectent.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. vii, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 64)

If you wish any good thing, get it from yourself. (εἰ τι ἀγαθὸν θέλεις, παρὰ σεαυτοῦ λάβε.)

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 29, sec. 4, (c. A. D. 100) Quoted as "the law which God has ordained."

14 That which is good makes men good. (Quod bonum est, bonos facit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 64) There are two somewhat similar Latin proverbs, "Bona bonis contingunt" (Good things befall the good), and "Bonum quo communices, eo melius" (The good which you share with others becomes thereby the better).

That's good that doth us good.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 109. (1639)

That's my good that does me good.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1678)

<sup>1</sup> He was always good enough for him.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iv, 5, 193. (1607)

You are not good enough to clean my father's boots.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

<sup>2</sup> Men of mean judgment oft ignore the good
That lies within their grasp, till they have lost it.

(οἱ γὰρ κακοὶ γνώμασι τὰγαθὸν χερσὶν ἔχοντες οὐκ ἴσασι, πρὶν τις ἐκβάλῃ.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 964. (c. 409 B.C.) The Spanish form, as given by CERVANTES, Don Quixote, is, "No se conoce el bien basta que se ha perdido" (We do not know what is good till we have lost it).

A good thing is esteemed more in its absence than in its enjoyment. (Bonum magis carendo quam fruendo sentitur.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 42. (1869) "The ass does not know the value of his tail till he has lost it."

<sup>3</sup> It's too good for true, honey, it's too good for true.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 15. (1884)

That's too good to be true.

GEORGE ADE, Effie Whittlesey. (1903)

That sounds a little too good to be true.

SIDNEY MARSHALL, Some Like It Hot, p. 102. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> In the waye of mockage, bidding muche good dooe it hym.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus, p. 84. (1542)

Much good may it do you!

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave i. (1843)

<sup>5</sup> London is architecturally like the curate's egg, "good in parts."

UNKNOWN, London Times, 24 Dec., 1926, p. 11/6. Good in parts; or, as a battered simile, good in parts—like the curate's egg. Of mixed character: [a cliché] from ca. 1910. In Punch, Nov. 9, 1895, there is a drawing of a meek young curate that, eating a bad egg, said that 'parts of it' were 'excellent.' (O.E.D.)

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Good. (1941)

II—Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>6</sup> He is as good as good bread. (Es tan bueno como el buen pan.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 47. (1615)

<sup>7</sup> "And how did little Tim behave?" asked Mrs. Cratchit. . . . "As good as gold," said Bob.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 3. (1843)

My mother is as good as gold, and much better.

BLACKMORE, Cripps the Carrier. Ch. 37. (1876)

Good as gold.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act i. (1877)

Him and Emma are both so good as gold.

EDEN PHILLPOTTS, Yellow Sands, ii. (1926)

<sup>8</sup> Many in manner of a proverb say, "Were he as good as George-a-Greene, I would strike him sure."

ROBERT GREENE, George-a-Greene. Act iv, sc. 1.

(1599) HERRICK, Hymn to Bacchus, has "Yet he'll be thought or seen, | So good as George-a-Green," and NATHAN BAILEY, Divers Proverbs, p. 22, cites this proverb and explains, "This George of Green was that famous Pindar of Wakefield, who fought with Robin Hood and Little John, and got the better of them."

<sup>9</sup> Let her alone and in five minutes the storm will be over, and she as good as pie again.

PAIGE, Dow's Sermons, i, 21. (1847)

We've been awful good; good as pie.

ROSE TERRY COOKE, Happy Dodd, p. 178. (1878)

<sup>10</sup> As good a fellow as ever trod upon neat's leather.

GEORGE PEELE, The Old Wives Tale, l. 476. (1595)

You are as good a man as . . . ere went on neats leather.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Sc. 11. (1599)

As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 1, 29. (1599)

As honest a man as ever trod on shoe leather.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 181. (1670)

As good a seaman as ever trod shoe-leather.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 8. (1843)

As bonny a lad as ever stapt i' shoe-leather.

F. E. TAYLOR, Lancs. Sayings, p. 33. (1901)

<sup>11</sup> You are as good a man as ever drew sword, as ever lookt man in the face, as ever broke bread or drunk drink, as ere trode on God's earth; . . . as good as one shall see upon a summer's day.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Sc. 11. (1599)

As good natur'd a man as ever broke bread.

JOHN O'KEEFFE, The World in a Village. Act i, sc. 1. (1793)

<sup>12</sup> As good as ever water wet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 285. (1670)

As good as ever flew in the air

As good as ever the ground went upon.

As good as ever went end ways.

As good as ever drave top o'er til'd house.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 285.

<sup>13</sup> It was as good as a comedy to him to see the trees fall.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Bull, Beare, and Horse. (1638)

It was grown almost as good as a play.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transposed. Pt. i. (1672)

John had such a lively interest in all the parcels, that it was as good as a play.

DICKENS, The Cricket on the Hearth. Chirp 2. (1845)

The naughty prints and books of Holywell Street were as good as a play.

ARTHUR MACHEN, Far-Off Things, p.130.(1915)

<sup>1</sup> Thart as good as ere twangde.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act ii, sc. 2. (1577)

As good a wench as ever twanged.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 205. (1668)

As good as ever twanged.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 189. (1678)

III—Being Good

<sup>2</sup> To be good only is to be

A God or else a Pharisee.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Everlasting Gospel, Pt. vi, l. 27. (c. 1810)

<sup>3</sup> He cannot long be good that knows not why he is good.

RICHARD CAREW, The Survey of Cornwall, p. 219. (1602)

He cannot be good, that knows not why he is good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1819. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Nobody ever was frightened into being good.

ARTHUR E. HERTZLER, The Doctor and His Patients, p. 84. (1940)

<sup>5</sup> Whatever anyone does or says, I must be good. (ὃ τι ἂν τις ποιῇ ἢ λέγῃ, ἐμὲ δεῖ ἀγαθὸν εἶναι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, sec. 15. (c. A. D. 174)

Do all you can to be good, and you'll be so

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1301. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> It is easy to be good when that which prevents it is far off. (Esse bonam facile est, ubi, quod vetet esse, remotum est.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 14, l. 25. (c. A. D. 9)

<sup>7</sup> If you be a good girl, you'll have a good time. (Bona si esse vis, bene erit tibi.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 510. (c. 200 B. C.) The young lady to whom this remark is made retorts that, so far as she has observed, it's the bad girls who have the good time, thus anticipating by more than two thousand years Mark Twain's skepticism concerning the adage, as given below, BE GOOD, SWEET MAID, see under CLEVERNESS.

To be good is to be happy.

NICHOLAS ROWE, The Fair Penitent. Act iii, sc. 1. (1703)

Be in general virtuous and you will be happy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to John Alleyne, 9 Aug., 1768.

Goodness does not more certainly make men happy than happiness makes them good.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Lord Brooke and Sir Philip Sidney. (1824)

Be virtuous & you'll be happy.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Fourth of July Oration (1859) In In Canada Ward repeats, "If you would be happy be virtuous," and a third time in Celebration in Honor of the Atlantic Cable.

Be virtuous and you will be eccentric.

MARK TWAIN, Mental Photographs. (1893)

Be good and you will be lonesome.

MARK TWAIN, Following the Equator. Legend under author's photograph, used as frontispiece. (1897)

Be virtuous and you'll be bilious.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 127. (1920)

<sup>8</sup> Be good (if you can't be good, be careful).

HARRINGTON TATE. Refrain of popular song. (1907) American soldiers in France, 1918-20, amended this to, "If you can't be good, be sanitary."

<sup>9</sup> To be good is noble, but to show others how to be good is nobler and no trouble.

MARK TWAIN, Following the Equator. Prefatory note to Pudd'nhead Wilson's Maxims. (1897)

<sup>10</sup> He can never be good that is not obstinate.

BISHOP THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 126. (c. 1750)

<sup>11</sup> Formerly it was Be good! Now it is, Make Good!

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, p. 43. (1906)

IV—Doing Good

<sup>12</sup> He who eats much evacuates much, and he who increaseth his flesh multiplieth food for worms; but he who multiplieth good works causes peace within himself.

Babylonian Talmud: Aboth d'R. Nathan. Ch. 24. (c. 450) A saying of Hillel.

<sup>13</sup> Ther is an old proverbe seith: that "the goodnesse that thou mayst do this day, do it; and abyde nat ne delaye it nat til to-morwe."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 71. (c. 1387)

None can be good too soon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3645. (1732)

It is not enough to do good; one must do it the right way.

JOHN MORLEY, On Compromise. (1874) The French say, "En tous les temps fait il bon bien faire" (It is always time to do good); the Italians, "Fa bene, e non guardari a chi" (Do good, and never mind to whom).

<sup>14</sup> While I can crawl upon this planet I think myself obliged to do what good I can, in my narrow domestic spheres, to my fellow-creatures, and to wish them all the good I cannot do.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letter to the Bishop of Waterford, 22 Jan., 1760.

I expect to pass through this world but once. Any good therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to my fellow creature, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.

STEPHEN GRELLET (?), Maxim. (a. 1855) Attributed to Grellet, an American Quaker of French birth, but not found in his writings. It has been attributed to many others—Penn, Wesley, Carlyle, Emerson among them—but it is probably Grellet's.

We only pass this way once.

ETHEL WHITE, The Wheel Spins. Ch. 3. (1936)

<sup>1</sup> What more provokes than doing good?

DR. PATRICK DELANEY, The Pheasant and the Lark, l. 123. (1730)

We have no right to make unhappy those whom we cannot make good. (Nous n'avons pas le droit de rendre misérables ceux que nous ne pouvons rendre bons.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 27. (1746)

No people do so much harm as those who go about doing good.

MANDELL CREIGHTON, Life. Vol. i, p. 503. (1904)

It is often the task of the wise to repair the harm done by the good.

VISCOUNT HALIFAX, Radio Address, Nov., 1939.

Quoted as "a cynical saying."

<sup>2</sup> What is serving God? 'Tis doing good to Man.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747

The noblest question in the world is, What good may I do in it?

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

As often as we do good, we sacrifice.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

I find it practically impossible to be good; but I can do good.

FRANKLIN, on his deathbed. (1790) See EARLY, A New England Sampler, p. 114.

<sup>3</sup> Like an Hog, he does no good till he dies.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3226. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> The Good you do is not lost, tho' you forget it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4559. (1732)

The smallest desire to do good, though unknown to man, is certainly known to heaven.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 478. (1872)

Do good and throw it into the sea; if God doesn't see it, the fishes will.

HELEN REILLY, Three Women in Black, p. 6.

(1941) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>5</sup> Let us not be weary in well-doing. (τὸ δὲ καλὸν ποιοῦντες μὴ ἐνκακώμεν.)

New Testament: Galatians, vi, 9. (c. A. D. 53)

The Vulgate is, "Bonum autem facientes, non deficiamus."

Let us ne'er cease from doing good to mortals. (μὴ τι παυσώμεσθα ἄρᾳς εἰς βροτοῦς.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Old Men in Public Affairs. Ch. 14, sec. 791D. (c. A. D. 95) A quotation from an unknown poet, repeated in sec. 1099A.

Never restrain thy hand from doing good.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 10. (c. 1000)

Never be weary of well doing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 154. (1670)

Do good, and then do it again.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 269. (1678)

Do good, if you expect to receive it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1306. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Hard was their lodging, homely was their food, For all their luxury was doing good.

SAMUEL GARTH, Claremont, l. 149. (c. 1700)

Learn the luxury of doing good.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 22. (1765)

Now, at a certain time, in pleasant mood,

He tried the luxury of doing good.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. iii. (1819)

<sup>7</sup> It is a common saying, that he is in great faulte, which knoweth what is good and doeth it not.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk. ii, p. 244. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>8</sup> It is a rare thing to do good.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 9. (1659)

<sup>9</sup> To those who do good, their good shall return again with interest.

MOHAMMED, Koran, x, 26. (c. 622) Naish, tr

<sup>10</sup> There is none that doeth good, no, not one. (Non est qui faciat bonum, non est usque ad unum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xiv, 3. (c. 250 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> To say you have done good is not goodness; only to do good is. (Shuo 'hao pu wei 'hao; tso 'hao fang wei 'hao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 1665. (1875)

Do good now; reward will come hereafter (Chin shêng tso fu, lai shêng hsiao shou.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 2412. See also under DEED.

<sup>12</sup> I never did repent for doing good.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 4, 10. (1597)

Sure there's Wondrous Joy in Doing Good

SWIFT, Ode to the King, l. 1. (1691)

<sup>13</sup> As Sterne says, "We do not love men so much for the good that they do us, as for the good that we do them."

TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. i, pt. i, ch. 26. (1865) Dole, tr. The sentence has not been found in Sterne's works.

<sup>14</sup> Do good whilst thou livest if thou wishest to live after death. (Fac bona dum vives, post mortem vivere si vis.)

UNKNOWN, Medieval Inscription, Tamworth church. See also DEEDS: GOOD DEEDS.

V—The Good Man

- <sup>1</sup> Many are the ambushes laid for the good.
(Multae insidiae sunt bonis.)
ACCIUS, Atreus. Frag. 178, Loeb. (c. 140 B. C.)
He is high-minded, but empty-bellied.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 698. (1817)
Good men suffer much. ('Hao jên to mo nan.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1337. (1875)
- <sup>2</sup> Goodness is scarce. (ὀλίγον τὸ χρηστὸν ἐστίν.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 783. (405 B. C.)
Good men are scanty, make much of one.
PHINEAS FLETCHER, Sicelides. Act iii, sc. 4.
(1631) The Germans say, "Fromme Leute wohnen weit auseinander" (Good people live far apart).
Make much of one, good men are scarce.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 118. (1670)
Good folks are scarce, you'll take care of one.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 124. (1721)
"Spoken to those who carefully provide against ill weather."
Maids, make much of one; good Men are scarce.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3307. (1732)
As good people's very scarce, what I says is, make the most on 'em.
DICKENS, Sketches by Boz: Gin Shops. (1835)
- <sup>3</sup> Say not that all the good are dead. (θνύσκειν μὴ λέγε τοὺς ἀγαθοὺς.)
CALLIMACHUS, Epitaph. (c. 250 B. C.) See Greek Anthology, vii, 451. Reminiscent of EURIPIDES, Temenidae, frag. 734, "When good men die their goodness does not perish, but lives though they are gone."
- <sup>4</sup> You can't keep a good man down.
M. F. CAREY. Title of popular song. (1900)
Who wants to keep a good man down?
H. B. FULLER, Striking an Average. (1901)
You can't keep a squirrel on the ground.
MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 212. (1942)
- <sup>5</sup> Good people walk on, whatever befall.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 441. (1938) A Japanese proverb.
- <sup>6</sup> Ther nis no creature so good that him ne wanteth somewhat of the perfeccioun of god, that is his maker.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 15. (c. 1387)
No man so good, but another may be as good as he.
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 265. (1662)
- <sup>7</sup> All men are born good. He who loses his goodness and yet lives is lucky to escape.
CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) Giles tr., p. 59.
- <sup>8</sup> You have to pay a price for being a good man.
OWEN DAVIS, Icebound. Act ii. (1923)
- <sup>9</sup> All things are becoming in good men. (Omnia bonos viros decent.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. ix, No. 60. (1523) "If a man has acquired a character for uprightness and justice," says Erasmus. "a favorable construction is put upon everything he says or does. On the contrary the best actions of bad men are suspected." See under REPUTATION.
- <sup>10</sup> Good Men are a publick Good.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1718. (1732)
A good man protects three villages; a good dog, three houses.
H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, p. 341. (1937)
- <sup>11</sup> Few persons have courage enough to appear as good as they really are.
J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)
Men in all ways are better than they seem.
EMERSON, Essays: New England Reformers. (1844)
- <sup>12</sup> If a good man thrive, all thrive with him.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 697. (1640)
Amongst good men two men suffice.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 884.
- <sup>13</sup> Of their own selves the good make for the feasts of the good. (αὐτόματοι δ' ἀγαθοὶ ἀγαθὸν ἐνὶ δαίρας ἱεῖνται.)
HESIOD (?), The Marriage of Ceyx. No. 2. (c. 600 B. C.) ZENOBIUS, ii, 19, refers to the saying as a proverb which Heracles used to explain his constant visits to the house of Ceyx of Trachis.
Good to the good from the good. (Bonus bonis bene feceris.)
PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 1218. (c. 194 B. C.) There is a Latin proverb usually credited to Pope Gregory I, "Bonum esse cum bonis, haud valde laudabile est" (To be good when with the good is no great matter for praise)
As a man of men, and of beastes a beast, so of the good for the most part, is engendered the good.
GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 17.
- Good finds good.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 458. (1640)
It is a sign of true goodness to be willing to live always in the sight of good men. (C'est être véritablement honnête homme, que de vouloir être toujours exposé à la vue des honnêtes gens.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 206. (1665)
- <sup>14</sup> She can do no more harme than can a she ape.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
Heywood is trying to play upon words
A good man can no more harm than a sheep.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 316. (1605)
A good Man is no more to be fear'd than a Sheep.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 160. (1732)
- <sup>15</sup> Who is the good man? He who keeps the decrees of the Fathers, and the laws and ordinances. (Vir bonus est quis? | qui consulta patrum, qui leges iuraque servat.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. I, epis. 16, l. 40. (20 B. C.) Good men are the stars, the planets of the ages wherein they live, and illustrate the times.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Pius et Probis (1636)

He is a good Man that is better than Men commonly are.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Letter to Lady Essex. (1674)

He's a good Man whom Fortune makes better.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2438. (1732)

Put an end once for all to this discussion of what a good man should be, and be one. (μηκέθ' δλωσ περί τοῦ, ὅλον τινα εἶναι τὸν ἀγαθὸν ἄνδρα [δεῖ], διαλέγεσθαι, ἀλλὰ εἶναι τοιοῦτον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. x, No. 16. (C. A. D. 174)

A good man doubles for himself his life's span; for he lives twice who can find delight in remembering his past life. (Ampliat aetatis spatium sibi vir bonus: hoc est | vivere bis. vita posse priore frui.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 23. (A. D. 93)

Thus would I double my life's fading space; For he that runs it well, twice runs his race

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself. (c. 1650)

For he lives twice who can at once employ The present well, and ev'n the past enjoy.

POPE, Imitation of Martial. (c. 1735)

The good live longest; to the good alone The record of the past remains their own.

J. E. T. ROGERS, Critics. (c. 1870)

All the good guys go nutty in their old age thinkin' about the good times they mighta had if they hadn't been so good.

PETER CHENEY, Farewell to the Admiral, p. 239. (1943)

A good man is always a greenhorn. (Semper homo bonus tiro est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 51. (C. A. D. 103)

The good man makes others good. (ὁ χρηστός καὶ χρηστοὺς ποιεῖ.)

MENANDER, Charioteer. Frag. 203K. (c. 300 B. C.) Good, the more Communicated, more abundant grows.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 71. (1667)

There are two good men—one dead, the other unborn. (Yu liang 'hao jên—yi ko ssü liao, yi ko wei shêng.)

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. (DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, II, 323. 1872) C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 154, has, "There are only two good men, one is dead, and the other is not yet born."

Good men are easy to command. (Facilest imperium in bonis.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 611. (c. 200 B. C.)

Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace. (Cus-todi innocentiam, et vide aequitatem.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxvii, 37. (c. 250 B. C.) He is so good that no one can be a better man. (Est bonus, ut melior vir | non alius quisquam.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 32. (35 B. C.) There was a man named Joseph, a counsellor; and he was a good man and a just. (ἀνὴρ ἀγαθὸς καὶ δίκαιος.)

New Testament: Luke, xxiii, 50. (C. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Vir bonus et iustus."

Dubius is such a scrupulous good man.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 119. (1781) He was his Maker's image undefaced.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Remorse. Act ii, sc. 1. (1813) He was so good he would pour rose-water over a toad.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, A Charitable Man. (1838)

The dutiful man reduced to misery is a reproach to the good. (Bonorum crimen est officiosus miser.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 81. (c. 43 B. C.) It is the mark of a good man to disappoint no one even in his death. (Boni est viri etiam in morte nullum fallere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 97. i. e. his manner of dying equals the standard of his life.

No one is a good man unless he is good to all. (Bonus vir nemo est nisi qui bonus est omnibus.) PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 99.

You may try many times before you find a good man. (Multa ante temptes quam virum invenias bonum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 412. (c. 43 B. C.) A really good man is born, like the phoenix, perhaps once in five hundred years. (Nam ille alter fortasse tamquam phoenix semel anno quingentesimo nascitur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. No. xlii, l. (C. A. D. 64) Since learned men have appeared, good men have become rare. (Postquam docti prodierunt, boni desunt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, sec. 13. (C. 64 A. D.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, I, 24. Translated also by ROUSSEAU, Discours sur les Lettres: "Depuis que les savants ont commencé à paroître parmi nous, les gens de bien se sont éclipsés."

Rare indeed are good men; in number they are scarcely as many as the gates of Thebes, or the mouths of the wealthy Nile. (Rari quippe boni; numera vix sunt totidem quot | Thebarum portae, vel divitis ostia Nili.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 26. (C. A. D. 120) Thebes had seven gates and the Nile seven mouths. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, I, 38.

A good man is a rare animal. (Vir bonus est animal rarum.)

MANTUANO, Eclogues, vi, 222. (c. 1500) The word of Bias is true that "The worst part is the greatest," or Ecclesiastes, "Of a thousand there is not one good." (Le mot de Bias est vray, que "La pire part, c'est la plus grande," ou ce que dict l'Ecclesiastique, que "De mille il n'en est pas bon."

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 38. (1580)
What's good was never yet plentiful. (Nunca lo bueno fue mucho.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1605)

<sup>1</sup>
Good men and true.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses Looking-Glasse. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 79. (c. 1630)

On one occasion Nelson took too much champagne. . . . Such a thing has happened on isolated occasions to many a good man and true.

A. T. MAHAN, Nelson. Vol. ii, ch. 15. (1897)

<sup>2</sup>
In every good man a god doth dwell. (In unoquoque virorum bonorum habitat deus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xli, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 64)
No evil can befall a good man. (Nihil accidere bono viro mali potest.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 2, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 45)

<sup>3</sup>
Hating none and courting none, how can he be other than good?

UNKNOWN, Book of Songs (Shiking). (c. 600 B. C.)

THE GOOD DIE YOUNG, see DEATH: DEATH AND YOUTH.

VI—Good and Bad

See also Character: Good and Bad

<sup>4</sup>
There is something bad in everything that is good. (παῖσι μὲρ' ἐν ἀγαθοῖσι χέρρον.)

ALCAEUS, To Mytilene. Frag. 74. (c. 595 B. C.)
Some sour in every sweet. EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 369.

Good and bad cannot be kept apart,
There is always some commingling.
(οὐκ ἂν γένοιτο χωρὶς ἐσθλὰ καὶ κακά, ἀλλ' ἔστι τις σύγκρασις.)

EURIPIDES, Aeolus. Fr. 21. (c. 420 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 25D, 369B, 474A

If thou hast in thee more of good than bad,
Who are but human, thou shalt do full well.
(ἀλλ' εἰ τὰ πλείω χρηστὰ τῶν κακῶν ἔχεις, ἄνθρωπος οὖσα κάρτα γ' εὖ πράξεις ἂν.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 471. (c. 428 B. C.)

Is there such a thing as weal unmixed with woe anywhere? (An boni quid usquamst, quod quisquam uti possiet | sine malo omni?)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 145. (c. 200 B. C.) The Latin proverb is, "Sunt bona mixta malis, sunt mala mixta bonis" (Good things are mixed with bad, bad things with good).

There is no goodness without badness. (Bonitas sine crimine nil est.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. Zurich mss., l. 5 (c. 175 B. C.)

None so good that faults he has none; none so bad that he is nothing worth.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 133. (c. 900)

Of the pleasures and goods that we have, not one is free from some mixture of bad. (Des plaisirs et biens que nous avons, il n'en est aucun exempt de quelque mélange de mal.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 20. (1508)

There is no bad in human affairs that has not some good mingled with it. (Non è male alcuno nelle cose umane che non abbia congiunto seco qualche bene.)

FRANCESCO GUICCIARDINI, Storia d'Italia. (1530)

All things are mixt, the useful with the vain,
The good with bad, the noble with the vile.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, No. 7. (1635)

The Bad among the Good are here mixt ever:
The Good without the Bad are here plac'd never.

ROBERT HERRICK, Good and Bad. (1648)

The world in all doth but two nations bear,—
The good, the bad; and these mixed everywhere.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Loyal Scot. (c. 1670)

The Portuguese say, "Bons et máos mantem cidade" (Good and bad make up a city).

Nothing so bad in which there is not something of good.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 408. (1678)

As it is said of the greatest liar that he tells more truth than falsehood, so it may be said of the worst man that he does more good than evil.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 3 April, 1778.

In men whom men condemn as ill

I find so much of goodness still,

In men whom men pronounce divine

I find so much of sin and blot,

I do not dare to draw a line

Between the two, where God has not.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Byron. (1871)

There are two kinds of people on earth to-day,
Just two kinds of people, no more, I say.

Not the good and the bad, for 'tis well understood

That the good are half bad, and the bad are half good . . .

No! the two kinds of people on earth I mean

Are the people who lift and the people who lean.

ELLA W. WILCOX, Lifting and Leaning. (c. 1890)

It is absurd to divide people into good and bad.
People are either charming or tedious.

WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act i. (1892)

There are only two sorts of people: the efficient and the inefficient.

SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iv. (1907)

There is so much good in the worst of us,

And so much bad in the best of us,

That it hardly becomes any of us

To talk about the rest of us.

UNKNOWN, Good and Bad. First printed in the Record, of Marion, Kansas, and attributed to its editor, Edward H. Hoch. Also to R. L. Stevenson and Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, but disclaimed by all of them.

<sup>5</sup>
The good are good in one way, and the bad bad in many. (ἐσθλοὶ μὲν γὰρ ἀπλῶς, παντοδαπῶς δὲ κακοί.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

sec. 14. (c. 335 B. C.) Aristotle is quoting a verse from an unknown source, sometimes translated, "Goodness is simple, badness manifold."

1 The righteous promise little and accomplish much, while the wicked promise much and perform nothing.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 87a. (c. 450)

2 Nothing is good or bad, but by comparison.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 464. (1855)

Nothing so bad as not to be good for something.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 465.

The French say, "A quelque chose malheur est bonne" (Bad fortune is good for something); the Italians, "Sempre il mal non vien per nuocere" (Often bad fortune does not lead to harm), and also, "Spesso d'un gran male nasce un gran bene" (Often out of a great bad is born a great good).

3 Search for the good; as for the bad, let it come of itself. (Al bien buscallo; y al mal, esperallo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 227. (1856) A Spanish proverb. Spaniards also say, "Al buen dia, abrele la puerta; Y para el malo te apareja" (Seize the good chance and wait for the bad one).

4 When you see a good man try to emulate him, when you see a bad man search yourself for his faults.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 17. (c. 500 B. C.) It is good to know the life of the vicious, to amend ours, but it is better to seek to know the life of the wise and good, to imitate it. (È bono per saper la vita de i vitiosi, per emendar la nostra, ma è meglio cercar si sapere quella de i saui & buoni, per imitarla.)

ANTONIO GUEVARA, Discorsi. (1540) Quoted by FLORIO, Firste Fruites

5 Alas! how true the old saying is: You can't make a good man out of a bad one. (φευ φευ παλαιὸς αἶνος ὡς καλὰς ἔχει, οὐκ ἂν γένοιτο χρηστὸς ἐκ κακοῦ.)

EURIPIDES, Aeolus. Fr. (c. 420 B. C.)

6 This is the interest alike of citizen and state, that the wrong-doer be punished and the good rewarded. (πάσι γὰρ κοινὸν τόδε | ἰδὲ θ' ἐκάστω καὶ πόλει, τὸν μὲν κακὸν | κακὸν τι πάσχειν, τὸν δὲ χρηστὸν εὐτυχεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 902. (c. 425 B. C.)

HE WHO SPARES THE BAD CORRUPTS THE GOOD, see under JUSTICE AND MERCY.

7 There are those who say There is more bad than good in human nature; Opinion contrary unto these I hold, That good o'er bad predominates in man.

(ἔλεξε γὰρ τις ὡς τὰ χεῖρονα πλείω βροτοῖσιν ἐστὶ τῶν ἀμεινόνων ἐγὼ δὲ τούτοις ἀντίαν γνώμην ἔχω πλείω τὰ χρηστὰ τῶν κακῶν εἶναι βροτοῖς.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 196. (c. 421 B. C.)

8 The bad foloweth the good, & good foloweth the bad. (El mal va dietro al bene, & il bene al male.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Good does not necessarily succeed evil; another and worse evil may succeed it. (Le bien ne succede pas necessairement au mal; un aultre mal luy peult succeder, et pire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

9 A good man is seldom uneasy, an ill one never easy.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

10 A Man is not good or bad, for one Action.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 280. (1732)

11 Badness can be got easily: the road to her is smooth (λείη μὲν ὁδός), and she lives very near. But between us and Goodness the gods have placed the sweat of our brows: long and steep is the path that leads to her (μακρὸς δὲ καὶ ὀρθὸς οἶμος ἐς αὐτήν), and at first it is rough; but when a man has reached the top, then is she easy to reach.

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 287. (c. 800 B. C.)

Quoted by XENOPHON, Memorabilia, ii, 1, 20, and by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 24D.

It is hard to be good. (χαλεπὸν φατ' εσθλὸν ἔμμεναι.)

PITTACUS, ruler of Mytilene, who despaired of ruling well for this reason. (c. 600 B. C.) As quoted by PLATO, Protagoras, 339C. See also DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus, i, 76.

Though it come of a wise man, I hold not with the saying of Pittacus, "Tis hard to be good." . . . Any man is good in good fortune and bad in bad.

SIMONIDES, to Scopas. Frag. 19. (c. 475 B. C.)

Simonides means that Pittacus does not go far enough for him. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 285. See also the discussion of this phrase in PLATO, Protagoras, 339ff.

I think I know the meaning of the proverb, "beautiful things are difficult." (τὸ "χαλεπὰ τὰ καλὰ," δοκῶ μοι εἰδέναι.)

PLATO, Greater Hippias. Sec. 304E. (c. 375 B. C.) A proverb often cited by Plato, with minor variations. Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children, 6C. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, 1, 12, who gives the Greek as δύσκολα τὰ καλὰ, and the Latin. "Difficilia quae pulchra." Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo 29, with the rendering, "Harde or difficult be those thynges yt be goodle or honeste." Erasmus gives an alternative Latin form. "Ardua quae pulchra."

That all excellent things are hard, is so confessed a truth, that it has passed into a vulgar proverb.

JOSEPH MEDE, Works: Preface. (1664)

To do good is like climbing a hill—it requires effort. To do evil is like going down hill—no effort is needed.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts): On Practice. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

With the proverb, Good things are hard, [Socrates] continually rebuked their empty pretensions.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 6. (1853)

To be blessed is not easy.

WALDO FRANK, The Bridegroom Cometh, p. 443. (1939) Quoted from an unknown source.

1 Good men instruct each other, and bad men are the materials they work with.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 27. (c. 550 B.C.) Old, tr.

The good are not contentious; the contentious are not good. (Shan' 'ché pu pien', pien' 'ché pu shan'.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 56.

2 No one deserves to be praised for goodness, if he hasn't the spirit to be bad. (Nul ne mérite d'être loué de sa bonté, s'il n'a pas la force d'être méchant.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 237. (1665)

None are known to be good until they have opportunity to be bad.

BENJAMIN WHICHOTE, Moral Aphorisms (a. 1683)

3 There are bad men who would be less dangerous if they had no goodness of heart. (Il y a des méchants qui seraient moins dangereux s'ils n'avaient aucune bonté.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 284. (1665)

4 To him who deems nobody bad who can be good? (Cui malus est nemo quis bonus esse potest?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 80. (c. A.D.

103) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 7. Florio renders it, "To him who good can seeme |

Who doth none bad esteeme?"

He is not good himself, who speaks well of every body alike.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1935. (1732)

Some, that speak no ill of any, do no good to any.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4219. (1732)

5 The good often fare the worse for the bad.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. i, bk. i, ch. 7. (1712)

6 The good comes at a crawl, the bad you get on the spot. (Bene perspisso evenit, mali praesentarium est.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 792. (c. 194 B.C.) See also under DISEASE.

Good men make me poor, bad ones make me rich. (Boni me viri pauperant, improbi augent.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 1128. (c. 195 B.C.)

7 It is often bad to grow accustomed even to good things. (Etiam bonis malum saepe est adulescere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 192. (c. 43 B.C.)

He must be called bad who is good only in his own interest. (Malus est vocandus qui sua est causa bonus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 357.

8 What is taken from the bad is a gift to the good. (Quod improbis eripitur donatur probis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 588. (c. 43 B.C.)

9 When the bad imitates the good, he is scheming. (Nescio quid agitat, cum bonum imitatur malus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 445. (c. 43 B.C.)

And grant the bad what happiness they would, One they must want, which is, to pass for good.

POPE, An Essay on Man, iv, 92. (1734)

There is no Man so Bad but he secretly respects the Good.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

10 The coalition of Blifil and Black George—the combination, unheard of till then, of the puritan and the blackleg.

JOHN RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE, Speech, House of Representatives, 30 March, 1826. A reference to the alliance of Henry Clay and John Quincy Adams. It resulted in a duel with Clay, 8 April, 1826, in which neither was wounded. Blifil and Black George are characters in Fielding's Tom Jones.

11 That which is good for the back is bad for the head.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1678) The Scots say, "Two goods seldom meet; What's good for the plant is ill for the peat."

Good for the Liver may be bad for the Spleen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1711. (1732)

12 Some good, some bad, as sheep come to the fold.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 247. (1678)

13 I suffer the yl, hoping for the good.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Hours of Recreation, p. 219. "Suffer the ill, and loke for the good."—

Ibid, 221.

I suffer the bad, hoping for the better.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

14 A man cannot become perfect in a hundred years; in less than a day he may become corrupt.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1486. (1875)

15 'Tis not right to adjudge Bad men at random good, or good men bad.

(οὐ γὰρ δίκαιον οὐτε τοὺς κακοὺς μάτην χρηστοὺς νομίζειν οὐτε τοὺς χρηστοὺς κακοὺς.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 609. (c. 409 B.C.) Storr, tr.

16 The present bad outweighs the past good. (Hic plus malist quam illic boni.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 720. (166 B.C.)

17 There is no quarrel between the good and the bad, but only between the bad and the bad.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 20 Oct., 1840.

All good things are cheap, all bad things very dear.

H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts, 3 March, 1841.

There is no odor so bad as that which arises from goodness tainted.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. (1854)

<sup>1</sup> Nothing out of its place is good, and nothing in its place is bad.

WHITMAN, Leaves of Grass: Preface. (1855)

VII—Good and Evil

See also Vice and Virtue

<sup>2</sup> In fleeing the evil I found the good. (ἐφυγον κακόν, ἔυρον ἀμεινον.)

AESCHINES. (c. 390 B. C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 2, who gives the Latin, "Effugi malum, inveni bonum."

<sup>3</sup> The Holy One, blessed be He, when he formed man created two impulses, one good and the other evil.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 61a. (c. 450) The explanation of the Rabbis is ingenious. The word "wajjitzer" (and he formed) used in Genesis ii, 7, has two letters j. The Hebrew word for impulse is "Jetzer," and the two j's stand for "Jetzer Tob," the good impulse, and "Jetzer Hara," the evil impulse.

If a man strives to lead an upright life, God will aid him; if he prefers evil, the way is open.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 104.

<sup>4</sup> Evil and good are God's right hand and left.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem. (1839)

<sup>5</sup> We neuer know what 'tis in heaven to dwell,
Till wee haue had some feeling of grim hell.
JOHN BODENHAM, ed., Bel-vedere, p. 6. (1600)
No man knows what is good except he hath endured evil.

JOHN DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 59. (1633)
Knowledge of Good bought dear by knowing ill.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 222. (1667)
No man better knows what good is than he who hath endured evil.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1670)
He knows best what good is that has endured evil.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 378. (1855)
<sup>6</sup> If goodness cannot mend him, evil will not mend him.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 676. (1817)

<sup>7</sup> Life's rule is, despise your goods and face your ills. (Vel bona contemni docet usus vel mala ferri.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> This proverbe is seyde ful sooth,
Him that nat wene wel that yvel dooth.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reve's Tale, l. 399. (c. 1386) He needs not expect good that does evil.

<sup>9</sup> The end of our good begins our evil.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 50. (1611)

The end of his good is the beginning of his woe.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 117. (1633) See also JOY AND SORROW.

<sup>10</sup> The essence of good and evil is a certain kind of moral purpose. (οὐσία τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ . . . τοῦ κακοῦ προαίρεσις ποιά.)

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 29, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 100)

<sup>11</sup> Alas, from God does evil come to men,
When, knowing what is good, they do it not. (αἰαὶ τόδ' ἤδη θεῖον ἀνθρώποις κακόν, ὅταν τις εἰδῇ τὰγαθόν, χρήται δὲ μή.)

EURIPIDES, Chrysis. Frag. 841, Nauck. (c. 420 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 33F, 446A.

<sup>12</sup> Most good hath he to whom no ill befalls as days wear on. (κεῖνος ὀλβιώτατος, ὅτῳ κατ' ἡμᾶρ τυγχάνει μηδὲν κακόν.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 627. (c. 425 B. C.)

Enough, and more, of good is his who hath no ill. (Nimium boni est cui nihil est mali.)

ENNIUS, Hecuba. (c. 180 B. C.) Quoted by CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 13, sec. 41.

<sup>13</sup> With evil good mixes not. (κακῶ γὰρ ἐσθλὸν οὐ συμμίσγνται.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 1017. (c. 419 B. C.)

<sup>14</sup> Good and Evil are chiefly in the Imagination.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1699. (1732)

There is not the thickness of a Sixpence, between Good and Evil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4933.

<sup>15</sup> To choose good is to avoid evil.

SALOMON IBN GABRIOL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 105. (c. 1050)

Of good things wee ought alwaies to choose the best, and of evill, to leave the worst.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 143. (1574) Pettie, tr.

OF TWO EVILS CHOOSE THE LESSER, see under EVIL.

<sup>16</sup> If a man is evil, men fear him, but Heaven does not; if a man is virtuous, men oppress him, but Heaven does not.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 128. (1937)

<sup>17</sup> Good is to be sought out, and evil attended.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 117. (1640)

Evils have their comfort; good none can support (to wit) with a moderate and contented heart.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 210.

It costs more to do ill than to do well.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 264.

Bear with evil, and expect good.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 513.

Set good against evil.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 824.

1 Better good afar off, than evil at hand.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 269. (1640)

Good at a Distance, is better than Evil at Hand.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1700. (1732)

2 Show a good man his error, and he turns it to a virtue; but an ill, it doubles his fault.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 657. (1640)
Chastise the good, they become better; chastise the bad, they become worse.

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 180. (1856) An Italian proverb.

3 Two urns stand on the floor of the palace of Zeus

Filled with the doom he giveth, evils and blessings.

(δοιοι γάρ τε πίθοι κατακελταται ἐν Διὸς οὔδαι δῶρων ὅλα δίδωσι, κακῶν, ἕτερος δὲ ἑάων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 527. (c. 850 B.C.)

Quoted by PLATO, Republic, 579D, and by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 24B, 105C, 369C. PLUTARCH (369C) disputes the truth of the myth. HESIOD (c. 800 B.C.) also gives a version of the legend (Works and Days, l. 94), in which Pandora uncovers the urn, and scatters evils only.

4 Of myself I know in my heart and understand each thing, the good and the evil, whereas heretofore I was but a child. (ἐσθλὰ ἔγωγε καὶ τὰ χεῖρα.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xviii, l. 228. (c. 850 B.C.)
Your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil. (Aperientur oculi vestri: et eritis sicut dii, scientes bonum et malum.)

Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 5. (c. 550 B.C.)

5 Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; . . . that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter. (Vae qui dicitis malum bonum, et bonum malum: ponentes amarum in dulce, et dulce in amarum.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 20. (c. 725 B.C.)

Inability to tell good from evil is the greatest worry of man's life. (Ignorantia rerum bonarum et malarum, maxime hominum vita vexetur.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 43. (c. 45 B.C.)

He weeps and laughs without knowing why. Woe to the man who cannot distinguish between good and evil.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 103a.

Signified unto us by the sentence, woe be unto you which call the evil good.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 88. (1574) Pettie, tr.

6 We are unable to explain either the prosperity of the wicked or the afflictions of the righteous.

RABBI JANNAI, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iv, 21. (c. A.D. 150) Oesterley, tr.

7 We must do wrong in small ways for the sake of doing right in large ways. (τὰ μικρὰ δεῖν ἀδικεῖν ἕνεκεν τοῦ τὰ μεγάλα δικαιοπραγεῖν.)

JASON, DESPOT OF PHERAE. (c. 371 B.C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 135F, 817F, and by ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric, i, 12, 31. As some affirm that we say, Let us do evil, that good may come. (ποιήσωμεν τὰ κακὰ ἵνα ἔλθῃ τὰ ἀγαθά.)

New Testament: Romans, iii, 8. (c. A.D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Faciamus mala ut veniant bona."

We often do good in order that we may do evil with impunity. (On fait souvent du bien pour pouvoir impunément faire du mal.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 121. (1665)

Evil must not be done that good may come of it. SAMUEL SEWELL, Selling of Joseph. (1700)

The doing evil to avoid evil Cannot be good.

S. T. COLERIDGE, tr., The Death of Wallenstein Act iv, sc. 6. (1800)

He who does evil that good may come, pays a toll to the devil to let him into heaven.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth, ii, 213. (1827)

Perish with him the folly that seeks through evil good.

J. G. WHITTIER, Brown of Ossawatomie. (1860)

THE END JUSTIFIES THE MEANS, see under END

8 I would return good for good; I would also return good for evil. I would meet trust with trust; I would likewise meet suspicion with confidence.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 49. (c. 550 B.C.) Old, tr.

Whoso rewardeth evil for good, evil shall not depart from his house. (Qui reddit mala pro bonis, non recedet malum de domo eius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 13. (c. 350 B.C.)

Evil for good and good for evil is your system. (Bene merenti male es, male merenti bona es.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 129. (c. 200 B.C.)

You mean to return me evil for good? (Sicine mi abs te bene merenti, male refertur gratia?)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 320. (c. 200 B.C.)

The great principle of returning good for evil.

UNKNOWN, Sutra of Forty-Five Secs. (c. 1200)

There can be nothing more noble then to do well to those, that deserve yll.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 452. (1580)

Overcome evil with good. Turn aside evil with that which is better.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xiii, 22. (c. 622)

Meet evil with good, and conquer enmity with generosity.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xxiii, 96.

Return good for evil.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xli, 34.

For ill do well, then fear not hell.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 357. (1855)

This Indian [proverb] suggesting that good should be returned for evil: The sandal tree perfumes the axe that fells it.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 4. (1853)

There is only one way to put an end to evil, and that is to do good for evil.

LEO TOLSTOY, What I Believe. (1884)

1 All good to me is lost; Evil, be thou my good.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 109. (1667)
If well and them cannot, then ill and them can.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 155. (1670)
What we all love is good touched up with evil—
Religion's self must have a spice of devil.

A. H. CLOUGH, Dipsychus. Pt. i, sec. 3. (1849)
If not good, why then evil,
If not good good, good devil.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday. (1849)

To good and evil equal bent,
He's both a devil and a saint.

SHEPHERD KOLLOCK, of Samuel Loudon. See
A. J. WALL, N.Y. Hist. Soc. Quart. Bull.,
Oct., 1922.

2 He who willethe the good of others shall partake that good, and in like manner he who willethe evil shall share that evil.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, iv, 85. (c. 622) Naish,
tr. See also under RETRIBUTION.

To him who doeth good, render his good tenfold. He who doeth evil, let him be punished only in the measure in which he hath transgressed.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, vi, 160.

3 If you accomplish anything noble with toil, the toil passes, but the noble deed endures; if you do anything shameful with pleasure, the pleasure passes, but the shame endures. (ἂν τι πράξεις καλὸν μετὰ πόνου, ὁ μὲν πόνος οἴχεται, τὸ δὲ καλὸν μένει· ἂν τι ποιήσης αἰσχρὸν μετὰ ἡδονῆς, τὸ μὲν ἡδὺ οἴχεται, τὸ δὲ αἰσχρὸν μένει.)

MUSONIUS, Apothegm. (c. A. D. 65) See AULUS GELLIIUS, Noctes Atticae, xvi, 1. Gellius says that when he was a school-boy he heard Musonius utter this "true and brilliant saying," and that he committed it to memory. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 65, with the Latin, "Si quid feceris honestum cum labore, labor abit, honestum manet. Si quid feceris turpe cum voluptate, voluptas abit, turpitudine manet."

4 Evil things are neighbors to good. (Et mala sunt vicina bonis.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 323. (c. 1 B. C.)
FRANCIS BACON, in his Table of the Colours, sec. 7, puts this in different form, "Saepe latet vitium proximitate boni."

Good and evil, we know, in the field of this world grow up together almost inseparably.

JOHN MILTON, Areopagitica. Sec. 7. (1644)

Evil saith to good: My brother.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Hymn to Prosperpine. (1866)

5 I see and approve the better things, yet follow the worse. (Video meliora proboque, deteriora sequor.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vii, l. 20. (c. A. D. 7)

Garth renders this by the well-known couplet,

I see the right, and I approve it too,
Condemn the wrong and yet the wrong pursue.

The good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do. (οὐ γὰρ ὃ θέλω ποιῶ ἀγαθόν, ἀλλὰ ὃ οὐ θέλω κακὸν τοῦτο πράσσω.)

New Testament: Romans, vii, 19. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Non enim quod volo bonum, hoc facio: sed quod nolo malum, hoc ago."

6 The good ever is to be used, the ill refused.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 65. (1576)

7 Two evils for each good are meted out to man by the deathless gods. (ἐν παρ' ἑσλὸν πῆματα σύνδυο δαίονται βροτοῖς θάνατοι.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. iii, l. 81. (c. 474 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 107B.

8 To a good man nothing that happens is evil. (ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀνδρὶ ἀγαθῷ κακόν.)

PLATO, Apology. Ch. 33, sec. 41D. (c. 380 B. C.)

9 A just man falleth seven times, and riseth up again: but the wicked shall fall into mischief. (Septies enim cadet iustus, et resurget: impii autem corruent in malum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 16. (c. 250 B. C.)

Seven pits for the good man and one for the evil-doer.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7A. (c. 450) Meaning that though there are seven pits open for the good man, he escapes them all, whereas the evil-doer falls, even if there be only one.

10 Always to do good, and never evil, is an act singularly royal. (Bien tousiours faire, i'ama'is mal, estant acte vnicquement Royal.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1545)

11 Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good. (ἀποστύγουσιν τὸ πονηρὸν, κολλώμενοι τῷ ἀγαθῷ.)

New Testament: Romans, xii, 9. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Odientes malum, adhaerentes bono."

Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. (μὴ νικῶ ὑπὸ τοῦ κακοῦ, ἀλλὰ νίκα ἐν τῷ ἀγαθῷ τὸ κακόν.)

New Testament: Romans, xii, 21. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Noli vinci a malo, sed vince in bono malum."

12 To do good to the evil is evil.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 4, Apologue 11. (c. 1257)

HE THAT SPARES THE BAD INJURES THE GOOD, see under JUSTICE AND MERCY.

13 Since to them the crooked road appeared straight, they saw the straight one crooked.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 8, Apologue 10. (c. 1257)

Every one who does well benefits his own soul, and every one that sinneth, sinneth against himself.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 1, Apologue 35.

The sufferings of the good have a joyful aspect, while the prosperity of the wicked looks downward.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 69.

A sinner who lifts up his head [in prayer] is better than a devotee who lifts up his head [in pride].

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 8, Maxim 72.

1 Good alone

Is good without a name. Vileness is so:

The property by what it is should go,

Not by the title.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 3, 135. (1602)

2

There is some soul of goodness in things evil, Would men observingly distil it out; . . .

Thus may we gather honey from the weed,

And make a moral of the devil himself.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 1, 4. (1599)

We too often forget that not only is there "a soul of goodness in things evil," but very generally also, a soul of truth in things erroneous.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles. Pt. i, ch. 1, sec. 1. (1862)

3

The evil that men do lives after them;

The good is oft interred with their bones.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 80. (1599)

All your better deeds

Shall be in water writ, but this in marble.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act v, sc. 3. (1611)

Men's evil manners live in brass, their virtues

We write in water.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iv, 2, 45. (1612)

The good that men assume lives after them.

The truth is oft interred with their bones.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be Too Careful, p. 123. (1942)

4

I am in this earthly world; where to do harm Is often laudable, to do good sometime

Accounted dangerous folly.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iv, 2, 75. (1606)

We as often repent the good we have done as the ill.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 127. (c. 1821)

5

Time alone reveals the just man, but a knave is detected even in one day. (χρόνος δίκαιον ἄνδρα δεικνυσιν ἄνθρωπος· κακὸν δὲ καὶ ἐν ἡμέρᾳ γνώσῃς μὲν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Tyrannus, l. 614. (c. 409 B. C.)

6 E'en intolerable ills,

Finding right issue, tend to naught but good.

(λέγω γὰρ καὶ τὰ δύσφορ, εἰ τύχοι κατ' ὁρθὴν ἐξελθόντα, πάντ' ἂν εὐτυχεῖν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Tyrannus, l. 87. (c. 409 B. C.)

Nature from evil brings forth good. (ἐκ τοῦ κακοῦ τ' ἤνεγκεν ἀγαθὸν ἡ φύσις.)

MENANDER, The Necklace. Frag. 407K. (c. 300 B. C.)

From a small evil, a great good. (Exiguum malum, ingens bonum.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia. (c. A. D. 125) Cited by

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 65.

There is not an evil which fails to bring benefit to some one.

Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, p. 38. (c. 550)

The end of good is an evil, and the end of evil is a good. (La fin du bien est un mal, et la fin du mal est un bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 519. (1665)

Evil to some is always good to others.

JANE AUSTEN, Emma. Ch. 30. (1814)

The first lesson of history is the good of evil.

EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

By means of calamity to obtain happiness. (Yin 'huo té fu.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 184. (1872)

Strange, isn't it, how evil is so often turned to good?

LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 132. (1941)

7

O, yet we trust that somehow good

Will be the final goal of ill.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. liv, st. 1. (1850)

Somehow Good was used by William de

Morgan for the title of a novel. (1908)

One may not doubt that somehow Good

Shall come of Water and of Mud.

RUPERT BROOKE, Heaven. (1914)

8

He who does no good does evil enough.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs.

Ch. 6. (1853)

He that would do no ill must do all good, or sit still.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 396. (1855)

9

The wicked are always surprised to find ability in the good. (Les méchants sont toujours surpris de trouver de l'habileté dans les bons.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 103. (1746)

"There is," said Candide, "a great amount of evil in the world." "What does it matter," said the dervish, "whether it is good or evil? When Her Highness sends a ship to Egypt does she worry about the comfort or discomfort of the rats aboard?" (Mais, mon révérend père, dit Candide, il y a horriblement de mal sur la terre — Qu'importe, dit le derviche, qu'il y ait du mal ou du bien? Quand Sa Hautesse envoie un vaisseau en Égypte, s'embarrasse-t-elle si les souris qui sont dans le vaisseau sont à leur aise ou non?)

VOLTAIRE, Candide. Ch. 30. (1759)

GOODNESS

See also Beauty and Goodness; Deeds: Good Deeds; Greatness and Goodness

10

Tread softly and circumspectly in this funambulatory Track and narrow Path of Goodness.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Sec.

1, l. 1. (1682)

11

Put away goodness and you will be naturally good.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.)

- 1 Nothing so popular as goodness.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.
- 2 If goodness were only a theory, it were a pity it should be lost to the world.
HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 308. (c. 1821)
- 3 If whole in life, and free from sin,
One needs no Moorish bow, nor dart,
Nor quiver, carrying death within
By poison's art.
(Integer vitae scelerisque purus non eget Mauris iaculis neque arcu nec venenatis gravida sagittis,
Fusce, pharetra.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 22, l. 1. (23 B.C.)
Gladstone, tr. Quoted by SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 2, 21.
- 4 To love the things we should love and not to love the things we should not love is goodness.
KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts): On Practice. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.
- 5 The highest goodness is like water, for water is excellent in benefitting all things, and it does not strive. It occupies the lowest place, which men abhor.
LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue) Sec. 8. (c. 550 B.C.) Giles, tr. Old has it, "The greatest virtue is like water: it is good to all things."
- 6 Confidence in the goodness of another is good proof of one's own goodness. (La fiance de la bonté d'aultruy est un non legier tesmoignage de la bonté propre.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays, Bk. i, ch. 40. (1580)
- 7 Goodnesse is not felicity, but the rode thither.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from Any Whence: Answer to the Court Newes. (1613)
- 8 Goodness may be vanquished but never annihilated. (Bonum quod est supprimitur, numquam exstinguitur.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 76. (c. 43 B.C.)
Goodness endures and lasts for many a day. (Sufficit, et longum probitas perdurat in aevum.)
OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 49. (c. 1 B.C.)
Great Spirits never with their bodies dye.
ROBERT HERRICK, Great Spirits Survive (1648)
Good Men must die, but Death can not kill them quite.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1719. (1732)
The good live long, the bad die early. (Shen pi shou lao; o pi tsao wang.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2423. (1875)
THE GOOD DIE YOUNG, see under DEATH.
- 9 Goodness means inability to do a wrong. (Viri boni est nescire facere iniuriam.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 721. (c. 43 B.C.)

- The good hate to sin through love of virtue. (Oderunt peccare boni virtutis amore.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 52. (20 B.C.)
- The larger part of goodness is the will to become good. (Itaque pars magna bonitatis est velle fieri bonum.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxiv, sec. 3. (c. A.D. 64) And Seneca adds, "Exiguum est ad legem bonum esse" (It is a slight thing to be good according to law).
- 10 They are best who are loved by the gods. (καπὶ πλείστον ἀριστοὶ τοῖς θεοῖς φιλοῦσιν.)
SIMONIDES, To Scopas. Frag. 19. (c. 475 B.C.)
Simonides is arguing that it is easy to be good in good fortune, and that the best men are those who are luckiest. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 285. As Plutarch points out, Moralia, 361A, Homer frequently calls the good "godlike" and "peers of the gods," and "having prudence gained from the gods." In fact, the first expression is found forty-four times in Homer, and the second sixty-two times.
- 11 He has more Goodness in his little Finger than you have in your whole body.
SWIFT, Mary the Cook-Maid's Letter, l. 9. (1718) Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738) (Miss feels a pimple on her face.) Lord! I think my goodness is coming out.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Americans say, "That's my badness coming out."
- 12 Goodness is the only investment that never fails.
H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 30. (1854)
- 13 Let us pursue the better course. (Meliora sequamur.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iii, l. 188. (19 B.C.)

GOODS

See also Possessions, Property

- 14 When it comes to Reverence, you're certainly There with the Goods.
GEORGE ADE, Fables in Slang, p. 4. (1899)
You're the goods, duty free, and half way to the warehouse in a red wagon.
O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), From Each According to His Ability. (1908)
- 15 With all my worldly goods I thee endow.
Book of Common Prayer: Marriage Service. (1661) ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés says that two clichés have originated from this sentence, "Well endowed with this world's goods," and "All one's worldly goods."
- 16 Better it is to lesen good with worshipec, than it is to winne good with vileinye and shame.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 77. See also under GAIN.

1 A man may lose his goods for want of demanding them.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 17. (1633) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1670)

2 [He] will visit you soon, with that dry piece of goods, his wife.

THOMAS GRAY, Letters. (1751) Works (1884), ii, 228.

His daughter—as droll a piece of goods as one might wish to know.

MADAME D'ARLAY, Early Diary, ii, 145. (1776)

A girl can usually catch a whisper to the effect that she's the showiest goods on the shelf.

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 304. (1902)

3 There are men in the North who walk around saying, . . . "I will take you to victory." They cannot deliver the goods.

J. R. HAWLEY, Speech, House of Representatives, 4 April, 1879.

The party cannot deliver the goods.

CHARLES WARREN, The Amalgamated Bill. In Scribner's Magazine. Vol. xxiv, p. 162/2. (1898)

My pal delivered the goods.

JACK LONDON, The Road, p. 90. (1907)

Joan of Arc . . . delivered the goods.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON, A Hoosier Chronicle, p. 445. (1912)

The goods, as they said in England, would this time be delivered.

FRANCIS BEEDING, The Eight Crooked Trenches, p. 80. (1936)

4 She had always two or three pieces of damaged goods in the house.

BENJAMIN H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Pt. iii, ch.

4. (1809) Ladies of easy virtue.

Damaged Goods.

EUGENE BRIEUX. American title of Les Avariés (1901) a play dealing with the results of venereal disease, produced in New York in 1913.

5 Anyone will tell us that to be rich is good. . . . Again it is surely clear that good birth and talents and distinctions are good. And being temperate and just and brave are good . . . and wisdom . . . and good fortune, which all men refer to as the greatest of the goods.

PLATO, Euthydemus. Sec. 279A. (c. 375 B.C.)

The same classic division of goods is found in ARISTOTLE, Magna Moralia, bk. i, ch. 3, and in DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato.

Tel me of courtesie, how many sortes of goodes dooth man possesse?

Three sortes, the goodes of fortune, the goods of the body, and the goodes of the mind.

Which be the goods of fortune?

The goodes of Fortune are, Riches, and lordship.

Which be they of the body?

Health, and a good completion.

Which be they of the mynd?

Vertue, wisdom, and vnderstanding, in the which consisteth al the felicitie of man.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 42. (1578)

Florio's classification was probably derived indirectly from Diogenes Laertius.

6 Good is no good, but if it be spend:
God giveth good for none other end.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: Maye, l. 71. (1579)

A man has no more goods than he gets good by.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 226. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 276. (1732)

Goods are only theirs, who enjoy them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1739. (1732)
See also MONEY: ITS USE.

7 We got the goods on him.

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 201. (1943)

8 If the goods are near at hand, the owner consumes them; if they are at a distance, they consume him.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 19. (c. 1000)

GOOSE

The bird [goose] with the golden eggs. (ὄρνιθα ὡς χρυσὰ ῥιτρούσα.)

AESOP, Fables: The Gold-Producing Bird. (c.

570 B.C.) A peasant, having a goose which laid golden eggs, and supposing a mass of gold to be within her, cut her open, only to find she was like other geese. The moral, Aesop says, is that one should be satisfied with what one has, and shun insatiableness. The fable was translated into English by William Caxton in 1484, and "Killing the goose that lays the golden eggs" soon became proverbial. Avianus includes it among his Fables (No. 33), and so does La Fontaine (bk. v, fab. 13), with the title, La Poule aux Oeufs d'Or, and the moral, "A fine lesson for avaricious people! How often in these latter days have we seen them become poor between morning and evening because they wanted to get rich too quickly." There are many variations in all languages pointing out the folly of cupidity. For example, the Yorubas say, "The covetous man, not content with gathering the fruit of the tree, took an axe and cut it down."

There be many that wyl have both the egge and the hen. (Ce de gli huomini che vogliono l'uouo e la gallina.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578) To

HAVE ONE'S CAKE AND EAT IT, see under CAKE.

Gone is the goose that the great egg laid.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 115. (1721)

You must draw the neck of the goose that lays the golden eggs.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 11. (1824)

They'll have killed the goose that laid 'em the golden eggs.

MRS. GASKELL, North and South. Ch. 17. (1855)

Every fowl lays golden eggs for him who can find them.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 9 Oct., 1860. Benham gives as an American variation, "Every man has a goose that lays golden eggs, if he knew it."

Murdering your client was in the nature of killing the goose that laid the golden egg.

EBERHART, Bermuda Grapevine. Ch. 1. (1938) He had killed that particular goose when it was on the very verge of producing the golden egg.

JONATHAN STAGG, The Yellow Taxi, p. 149. (1942) He was the goose and the supply of golden eggs was practically inexhaustible.

C. W. GRAFTON, The Rat Began to Gnaw the Rope, p. 147. (1943)

1 I cackle like the Smen goose.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. lxxxii, l. 3. (c. 4000 B.C.)

He gabbles like a goose among melodious swans. (Argutus inter strepere anser olores.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. Ecl. ix, l. 36. (37 B.C.)

A jackdaw among the Muses. (κολοιδὸς ἐν ταῖς Μοῖσαις.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii, No. 22 (1508) A Greek proverb, of which Erasmus gives the Latin, "Graculus inter musas," and adds, "Indoctus inter doctissimos" (The ignorant among the learned), "Infantissimus inter eloquentissimos" (The mute among the eloquent), and cites Vergil's line as given above.

Whistle like a goose among the swans, as the proverb says. (Siffler oye, comme dit le proverbe. entre les Cygnes.)

RAEELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, Prologue. (1552) The dosnell [stupid] dawcock [jackdaw, simpleton] comes dropping in among the doctors. (Graculus inter musas, anser strepit inter olores.)

JOHN WITHALS, Dictionary, p. 558. (1634)

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15/2. (1659)

The dasnell Dawcock sits among the Doctors

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 297. (1639)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 217. (1670)

2 Suche as they moste gladly dede wolde haue Etyth of that gose that graseth on theyr graue.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Shyp of Folsys, ii, 170. (1509)

I hope thou shalt eat of the goose that shall tread on her graue.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Ee2. (1583)

"The goose that grazeth on the green," quoth he, "May I eat on when you shall buried be!"

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act i, sc. 2. (1599)

He hopes to eat of the goose that grazeth on your grave.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 236. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 178. (1670)

3 "To be sound on the goose," or "all right on the goose," is a Southwestern phrase, meaning to be orthodox on the slavery question, i. e. pro-slavery.

JOHN BARTLETT, Americanisms: Goose. (1848)

The border ruffians held a secret meeting in Leavenworth, and appointed themselves a vigilance committee. All persons who could not answer, "all right on the goose," according to their definition of right, were . . . threatened with death.

S. T. L. ROBINSON, Kansas, p. 242. (1856)

To seek for political flaws is no use,

His opponents will find he is "sound on the goose."

UNKNOWN, Providence Journal, 18 June, 1857.

4 Making whole of a Winchester goose.

THOMAS BECON, Prayers, p. 284. (1559) A

Winchester goose was a swelling caused by a venereal disorder; also a prostitute.

Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, v, 10, 55. (1601)

A botch in the groine, a Winchester goose.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Clapoir. (1611)

Then ther's a Goose that breeds at Winchester, And of all Geese, my mind is least to her.

JOHN TAYLOR, Works, i, 105/2. (1630)

This informer . . . had belike some private dealings with her, and had got a Goose.

WEBSTER AND ROWLEY, A Cure for a Cuckold. (1661)

In the times of popery there were no less than 18 houses on the Bankside, licensed by the Bishops of Winchester, to keep whores, who were, therefore, commonly called Winchester Geese.

England's Gazetteer: Southwark. (1751)

5 A wild goose never laid a tame egg.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 303. (1855)

A wild goose never lays a tame egg.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 1. (1869)

6 What meaneth he by blinking like a goose in the rain?

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence. (1564) "Like a dying duck in a thunderstorm" is the more modern form.

Why do you go Nodding, and Wagging so like a Fool, as if you were Hipshot? says the Goose to her Gosselin.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables, ccxxii, 194. (1692)

7 Those consecrated geese in orders, That to the capitol were warders, And being then upon patrol, With noise alone beat off the Gaul.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 799. (1664) The tradition is that when the Gauls invaded Rome (390 B.C.) and its defenders retreated for a last stand to the hill of the capitol, a single file of the enemy clambered up so silently one night that they reached the top without being discovered, but as they started to climb over the ramparts, the sacred geese, disturbed by the noise, began to cackle and awoke the garrison, which rushed to the walls and hurled the invaders back. To commemorate this event, the Romans every year carried a golden goose in procession to the capitol.

Cackling geese may have saved the capitol once; they will not save it a second time.

GENERAL MAXIME WEYGAND, Remark, June, 1940, as he prepared to surrender France to the Nazis. See DAVID L. COHN, America to England. Atlantic Monthly, August, 1940.

<sup>1</sup> The pasture is so bare with him that a goose cannot graze upon 't.

CHAPMAN, May-Day. Act iii, sc. 1. (1611)

A goose cannot graze after him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 178. (1670)

<sup>2</sup> It is a good goose that drops ay.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595)

It's a good goose that's aye dropping.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 190. (1721)

"It is a good friend that's always giving."

<sup>3</sup> There is meickle hid meat in a goose eye.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595)

For the old prouerbe I must here apply,
Good meate men may picke from a gooses eye.

JOHN TAYLOR, Works, i, 105. (1621)

There's meat in a goose's eye.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1678)

<sup>4</sup> Eate little of a Goose. (Del ocha, mangiane poca.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Who eats goose on Michael's-day,

Shan't money lack, his debts to pay.

The British Apollo, i, No. 74. (1708) Spoken of as "the custom'd proverb."

If you do not baste the goose on Michaelmas-day, you'll want money all the year.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 414. (1830) It is still customary in England to eat goose on Michaelmas-Day, September 29, the festival of St. Michael <sup>5</sup> If a bear comes after you, Sam, you must be up and doin' or it's a gone goose with you.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick in England. Ch. 18. (1843)

She looks to me as though it was a gone goose with her.

C. A. DAVIS, Major Downing, p. 87. (1834)

"It's a gone goose with him." means that he is lost past recovery. The phrase is a vulgarism in New England. In New York, it is said. "He's a gone gander," i.e. a lost man; and in the West, "He's a gone coon."

JOHN BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms: Gone Goose. (1848)

<sup>6</sup> No goose lays good eggs that is trodden dry.

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Gander. (1648)

<sup>7</sup> Steale a goose, and sticke downe a fether.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 153. (1562) See also under THEFT.

We desire but one feather out of your goose.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5439. (1732)

Pluck a feather from every passing goose, but follow none.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 362. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>8</sup> He that turneth the goose shall have the neck.
RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 131. (c. 1530)

<sup>9</sup> Ye medle of al thyng, ye moot shoo the goos.

THOMAS HOCCEVEY, Minor Poems, p. 13. (c. 1410) "To shoe the goose" or "the gosling" means to spend one's time in trifling or fruitless labor.

He schalle be put owte of company, and scho the gose.

UNKNOWN, Why I Cant Be a Nun, 254. (c. 1420)

What hath lay men to do

The gray gose for to sho?

JOHN SKELTON, Colyn Cloute, l. 198. (1529)

Who medleth in all thyng, maie shooe the goslyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6445. (1732)

Then may he go sue ye goose, for house gets he none.

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, ii, 31. (1583)

Galen may go shooe the Gander for any good he could doo.

THOMAS NASHE, The Unfortunate Traveller, sig. C26. (1594)

Though I be no great wise man, yet I can doe some thing else, then shooe the goose for my living.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Grimellos Fortunes, p. 5. (1604)

A blacksmith once said to me, when . . . asked why he was not both blacksmith and whitesmith, "The smith that will meddle with all things may go shoe the goslings."

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Lame Jervis. Ch. 3. (1804)

<sup>10</sup> I have a goose to pluck with you.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)

CROW TO PLUCK, see under CROW.

<sup>11</sup> It is thus that you silence the goose [Huss], but a hundred years hence there will arise a swan whose singing you shall not be able to silence.

JOHN HUSS (attr.), as he was being burned at the stake, 6 July, 1415. Luther is supposed to have fulfilled the prophecy.

<sup>12</sup> By some it's said the "goose" is in the house.
C. L. LEWIS, Memoirs, iv, 180. (1805)

[We] began hissing. . . . The goose grated harsh upon his tympanum.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas, ii, 8. (1809)

"To get the goose" signifies to be hissed while on the stage.

Slang Dictionary: To Get the Goose. (1865)

<sup>13</sup> It is a blynde Goose that knoweth not a Foxe from a Fearn-bush.

JOHN LVLV, Euphuus and His England (Arber), p. 319. (1580)

WHEN THE FOX PREACHES WARE GEESSE, see FOX

<sup>1</sup> Young is the Goose yat wil eate no Oates.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 366. (1580)

It is an old goose that will eat no oats.
JOHN LYLY, Endimion. Act v, sc. 2. (1591)

Young is the Goose, that will not eat Oats.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6037. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> There is no more pittty to be taken of her then to see a goose goe bare-foote.
JAMES MABBE, tr., Alemans' Guzman, p. 133. (1622)

<sup>3</sup> If they come here we'll cook their goose, The Pope and Cardinal Wiseman.
HENRY MAYHEW, London Labour, i, 243. (1851) Quoting a street ballad of the period. "To cook one's goose" is to "do for" a person, to ruin his plans, or even to kill him. They may be thankful that she did not "do their goose for them," to use a vulgar phrase.
C. K. SHARPE, Letters, 10 Sept., 1849. [He] is a cooked goose, as far as Sowerby is concerned.
TROLLOPE, Framley Parsonage. Ch. 42. (1860)

If you worry or excite your brain . . . you will cook your own goose—by a quick fire.
CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 14. (1863)

They had cooked their goose with a vengeance—no more golden eggs for them!
WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 40. (1922)

This business . . . may cook his goose good and proper.
CHRISTIE, Tuesday Club Murders. Ch. 13. (1933)

It cooked my goose as well as yours.
RUTH FEINER, Young Woman of Europe, p. 279. (1942)

Your political goose is cooked.
JUDSON PHILLIPS, The Fourteenth Trump, p. 20. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> She was (like the goose that hung high) altogether lovely.
J. H. B. NOWLAND, Early Reminiscences of Indianapolis, p. 32. (1870)

They were bully boys, and their goose would finally hang high in spite of outside pressure.
E. F. BEADLE, The Undeveloped West, p. 113. (1873)

Everything is lovely and the goose hangs high.
Congressional Record, 14 Feb., 1894, p. 2185/2. "The goose hangs high" is thought to have originated from "The goose honks high," because wild geese fly high when the weather is fine.

<sup>5</sup> The goose is a silly bird—too much for one to eat, and not enough for two.
CHARLES H. POOLE, Archaic Words, p. 25. (1880)

<sup>6</sup> It's a sorry goose that will not baste herself.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2886. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> He hath good skill in horse-flesh, to buy a goose to ride on.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 181. (1670)

She had good skill in horse-flesh that could choose a goose to ride on.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>8</sup> You are a pretty fellow to ride a goose a gallop through a dirty lane.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 248. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5843. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> Nay, good goose, bite not.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 85. (1595)

Good goose, bite not.
HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act iv, sc. 3. (1599) RAY, p. 72. (1670) FULLER, No. 1712. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> When the rayne rayneth and the gose wynkith, Lytill wotith the goslyng what the gose thynketh.
JOHN SKELTON, A Goodly Garland of Laurell, l. 1431. (1523)

The goslings would lead their mother out to grass. (Les oisons veulent mener paistre leur mère.)
A. OUDIN, Curiositez Françaises, p. 398. (1640)

Observe this miracle, the goslings have the geese to water.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 174. (1666)

Goslings lead the Geese to Water.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1740. (1732)

Shall the Goslings teach the Goose to swim?
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4115. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> In faythe, els had I gone to longe to scole, But yf I coulede knowe a gose from a swanne.
JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 302. (1529)

Euery Goose must goe for a Swan, and whatsoeuer he speakes, must be Canonically.
UNKNOWN, Pasquil's Return, sig. C1. (1589)

All his Geese are Swannes.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

With Catholikes euery Pismire is a Potentate; as euery Goose a Swan.
BISHOP RICHARD MONTAGUE, A Gagg for the New Gospell, p. 90. (1624)

You're my goose, and no other man's; And you know all my geese are swans.
SWIFT, Sheridan, a Goose, l. 11. (1718)

According to the Proverbe, All his Geese are Swans.
WILLIAM PENN, More Fruits of Solitude. No. 237. (1718)

Every man's own geese are swans.
BAILEY, tr., Erasmus Colloquies, p. 445. (1725)

Taylor, who praised everything of his own to excess, . . . "whose geese were all swans."
SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life. (1777)

<sup>12</sup> A goose is a goose still, dress it as you will.
H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion. (1854)

See also under APE.

<sup>13</sup> Thei sillen a faat goos for litel or nought, but the garlek costith many shillyngis.
JOHN WYCLIF, English Works, p. 82. (c. 1380)

Hence, "To give a goose, and charge for the garlic."

- 1 Shall I stand still like a goose.
UNKNOWN, Homilies: Against Contention. (1547)
I perceue you will proue a goose.
MARTIN MARPRELATE, Epistle, p. 19. (1588)
He did play the very Goose.
MOUFET AND BENNET, Health's Improvement,
p. 170. (1655)
I have always told you . . . that you were a bit of a goose.
SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters: Catholics. (1807)
What a goose I was to leave my muff behind me.
ROSA NOUCHETTE CAREY, Uncle Max. Ch. 14.
(1887)
BO TO A GOOSE, see under BO.

II—Goose and Gander

- 2 Ne noon so grey goos goth ther in the lake,
As, seistow, that wol been with-oute make.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 269. (c. 1388) Make: mate.
There's no goose so grey in the lake, that cannot find a gander for her make.
LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act iii, sc. 4. (1594)
If foul . . . she dances with becoming grace,
Or shape excuses the defects of her face.
There swims no goose so grey, but soon or late
She finds some honest gander for her mate.
ALEXANDER POPE, The Wife of Bath: Her Prologue, l. 96. (1709)
She . . . was by no means averse to a third experience in Matrimony. "There swam no goose so grey," they were wont to quote.
JAMES PAYN, Thicker than Water. Ch. 1. (1883)
3 As is the Gander, so is the Goose.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 700. (1732)
See under HUSBAND AND WIFE.
4 What is wrong for the goose cannot be right for the gander.
RALPH A. HABAS, Morals for Moderns, p. 155. (1939) Referring to the so-called "double standard."
5 As deepe drinketh the goose as the gander.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. vii. (1562)
LYLY, Euphues, p. 275. (1580) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 671. (1732)
The goose will drink as deep as the gander.
JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, p. 666. (1645)
When the goose drinks as deep as the gander, pots are soon empty, and the cupboard is bare.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 136. (1880)
6 Goose, gander, and gosling are thee sounds, but one thing.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 20. (1659) JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1678)
SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE IS SAUCE FOR THE GANDER, see under SAUCE.

GOSPEL

See also Bible

- 7 It was a common saying among the Puritans, "Brown bread and the Gospel is good fare."
MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Isaiah xxx. (1710)
8 You may take it that I am reading out to you one of the Sibyl's leaves. (Credite me vobis folium recitare Sibyllae.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 126. (c. A. D. 120)
For-thi seide Alfred swithe wel,
And his worde was goddspel.
UNKNOWN, The Owl and the Nightingale, l. 1268. (c. 1225)
Al is not gospel, out of doute,
That men seyn in the toune aboute.
(Sire, tout n'est pas evangile Quunque l'en dit aval la vile.)
CHAUCER (?), tr., l. 7609. (c. 1365) JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 12277. (c. 1370)
Every word was gospel that ye seyde.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 1265. (c. 1380)
Al ne is nat gospel that is to yow pleyned.
CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 326. (c. 1385)
All is not gospell that thou doest speake.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)
All is not gospel comes out of his mouth.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 178. (1670)
9 Nothing is truer than the Gospel. (Croyez qu'il n'est rien si vray que l'Euangile.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 38. (1548)
GOSSIP
See also Scandal, Talk
10 Shun gossip, lest you come to be regarded as its originator. (Rumorem fuge, ne incipias novus auctor haberi.)
CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 12. (c. 175 B. C.)
See DUFF, Minor Latin Poets, p. 598.
11 The gossip of two women will destroy two houses.
GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 523. (1938) An Arabic proverb.
12 Be war of goosish peples speche,
That dremen thinges whiche that never were.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 584. (c. 1380)
A jangler is to god abhominable.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Maunciples Tale, l. 239. (c. 1389)
13 We are both nice gossips. (Sumus enim ambo belle curiosi.)
CICERO, Epistulae ad Atticum. Bk. vi, epis. 1. (50 B. C.)

1
There's some that gossip. . . . You'll find that, Dr. Law, before you are many months older.

J. STORER CLOUSTON, Scotland Expects. (1936)
PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Before, rates the phrase, "Before you are many months older" as a banality.

2
A Gossip speaks ill of all, and all of her.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 186. (1732)
Gossips and Tale-bearers set afire all the Houses they come into.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1742.

3
Gossips are frogs, they drink and talk.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 277. (1640)
Gadding Gossips still dine on the Pot-lid.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1637. (1732)

4
Gossip is vice enjoyed vicariously.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xix, 104. (1904)

5
It's merry when gossips meet.

BEN JONSON, Staple of News: Induction. (1626)

6
Gossip is the lifeblood of society.

DAVID KENT, Jason Burr's First Case, p. 68. (1941)

7
The opposite of gossip about men and affairs is often the truth. (Le contraire des bruits qui courent des affaires ou des personnes est souvent la vérité.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. xii. (1688)

Gossiping and lying go together.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1741. (1732)
The Germans say, "Hörensagen ist halb gelogen" (Hearsay is half lies).

8
Old wives' gossip. (γραιὼν ὄλος.)

PLATO, Theatetus. Sec. 176B. (c. 390 B. C.)

9
Below me, there, is the village, and looks how quiet and small!

And yet bubbles o'er like a city, with gossip, scandal, and spite.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 108. (1855)

Ye think the rustic cackle of your bourg
The murmur of the world!

TENNYSON, Marriage of Geraint, l. 276. (1870)

10
The chit-chat and gossip of the day.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 197. (1710)
See also under CHITCHAT.

11
Tattlers also and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not. (φλύαραι καὶ περίεργοι, λαλοῦσαι τὰ μὴ δεόντα.)

New Testament: I Timothy, v, 13. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Verbosae, et curiosae, loquentes quae non oportet."

Tittle, tattle, give the goose more hay.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 214. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5058. (1732)

A tattler is war than a thief.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs; Scottish, p. 228. (1678)

If you deal in tittle-tattle,
In your ears will curses rattle.

(Chuan yen kuo 'hua, to 'tao jên ma.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1014. (1875)

12
Who chatters to you, will chatter of you.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, iii, 63. (1853)

A dog that will bring a bone will carry a bone.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 491. (1940) "THEY SAY," see under SPEECH.

GOTHAM

13
They are all of Gotham parish.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

Who loves Ignorance before choice Knowledge.

A Doctor may commence in Gotham College.

EDWARD COCKER, Morals, 23. (1675)

Some of the society of Gotham college had an intention to burn my lines.

SAMUEL COLVIL, Whiggs Supplication, p. 6. (1681)

'Tis the Fate of all Gotham Quarrels, when Fools go together by the Ears, to have Knaves run away with the Stakes.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables, v, 5. (1692)

14
The Renowned and Ancient City of Gotham.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Salmagundi. No. xvi, 11 Nov., 1807, ch. 109. Chapter heading, referring to New York City. The earliest reference to that metropolis as "Gotham." In common use ever since. Irving is said to have chosen the name because of the fatuous assumption of wisdom which he considered characteristic of New Yorkers.

15
Now god gyf you care, foles all sam,
Sagh [saw] I neuer none so fare bot the foles of gotham.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Mysteries, xii, 180. (c. 1460)

Of the iii wyse men of gotam.

UNKNOWN, Hundred Mery Talys. No. 24. (1526)

The Merry Tales of the Mad-men of Gotham.

ANDREW BOORDE. Title. (c. 1560) A collection of the stories about the men of Gotham.

I do verily suspect that this wonder was acted somewhat neere Gotham and that the Spectators were the Posterite of them that drowned the Eel

SAMUEL HARSNET, Popish Impostures, p. 61 (1603) The wise men tried to drown the eel by throwing it into a pond.

I came to Gotham, where many, if not all, I saw were fools. (Veni ad Gotham, ubi multos, | Si non omnes, vidi stultos.)

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Barnabees Journal. (1638)

You are as wise as the men of Gotham, who went to build a wall about the wood to keep out the cuckoo.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

"As wise as a man of Gotham." It passeth publicly for the periphrasis of a fool; and a hundred fopperies are . . . fathered on the town-folk of Gotham.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 569. (1662)

I happen'd to be a hopeful branch of that ancient and renoun'd family of the wise-men of Gotham.

EDWARD WARD, Writings, ii, 316. (1703)

Three wise men of Gotham,

Went to sea in a bowl:

And if the bowl had been stronger,

My song would have been longer.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes. Pt. iii, No.

65. (1842) Date of jingle is unknown.

On the borders of that island he found Gotham, where the wise men live; the same who dragged the pond because the moon had fallen into it.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Water Babies. Ch. 8. (1863)

"As wise as the wise men of Gotham" . . . is believed to refer to Gotham, a manor partly in the parish of Hailsham, partly in that of Pevensey.

A. J. C. HARE, Sussex, p. 74. (1894) The home of the wise men is more usually identified with the Notts village of Gotham, as indicated by Dr. Fuller. The reputation of the Gothamites for wisdom is said to have originated in the early days of the thirteenth century, when King John decided to build a castle at Gotham. He sent a messenger to look over the ground, and the townspeople, getting wind of the king's intention, and knowing that if carried out it would be an intolerable burden to the town, determined to deceive the messenger by acting like idiots. They did this so well that the messenger reported to the king that Gotham was inhabited only by fools, and the king gave up his project. From which it will be seen that a wise man of Gotham may have some method in his foolishness.

As wise as a man of Gotham.

D. E. MARVIN, The Antiquity of Proverbs, p. 113. (1922) It is interesting to note that every country has a town or a district which is supposed to be the abode of fools. Among the Syrians it was Homs, among the Asiatics it was Phrygia, the Greeks had their Boeotia, the Thracians their Abdera, the French their Saint Maxient, the Germans their Schildburg, the Dutch their Kampen, Belgians their Dinant. How the Jews felt about the home town of Jesus Christ has survived in the saying, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?"

GOUT

<sup>1</sup> There is no pain like the gout.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616) Gout is the distemper of a gentleman; whereas the rheumatism is the distemper of a hackney-coachman.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 28 Nov., 1765.

<sup>2</sup> Drink wine, and have the gowt; drink none, and have the gout.

THOMAS COGAN, The Haven of Health: Epistle Dedicatory. (1584)

Drink Wine, and have the Gout; drink none, and have it too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1331. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Pangs arthritic that infest the toe
Of libertine excess.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 105. (1784)

That old enemy the gout Had taken him in toe.

THOMAS HOOD, Lieutenant Luff. (1824)

<sup>4</sup> I ran across the statement very recently in the book of Theophrastus, On Inspiration, that many men have believed, and put their belief on record, that when gouty pains are most severe, they are relieved if a flute-player plays soothing measures.

AULUS GELLIIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. iv, ch. 13. (c. A. D. 150)

A verse of Sybilla could ease the gout, yet the one was fayne to vse running water, which was but a colde medicine, the other patience, which was but a drye playster.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 348. (1580)

Patience is good for abundance of Things besides the Gout.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3856. (1732)

He's laid up with the gout. . . . I hear he's weary of doctoring it, and now makes use of nothing but patience and flannel.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

"The gout, sir," said Mr. Weller, "the gout is a complaint as arises from too much ease and comfort. If ever you're attacked with the gout, sir, jist you marry a widder as has got a good loud voice, with a decent notion of usin' it, and you'll never have the gout agin."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20. (1836)

<sup>5</sup> The daughter of limb-relaxing Bacchus and limb-relaxing Aphrodite is limb-relaxing Gout. (Λυσιμελοῦς Βάκχου καὶ Λυσιμελοῦς Ἀφροδίτης | γεννᾶται θυγάτηρ λυσιμελῆς ποδάγρα.)

HEDYLUS, Epigram. (c. 850 B. C.) See Greek Anthology, bk. xi, epig. 414.

Be temperate in wine, eating, girls, and sloth, Or the gout will seize you and plague you both.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734. In his famous essay on the gout, Franklin gives it as his conclusion that lack of exercise is the chief cause.

If gentlemen love the pleasant titillation of the gout, it is all one to the Town Pump.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, The Town Pump. (1852)

The unearned increment of my grandfather's Madeira.

J. R. LOWELL, to Judge Hoar, commiserating with him on his sufferings from gout. (c. 1881)

<sup>6</sup> There is no medicine to remove the knotty gout. (Tollere nodosam nescit medicina podagram.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 3, l. 23. (A. D. 13)

Gout, the disgrace of Physick.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1642) As, alas, it still is!

In the gout the Physician sees no cure.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 107. (1666)

With respect to the gout, the physician is but a lout.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 31. (1855) A Spanish proverb.

Much more is known about the stars than about rheumatism.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 51. (1940)

<sup>1</sup> My galloping days are over since I was taken with the gout. (Quadrige meae decucurrent, ex quo podagricus factus sum.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 64. (c. A. D. 60)

GOVERNMENT

See also Democracy, Self-Government, State

<sup>2</sup> Nero could tune the harp well; but in government, sometimes he used to wind the pins too high, sometimes to let them down too low.

APOLLONIUS, when Vespasian asked him the cause of Nero's overthrow. (c. A. D. 70) See BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

<sup>3</sup> The rule of government is law.

Babylonian Talmud: Gittin, fo. 6. (c. 450)

A wise man ought not to desire to inhabit that country where men have more authority than laws.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Cabinet Council. (1600)

A government of laws and not of men.

JOHN ADAMS, Constitution of Massachusetts: Declaration of Rights. Art. 30. (1780)

Whatever government is not a government of laws is a despotism, let it be called what it may.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, Bangor, Me., 25 Aug., 1835.

The best government is that in which the law speaks instead of the lawyer.

M. L. BYRN, The Repository of Wit and Humor. (1852)

<sup>4</sup> The four Pillars of Government . . . Religion, Justice, Counsell, Treasure.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions. (1597)

<sup>5</sup> "Separa et impera," that same cunning maxim.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to James I, 1615.

Divide et impera, that exploded adage.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Lawes. Pt. iv, ch. 1. (1628) "Divide et impera" (Divide and rule) was the motto of Philip of Macedon and of Louis XI of France, in dealing with his nobles. It was the traditional motto of Austria. Polybius, Bossuet, and Montesquieu used it, but it is generally ascribed to Machiavelli.

Two swords he bore: his word, Divide and reign.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, The Purple Island, vii, 65. (1633)

And yet they have found the chief Art of a Sov'reign,

As Machiavel taught 'em, divide and ye govern.

SWIFT, On the Irish Bishops, l. 47. (1732)

Divide and rule. It is a wise saying, that.

A. MERRITT, Creep, Shadow, p. 246. (1934)

One by one—that was his plan.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Radio Address, 24 Aug., 1941, referring to Adolf Hitler's plan of world conquest, "Divide and conquer."

<sup>6</sup> As soon as there are some to be governed there are also some to govern.

JONATHAN BOUCHER, Causes and Consequences of the American Revolution. Ch. 12. (1797)

<sup>7</sup> The covetous governor is not governed by justice. (El gobernador codicioso hace la justicia desgobernada.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 36. (1615)

Literally, "Does ungoverned justice." In the same book, Cervantes remarks that "The good governor should have a broken leg and keep at home."

<sup>8</sup> Though the people support the Government, the Government should not support the people.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Veto of Texas Seed Bill, 16 Feb., 1887.

<sup>9</sup> He who governs by moral excellence may be compared to the pole-star, which keeps its place, while all the other stars bow toward it.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (c. 500 B. C.)

When a country is well governed, poverty and want are things to be ashamed of; when a country is ill governed, riches and honor are things to be ashamed of.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. viii, ch. 13

<sup>10</sup> Without the confidence of the people no government can stand.

CONFUCIUS, Analects, xii, 7. (c. 500 B. C.)

No government is safe unless buttressed by goodwill. (Nullum imperium tutum nisi benevolentia munitum.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, Aphorism. (c. 40 B. C.) See

DIONYSIUS CATO, Lives: Cornelius Nepos.

A hated government does not endure long. (Invisa numquam imperia retinentur diu.)

SENECA, Phoenissae, l. 660. (c. A. D. 60)

Temperate rule endures. (Imperia moderata durant.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 258. (c. A. D. 60)

All governments depend upon the good will of the people.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to Genêt, 15 May, 1780.

All free governments are managed by the combined wisdom and folly of the people.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Letter, 21 April, 1880

<sup>11</sup> To govern means to guide aright.

CONFUCIUS, Analects, xii, 17. (c. 500 B. C.)

Government is good when it makes happy those who live under it, and attracts those who live far away.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiii, ch. 16.

Those who govern others must gauge their every act by this one test, the greatest possible happiness of the governed. (Sint quam beatissimi.)

CICERO, Ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. i, epla. i, sec. 24. (60 B. C.)

Salus populi, or the happiness of the people, is the end of its being, or main business to be attended and done.

JOHN WISE, A Vindication of the Government of New England Churches. Ch. 2. (1717)
Let the origin of government be placed where it may, the end of it is manifestly the good of the whole. Salus populi suprema lex esto is the law of nature.

JAMES OTIS, The Rights of the British Colonies Asserted and Proved. (1764)
The care of human life and happiness, and not their destruction, is the first and only legitimate object of good government.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 359. (c. 1820)

The principal business of government is to further and promote human strivings.

WILBUR L. CROSS, Interview, in New York Times, 29 March, 1931.

After all, government is just a device to protect man so that he may earn his bread in the sweat of his labor.

HUGH S. JOHNSON, Where Do We Go from Here? In The American Magazine, July, 1935, p. 90.

THE GREATEST HAPPINESS OF THE GREATEST NUMBER, see under HAPPINESS.

1
The worst of governments is popular government. (Le pire des États, c'est l'État populaire.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act ii. Sc. 1. (1640)
All kinds of governments are not suited to all climates. (Par tous les climats ! Ne sont pas bien reçus toutes sortes d'États.)

PIERRE CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act ii, sc. 1.

2
No government can be long secure without a formidable Opposition.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1844)

A government of statesmen or of clerks? Of Humbug or of Humdrum?

DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1844)
A conservative government is an organized hypocrisy.

DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 17 March, 1845.

A smile for a friend, and a sneer for the world, is the way to govern mankind, and such was the motto of Vivian Grey.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1826)

3
Realms are households which the Great must guide.

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis, l. 552. (1666)
For just experience tells, in every soil,
That those who think must govern those that toil.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller l. 371 (1764)

4
A sober Prince's Government is best.

JOHN DRYDEN, Epistle to Sir Robert Howard, l. 54. (1660)

For forms of government let fools contest;
Whate'er is best administer'd is best.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 303. (1734)

Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

Which government is the best? That which teaches us to govern ourselves. (Welche Regierung die beste sei? Diejenige die uns lehrt, uns selbst zu regieren.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819) A paraphrase, "The best of all governments is the one that teaches us to govern ourselves," is the motto of the John Adams High School, Cleveland, Ohio.

The best of human governments is the patriarchal rule.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Subjection. (1838)

That is the best government which desires to make people happy, and knows how to make them happy.

MACAULAY, Essays: Mitford's History of Greece. (1843)

The best system [of government] is to have one party govern and the other party watch.

THOMAS B. REED, Speech, House of Representatives, 1880.

5
I confess the motto of the Globe newspaper is so attractive to me that I can seldom find much appetite to read what is below it in its columns: "The world is governed too much."

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers. (1844) Emerson is referring to the Boston Globe.

The less government we have the better.

EMERSON, Essays: Politics. (1844)

I heartily accept the motto, "That government is best which governs least."

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

6
The Good-will of the Govern'd will be starved, if not fed by the good Deeds of the Governors.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

In Rivers and bad Governments, the lightest Things swim at top.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

7
God reigns and the Government at Washington lives!

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Speech, April, 1865, from the balcony of the New York Custom House to a crowd terrified by the news of Lincoln's assassination.

One of the noblest sentences ever uttered.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, Helena, Mont., 11 Sept., 1919.

8
Society is produced by our wants, and government by our wickedness.

WILLIAM GODWIN, An Enquiry Concerning Political Justice. (1793)

9
Nothing appears more surprising to those who consider human affairs with a philosophical eye, than the easiness with which the many are governed by the few.

DAVID HUME, Essays: First Principles of Government. (1741)

<sup>1</sup> Those who bear equally the burdens of Government should equally participate of its benefits.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Address to Lord Dunmore. (1775)

Governments [derive] their just powers from the consent of the governed.

JEFFERSON, Declaration of Independence. (1776)
The whole of government consists in the art of being honest.

JEFFERSON, Writings, vi, 186. (c. 1800)

It is error alone which needs the support of government. Truth can stand by itself.

JEFFERSON, Letter to John Tyler. (1804)

That government is the strongest of which every man feels himself a part.

JEFFERSON, Letter to H. D. Tiffin. (1807)

<sup>2</sup> All government is ultimately and essentially absolute.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Taxation No Tyranny. (1775)
The operations of government have little influence upon the private happiness of private men.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Robert Chambers, 19 April, 1783.

<sup>3</sup> Learn, my son, with how little wisdom the world is governed. (Nescis, mi fili, quantilla sapientia regitur mundus.)

POPE JULIUS III (c. 1550), to a Portuguese monk who pitied him because he had the weight of the world on his shoulders. See BÜCHMANN, Geflügelte Worte. The saying has also been ascribed to the Swedish Chancellor, Count Axel Oxenstierna, who is said to have put it in the form of a question, "An nescis quantilla prudentia mundus regatur?" (Do you not know with how little wisdom the world is governed?), in a letter addressed to his son in 1648.

He was a wise Pope that, when one that used to be merry with him before he was advanced to the Popedom refrained afterwards to come at him (presuming he was busy in governing the Christian world), the Pope sends for him, bids him come again, and (says he) we will be merry as we were before, for thou little thinkest what a little foolery governs the whole world.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Pope. (c. 1650)

It calls to my mind what some pope, Alexander VI, Jules, or Leo, said to a son of his afraid to undertake governing, . . . "Nescis, mi fili, quam parva sapientia hic noster mundus regitur."

LORD CHATHAM, Letter to Lord Shelburne, 25 Jan., 1775.

With how little wisdom the world is governed. (Quam pauca sapientia mundus regitur.)

DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Letter to Jonathan Swift, 1732. The Italians say, "Con poco cervello si governa il mondo."

It is wonderful how preposterously the affairs of this world are hanged.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Benjamin Vaughan, 26 July, 1784.

[He was] astonished to see with how little wisdom the world is governed.

EDWARD EVERETT HALE, My Double and How He Undid Me. (1859)

<sup>4</sup> A wise man neither lets himself be governed, nor seeks to govern others; he wishes that reason should govern, alone and always. (Un homme sage ni ne se laisse gouverner, ni ne cherche à gouverner les autres; il veut que la raison gouverne seule, et toujours.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Du Cœur. (1688)

<sup>5</sup> A liberal government is that which neither disregards nor hurts anyone. (Ta' chih pu ko.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 28. (c. 550 B.C.) Old, tr.

The state should be governed as we cook small fish. (Chi' ta' kwo jê p'äng hsiao hsien.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 60. It should be neither gutted nor scaled.

<sup>6</sup> In all sorts of government man is made to believe himself free, and to be in chains.

STANISLAUS LESZYNSKI, Oeuvres du Philosophe Bienfaisant. (1763)

Men still have to be governed by deception.

G. C. LICHTENBERG, Reflections. (1799)

<sup>7</sup> It may be laid as a universal rule that a government which attempts more than it ought will perform less.

T. B. MACAULAY, Comic Dramatists of the Restoration. (1841)

<sup>8</sup> Republics end through luxury; monarchies through poverty. (Les républiques finissent par le luxe; les monarchies, par la pauvreté.)

MONTESQUIEU, De l'Esprit des Loix. Bk. vii, ch. 4. (1748)

Of governments, that of the mob is most sanguinary, that of soldiers the most expensive, and that of civilians the most vexatious.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 411. (1820)

<sup>9</sup> Every country has the government it deserves. (Toute nation a le gouvernement qu'elle mérite.)

JOSEPH DE MAISTRE, Letter, Aug., 1811.

<sup>10</sup> The administration of government is not difficult. It lies in not offending the great families.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, pt. i, ch. 6. (c. 300 B.C.)

<sup>11</sup> Society performs for itself almost everything which is ascribed to government.

THOMAS PAINE, The Rights of Man. Ch. 1. (1791)

<sup>12</sup> When change of rulers happens to a state, 'Tis but a change of name unto the poor.

(In principatu commutando saepius nil praeter domini nomen mutant pauperes.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables: Bk. i, fab. 15. (c. 25 A.C.)

A somewhat cynical proverb current among the Rumanian peasants, who say that "Only fools exult when Governments change."

London Times, 19 Nov., 1928, p. 15/3.

1 Today the nations of the world may be divided into two classes—the nations in which the government fears the people, and the nations in which the people fear the government.

AMOS R. E. PINCHOT, Open Letter, 16 April, 1935.

2 As in men's bodies, so in government, that disease is most dangerous which proceeds from the head. (Utque in corporibus sic in imperio gravissimus est morbus, qui a capite diffunditur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iv, epis. 22. (C. A. D. 98)

Every wand or staff of empire is forsooth curved at the top. (Adeo ut omnes imperii virga sive bacillum vere superius inflexum sit.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Sapientia Veterum: Pan, Sive Natura. (c. 1605) Sometimes condensed to, "All sceptres are crooked at the top." Referring to the shepherd's crook of Pan

3 By misrule the most exalted power is lost. (Male imperando summum imperium amittitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 380. (c. 43 B. C.) He who governs the unwilling hurts rather than corrects. (Non corrigit, sed laedit, qui invitum regit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 436.

4 The body politic, like the human body, begins to die from its birth, and bears in itself the causes of its destruction. (Le corps politique, aussi bien que le corps de l'homme, commence à mourir dès sa naissance, et porte en lui-même les causes de sa destruction.)

ROUSSEAU, Contrat Social. Bk. iii, ch. 11. (1762)

5 They that govern most make least noise.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Power. (c. 1650)

6 All government without the consent of the governed, is the very definition of slavery.

SWIFT, Draper's Letters. No. 4. (1724)

7 Every Prince should govern as He would desire to be governed if he were a Subject.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Essays: Popular Discontents. (1699)

8 The Athenians govern the Greeks, I govern the Athenians, my wife governs me. ("Ἐλλῆσιν ἐπιτάττειν Ἀθηναίους, Ἀθηναίους δ' αὐτόν, αὐτῷ δὲ τὴν ἐκείνου μητέρα.")

THEMISTOCLES. (c. 475 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles, ch. 18, sec. 5.

Wilhelmus the Testy, though one of the most potent little men that ever breathed, yet submitted at home to a species of government, neither laid down in Aristotle nor Plato; in short it partook of the nature of a pure, unmixed tyranny, and is familiarly denominated petticoat government.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York. Bk. iv, ch. 1. (1809)

There was one species of despotism under which he had long groaned, and that was petticoat government.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Rip Van Winkle. (1819)

9 Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also a prison.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

10 Government is an association of men who do violence to the rest of us.

LEO TOLSTOY, The Kingdom of God is Within You. (1893)

11 In general, the art of government consists in taking as much money as possible from one class of citizens to give it to the other.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Money. (1764)

Government is emphatically a machine: to the discontented a "taxing machine," to the contented a "machine for securing property."

THOMAS CARLYLE, Signs of the Times. (1829)

The government is mainly an expensive organization to regulate evildoers, and tax those who behave: government does little for fairly respectable people except annoy them.

E. W. HOWE, Notes for My Biographer. (1926)

12 The government of the United States is not in any sense founded on the Christian religion.

UNKNOWN, Treaty of Peace and Friendship Between the United States of America and Tripoli. Article 11. Signed at Tripoli, 4 Nov., 1796. Translated from the Arabic by Joel Barlow, U.S. Consul at Algiers. See MILLER, ed., Treaties of the U.S. of America. Vol. ii, p. 365.

GOVERNMENT OF THE PEOPLE, BY THE PEOPLE, FOR THE PEOPLE, see under DEMOCRACY.

GRACE

I—Grace: Spiritual

13 Grace groweth after governance.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 395. (1566)
Referred to as "an old said saw."

14 But for the grace of God there goes John Bradford.

JOHN BRADFORD, Remark, on seeing some criminals being led to the place of execution. (c. 1553) See Dictionary of National Biography, vi, 159. "The familiar story . . . is a universal tradition, which has overcome the lapse of time."—Biographical Notice, Parker Society Edition, The Writings of John Bradford, p. xliii. (1853) The saying has been attributed to John Bunyan, John Wesley, Richard Baxter, and others.

The learned, the judicious, the pious Boerhaave relates that he never saw a criminal dragged to execution without asking himself, "Who knows whether this man is not less culpable than me?"

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 20 April, 1751. I never hear of such a case as this that I do not think of Baxter's words, and say, "There, but for the grace of God, goes Sherlock Holmes."

CONAN DOYLE, The Boscombe Valley Mystery. (1894)

Did not Philip Neri say to Philip, as he saw a criminal haled to execution: There thou goest, Philip, but for the grace of God!

PATRICK SHEEHAN, Under the Cedars and Stars. Pt. ii, ch. 20, p. 97. (1903)

I say, Mayor—but for the grace of God, there go we.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, A Family Man. Act iii. (1922)

1 Nor can man with grace his soul inspire,
More than the candles set themselves on fire.

JOHN BUNYAN, A Book for Boys and Girls. (1686)

2 But hye god som tyme senden can
His grace in-to a litel oxes stalle.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerkes Tale, l. 150. (c. 1388)

3 In space cometh grace.

MILES COVERDALE, The Christen State of Matrymonye, sig. G8. (1541) HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 144. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6167. (1732)

He must not look to find a wife without a fault,
. . . and if he find the proverb true, That in space cometh grace, he must rejoice.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, i, 22. (1591)

4 Ye are fallen from grace. (τῆς χάριτος ἐξέροσσε.)

New Testament: Galatians, v, 4. (c. A. D. 53.)

The Vulgate is, "A gratia excidistis."

5 Divine grace was never slow.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 712. (1640)

Divine favours were never too late.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 108. (1666)

6 And thanne gete ye the grace of god and good ynogh to lyue with.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus ix, l. 176. (1377)

Ye haue a comyn sayng among you, and sayn that Godys grace ys worth a new fayre.

JOHN MIRKUS, Mirk's Festival, p. 86. (c. 1450)

The grace of God is better than iii feyres.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS, p. 52. (c. 1440)

Though eueryman may not syt in the chayre,

Yet alwaie the grace of God is woorth a fayre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

The old proverb is very well parted between my master Shylock and you, sir; you have the grace of God, sir, and he hath enough.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 2, 157. (1597)

The grace o' God is gear enough.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 260. (1678)

Sometimes given as "He that hath the grace of God hath wealth enough."

7 Grace rather than praise I ask. (Et veniam pro laude peto.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 7, l. 31. (a. A. D. 9)

When the King [James V] would listen to none of his offers, the robber-chief said, very proudly, "I am but a fool to ask grace at a graceless face."

JOHN ARMSTRONG, of Gilnockie. (1530) See

SCOTT, Tales of a Grandfather, bk. i, ch. 27.

Ye seek grace at a graceless face.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (c. 1595)

8 He giveth grace unto the lowly. (Mansuetinis dabit gratiam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, iii, 34. (c. 350 B. C.)

Unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ.

New Testament: Ephesians, iv, 7. (c. A. D. 59)

The Vulgate is, "Unicuique autem nostrum data est gratia secundum mensuram donationis Christi."

9 Long graces do

But keep good stomachs off, that would fall to.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, To His Much Honoured the Lord Lepington. (c. 1640)

He made it a part of his religion, never to say grace to his meat.

SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub. Sec. 11. (1704)

II—Grace: Physical

10

Grace will last, favour will blast.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 119. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 99. (1678)

Grace will last, Beauty will blast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6292. (1738)

Grace is more beautiful than beauty.

R. W. EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims. (1875)

11

Grace in women is the secret charm that draws the soul into its circle, and binds a spell round it for ever.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 352. (c. 1821)

12

Graceful as a spray of clematis.

O. HENRY, Roses, Ruses and Romance. (1908)

13

Grace is to the body what judgment is to the mind. (La bonne grâce est au corps ce que le bon sens est à l'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 67. (1665)

14

Grace follows her unseen to order all aright. (Componit furtim subsequiturque Decor.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 8, l. 7. (c. 10 B. C.)

III—The Graces

15

There are Batavian graces in all he says.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, retorting to Beresford Hope, who had described Disraeli as an "Asian mystery."

Hope was a descendant of an Amsterdam family, and Disraeli was referring, somewhat obscurely, to a sentence from the Naufragium of Erasmus: "O crassum ingenium! Suspicio fuisse Batavum" (O dense intelligence! I suspect it was Batavian).

<sup>1</sup> Not even the gods order the dance or banquet without the aid of the holy Graces. (οὐδὲ γὰρ θεοὶ σεμνὰν Χάριτων ἄτερ κοιρανέοισιν χοροὺς οὔτε δαίτας.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. xiv, l. 8. (c. 488 B. C.)
And joined with the Nymphs the lovely Graces.
(Iunctaeque Nymphis Gratiae decentes.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4, l. 6. (23 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> My good Xenocrates, sacrifice to the Graces. (θὺε ταῖς Χάρισι.)

PLATO, advising Xenocrates, whom he considered too rude and abrupt in manner. (c. 375 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 141F, 753C, 769D. He tells the story at length in his Life of Caius Marius, sec. 2. See also DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Xenocrates, bk. iv, ch. 2, sec. 6.

I owe a sacrifice to the Graces. (Je dois un sacrifice aux Graces.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580)
Dear Boy: I must from time to time remind you of what I have often recommended to you, and of what you cannot attend to too much: Sacrifice to the Graces.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.
Advice frequently repeated.

The Graces, the Graces, remember the Graces!

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 Jan., 1749.
I had sacrificed to the Graces (as he was pleased to call dressing).

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 1. (1850)

<sup>3</sup> Some say the Muses are nine; but how carelessly! Look at the tenth, Sappho from Lesbos. (ἐννέα τὰς Μούσας φασὶν τινες ὡς ὀλιγώρως ἦνδε καὶ Σαπφῶ Λεσβόθεν ἡ δεκάτη.)

PLATO, Epigram. (c. 370 B. C.) See Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, No. 506.

Four are the Graces, there are two Aphrodites and ten Muses. Dercylis is one of all, a Grace, an Aphrodite, and a Muse.

UNKNOWN, Greek Anthology. Bk. v, No. 95.
Sometimes attributed to Callimachus.

Two goddesses now must Cyprus adore;
The Muses are ten, and the Graces are four;
Stella's wit is so charming, so sweet her fair face,
She shines a new Venus, a Muse, and a Grace.

SWIFT's rendering of the above epigram from the Greek Anthology.

Now the Graces are four and the Venuses two,
And ten is the number of Muses;
But a Muse and a Grace and a Venus are you,
My dear little Molly Trefusis!

AUSTIN DOBSON, Molly Trefusis. (1885)

<sup>4</sup> He was nursed and reared by the Graces. (Educatum in nutritu Venerio.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 650. (c. 200 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> O holy Graces, first adored of Eteocles! (ὦ Ἐτεόκλειοι Χάριτες θεαί.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xvi, l. 104. (c. 270 B. C.)

Eteocles, an early king of Orchomenus in Boeotia, is said to have been the first to sacrifice to the Graces. "Mortal man possesses nothing desirable if he have not the Graces," Theocritus continues, "and 'tis my prayer the Graces will be with me evermore."

GRAIN

<sup>6</sup> Sift him grain by grain and he proveth but chaff.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 46. (1633)
You sift Night and Day, and get nothing but Bran.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5997. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> A whole Bushel of Wheat is made up of single Grains.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 456. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> One grain fills not a sack, but helps his fellows.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 228.
(1640) HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 17. (1659)

Though one grain fills not the sack, it helps.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 529. (1855)
A grain does not fill a sieve, but it helps its neighbor to do so.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 105. (1902)

<sup>9</sup> Grain pecked up after grain makes pullet fat.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Spanish Gipsy.
Act ii, sc. 1. (1653)

Grain by Grain, the Hen fills her Belly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1744. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> Your minds . . . made you against the grain
To voice him consul.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 3, 241. (1607)
Never take things against the grain, no matter how they come. (Saber tomar las cosas nunca al repelo, aunque vengan.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 224. (1647) "Everything has a smooth and a seamy side," Gracian adds, "and the best weapon wounds if taken by the blade."

This goes against the grain, this cannot be injured.

THOMAS HUBBERT, A Pill to Purge Formality, p. 65. (1650)

But for this whoreson cutting of throats, it goes a little against the grain.

JOHN DRYDEN, Amboyna. Act i, sc. 1. (1673)
That goes against the shins. i. e. It's to my prejudice, I do it not willingly.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1678)
I followed your advice at last, though it went against the grain uncommonly.

HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 44. (1861)
Which again, naturally, rubs against the grain.

CHARLES DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 20. (1870)
AGAINST THE HAIR, see under HAIR. AGAINST THE WOOL, see under WOOL.

<sup>1</sup> 'Tis in grain, sir, 'twill endure wind and weather.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 256. (1599)

Dyed in grain, fast dyed.

Here are conceits of diuerse colours, some in graine and none but will bide the weather.

UNKNOWN, Choice, Chance, Change, p.3. (1606)

GRAMMAR

<sup>2</sup> Who climbs the Grammar-Tree, distinctly knows

Where Noun, and Verb, and Participle grows.

JOHN DRYDEN, tr., Juvenal's Satires. Sat. vi, l. 583. (1693)

<sup>3</sup> The greater part of this world's troubles are due to questions of grammar. (La plus part des occasions des troubles du monde sont grammairiennes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

<sup>4</sup> A man's grammar, like Caesar's wife, must not only be pure, but above suspicion of impurity.

E. A. POE, Marginalia. (1844)

<sup>5</sup> Caesar is not above the grammarians. (Caesar non supra grammaticos.)

EMPEROR TIBERIUS, Apothegm. (c. A. D. 10). See SUTONIUS, Lives of Eminent Grammarians.

I am king of the Romans, and above grammar. (Ego sum rex Romanus, et supra grammaticam.)

EMPEROR SIGISMUND, at the Council of Constance, 1414, to a prelate who called attention to a grammatical error in his opening speech. See MENZEL, History of the Romans, p. 325.

Caesar is above grammar. (Caesar est supra grammaticam.)

FREDERICK THE GREAT, to Voltaire, when the latter urged him to endeavor to write better French than Louis XIV.

What? in spite of all our remonstrances, always to be undermining the foundation of all sciences, grammar, which knows how to lord it over kings, and with high hands makes them obey its laws. (La grammaire, qui sait régenter jusqu'aux rois, Et les fait, la main haute, obéir à ses lois.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 38. (1672)

<sup>6</sup> You will be diverted to hear that a man who thought of nothing so much as the purity of his language, I mean Lord Chesterfield, says, "you and me shall not be well together," and this not once, but on every such occasion. A friend of mine says, it was certainly to avoid that female inaccuracy of they don't mind you and I, and yet the latter is the least bad of the two.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Rev. William Mason, 17 April, 1774.

GRANDMOTHER

<sup>7</sup> The Grand-Mother's Correction makes no Impression.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4561. (1738)

<sup>8</sup> You showed her she had shot her grandmother.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Nature and Human Nature, ii, 297.

To shoot one's grandmother is a common though vulgar phrase in New England, and means to be mistaken, or to be disappointed. The common phrase is, "You've shot your granny."

J. R. BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms, p. 402. (1859)

<sup>9</sup> So is your grandmother.

RING LARDNER, Mr. Frisbie. (1926)

<sup>10</sup> Lord Sparkish: Pray, my lady Smart, what kin are you to lord Pozz?

Lady Smart: Why, his grandmother and mine had four elbows.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>11</sup> A swine to teach Minerua was a prouerbe . . . for whiche we saie in Englishe, to teach our dame to spinne.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 380. (1542)

Wee say to teach his grandame to grop ducks.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Apprendre (1611) To grope a duck or any other poultry, is to examine it to find whether it has eggs

Go teach your grandam to grope a goose.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

You would have me teach my grandame to suck eggs.

JOHN STEVENS, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 348 (1707)

Pish, teach your grannam to spin.

SIR ROBERT HOWARD, The Committee. Act iv. (1665) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4321. (1738)

Teach your father to get children.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1670)

Teach your grandame to gropen her ducks, to sup sowre milk. Teach me to do that I know how to do much better than your self.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 178.

Go, fools! teach your granums.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Rival Fools. Act ii. (1709)

Shall the Goslins teach the Goose to swim?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4115. (1732)

Go, teach your grannam to suck eggs.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

A child may sometimes teach his grandmother to suck eggs.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xii, ch. 13. (1749)

Don't teach your grandmother to clap ashes.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 3. (1843)

A . . . twinkle, which might have been interpreted—"instruct your grandfather in the suction of gallinaceous products."

R. D. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 21. (1882)

Instruct their grandmothers in the art of milking ducks.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play: Induction. (1911)

Teach your grandmother to suck eggs.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 243. (1939) CHEYNEY, Farewell to the Admiral, p. 190. (1943)

I'd been teaching my grandmother to suck eggs again.

EDITH HOWIE, Murder's So Permanent, p. 130. (1942) The French say, "On apprend à un vieux singe à faire des grimaces" (One teaches an old monkey to make faces).

GRANGE

<sup>1</sup> I will presently to St. Luke's: there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana. SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 276. (1604)

Mariana in the moated grange.

TENNYSON, Mariana. Motto. (1830)

GRAPE

See also VINE

<sup>2</sup> The grapes are sour. (ῥᾶγες ἀμφακίζουσι μάλα.) AESOP, Fables: The Fox and the Grapes. (c. 570 B.C.) The remark of the fox when she found she could not reach the grapes growing upon a lofty vine. One of the oldest of the fables, as well as one of the best known. You seem to be unacquainted with the "sweet elbow." (γλυκὺς ἀγκών.)

PLATO, Phaedrus, Sec. 257D. (c. 385 B.C.) The "sweet elbow" was the successor of Aesop's "sour grapes." Phaedrus is saying that many important men are ashamed to write speeches or leave writings behind them for fear of being misunderstood by posterity, and Socrates retorts that this is just a case of the "sweet elbow."

[The grapes] are not ripe yet; I don't want to eat them while sour. (Nondum matura est; nolo acerbam sumere.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fable 3. (c. 25 B.C.) Away with desire for unripe grapes! (Tolle cupidinem immitis uvae.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode v, l. 9. (23 B.C.) However, Horace is not referring to real grapes, but to unripe girls.

[The fox] said these raysyns ben sowre.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesop, iv, 1. (1484)

I see full well the fox will eate no grapes because he cannot reache them.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, sig. E3 (1576) O, will you eat no grapes, my royal fox? Yes, but you will my noble grapes, an if My royal fox could reach them.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 1, 72. (1602)

The foxe dispraiseth the grapes he cannot reach.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 69. (1629)

The Fox, when he cannot reach the grapes, says They are not ripe.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 135. (1640)

When you cannot get a thing, then is the time to despise it. (Cuando no se puede alcanzar la cosa entra el desprecio.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 220. (1647)

But it is dry meat, said the country-fellow, when he lost the hare.

PETER HEYLIN, Animadversions. (1659) In

FULLER, Appeal of Injured Innocence, p. 496. A certain Gascon fox (others say a Normand) almost dying of hunger, saw high on a trellis some grapes, apparently ripe, and covered with ruddy skin. The gallant fox would willingly have made a meal of them, but since he couldn't climb up to them, "They are too green," he said, "and fit only for the skunks." Wasn't that better than complaining?

("Ils sont trop verts, dit-il, et bons pour des goujats.")

Fit-il pas mieux que de se plaindre?)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Renard et les Raisins Bk. iii, fab. 11. (1668)

Fie upon hens (quothe the fox) because he could not reach them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 142. (1678)

Poor Tom! What, are the grapes sour, my dear!

COLLEY CIBBER, The Refusal. Act iv. (1721)

Soure plumbs quothe the tod [fox], when he could not climb the tree.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 287. (1721)

You would be glad to have me: but sour grapes. my dear.

MURPHY, The Way to Keep Him. Act i. (1760)

He who cannot reach to the bunch of grapes, says of it, "It is sour."

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 654. (1817) [He] said, as plainly as a look could say, that the grapes were sour.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 46. (1857)

Another boy said "Sour grapes!"

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 6. (1876)

Winter grape sour, whedder you kin reach 'im or not.

J. C. HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

<sup>3</sup> The red grape in the sunny lands of song LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 76. (1824) The foaming grape of eastern France.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Conclusion. St. 20. (1850)

Better be jocund with the fruitful Grape Than sadden after none, or bitter Fruit.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., The Rubáiyát. St. 54. (1859)

The Grape that can with logic absolute The Two-and-Seventy jarring Sects confute:

The sovereign Alchemist that in a trice

Life's leaden metal into Gold transmute.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., The Rubáiyát. St. 59.

<sup>4</sup> The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge. (Patres comederunt uvam acerbam, et dentes filiorum obstupescunt.)

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xviii, 2. (c. 600 B.C.)

Also Jeremiah, xxxi, 29, of about the same date.

Had he eaten sour plums unpeeled? Were his teeth on edge? (Auoit il mangé prunes aigres sans peler? Auoit il les dens esguassees?)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, prol. (1548)
Grapes gathered before they bee rype, maye set the eyes on lust, but they make the teeth an edge.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 270. (1580)

Sour Grapes can ne'er make sweet Wine.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4233. (1738)

The grape gains its purple tinge by looking at another grape. (Uvaeque conspecta livorem ducit ab uva.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 81. (c. A. D. 120)
One bunch of grapes is ripened by another bunch. (Βότρυς πρὸς Βότρυν πεπαισεται.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. A. D. 950)

And the angel . . . gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great winepress of the wrath of God. (Misit in lacum irae Dei magnum.)

New Testament: Revelation, xiv, 19. (C. A. D. 90)
Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;

He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored.

JULIA WARD HOWE, Battle Hymn of the Republic. (1862)

The Grapes of Wrath.

JOHN STEINBECK. Title of novel (1939)

I look like the grapes of wrath.

EUGENE HEALY, Mr. Sandeman Loses His Life, p. 61. (1940)

The grape's in the raisin. (ἡ σταφυλὶς σταφίς ἐστι.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl xxvii, l. 10. (c. 270 B. C.)

GRAPESHOT

Brave Broglie "with a whiff of grapeshot (salve de canons)," if need be, will give quick account of it. . . . The whiff of grapeshot can, if needful, become a blast and tempest.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. v, ch. 3. (1837)

Singular: in old Broglie's time, six years ago, this Whiff of Grapeshot was promised; but it could not be given then. . . . Now, however, the time is come for it, and the man [Napoleon]; and behold, you have it; and the thing we specifically call French Revolution is blown into space by it, and become a thing that was!

CARLYLE, French Revolution, Pt. iii, bk. vii, ch. 7.

A little more grape, Captain Bragg.

GENERAL ZACHARY TAYLOR, at the battle of Buena Vista, 22 Feb., 1847. It has been denied that Taylor said it. However, when Captain Braxton Bragg reported that he would have to fall back with his battery or lose it, Taylor retorted, "Captain Bragg, it is better to lose a battery than a battle." Which is even better.

GRAPEVINE

During the Civil War exciting news of battles not fought and victories not won were said to be received by grape-vine telegraph.

JOHN S. FARMER, Americanisms, p. 274/2. (1889)
That curious and vivid western phrase, "grape-vine telegraph," originated in 1859. Colonel Bee constructed a telegraph line between Placerville and Virginia City, attaching the wire to the trees; their swaying stretched it until it lay in loops on the ground, resembling the trailing California wild grapevines.

SHINN, Story of the Mine, p. 72. (1899)
My mother and other slaves on the plantation . . . kept themselves informed of events by what was termed the "grape-vine" telegraph.

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, Up from Slavery, p. 7. (1901)

It's all a nightmare, . . . just another foolish grape-vine.

FORCEYTHE WILSON, The Old Sergeant. (1863)
First published in The Atlantic Monthly, xxxv, 336, with a footnote by the editor stating that "grape-vine" meant "canard."

Successfully utilized was the grapevine telegraph
MIGNON G. EBERHART, Bermuda Grapevine. Ch. 1. (1938)

The news grapevined through the countryside.

JOHN KOHLER, Some Like It Gory, p. 159. (1940)

The grapevine telegraph was out of commission
LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 46. (1941)

GRASS

He that ate the ever-living, imperishable grass. (ὁ τὴν ἀείζων ἀφθιτον πᾶσαν φαγών.)

AESCHYLUS, Glaucus' Leap. Frag. 15, Smyth (c. 458 B. C.) Frag. 16 has, "And I taste, methinks, the ever-living grass."

They shall make thee [Nebuchadnezzar] to eat grass as oxen. (Foenum quasi bos comedes.)

Old Testament: Daniel, iv, 25. (c. 170 B. C.)
Nebuchadnezzar was put to grasse.

ROBERT GELL, Sermon, 8 Aug., 1650.

The people were Nebuchadnezzars; they bit the grass before them.

O. HENRY, Next to Reading Matter. (1909)
And the last sleeping-place of Nebuchadnezzar—
When I arrive there I shall tell the wind:

"You ate grass: I have eaten crow."

CARL SANDBURG, Losers. (1920)

Far from the goat shall be the grass. (Ma lungi fia dal becco l'erba.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xv, l. 72. (c. 1300)

We have no other remedie to save and serve our selves, then to keepe the grasse from the Goat.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv. p. 205. (1574) Young, tr.

Grass never grows when the wind blows.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 7. (1846)

I find a greater falt in my self in suffring an other to cut the earthe frome under my feete.

SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, tr., Bandello, ii, 10.

(1567) To cut the earth or grass from under a person's feet is to foil or thwart him, usually in an underhanded way.

The grasse had bene cut from under his feete.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 92. (1576)

Couper l'herbe sous les pies. To cut the grass under ones feet.

JAMES HOWELL, French Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

You are all this while cutting the grass from under his feet.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transposed, i, 278. (1672)

The grass is cut under my feet if she ever hears a word of it.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Way to Keep Him. Act ii, sc. 2. (1760)

This will cut the grass from 'neath his feet.

W. S. GILBERT, Rosencrantz and Guildenstern. Tabl. ii. (1891)

1 As the Proverb saith, No grasse grows where the grand Seigneurs horse sets his foot.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The True Nobleman. (1642)

2 You eat up that Grass, which I meant to make Hay of.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5900. (1732)

3 God said, Let the earth bring forth grass. (Germinet terra herbam virentem.)

Old Testament: Genesis, i, 11. (c. 550 B. C.)

Grass is the hair of the earth.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Gull's Hornbook. Ch. 3. (1609)

4 In market growes no grass nor grain.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 24. (1659)

Grass grows not upon the highway.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 149. (1678)

There grows no grass at the market cross.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 309. (1721)

"An invective against the barrenness of whores," Kelly explains. The Japanese have the same proverb, "Grass does not grow in the market."

5 A blade of grass is always a blade of grass, whether in one country or another.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (MRS. PIOZZI, Anecdotes of Johnson, p. 100.)

Forests decay, harvests perish, flowers vanish, but grass is immortal.

J. J. INGALLS, Writings: Blue Grass. (c. 1880)

6 Betwixt hay and grass, between Boyhood & Manhood.

JOHN MITCHELL, Nantucketisms, p. 40. (1848)

The eggs were "kinder twixt grass and hay."

H. S. BUNNER, Zadoc Pine, p. 17. (1891)

7 Man . . . cannot give a true reason for the grass under his feet why it should be green rather than red or of any other colour.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World: Preface (1614)

A child said What is the grass? fetching it to me with full hands;

How could I answer the child? I do not know what it is any more than he.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 6. (1855)

8 You must look for grass on the top of the oak tree. Because the grass seldom springs well before the oak begins to put forth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 44. (1670)

9 Cut up grass by the root and it will sprout no more. (Chien ts'ao ch'u kên, mêng ya pu fa.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 4. (1875)

Allah alone can make the grass grow, but only Achmed the barber knows how it is done.

PIERRE VAN PAASSEN, Days of Our Years, p. 277. (1941) Quoting an Arabic proverb.

10 In Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 75. (1593)

Go to grass.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act iv, sc. 6. (1613) Also. The Little French Lawyer, iv, 7.

Wiues might vnable husbands turne to grasse.

JOHN TAYLOR WATER-POET, Works, ii, 110. (1630)

I have been at grass in the summer, and am now come up [to town].

JOHN DRYDEN, Marriage à la Mode. Act iii, sc. 1. (1673)

I'll turn my wife to grass.

CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act iii. (1700)

"Look here, gentlemen," he said, triumphantly, "you may go to grass with your shed."

D.H. STROTHER, Virginia Illustrated, p. 32. (1857)

11 Plucking the grass to know where sits the wind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 1, 18 (1597)

No Man could pluck the Grass better, to know where the Wind sat.

BISHOP JOHN HACKETT, Life of Archbishop Williams, Ch. 2. (c. 1665) See also under STRAW.

12 While the grass grows, the horse dies. (Dum herba crescit equus moritur.)

SIMONE TEATINO (?), Epigram. (c. 1238) Attributed to a Simeon of Chieti—the modern name of Teate. The Italians say, "Mentre l'erba cresce, il cavallo muore di fame."

While the grasse growes, the goode hors sterues.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350)

The gray hors, whyl his gras growyth,

May sterue for hunger, thus sayth the prouerbe.

JOHN CAPORAVE, Life of St. Katharine, ii, 253. (c. 1440)

Whilst grass doth grow, oft starves the silly steed.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, Promos and Cassandra. (1578)

Whyle the grasse growyth the hors stervyth

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 140. (c. 1530) JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, pt i,

ch. 11. (1546) WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 335. (1605)

Ay, sir, but "While the grass grows"—the proverb is something musty.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 358. (1600)

Yet the old proverb I would have them know, The horse may starve whilst the grass doth grow.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, A Kicksey-Winsey. Pt. iv, last line. (1619)

Live, horse! and thou shalt have grass.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Live, thou ass, till the clover sprouts.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 426. (1817)
The auld horse may die waiting for the new grass.

JOHN GALT, Ayrshire Legatees. Ch. 10. (1820)
What's to become of me . . . while our schemes are ripening? While the grass grows the steed starves.

JAMES PAYN, The Canon's Ward, p. 1. (1884)
While the grass grows the steed starves.

SHAW, The Doctor's Dilemma. Act iii. (1906)

1
As long as grass grows and water runs.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Concord River. (1849)
Repeated several times in later portions of the book.

2
There hath growne no grasse on my hele, since I went hence.

NICOLAS UDALL, Roister Doister. Act iii, sc. 3. (1550) "Since I went, no grasse hath growne on my hele."—Ibid., iv, 5.

There will . . . no grasse hang on the heeles of Mercury.

JOHN LYLLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 240. (1580)

The hare . . . leaps away again, and letteth no grass grow under his feet.

EDWARD TOPSELL, Four-footed Beasts, p. 210. (1607)

I have not been idle—I have not let grass grow under my feet.

UNKNOWN, The Spanish Bawd. Act iv, sc. 3. (1707)

He'll no let grass grow at his heels.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 24. (1737)
I have let no grass grow beneath my heels this bout.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 29 March, 1828.

Nora never let the grass grow under her feet, or under any one else's feet, when there was work to do.

MRS. HENRY WOOD, Trevlyn Hold. Ch. 46. (1864)

He was not a man who ever let much grass grow under his feet.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 15. (1857)
No grass grew under my feet.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 370. (1889)

Her disapproval of the pastoral process known as letting the grass grow under your feet was intense.

E. V. LUCAS, Advisory Ben. Ch. 1. (1923)

Suffer no grass to grow under your feet, and improve the shining hour. Hustle, in fact.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 145. (1940)

3
Once on a time there was a wood,
The funniest wood that ever you see,
Oh, the tree in the wood, and the wood in the ground,

And the green grass growing all around.

UNKNOWN, The Green Grass Growing All Around. See American College Song Book. 1882. As sung by the Tufts College Glee Club, arranged by C. W. Gerould.

And the green grass grew all around.

WILLIAM JEROME. Title and refrain of song. (1912) "To hear the grass grow" is a proverbial phrase in many languages.

GRASSHOPPER

4
Full of crickets. (terrtiyon ármeστα.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 984. (423 B.C.)

Thucydides (i, 6, 3) tells how in the olden days the Athenians wore golden cicalas in their hair, and hence the phrase "full of crickets" came to mean "old-fashioned."

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 1330, refers to this custom.

It was only recently that their older men of the wealthier class gave up fastening up their hair in a knot held by a golden grasshopper as a brooch.

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. i, ch. v, sec. 3. (c. 400 B.C.)

5
And the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets. (Impinguabitur locusta, et dissipabitur capparitis: quoniam ibit homo in domum aeternitatis suae, et circuibunt in platea plangentes.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 5. (c. 250 B.C.)

6
We pass out of this world as grasshoppers.

Apocrypha: II Esdras, iv, 24. (c. A.D. 100)

7
Hoppergrass. This word is often used in the South for grasshopper.

UNKNOWN. Virginia Literary Museum, i, 458 (1829)

My mammy tol' me dat tale w'en I wa'nt mo d'n knee-high ter a hopper-grass.

C. W. CHESTNUTT, The Conjure Woman p. 101 (1899)

KNEE-HIGH TO A GRASSHOPPER, see KNEE-HIGH

GRATITUDE

See also Thanks

8
The food of a hound is (the affair) of his master, and he barks unto him that gives it.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxvi, l. 6. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.

The gratitude of most men is nothing but a secret hope of receiving greater favors. (La reconnaissance de la plupart des hommes n'est qu'une secrète envie de recevoir de plus grands bienfaits.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 298. (1665)

1 Next to ingratitude, the most painful thing to bear is gratitude.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 229. (1887)

2 [Gratitude] is not only the greatest virtue, but even the mother of all the rest. (Haec est enim una virtus non solum maxima, sed etiam mater virtutum omnium reliquarum.)

CICERO, Pro Plancio. Ch. 33, sec. 80. (54 B. C.) Possessions gained by the sword are not lasting; gratitude for benefits is eternal. (Non est diuturna possessio in quam gladio ducimus; beneficiorum gratia sempiterna est.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni, viii, 8, 11. (c. A. D. 50)

3 Gratitude is a burden, and every burden is made to be shaken off. (La reconnaissance est un fardeau, et tout fardeau est fait pour être secoué.)

DIDEROT, Encyclopédie: Reconnaissance. (1760)

Gratitude is a burden upon our imperfect nature.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Nov., 1765.

Don't overload gratitude; if you do, she'll kick.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

There is no Insurance-Office for Gratitude.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 200. (1709)

4 Gratitude is the least of Virtues, but Ingratitude is the worst of Vices.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1749. (1738)

Gratitude preserves old Friendship, and procures new.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1750.

5 To a grateful man give money when he asks.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 120. (1640)

He that gives to a grateful Man, puts out to Usury.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2113. (1738)

6 There is no gratitude in after days for kindness done. (οὐδέ τις ἐστὶ χάρις μετόπισθ' ἐνεργέων.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 695. (c. 850 B. C.)

Repeated in xxii, 319.

What soon grows old? Gratitude. (τί γηράσκει ταχύ; χάρις.)

ARISTOTLE, Apothegm. (c. 340 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec. 18.

Gratitude died as soon as it was born. (ἄμ' ἡλεῖται καὶ τέθηκεν ἡ χάρις.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, i, 81. (c. A. D. 130)

Alas! the gratitude of man

Hath often left me mourning.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Simon Lee. (1798)

7 Not every one who discharges his debts of gratitude can plume himself on being grateful. (Tous ceux qui s'acquittent des devoirs de la reconnaissance ne peuvent pas pour cela se flatter d'être reconnaissants.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 224. (1665)

There is a kind of lively gratitude, which not merely discharges our debt for kindness received, but by the very act of repayment makes our benefactors our debtors. (Il y a une certaine reconnaissance vive qui ne nous acquitte pas seulement des bienfaits que nous avons reçus, mais qui fait même que nos amis nous doivent en leur payant ce que nous leur devons.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 438.

Men are more prone to curtail their gratitude than either their desires or their hopes. (On donne plus souvent des bornes à sa reconnaissance qu'à ses désirs et à ses espérances.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées, 617.

8 The fair fruit of gratitude. (καρπὸς χάριτος καλός.)

MENANDER, The Drafting Officer. Frag. 354K.

(c. 300 B. C.)

9 Gratitude is the memory of the heart. (La reconnaissance est la mémoire du cœur.)

JEAN BAPTISTE MASSIEU, Letter to the Abbé Sicard. (c. 1800)

10 If you do anything well, gratitude is lighter than a feather; if you give offense in anything, people's wrath is as heavy as lead. (Si quid bene facias, levior pluma est gratia: Si quid peccatumst, plumbeas iras gerunt.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 812. (c. 194 B. C.)

11 When you drink from the stream, remember the spring. (Yin shui ssü yüan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1917. (1875)

12 Nothing is more honorable than a grateful heart. (Nihil esse grato animo honestius.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxii, sec. 30. (c. A. D. 64)

He who is grateful has nothing to blush for (Hsin pu fu jên mien wu ts'an sè.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1902. (1875)

13 Swift gratitude is sweetest; if it delays, all gratitude is empty and unworthy of the name. (ὥκείαι χάριτες γλυκερώτεραι ἢν δὲ βραδύνη. πᾶσα χάρις κερεή, μηδὲ λέγοιτο χάρις.)

UNKNOWN, Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 30

They say late thanks are ever best.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Robert, Lord Cecil, July, 1603.

GRAVE

See also Tomb

14 To put on the garment of earth. (γαῖαν ἐφέσσεσθαι.)

APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica. Bk. i, l. 691. (c. 225 B. C.)

15 The more thy years, the nigher thy grave.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333. (1605)

The moe thy yeares, the nearer thy grave.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 308. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 31. (1670)

The more years you have, The nearer your Grave.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6248. (1732)

1 We all lie alike in our graves.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 13. (1639)

RAY, Proverbs, p. 56. (1670)

Both Rich and Poor are equal in the grave.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Job, vi, 39. (1624)

Who's a prince or beggar in the grave?

THOMAS OTWAY, Windsor Castle. (c. 1685)

No Heralds in the grave.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3581. (1732)

The Grave is the general Meeting-Place.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4563.

Now limb doth mingle with dissolved limb

In nature's busy old democracy.

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, An Ode in Time of Hesitation. (1900) See also DEATH THE LEVELER.

2 At my time of life a man ought not to go far from his grave. (Abesse hanc aetatem longe a sepulcro negant oportere.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xvi, epis. 7. (44 B. C.)
Quoting a proverb.

3 Softly she murmurs, while chills o'er her creep,
"Why did they dig ma's grave so deep?"

GEORGE COOPER, Why Did They Dig Ma's Grave so Deep? (c. 1900)

4 O grave, where is thy victory? (οὐ σου, θάνατε, τὸ νίκος;)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 55. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Ubi est mors victoria tua?"

5 There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave. (Nec opus, nec ratio, nec sapientia, nec scientia erunt apud inferos.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 10. (c. 250 B. C.)

There is no inquisition of life in the grave. (Non est enim in inferno accusatio vitae.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom. (Ecclesiasticus), xli, 6. (c. 190 B. C.)

The grave's a fine and private place,
But none, I think, do there embrace.

ANDREW MARVELL, To His Coy Mistress. (c. 1670)

In the Grave, Dust and Bones jostle not for the Wall.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2826. (1732)
For the best place.

6 Man goeth to his long home. (Ibit homo in domum aeternitatis suae.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 5. (c. 250 B. C.)

The men of old, who dwell in the hills of home.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Harbarthsljóth. St. 44. (c. 900) Thor retorts that this an over-splendid name to give to the heaps of stones which cover the men of old.

And thy traueyle shalt thou sone ende,
For to thy long home sone shalt thou wende

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 9195. (1303)

He goth to hys long home.

JOHN MIRKUS, Mirk's Festival, p. 295. (c. 1450)

These that I bring unto their latest home.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, i, 1, 83. (1593)

Some think she went her own pace to the grave, whole others suspect a grain was given her, to quicken her in her journey to her long home.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Warwickshire, iii, 273. (1662)

A fever, which, in a few days, brought Sir Everhard to his long home.

SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 4. (1762)

7 We . . . sent him to take a ground-sweat.

FARMER, ed., Musa Pedestris, p. 81. (c. 1816)

A ground sweat cures all disorders. i. e. In the grave all complaints cease from troubling.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 434. (1830)

8 Our lives are but our marches to our graves

JOHN FLETCHER, The Humorous Lieutenant. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 76. (1619)

The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 36. (1751)

Our hearts, though stout and brave,

Still, like muffled drums, are beating

Funeral marches to the grave.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1839)

Far from famous sepulchres, toward a lonely cemetery, my heart, like a muffled drum, goes beating a funeral march. (Loin des sépultures célèbres, | Vers un cimetière isolé, | Mon cœur, comme un tambour voilé, | Va battant des marches funèbres.)

CHARLES BAUDELAIRE, Le Guignon. (1857)

9 Graves are of all sizes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1751. (1732)

10 He that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more. (Qui descenderit ad inferos, non ascendet.)

Old Testament: Job, vii, 9. (c. 350 B. C.)

Neither was there any man known to have returned from the grave. (Non est qui agnitus sit reuersus ab inferis.)

Apocrypha, The Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 1. (c. 100 B. C.) See also DEATH: NO TRAVELLER RETURNS.

11 The grave is mine house: I have made my bed in the darkness. (Infernus domus mea est, et in tenebris stravi lectulum meum.)

Old Testament: Job, xvii, 13. (c. 350 B. C.)

To the house appointed for all living. (Ubi constituta est domus omni viventi.)

Old Testament: Job, xxx, 23.

A clayey tenement.

THOMAS CAREW, Epitaphs: On the Lady Mary Villiers. (c. 1630)

To that dark inn, the grave!

WALTER SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto vi, l. 717. (1814)

1 They had only just escaped a watery grave.
KINGSLEY, Hereward the Wake. Ch. 6. (1865)

2 The grave itself is but a covered bridge,
Leading from light to light, through a brief darkness!

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. v, A Covered Bridge at Lucerne. (1871)

3 This [is] enough to make Sir Massingberd turn in his grave.

JAMES PAYN, Lost Sir Massingberd. Ch. 34. (1864)

Jefferson might turn in his grave if he knew.

JAMES BRYCE, The American Commonwealth. Vol. i, ch. 12, p. 159. (1888)

4 Methought I saw the grave where Laura lay.
SIR WALTER RALEGH, To Edmund Spenser. (a. 1618)

5 He is put to bed with a shovel.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1813)

With shovels they were put to bed.

FARMER, ed., Musa Pedestris, p. 160. (1859)

She callously replied, "Oh, he's no gude, 'tis tame he were put to bed wi' a shovel."

Devonshire Assn. Trans., xlii, 68. (1910)

6 Earth is the best shelter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 269. (1678)

It is an ancient saying—no sure dungeon but the grave.

WALTER SCOTT, The Talisman. Ch. 19. (1825)

7 Any soil will do to bury in. (Ch'u ch'u 'huang t'u 'hao mai jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 946. (1875)

For every man Heaven sends Earth provides a grave. (T'ien shêng yi jên, ti shêng yi hsüeh.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2319

8 I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 1, 95. (1592)

So be my grave my peace.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 1, 127. (1605)

But I must go before him; and 'tis said,

The grave's good rest when women go first to bed.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Woman Never Vexed. Act v. (1632)

9 The man who has a grave or two in his heart does not need to haunt churchyards.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 3. (1863)

10 There's somebody walking over my grave.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Sometimes somebody would walk over my grave, and give me a creeping in the back.

KINGSLEY, Geoffrey Hamlyn. Ch. 31. (1859)

Joan shuddered—that . . . convulsive shudder which old wives say is caused by a footstep walking over the place of our grave that shall be.

HOLME LEE, Basil Godfrey's Caprice. Ch. 14. (1868)

She shivered. . . "Somebody walking over my grave," she said.

WENTWORTH, The Chinese Shawl. p. 138. (1943)

11 Your dwelling henceforth is with the great of the earth. (σοι ἔδρα θείοισι μετ' ἀνδράσι.)

THEOCRITUS, Inscriptions. No. vii, l. 3. (c. 270 B. C.)

12 Heaven's space is but three ells broad. (Tris pateat Caeli spatium non amplius ulnas.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. No. iii, l. 105. (37 B. C.) A spendthrift Mantuan named Caelius was left with only enough ground for a grave.

Philip falling in the dust, and seeing the figure of his shape perfect in shew. Good God said he, we desire ye whole earth and see how little serveth!

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber). p. 188. (1579)

A piece of the Church-yard fits everybody.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentium. No. 1025. (1640)

Six feet of earth make all men equal.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 8. (1659)

Six feet of earth shuts up every man.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 285. (1666)

Both, heirs to some six feet of sod.

Are equal in the earth at last.

J. R. LOWELL, The Heritage. (1843)

TO DIG ONE'S GRAVE WITH ONE'S TEETH, see under GLUTTONY

II—One Foot in the Grave

13 Takyng paines to visite him, who hath one of his feet alreadie within the graue, and the other stepping after with conuenient speede.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Pallace of Pleasure. ii, 109. (1566)

What conquest is it to strike him up, who stands but on one leg, and hath the other foot in the grave?

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 19. (1642)

A pious and godly life, which increased in his old age; so that . . . whilst he had one foot in the grave, he had the other in heaven.

THOMAS FULLER, The Church-History of Britain. Bk. ix, ch. 7. (1655)

He observed long life to be the universal desire . . . of mankind. That whoever had one foot in the grave was sure to hold back the other as strongly as he could.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Laputa. Ch. 10. (1726)

What, in the devil's name, can you want with a young wife, who have one foot in flannels, and the other in the grave?

T. L. PEACOCK, Maid Marian. Ch. 13. (1822)

He has one foot in the grave, and the other in the care of the osteopath.

MARTEN CUMBERLAND, The Knife Will Fall, p. 75. (1944)

<sup>1</sup>
An old dotard with one foot already in the grave. (κρονόδηρος καὶ σοφοδαίμων ὀνεί.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children, 13B. (c. A. D. 95) Quoting from an unknown comedy.

With one foot, as they say, in the grave. (καὶ τὸν ἕτερον πόδα, φασὶν, ἐν τῇ σοφῇ ἔχων.)

LUCIAN, Apologia. Sec. 1. (c. A. D. 170) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, 52, with the Latin, "Et alterum pedem, ut aiunt, in tumulo habens," or, less literally, "Alterum pedem in cymba Charontis habere" (To have one foot in Charon's skiff).

We have a foot in the grave. (Nous avons le pied à la fosse.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 28. (1580)

Old doting foole, one foote in graue.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albions England. Bk. ix, ch. 47. (1592)

In shepherd's phrase, With one foot in the grave.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Michael, l. 89. (1800)
He had twenty thousand a year . . . And one foot in the grave.

PAYN, Luck of the Darrells. Ch. 15. (1886)

To hear him, he has both feet in the grave.

G. H. COXE, Murder for Two, p. 145. (1943)

GRAVITY

<sup>2</sup>
Gravity is only the bark of wisdom's tree, but it preserves it.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.)

Gravity is the ballast of the soul, which keeps the mind steady.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State: Gravity. (1642)

Gravity is a trick of the body devised to conceal deficiencies of the mind. (La gravité est un mystère du corps inventé pour cacher les défauts de l'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 257. (1665)

Gravity is of the very essence of imposture.

SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics, i, 11. (1711)

<sup>3</sup>
The gravest fish is an oyster; the gravest bird's an owl; the gravest beast's an ass; and the gravest man's a fool.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

All the great monuments are built over solemn asses.

THOMAS CORWIN, Advice, to a young speaker. (c. 1860) Corwin believed that his reputation as a humorist prevented people from taking seriously anything that he said.

<sup>4</sup>
As grave as an old gate post.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 280. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 692. (1738)

As grave as a judge that's giving charge.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots, p. 2. (1685)

Mesty sat on the chest between them, looking as grave as a judge.

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 32. (1836)

There was old George sitting on the bench as grave as a judge.

ROLF BOLDREWOOD (T. A. BROWNE), Robbery Under Arms. Ch. 28. (1889)

"What a funny little tot it is!" he cried. "As grave as a judge!"

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, Alice-for-Short. Ch. 8. (1907)

Look grave as an owl in a barn.

FARQUHAR, The Inconstant. Act iii, sc. 2. (1702)

You look as grave as an owl.

SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 5. (1828)

<sup>5</sup>
Gravity often passes for Wisdom, Wit for Ability.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, An Essay on the Popular Discontent. (1689)

GRAY

<sup>6</sup>
As grey as Grannum's Cat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 693. (1732)

He will be as gray as grannum's cat before he improves.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman, p. 48. (1880)

<sup>7</sup>
He's grey before he is good.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 249. (1678)

<sup>8</sup>
Though she lives till she's grey as a badger all over.

SWIFT, Works (Scott), xiv, 134. (1720)

We say "as grey as a badger" of one whose head is "silvered o'er with age."

EDWARD MOOR, Suffolk Words, p. 45. (1823)

<sup>9</sup>
He . . . thinks he's old Grayback from Way-back.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court. Ch. 31. (1889)

GREASE

<sup>10</sup>
In his own grece I made him frye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 487. (c. 1386)

Thus he is fryed in his owne gres.

JOHN LYDGATE, Temple of Glas, p. 14. (c. 1400)

He lyeth and fryeth in his owne grease for anger.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. T3. (1540)

She fryeth in her owne grease.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 69. (1601)

There hee sat fretting in his owne grease.

ROBERT ARMIN, A Nest of Ninnies, p. 59. (1608)

There they stew In their own Grease, till Morning.

SIR SAMUEL Tuke, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act i. (1663) A reference to the Dutch habit of sleeping in wall cupboards—"certain niches in their walls," says Tuke.

Let him fry in his own Grease.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3179. (1732)

See also under JUICE.

<sup>11</sup>
Save the stinking grease, master, save it for the wheels.

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Song of the Wheels. (a. 1915) THE SQUEAKING WHEEL GETS THE GREASE, see under WHEEL.

<sup>1</sup> Cash . . . is a necessary article in their business, and without daily application of this specific grease their Wheels must roll heavily.

UNKNOWN. In Columbian Centinel, 15 April, 1797, p. 3/2.

The fountain was tapped and the golden grease flowed more freely.

A. O. MYERS, Bosses and Boodle in Ohio Politics, p. 234. (1895)

GREATNESS

<sup>2</sup> The ever false friendships of the great. (Semper fictae principum amicitiae.)

AUSONIUS, Domestica. Pt. iv, l. 32. (c. A. D. 370) Be war in welth, for hall-benkis [benches] ar rycht slidder [slippery].

ROBERT HENRYSON, tr., Aesop, p. 154. (c. 1480) Hall binks [benches] are sliddrie.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595) Cited by JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 133, with the comment, "Great men's favour is uncertain." A variation is, "Slipperiness is the flagstone at the great house door."

<sup>3</sup> Greatness flees from him who strives for it, but follows him who flees from it.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 13b. (c. 45) Commenting upon Luke, xiv, 11.

<sup>4</sup> The higher you go the fewer.

H. C. BAILEY, Meet Mr. Fortune, p. 507. (1942)

<sup>5</sup> All things that great men do are well done.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 309. (1855)

<sup>6</sup> In the big sea is produced the big fish. (En gran mar se cria gran pez.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 260. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>7</sup> Great men are still admirable; I say there is, at bottom, nothing else admirable.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lecture i. (1840)

The history of the world is but the biography of great men.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship, i.

<sup>8</sup> What is cheap hold dear, what is dear hold cheap. (Quod vile est, carum, quod carum, vile putato.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 29. (c. 175 B. C.) He is a great man who uses earthenware dishes as if they were silver; but he is equally great who uses silver as if it were earthenware. (Magnus ille est, qui fictilibus sic utitur quemadmodum argento. Nec ille minor est, qui sic argento utitur quemadmodum fictilibus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. v, sec. 7. (A. A. D. 64)

<sup>9</sup> If you would be a dog, at least be the dog of a great house.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439. (1939) A Japanese proverb. A similar one is, "Seek shelter under a big tree." Ibid., p. 446.

<sup>10</sup> No one has become great without some degree of divine inspiration. (Nemo vir magnus sine aliquo adflatu divino umquam fuit.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 66, sec. 167. (45 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> Desire of Greatness is a God-like Sin.

DRYDEN, Abalom and Achitophel. Pt. I, l. 372. (1681)

Burn to be great.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home. (1839)

<sup>12</sup> Not he is great who can alter matter, but he who can alter my state of mind.

R. W. EMERSON, The American Scholar. (1837)

Every great man is a unique.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

<sup>13</sup> All great men come out of the middle classes.

R. W. EMERSON, Considerations by the Way. (1860)

The eminent and virtuous come from thatched cottages.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 677. (1872)

<sup>14</sup> Nothing great comes into being all at once. (οὐδέν τῶν μεγάλων ἀφνω γίνεται.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 100)

The heights by great men reached and kept

Were not attained by sudden flight,

But they, while their companions slept,

Were toiling upward in the night.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Ladder of St. Augustine. (1850) Inscribed beneath Longfellow's bust in Hall of Fame, New York City.

<sup>15</sup> How blest are the great ones of the earth. (μεγάλοι μεγάλων εὐδαιμονίαι.)

EURIPIDES, Phigeneia at Aulis, l. 590. (c. 410 B. C.)

<sup>16</sup> An assembly of great men is the greatest fool upon earth.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Benjamin Vaughan, 26 July, 1784. Franklin is speaking of the preposterous laws passed by parliaments and legislatures.

<sup>17</sup> A great Man and a great River are often ill Neighbours.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 198. (1732)

A great Man will not trample upon a Worm, nor sneak to an Emperor.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 200. FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

Offences generally outweigh Merits, with great Men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3700. (1732)

The greatest Vessel hath but its Measure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4580.

<sup>18</sup> Knowledge and Courage are the elements of Greatness. They give immortality because they are immortal. (El saber y el valor alteran grandeza; porque lo son, hacen inmortales.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 4. (1647)

- 1
Great bodies must have slow motions.
BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, xxi, 2.
(1612) Quoted as a proverb in a letter from the Duke of Buckingham to James I, c. 1622.
Great bodies move slowly.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 124. (1721)
"Spoken of the deliberations of parliaments, and other great assemblies; or in jest to them that go slowly on in their business."
- 2
From the height from which the great look down on the world all the rest of mankind seem equal.
HAZLITT, Commonplaces. No. 23. (c. 1821)
- 3
Great men are rarely isolated mountain peaks; they are the summits of ranges.
T. W. HIGGINSON, Atlantic Essays. (1871)
- 4
Seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not. (Et tu quaeris tibi grandia? noli quaerere.)
Old Testament: Jeremiah, xlv, 5. (c. 700 B. C.)
Stand not in the place of great men. (In loco magnorum ne steteris.)
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 6. (c. 250 B. C.)
Do not occupy the conspicuous place in a city.
Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 112a. (c. 450)
A rank too eminent is often the road to degradation.
SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 230. (c. 1050)
- 5
Great men are not always wise. (Non sunt longaevi sapientes.)
Old Testament: Job, xxxii, 9. (c. 350 B. C.)
The biggest are not the best (Les grosses ne sont pas les meilleures.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 43. (1548)
The more one approaches great men the more one finds that they are men. (Plus on approche les grands hommes, plus on trouve qu'ils sont hommes.)
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Grands. (1688)
He that of greatest works is finisher, Oft does them by the weakest minister.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 1, 139. (1602)
The Great Man is a man who lives a long way off.
ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xii, 36. (1901)
- 6
In high places regard for others is rarely to be found. (Rarus enim ferme sensus communis in illa Fortuna.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 73. (c. A. D. 120)
- 7
Ffor, as it is said | by elderne dawis, | ther gromes and the goodmen | beth all eliche grette, | well wo beth the wones [dwellings] | and all that woneth there-in.
WILLIAM LANGLAND, Richard the Redeless, i, 65. (1399) When grooms and householders are all alike great, both to the dwellings, and all that dwelleth therein

- When every one is somebodee,
Then no one's anybody!
W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act ii. (1889)
- 8
Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.
H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)
So when a great man dies,
For years beyond our ken
The light he leaves behind him lies
Upon the paths of men.
H. W. LONGFELLOW, Charles Sumner. (1874)
I found a fragment of matting, a dry crust, an empty soda-bottle—footprints on the sands of time!
C. W. STODDARD, A Prodigal in Tahiti. (1873)
After we pass, the sand says, "Ah, one more footprint!"
ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street. p. 124. (1940)
- 9
The great man is he who does not lose his child's heart.
MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, pt. ii, ch. 12 (c. 300 B. C.)
The mark of true greatness is not to notice that you have received a blow. (Proprium est magnitudinis verae non sentire percussus.)
SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 25, sec 3. (c. A. D. 55)
Not in the possession of good things but in our use of them does greatness lie. (οὐκ ἐν τῇ κτήσει τῶν ἀγαθῶν ἀλλ' ἐν τῇ χρήσει τὸ μέγ' ἐστίν.)
PLUTARCH, Moralia: On the Fortune of Alexander. Sec. 337D. (c. A. D. 95)
He is truly great who is little in himself, and who esteems as nothing any height of honors. (Vere magnus est, qui in se parvus est, et pro nihilo omne culmen honoris ducit.)
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 5. (c. 1420)
Rightly to be great
Is not to stir without great argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw,
When honour's at the stake.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 4, 53. (1600)
It is not enough to have great qualities; one must make good use of them. (Ce n'est pas assez d'avoir de grandes qualités; il en faut avoir l'économie.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 159. (1665)
To be a great man, one must know how to make the most of fortune. (Pour être un grand homme, il faut savoir profiter de toute sa fortune.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 343. (1665)
Tis in the Mind all genuine Greatness lies.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.
The greatest truths are the simplest; and so are the greatest men.
J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)
The great man makes the great thing.
EMERSON, The American Scholar. (1837)
He is great who confers the most benefits.
EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)

The great man is the man who does a thing for the first time.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 8. (1863)
The chief proof of a man's real greatness lies in his perception of his own smallness.

CONAN DOYLE, The Sign of the Four. Ch. 7. (1890) Holmes says he is quoting Richter

1
He would be greater to posterity if he had been willing to be less great. (Maior et apud posteris futuros, si minor esse voluisset.)

AUBROTUS MIRAEUS, Elogia Belgica (c. 1630)
Of Erasmus.

2
The greatest of the great. the mightiest of the mighty.

NESTI-KHENSU, Papyrus: Hymn to Amen-Ra. (c. 1000 B.C.)

Always to excel and to be above all other men. (αἰὲν ἀρίστευεῖν καὶ ὑπερποχον ἔμμεναι ἄλλων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 208. (c. 850 B.C.)

Great in glory, greater in arms. (O fama ingens, ingentior armis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 124. (19 B.C.)

Gallantly great.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 9 June, 1660.

Great in the council, glorious in the field.

POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 335. (1715)

3
The greater a man is, the more easily can his wrath be appeased. (Quo quisque est maior, magis est placabilis irae.)

OWID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. v, l. 31. (c. A.D. 10)

4
Do not despise the steps which raise to greatness. (Noli contemnere ea quae summos sublevant.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 469. (c. 43 B.C.)

5
He who joins battle with the great sheds his own blood.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 45. (c. 1258)

Who plays at butting with a ram

Will quick a broken forehead rue.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 45. Eastwick, tr.

It is not the part of a wise man to grapple with a lion, or strike the fist against a sword.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 46.

Near the mighty, humbly clasp thy hand.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 46.

The wise will never call him great

Who of the great ones speaketh ill.

SADI, Gulistan. Cranmer-Byng, tr.

6
You measure the pedestal along with the man. (Cum basi illum sua metiris.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, sec. 31 (c. A.D. 64)

Seneca is saying that few of those who are raised to lofty heights by riches and honors are really great, but are thought so merely because the pedestal is measured along with the man. A proverbial phrase.

It is the mystery which envelops great men that gives them half their greatness.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York. Pt. vii, ch. 1, p. 385. (1809)

The great are great only because we are on our knees. Let us rise. (Les grands ne sont grands que parceque nous sommes à genoux; relevons nous.)

MAX STIRNER, The Ego and His Own. (1845)

Taken by P. J. Proudhon for the motto of Révolutions de Paris. (c. 1855)

The great are only great because we carry them on our shoulders.

DUBOSCO-MONTANDRÉ, Point de l'Ovale.

Great men have to be lifted on the shoulders of the whole world, in order to conceive their great ideas, or perform their great deeds.

HAWTHORNE, Journal, 7 May, 1850

7
Rough is the road that leads to the heights of greatness. (Confragosa in fastigium dignitatis via est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxiv, sec. 13 (c. A.D. 64)

Greatness is an eminence, the ascent to which is steep and lofty.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 293 (1821)

8
Greatness knows itself.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, iv, 3, 74. (1597)

No truly great man ever thought himself so.

HAZLITT, Commonplaces. No. 20. (c. 1821)

9
But be not afraid of greatness: some are born great, some achieve greatness and some have greatness thrust upon 'em.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 5, 156. (1599)

10
If a great man could make us understand him we should hang him.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

11
All that in this world is great or gaie

Doth as a vapour vanish, and decaie.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Ruines of Time, l. 55. (c. 1595)

12
Greatness does not approach him who is forever looking down; and all those who are looking high are growing poor.

H. D. THOREAU, Life Without Principle. (1854)

Quoting an Oriental proverb.

AS GREAT AS THE DEVIL AND THE EARL OF KENT.
see under FRIEND.

II—Greatness: Its Penalties

13
Glory in excess is fraught with peril; 'tis the lofty peak which is smitten by heaven's thunderbolt. (τὸ δ' ὑπερκόπως κλίνει | εἰ βαρὺ βάλλεται γὰρ ὅς- | σοις Διόθεν κάρανα.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 468. (458 B.C.)

The thunderbolt always falls on the tallest buildings and trees. (οἰκήματα τὰ μέγιστα αἰεὶ καὶ δένδρεα τὰ τοιαῦτα ἀποσκήπτει τὰ βέλεα.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, ch. 10. (c. 445 B.C.) Quoting a speech of Artabanus.

'Tis the tops of the mountains that the lightning strikes. (Feriuntque summos | fulgura montis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 10, l. 11. (23 B.C.)

Thunderbolts sped by Jove's right hand seek out the heights. (Summa petunt dextra fulmina missa Iovis.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 370. (c. 1 B. C.) Lightning, which scorseth the toppes of Towers and high Palaces.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 73. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Who so high above

Are near to lightning that are near to Jove.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Philotas. Act iv, sc. 1. (1605) The hill of greatnesse yeelds a most delightful prospect; but withall, it is most subject to lightning.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: A Reverend Judge. (1613)

1 The prominent man is sought out.

Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 109. (c. 450) He who stands high is seen from afar. (Wer hoch steht, den sieht man weit.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 326. (1856) A German proverb.

2 The highest branch is not the safest roost.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 507. (1855) The topmost branch is not the safest perch.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 103. (1875)

3 Great men are too often unknown, or, what is worse, misknown.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1833) To be great is to be misunderstood.

EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841) Appropriated without credit by Oscar Wilde in a letter to Whistler. (1885)

4 The fuller the cup the sooner the spill.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 354. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

5 The price of greatness is responsibility.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Address, Harvard University, 6 Sept., 1943.

6 Few churchmen can be innocent and high, 'Tis height makes Grantham steeple stand awry.

JOHN CLEVELAND, Poems, p. 63. (c. 1650)

"'Tis height [280 ft.] makes Grantham steeple stand awry." This steeple seems crooked unto the beholders . . . though some conceive the slenderness at such a distance is all the obliquity thereof. Eminency exposeth the uprightest persons to exception.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Lincolnshire. ii, 268. (1662)

7 Great Persons seldom see their Face in a true Glass.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1764. (1732)

8 When the Hop grows high, it must have a Pole.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5590. (1732)

9 There is no mortal, nor ever will be, to whom at birth some admixture of misfortune is not allotted; the greater the man, the greater the misfortune. (τοῖσι δὲ μέγιστοι αὐτῶν μέγιστα.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, ch. 203. (c. 445 B. C.) The great are the most readily hurt by misfortune. (Excellis multo facilius casus nocet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententia. No. 189. (c. 43 B. C.) The greater the Man, the greater the Crime.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4566. (1732)

10 'Tis the tall pine that is oftenest shaken by the wind. (Saepius ventis agitur ingens pinus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 10, l. 9. (23 B. C.) Winds sweep the summits. (Perfluant altissima venti.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 369. (c. 1 B. C.) Lofty peaks do ever catch the blasts. (Alta ventos semper excipiunt iuga.)

SENECA, Oedipus, l. 8. (c. A. D. 60) Vor euer so the hul [hill] is more and herre [lordly], so the wind is more theron.

UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwele, p. 178. (c. 1220) The grete wyndes that blowe in hye courtes

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Curial, p. 5. (1484) Boystrous windes do most of all shake the highest towers.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 77. (1576) The wind is great upon the highest hills, The quiet life is in the dale below.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Mirroure for Magistrates: Shore's Wife. (1578)

Huge winds blow on high hills.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 23. (1639) Cited also by Ray and Fuller

The tallest Trees are most in the Power of the Winds, and Ambitious Men of the Blasts of Fortune.

WILLIAM PENN, More Fruits of Solitude. No. 97. (1718)

High regions are never without storms.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 406. (1855) A great tree attracts the wind. (Shu ta chao feng)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2601. (1875) The Dutch say, "Hooge boommen vangen veel wind."

11 Greatness makes a man's years short.

Palestinian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 81. (c. 400)

12 The greatest charge are greatest cares, in largest seas are sorest tempestes.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 78. (1576) After the early Latin, "Curia curarum genetrix."

13 Painful preëminence! yourself to view

Above life's weakness, and its comforts too.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 267. (1732) It's grand, and ye canna expect to be both grand and comfortable.

BARRIE, The Little Minister. Ch. 10. (1891)

14 Unless one's step be guarded, the summit is safe for none. (Ni gradus servetur, nulli tutus est summus locus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 476. (c. 43 B. C.)

Where there are heights there are precipices.
(Quae excelsa videbantur, praeupta sunt.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi, Ch. 10, sec. 5.
(c. A. D. 60)

There are various ways of falling, and the top-most point is the most slippery. (Varios casus et in sublimi maxime lubricos.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, sec. 74. (a. A. D. 64)

High Places have their Precipices.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2501. (1732)
Great heights are hazardous to the weak head.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 293. (1743)

The mortal race is far too weak
Not to grow dizzy on unwonted heights.
(Das sterbliche Geschlecht ist viel zu schwach
In ungewohnter Höhe nicht zu schwindeln.)

GOETHE, Iphigenia auf Tauris. Act i, sc. 3. (1787)

1
The bigger the affair, the greater the snare.
(Res quanto est maior tanto est insidiosior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 636. (c. 43 B. C.)

2
Great marks are soonest hit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 99. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1760. (1732)
The bigger the man, the better the mark.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk-Phrases, p. 24. (1894)
People who get to the top must expect to be sniped at. A champion is always a fair mark.

FRANK CASE, Do Not Disturb, p. 184. (1940)

3
When you hear the name of men who have become great on account of some distinguished merit, you bark, just as small dogs do when they meet with strangers. (Ad nomen magnorum ob aliquam eximiam laudem vi-rorum, sicut ad occursum ignotorum hominum minuti canes. latratis.)

SENECA, De Vita Beata. Ch. 19, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 58)
No flame rises without smoke, no fame without calumny. (Non surgit sine fumo flamma: nec sine calumnia fama.)

LIPSIUS. (c. 1575) As quoted by PONTANUS,
Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 222.

If on a sudden he begin to rise,
No man that lives can count his enemies.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, *A Trick to Catch the Old
One*. Act iii, sc. 1. (1607)

Whoso reaps above the rest,
With heaps of hate shall surely be oppress.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, *In Commendation of The
Steele Glass*. (c. 1610)

Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

If on Parnassus' Top you sit,
You rarely bite, are always bit.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 329. (1733)

Towers are measured by their shadows, and great men by their calumniators.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs,
p. 64. (1853) A Chinese proverb.

Grandeur has a heavy tax to pay.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays (1863)

4
None cast stones at trees save fruit be there.

SADI, Gulistan, i, 17. (c. 1258) Eastwick, tr.

Be bold to bring forth fruit, though stick and stone

At the fruit-bearing trees are flung alone.

R. C. TRENCH, Poems: Proverbs. (1865) The French say, "On ne jette des pierres qu'à l'arbre chargé de fruits."

5
It is the great who are assailed by envy. (πρὸς γὰρ τὸν ἔχονθ' ὁ φθόνος ἔρπει.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 157. (c. 409 B. C.)

What is highest is envy's mark. (Summa petit livor.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 369. (c. 1 B. C.)

For hord hath hate, and climbing tikeliness,
Prees hath envye, and wele blent overal.

CHAUCER (?), Truth, l. 3. (c. 1380)

At highest worth dull malice reaches

As Slugs pollute the fairest peaches:

Envy defames, as Harpyes vile

Devour the fruit, they first defile.

DR. PATRICK DELANY, The Pheasant and the Lark, l. 81. (1730)

Thus, Fame and Censure with a Tether

By Fate are always link'd together. . . .

'Tis Eminence makes Envy rise,

As fairest Fruits attract the Flies.

SWIFT, To Doctor Delany, l. 31. (1730)

With fame, in just proportion, envy grows;

The man that makes a character makes foes

EDWARD YOUNG, To Mr. Pope, i, 28. (c. 1757)

Envy is the yoke-fellow of eminence.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Compensation. (1839)

6
The danger of the seat in the prow. (κινδυνος ἢ ἐν πρῶνι σελῆς.)

ZENOBIAS, Adagia. (c. A. D. 130) Where the ship would be rammed.

7
None think the great unhappy, but the great.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 237. (1728)

THE GREATER THEY ARE THE HARDER THEY FALL.
see under FALL.

III—Greatness and Goodness

8
Greatnesse and goodnesse goe not alwey together.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 226. (1639)

There is a Latin proverb, "Ceteris maior qui melior" (He is greater than another who is better).

Great and Good are seldom the same Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1752. (1732)

9
Great men have great faults.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 127. (1633)

Great men's faults are never small.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 160. (1639)

Only great men have a right to great faults. (Il n'appartient qu'aux grands hommes d'avoir des grands défauts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 190. (1665)

It is to be lamented that great characters are seldom without a blot.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Lafayette, 10 May, 1786.

Great men too often have greater faults than little men can find room for.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Diogenes and Plato. (1824)

It is not by his faults, but by his excellences, that we must measure a great man.

G. H. LEWES, On Actors and Acting. (1875)

1 He that once is good, is ever great.

BEN JONSON, The Forest: To Lady Aubigny. (1616)

They're only truly great who are truly good.

GEORGE CHAPMAN (?), Revenge for Honour. Act v, sc. 2. (c. 1630)

Goodness is not tied to greatness, but greatness to goodness.

THOMAS MOFFETT, Healths Improvement, 161. (1655) Quoted as a Greek proverb.

There was never yet a truly great man that was not at the same time truly virtuous.

FRANKLIN, The Busy-Body. No. 3. (1728)

The essence of greatness is the perception that virtue is enough.

EMERSON, Essays: Heroism. (1841)

2 Great men's vices are esteemed as virtues.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, Holland's Leaguer Act i, sc. 1. (1632)

The moderation of the great sets a limit only to their vices. (La modération des grands hommes ne borne que leurs vices.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 72. (1746)

3 The happy only are the truly great.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 300. (1728)

IV—Great and Small

See also Little Things, Trifles

4 When the great help the small, both are saved. (τοῖς μικροῖς οἱ μεγάλοι συγκοινωνοῦντες, ἀμφοτέροις σωθήσονται ἐν βίῃ.)

AESOP, Fables: The Horse and the Ass. (c. 570 B.C.) The overloaded ass asks the horse to help him by taking some of his load. The horse refuses, but when the ass falls dead, all his burden is placed on the horse, together with the ass's hide.

A lion in the net. (λέων ἐν πέδαις.)

AESOP, Fables: The Lion and the Mouse. (c. 570 B.C.) The lion spared the life of the mouse, and in return for the favor the mouse released the lion from the net. The moral being that the strong are sometimes dependent upon the weak.

The little best prosper in league with the great, And the great have need to be served by the little. (μετὰ γὰρ μεγάλων βαιὶς ἀριστ' ἂν καὶ μέγας ὀρθοῖθ' ὑπὸ μικροτέρων.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 160. (c. 409 B.C.)

The Great and the Little have need of one another.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4564. (1732)

A small date-stone props up the water-jar.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 683. (1817) Great princes often owe their security to the meanest of their subjects.

The gold wants bran.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 747. Gold is cleaned with bran, but the meaning is that the great need the help of the little.

"Great without small makes a bad wall," says a quaint Greek proverb, which seems to go back to cyclopean times.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, The Pleasures of Life. Ch. 2. (1887)

5 The madest men as the fishes of the sea. the big swallow the small.

Babylonian Talmud: Abodah Zarah, fo. 4a. (c. 450)

The wolfe etis the shepe, the great fysshe the small.

ALEX. BARCLAY, Skyp of Folyis, i, 101. (1509)

Where the small with the great can not agree
The weaker goeth to the pottle, we all daie see
So that alwaie the bygger eateth the beane.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

The whales, you see, eates up the little fishe.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Chippes, p. 145. (1575)

The greate fishe eateth the little. (El pesce grande mangia il piccolo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.—Why as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, ii, 1, 30. (1608)

The great fish eateth up the small.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 143. (1616)

The little can not be great, unless he devour many.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 921. (1640)

The great put the little on the hook.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum No. 944

Men lived like fishes; the greater ones devoured the small.

ALGERNON SIDNEY, Discourses on Government Ch. 2, sec. 18. (1698)

Yes, the great States eat up the little As with fish, so with nations.

THEODORE PARKER, The State of the Nation Sermon preached 28 Nov., 1850.

The locust chases the grasshopper, ignorant that the yellow bird is chasing it. (T'ang lang pu ch'an, ch'i chih 'huang ch'iao tsai 'hou.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 881. (1875)

The big fish eat the little fish, the little fish eat the water-insects, and the water-insects eat the weeds and the mud.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs No. 205. (1937)

6 Great and small do not injure. (ἐν μεγάλῳ καὶ ἐν μικρῷ μὴ ἀγνόει.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), v, 15. (c. 190 B.C.) There is a Latin proverb, "Maius et minus non variant speciem" (Greater and less do not alter kind).

1 Alas! by what trivial means are great affairs brought to destruction. (Eheu quam brevibus pereunt ingentia fati!)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. ii, l. 49. (c. A. D. 395)
What mighty contests rise from trivial things.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 2. (1712)

2 There's no healing great things with little.
(οὐδὲν πού μέγα μικρῶ θεραπεύεται.)

CROBYLUS. (c. 350 B. C.) See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 337.

3 Detestation of the high is the involuntary homage of the low.

DICKENS, Tale of Two Cities. Ch. 1. (1859)

4 Exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. (Quae humilem sublevavit, et sublimem humiliavit.)

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xxi, 26. (c. 600 B. C.)

The Holy One (blessed be He) raises those who humble themselves, and degrades those who are of a proud spirit.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 17b. (c. 450)
My humbling is my elevation, and my elevation is my degradation.

HILLEL, Midrash Rabbah, Exod. xlv. (c. 550)
God ordains the elevation of the lowly and the humbling of the great; therefore humble thyself in order that God may exalt thee.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penunim (Choice of Pearls). No. 449. (c. 1050)

When Chilo asked Aesop what God was doing, Aesop replied, "He is bringing down the high and exalting the low"; an answer which Bayle himself has called "une abrégé de l'histoire humaine."

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 135. (1853)

5 Great Estates may venture more;
Little Boats must keep near Shore.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

6 A great Ceremony for a small Saint.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 190. (1732)

7 He that eats cherries with Noblemen shall have his eyes spirted out with the stones. This outlandish Proverb hath in it an English truth, that they who constantly converse with men farre above their estates shall reap shame and losse thereby.

FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1642)

8 Every great thing is nothing but a lot of little ones. (Nihil est aliud magnum quam multa minuta.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 260. (1869)

9 There would be no great ones, if there were no little ones.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 294. (1640)
There could be no great ones, if there were no little ones.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4868. (1732)

By the change of a single letter Fuller gives the proverb added meaning.

10 Little dogs start the hare, the great get her.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 595.

(1640) RAY, p. 16. (1670) FULLER, No. 3254. (1732) The Italians say, "I piccioli cani trovano, ma i grandi hanno la lepre."

Great Trees keep the little ones under.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1769. (1732)

11 If great men would have care of little ones, both would last long.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 699. (1640)

The great would have none great, and the little all little.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 945.

12 What does it matter to the universe whether one is a fly or an elephant? (Qu'importe à ceux du firmament | Qu'on soit mouche ou bien éléphant?)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xii, fab. 21. (1694)

The last line is, "The small and the great are equal in their eyes" (Les petits et les grands sont égaux à leurs yeux.)

Always the little folk suffer for the follies of the great.

LA FONTAINE, Fables: The Bulls and the Frog.

See under KING: KING AND SUBJECT.

13 Those who concern themselves too much with little things usually become incapable of great ones. (Ceux qui s'appliquent trop aux petites choses deviennent ordinairement incapables des grandes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 41. (1665)

14 He who is great must make humility his base. He who is high must make lowliness his foundation.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 4. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

15 The tree that needs two arms to span its girth began from the tiniest shoot. Yon tower, nine storeys high, rose from a little mound of earth. A journey of a thousand miles began with a single step.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 64. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

From a little seed may spring a mighty stock. (σμικροῦ γένειοι' ἂν σπέρματος μέγας πύθμην.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 204. (458 B. C.) [Mustard] is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs. (Quod minimum quidem est omnibus seminibus: cum autem creverit, maius est omnibus olivibus.)

New Testament: Matthew, xiii, 32. (c. A. D. 50)

The Latin proverb is, "Magnum in parvo" (Much in little).

From little spark may burst a mighty flame. (Poca favilla gran fiamma seconda.)

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto i, l. 34. (c. 1300)

An ook cometh of a litel spyer.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. ii, l. 1335. (c. 1380)

Cypress seeds are small, scarcely to be discerned by the eye, and yet in each one is a tall tree. (Cupressi semina aëda minuta sunt; ut quaedam oculis cerni non possint, et tamen in eo tanta est arbor tam procera.)

ERASMUS, Similia. (c. 1508)

Great thynges proceede & increase of smaule & obscure begynnynge.

RICHARD EDEN, tr., The Decades of the Newe Worlde, p. 312. (1555)

Small drops of rayne ingender great flouddes, and of little seeds grow great trees.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 127. (1576)

What lesse then the grayne of Mustardseed, in time almost what thing is greater then the stalke thereof.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 109. (1579)

A great torch may be lighted at a little candle.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. A3. (1583)

Little sticks kindle the fire; great ones put it out.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 325. (1640)

An acorn one day proves an oak.

RICHARD CORBET, Poems (Chalmers), v, 584. (c. 1640) From the Latin proverb, "Tandem fit surculus arbor" (The sprout at length becomes a tree).

The greatest Oaks have been little Acorns.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4576. (1732)

Large streams from little fountains flow,

Tall oaks from little acorns grow.

DAVID EVERETT, Lines Written for a School Declamation. (1797)

Every oak must be an acorn.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius. Sec. 5. (1852)

The biggest dog has been a pup.

JOAQUIN MILLER, William Brown of Oregon. (1873)

Small streams make great rivers. (Les petits ruisseaux font les grandes rivières.)

E. B. MAWR, Analogous Proverbs, p. 75. (1885)

The mighty oak from an acorn towers;

A tiny seed can fill a field with flowers;

One bell alone tolls out the death of kings;

In every Sussex skylark Shelley sings.

CHARLES DALMON, Much in Little. (c. 1910)

1 All difficult things have their origin in that which is easy, and great things in that which is small.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 64. (c. 550 B.C.)

The greatest things must have the smallest beginnings. (Necesse est minima maximorum esse initia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 435. (c. 43 B.C.) The French say "Sur petit commencement fait une grande fin," or "Du petit on vient au grand" (From little one comes to great), or "Peu de moyens, beaucoup d'effet" (Slight means, great effect).

2 What is great can only seem great when it is measured with something small. (οὕτω γὰρ δὴ καὶ τὸ μέγα δοξεῖται ἂν μέγα, εἰ τῷ μικρῷ παραμετροῖτο.)

LUCIAN, Prometheus. Sec. 15. (c. A.D. 190)

3 There is a gnat for every Nimrod.

D. E. MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 141.

(1916) A Persian proverb. "The proverb," says Marvin, "is taken from the story of Nimrod's war with Abraham as found in the Koran, where we are informed that God plagued Nimrod's followers with swarms of gnats." One gnat flew up Nimrod's nostril and penetrated his brain [sinus?], causing him such anguish that he ordered that his head be beaten with a mallet. This practice of having his head beaten to relieve his pain was kept up, according to the story, for four hundred years. A similar proverb, also from the Persian, is, "By the kick of a mosquito Nimrod will fall to the ground."

4 Those who follow that part of themselves which is great are great, those who follow that part which is little are little.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vi, pt. 1, ch. 15, sec. 1. (c. 300 B.C.)

5 The humble suffer when the haughty quarrel. (Humiles laborant, ubi potentes dissident.)

PHIADRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fable 30. (c. 25 B.C.) See also under KING.

An egg obtained from the house of the chief will break the grindstone in the house of the peasant.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 179. (1842)

6 The greatness of the chief men places them in danger, but the small folk escape notice in easy safety. (Periclitatur magnitudo principum, | minuta plebes facili praesidio latet.)

PHIADRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 5, l. 11. (c. 25 B.C.)

The small, in every affair, get past easily: the great can't make it. (Les petits, en toute affaire, | Esquivent fort aisément: | Les grands ne le peuvent faire.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 6. (1668)

7 Small shall I be when small is my estate, and great when it is great. (σικροῦς ἐν σικροῖς, μέγας ἐν μεγάλοις | ἔσομαι.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. Ode iii, l. 107. (c. 474 B.C.)

8 Only the leaves are falling now; later on the trees will fall on you. (Folia nunc cadunt; . . . tum arbores in te cadent.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 375. (c. 200 B.C.)

What is happening now is a trifle to what will happen later on.

This is just a sprinkle, bringing on the rain. (Minutula pluvia, imbrem parit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 2. (1523)

9 Whatever is to be highest springs from the bottom. (Quicquid futurum est summum ab imo nascitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 600. (c. 43 B.C.) In some editions of Publilius there is a similar proverb, "Si vis ad summum progredi, an infimo ordire" (If you wish to reach the highest, begin at the lowest).

He plumbed the depths that he might gain the heights. (Inferna tetigit, posset ut supera assequi.)
SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 423. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>1</sup> The least boy always carries the biggest fiddle.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 112. (1670)
"All lay load upon those that are least able to bear it. For they that are least able to bear, are least able to resist the imposition of the burden."

The least Boy carries the biggest Fiddle.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4629. (1732)
As a rule, the smallest boy carries the biggest fiddle.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 28. (1880)
Big possum clime little tree.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880) The Germans say, "Die dümmsten Bauern haben die dicksten Kartoffeln" (The stupidest peasants have the biggest potatoes), "Little pigs eat big potatoes" is an Irish form, or "Providence often puts a large potato in a little pig's way." The French say, "Un petit homme projette parfois une grande ombre" (A little man sometimes casts a great shadow).

<sup>2</sup> Little pillars, it is plain,
Cannot heavy weights sustain.
(Pu ta ch'i tung, pu nêng jên chung.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 50. (1875)

In shallow water dragons become the sport of shrimps. (Lung yu ch'ien shui tsao hsia hsi.)
SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 866.

<sup>3</sup> Great things cannot be bought for small sums.
(Non potest parvo res magna constare.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xix, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>4</sup> The broad-ribbed ox is guided on his path
Down the straight furrow by a little goad.
(μέγας δὲ πλεῖρὰ βοῖς ὑπὸ μικρᾶς ὄμως μάστιγος ὁρθὸς εἰς ὁδὸν πορεύεται.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1253. (c. 409 B. C.)
A wise man heeds all matters great and small.
(πρᾶγος δ' ἀτίθειν οὐδὲν ἀνθρώπων χρεῶν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1153. (c. 408 B. C.) Storr, tr. Or, "No trifle is too small to be worthy attention."

<sup>5</sup> Great men are sometimes great even in small things. (Les grands hommes le sont quelque-fois jusque dans les petites choses.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 552. (1746)
The Latin proverb is, "Maximus in minimis" (Greatest in small things).

<sup>6</sup> To compare great things with small. (Parvis componere magna.)

VERGIL, Eclagues, Ecl. i, l. 23. (37 B. C.)
If it is allowable to compare small things with great. (Si parva licet componere magnis.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 176. (29 B. C.)
To compare Great things with small.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 921. (1667)

<sup>7</sup> He hath made the small and the great, and careth for all alike. (Pusillum et magnum ipse fecit, et aequaliter cura est illi de omnibus.)

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, vi, 7. (c. 100 B. C.)

He that high growth on cedars did bestow,
Gave also lowly mushrumps leave to grow.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Great and Small. (c. 1590)
Pay not thy praise to lofty things alone.

The plains are everlasting as the hills.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home. (1839)

Nature reads not our labels, "great" and "small";
Accepts she one and all.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Man with the Hoe: A Reply. (1899)

GREAT THIEVES HANG LITTLE ONE, see under THIEF.

GREECE AND THE GREEKS

<sup>8</sup> It is Greek, it cannot be read. (Graecum est, non potest legi.)

FRANCESCO ACCURSUS, Glossa. (c. 1230)

This gear is Greek to me.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, tr., Supposes. Act i, sc. 1. (1575)

Cassius: Did Cicero say anything?

Casca: Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cassius: To what effect?

Casca: Nay, an I tell you that I'll ne'er look you i' the face again: but those that understood him smiled at one another and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 2, 281. (1599)

All this to the husbandman was heathen Greek.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19. (1620)

It is Hebrew to me. (C'est de l'hébreu pour moi.)

MOIÏÈRE, L'Etourdi. Act iii, sc. 3. (1653)

Molière is quoting the Greek proverb. 'Ἑβραῖκα μ' ὀμιλεῖ, the Greek equivalent of "It's Greek to me." The French form is, "C'est du grec pour moi," or "C'est du haut allemand [high German] pour moi."

I think this is indeed Heathen Greek: I'm sure 'tis so to me.

APHRA BEHN, The False Count. Act iv, sc. 1. (1681)

All this fine language had been heathen Greek to me.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Squire of Alsatia. Act iv, sc. 1. (1688)

For my part, 'twas all Hebrew-Greek to me.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 27.

(1693) An interpolation by Motteux, combining the Greek and English proverbs.

This language was little known or understood hitherto in this realm. And if any saw a piece of Greek, they used to say, Graecum est; non potest legi, i. e. 'It is Greek, it cannot be read.'

JOHN STRYPE, Life of Sir John Cheke. Pt. i, sec. 2, p. 14. (1705)

This is Greek to you now, honest Laurence, and in sooth learning is dry work.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 29. (1821)

I am a stranger, and this is Greek to me.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 1. (1840)

There was a byword "Graecum est: non potest legi."

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p.189. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> Most Greek among the Greeks, most Latin among the Latins. (Inter Graecos graecissimus inter Latinos latinissimus.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Dissimilitudo. (c. 1524)

Of Rudolphus Agricola, i.e., Roelof Huysman.

<sup>2</sup> This miraculous rebounding of the voice, the Greeks haue a pretty name for it, and call it Echo.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, Pliny, ii, 581. (1601)

The Greeks Had a Word for It.

ZOË AKINS, Title of play. (1929) In a letter to the compiler, Miss Akins writes: "In the play there was a conversation which was cut out as the two characters speaking were cut out. One was a photographer who had come to the wedding in the last act, and had had a glass too much, the other his plain little woman assistant. He is speaking rather floridly about the grandeur of Rome and the glory of Greece. He says, 'Girls like the bride—her sort—the Greeks had a word for it.' 'Even the Anglo-Saxons have a word for her sort,' the assistant acidly comments. 'And it's usually spelt with a dash.' 'But the Greeks had a special word for it,' he contends. 'Hetaera, plural hetaerae.' 'Meaning tarts,' she says. 'Oh, no: meaning free souls—in the days when wives were slaves and slaves were wives.' You will see by this explanation that the phrase is original and grew out of the dialogue."

Say me a word. It's a word they've got So what?

OGDEN NASH, Pride Goeth Before a Fall. (1933)

You have a word for it, I'm all wet.

H. C. BAILEY, Mr. Fortune Finds a Pig, p. 99. (1943)

So the Greeks have a word for it, Austen thought.

ANNE HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 136. (1943)

<sup>3</sup> Everything is Greek, when it is more shameful to be ignorant of Latin. (Omnia Graece, cum sit turpe magis nostris nescire Latine.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 187. (c. A. D. 120)

The concluding phrase is said to be spurious. A laudation in Greek is of marvelous efficacy at the beginning of a book. (Une louange en grec est d'une merveilleuse efficace à la tête d'un livre.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Précieuses Ridicules: Préface. (1659)

LITTLE LATIN AND LESS GREEK, see under LATIN.

<sup>4</sup> When Greeks joyn'd Greeks, then was the tug of war.

NATHANIEL LEE, The Rival Queens, Act iv, sc. 2. (1677) Constantly misquoted: "When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war."

Mowbray had . . . some reason to admit that, When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 18. (1824)

Greek was meeting Greek only a few yards off. Mr. Hardie was being undermined by a man of his own calibre.

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 35. (1863)

The wild horse encounters the lion. (Tsun i yü chao ssü.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 185. (1872)

<sup>5</sup> Is it not commonly said of Grecians that craft commeth to them by kinde, that they learne to deceiue in their cradell?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 89. (1579)

Of olde it was sayd to a Lacedemonian, that all the Grecians knewe honestie, but not one practised it.

LYLY, Euphues and His Epheobus, p. 141. The Albanians say, "After shaking hands with a Greek, count your fingers"; the Arabians, "If a man of Naresh hath kissed thee, count thy teeth."

<sup>6</sup> The gentle Greeks, who were eternal drinkers. (Gregoys gentilz, qui furent buuers eternalz.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1532)

<sup>7</sup> Greek is to a man of position what the hall-mark is to silver.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act i. (1905)

<sup>8</sup> Think ye any gifts of the Greeks are free from treachery? . . . I fear the Greeks, even bearing gifts. (Timeo Danaos et dona ferentis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 49. (19 B.C.)

Tell Mrs. Boswell that I shall taste her marmalade cautiously at first. Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes. Beware, says the Italian proverb, of a reconciled enemy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 3 May. 1777.

Fear the Greeks when they bear olive branches.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 69. (1943)

TO THE GREEK CALENDs, see under NEVER.

GREED

See also Covetousness

<sup>9</sup> Even the fountains are thirsty. (Ipsi fontes sitiunt.)

CICERO, Ad Quintum Fratrem. (c. 55 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 58, who explains that the proverb applies to persons who greedily hunt after wealth although they already possess it in abundance. Cicero applied it to his brother, who had asked him for verses, though much more capable of making them himself.

<sup>10</sup> They be both greedy guts all geuen to get They care not how.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

- 1
Greed is envy's auldest brither:
Scraggy wark they mak thegither.
ALEX HISLOP, Scottish Proverbs, p. 107. (1868)
- 2
They are greedy dogs which can never have enough. (Canes impudentissimi nescierunt saturitatem.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, lvi, 11. (c. 725 B.C.)
Greedy as a dog.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 285. (1639)
Dogs, tho' become domestick animals, are ravenous to a proverb.
MANDEVILLE, Fable of the Bees, p. 187. (1714)
- 3
Greedy folks have long arms.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 132. (1721)
- 4
Greed is rich and shame poor. (Est aviditas dives, et pauper pudor.)
PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 1, l. 12. (c. 25 B.C.)
- 5
None should be greedy, least of all the old. (Avidum esse oportet neminem, minime senem.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 35. (c. 43 B.C.)
In riches greed is but poverty well furnished (Instructa inopia est in divitiis cupiditas.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 276.
Tedious the tale of greed's demands. (Longum est quodcumque flagitavit cupiditas.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 342.
Greed contemplates what it wishes, not what befits. (Quod vult cupiditas cogitat, non quod decet.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 560
- 6
A greedy man God hates.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 227. (1678)
- 7
A single loaf the stomach will supply,
But not earth's richest gifts the greedy eye
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 31. (c. 1258)
- 8
To greed, all nature is insufficient. (Avidis natura parum est.)
SENECA, Hercules Oetoeus, l. 631. (c. A.D. 60)
- 9
Be not greedy to add money to money. (Numquam fuisset ipsa pecunia.)
Apocrypha: Tobit, v, 18. (c. 200 B.C.)

GREEN

- 10
Greene as emeraude.
CHAUCER (?), The Parlement of Foules, l. 174. (c. 1382)
The thriddle [third] thre monthes grene as grass.
JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, i, 123. (1387)
Greene as any gresse in the somertyde.
JOHN LYDGATE, Assembly of Gods. St. 48. (1420)
As greene as the greenest grasse.
GABRIEL HARVEY, Works (Grosart) j, 271. (1593)
Poor soft Tommy, as green as grass.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 4. (1869) It will be noted that "as green as grass" has acquired the meaning of ignorant or inexperienced.
- Greene as a lefe.
LORD BERNERS, tr., Froissart, ii, 83. (1525)
Greene as any leek.
CHAUCER (?), Romaunt of the Rose, l. 212. (c. 1365)
A colour as greene as a leeke.
UNKNOWN, Nomenclator, p. 180. (1585)
His eyes were green as leeks.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 342. (1596)
- 11
Whan they were clothed in Lyncolne grene,
They kest away theyre graye.
F. J. CHILD, ed., English and Scottish Ballads, iii, 77. (c. 1510) Lincoln green was a bright green stuff made at Lincoln, especially celebrated in literature as the garb of Robin Hood and his men.
Swains in shepherds' gray, and girls in Lincolne green.
MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-olbion. Ch. 25. (1613)
- 12
All thing is gay that is greene.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)
- 13
No person ever saw anything green in my eye.
HENRY MAYHEW, London Labour. Ch. 2. (1851) Signs of gullibility.
Do you see anything green in this here eye?
CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 24. (1863)
Serjeant, do you see anything green in my eye?
R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 21. (1894)
Do you see any green in my eye, my dear?
J. M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy. Ch. 4. (1896)
- 14
Then some greene gownes are by the lasses worn.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Pt. i, p. 84. (c. 1580) "To give a woman a green gown" is to roll her on the grass till her gown is stained.
Madge pointed to meete me in your wheate-close,
... And first I gave her a greenegowne.
ROBERT GREENE, George-a-Greene. (1599)
At length he was so bold as to giue her a greene gowne when I fear me she lost the flower of her chastity.
ANTHONY MUNDAY, Palmerin of England, ii, 5. (1602)
Many a green-gown has been given.
HERRICK, Corinna's Going a Maying. (1648)
Green Gown, a throwing of young Lasses on the Grass and Kissing them.
B.E., Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Green. (c. 1695)
Green Gown, the supposed badge of the loss of Virginity.
JOHN JAMIESON, Dictionary: Green. (1825)
- 15
Unlearned and raw or grene in cunning.
NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus Upon the New Testament: Luke, vi, 75. (1548)
How green you are and fresh in this old world!
SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 4, 145. (1596)
My salad days When I was green in judgment.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 5, 73. (1606)

- You're green, you're credulous.
 CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act iv, sc. 1. (1605)
 He is so jolly green.
 CHARLES DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 9. (1838)
 Being . . . a green hand, I found it very difficult to get a place.
 C.F. HALE, Life with the Esquimaux, i, 91. (1864)
 I ain't as green as I look.
 O. HENRY, A Lickpenny Lover. (1908)
 That was in my green and salad days.
 NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 283. (1940)

GRIEF

See also Sorrow, Woe

- 1
 There is a real grief and there is a methodical grief.
 ADDISON, The Drummer. Act ii, sc. 1. (1716)
 2
 Wherein is life sweet to him who suffers grief?
 (τί γάρ καλὸν ζῆν ὃ βίος λύπας φέρει;)
 AESCHYLUS, Award of the Arms. Frag. 91, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) STOBÆUS, iv, 53, 24.
 3
 Grief kills the mightiest of the mighty.
Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 100. (c. 450)
 Grief does not always kill; if it did, in many cases it would lose half its bitterness.
 F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 50. (1850)
 4
 Woman's grief is like a summer storm,
 Short as it violent is.
 JOANNA BAILLIE, Basili. Act v, sc. 3. (1821)
 5
 Does he think that baldness will assuage his grief? (Cestuy cy pense il que la pelade soulage le duel?)
 BION, as quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 4. (1580), referring to a man who was tearing his hair for woe.
 6
 Grief should be the instructor of the wise.
 LORD BYRON, Manfred. Act i, sc. 1, l. 9. (1817)
 7
 Grief is not natural but a matter of belief or opinion. (Non in natura, sed in opinione esse aegritudinem.)
 CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 28, sec. 71. (B. C. 45) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 40.
 8
 Grief is to man as certain as the grave.
 GEORGE CRABBE, The Library, l. 641. (1781)
 9
 Funeral grief loathes words.
 THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act. i, sc. 1. (1604)
 In all the silent manliness of grief.
 GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 384. (1770)
 No words suffice the secret soul to show,
 For Truth denies all eloquence to Woe.
 BYRON, The Corsair. Canto iii, st. 22. (1813)
 True sorrow makes a silence in the heart.
 ROBERT NATHAN, A Cedar Box. (1929)
 Keep your broken arm inside your sleeve.
 H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 297. (1937)

- 10
 Grief never mended no broken bones.
 DICKENS, Sketches by Boz: Gin-Shops. (1835)
 11
 Grief is the agony of an instant: the indulgence of grief the blunder of a life.
 DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vi, ch. 7. (1826)
 A cherished grief is an iron chain.
 STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT, King David. (1931)
 12
 I see, alas! so wide a sea of grief
 That I can never swim to shore again,
 Nor breast the tide of this calamity.
 (κακὼν δ' ὡ τάλας πέλαγος εἰσορῶ τοσοῦτον ὥστε μήποτ' ἐκνεύσαι πάλιν, μηδ' ἐκπεράσαι κύμα τῆσδε συμφορᾶς.)
 EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 822. (c. 428 B. C.)
 SHAKESPEARE'S lines in Macbeth, iii, 4, 136, are reminiscent of this: "I am in blood | Stepp'd in so far that, should I wade no more, | Returning were as tedious as go o'er."
 13
 Vnto what grieffe so euer it be, pacience doth remedie. (A qual si voglia dolore, rimedia la patientia.)
 JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)
 14
 You're just making a lot of grief for yourself.
 HAMMETT, The Maltese Falcon. Ch. 15. (1930)
 15
 The grief of the head is the grief of griefs.
 HOWELL, Proverbs. (1659) See under HEAD
 16
 Grief is a species of idleness.
 SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. i, p. 212. (c. 1775)
 All grief for what cannot in the course of nature be helped soon wears away.
 SAMUEL JOHNSON, BOSWELL, Life, 14 Sept., 1777.
 17
 The luxury of grief. (ἡδονῆς τῶν γόων.)
 HELIODORUS, Aethiopica. Bk. i, ch. 18. (c. A. D. 350)
 There is a solemn luxury in grief.
 WILLIAM MASON, English Garden, l. 25. (1772)
 Weep on! and as thy sorrows flow,
 I'll taste the luxury of woe.
 THOMAS MOORE, Anacreontic. (1806)
 It is dangerous to abandon one's self to the luxury of grief.
 HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 29 Dec., 1871
 18
 Griefe, if't be great, 'tis short; if long, 'tis light.
 ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides: Griefe. (1648)
 19
 Grief should not exceed proper bounds, but should be in proportion to the blow. (Flagrantior aequo | non debet dolor esse viri, nec vulnere major.)
 JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 11. (c. A. D. 120)
 20
 One grief drives out another.
 JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 280. (1631)
 21
 Of all the many evils common to all men, the greatest is grief. (πολλῶν φύσει τοῖς πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις κακῶν | δυτῶν μέγιστόν ἐστιν ἡ λύπη κακόν.)
 MENANDER, Fragments. No. 668. (c. 300 B. C.)

What philosophers can praise grief, the one thing most detestable of all? (Aegritudinem laudare, unam rem maxime detestabilem, quorum est tandem philosophorum?)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iv, ch. 25, sec. 55. (45 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> Petrified with grief. (Deriguitque malis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vi, l. 303. (7 A. D.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, bk. i, ch. 2

<sup>2</sup> 'Tis something to lighten with words a fated evil. A suppressed grief chokes and seethes within. (Est aliquid, fatale malum per verba levare: . . . | strangulat inclusus dolor atque exaestuatur intus.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 1, l. 59. (c. A. D. 9)

The grief that is silent is most dangerous. (La douleur qui se tait n'en est que plus funeste.)

RACINE, Andromache. Act iii, sc. 3. (1667)

Grief pent up will burst the Heart.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 99. (1678)

There is a sort of Pleasure in indulging Grief.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4883. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> The griefe should be theirs, whose is the gaine.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 163. (1576)

<sup>4</sup> My life is spent with grief, and my years with sighing. (Defecit in dolore vita mea: et anni mei in gemitibus.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxi, 10. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> Dumb grief thinks of much worse to come. (Peiora multo cogitat mutus dolor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 505. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> I follow'd rest; rest fled and soon forsook me: I ran from grief; grief ran and overtook me.

QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 12. (1635)

<sup>7</sup> It is idle to grieve if you get no help from grief. (Supervacuum est dolore, si nihil dolendo proficias.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>8</sup> The display of grief makes more demands than grief itself. How few men are sad in their own company. (Plus ostentatio doloris exigit quam dolor: quotus quisque sibi tristis est!)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, sec. 16. (c. A. D. 64)

He grieves sincerely who grieves unseen. (Ille dolet vere qui sine teste dolet.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, ep. 33, l. 4. (A. D. 85)

He grieves sore who grieves alone. (Il plaidoye beau qui plaidoye sans partie.)

J. DE LA VÉPRIE, Proverbes Communs. (c. 1560)

People will pretend to grieve more than they really do, and that takes off from their true grief.

SWIFT, Letter to Mrs. Dingley, 14 Jan., 1712.

<sup>9</sup> Light griefs speak, the weighty are dumb. (Curae leves locuntur, ingentes stupent.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 607. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 2.

Small griefs can speake: the great astonish stand.

THOMAS HUGHES, The Misfortunes of Arthur. Act iv, sc. 2. (1587)

Striving to tell his woes, words would not come; For light cares speak, when mighty griefs are dumb.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Complaint of Rosamond. St. 114. (1592)

Light cares cry out: the heavier are dumb.

J. H. FRISWELL, The Gentle Life, p. 164. (1864)

The Italians say, "I gran dolori sono muti" (Great griefs are silent). ANDRÉ CHÉNIER has, "Les petits chagrins rendent tendre; les grands dur" (Little griefs make us tender; great ones make us hard).

<sup>10</sup> That grief is light which can take counsel. (Levis est dolor qui capere consilium potest.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 155. (c. A. D. 60)

Grief that gives way to Verses, is not very lamentable.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1776. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Great grief does not of itself put an end to itself. (Magnus sibi ipse non facit finem dolor.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 786. (c. A. D. 60)

Great grief hath joy to dwell on all its woes. (Gaudet magnus aerumnas dolor | tractare totas.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 1066.

<sup>12</sup> Some griefs are med'cinable.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 2, 33. (1609)

Great griefs, I see, medicine the less.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iv, 2, 243.

Grief is itself a medicine.

WILLIAM COWPER, Charity, l. 159. (1781)

<sup>13</sup> Grief is proud, and makes his owner stoop.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 1, 69. (1596)

<sup>14</sup> Every one can master a grief but he that has it.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 2, 29. (1598) See also MISFORTUNES OF OTHERS, under MISFORTUNE.

<sup>15</sup> Grief makes one hour ten.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 3, 261. (1595)

Grief, that's beauty's canker.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 414. (1611)

<sup>16</sup> Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet Could rule them both without ten women's wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1007. (1593)

<sup>17</sup> What's gone and what's past help Should be past grief.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, iii, 2, 223. (1610)

It is too late to grieve when the chance is past.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 326.

(1605) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5256. (1732)

Never grieve for that you cannot help.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 292. (1639)

Grieving for Misfortunes is adding Gall to Wormwood.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1777 (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Clamorous grief wastes itself in sound. (χθ μάτην πολλήν βοή.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1252. (c. 441 B.C.)
They make the most lamentation who grieve least. (Iactantius moerent, quae minus dolent.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, ch. 77. (c. A. D. 116)
Grieues that sound so lowd, proue alwaies light.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Widdowes Teares.
(1612)

A BLETHERIN' COW SOON FORGETS HER CALF, see
under COW

<sup>2</sup> Chawing the cud of grieft and inward paine.
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. v, canto vi, st. 19. (1590)

<sup>3</sup> There is no grief which lapse of time does not lessen. (Nullus dolor est, quem non longinquitas temporis minuat.)

SERVIUS Sulpicius, Letter to Cicero, March,
45 B.C. See CICERO, Ad Familiares, iv, 5.
There is another Latin proverb, "Dies dolorem minuit" (Day lessens grief).

Grief is effaced by the long lapse of time (Dolorem dies longa consumit.)

SENECA, Ad Marciam de Consolatione. Ch. 8,
sec. 1. (c. A. D. 40)

The flood of grief decreaseth when it can swell
no longer.

FRANCIS BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. (a. 1626)
The ocean has its ebbings—so has grief.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodoric, l. 510. (1824)

<sup>4</sup> We were nearly coming to grief.
THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1854)
As for coming to grief, we're on a good errand.

KINGSLEY, Two Years Ago. Ch. 21. (1857)
The coal-smack had come to grief.

WILLIAM BLACK, Shandon Bells. Ch. 27. (1883)

<sup>5</sup> You bid me, O queen, reopen unspeakable grief. (Infandum, regina, iubes renovare dolorem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 3. (19 B.C.)
New Grief awakens the old.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3535. (1732)
ALL GRIEFS WITH BREAD ARE LESS, see under SORROW.

II—Grief: Companionship In

<sup>6</sup> More lightly do his sorrows press upon a man, when to a friend or fellow traveller he tells his griefs.

CALLIMACHUS, Fragments. Frag. 67. (c. 250 B.C.)
It is a comfort, as men say,
To him to which is wo besain [clothed in sorrow]
To sene an other in his peine.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 261.
(c. 1390)

'Tis some comfort to have a companion in our sufferings.

SUSANNA CENTLIVRE, The Busie Body. Act iii,
sc. 5. (1709)

<sup>7</sup> And of all the griefs that mortals share,
The one that seems the hardest to bear
Is the grief without community.

HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Misery. (a. 1845)
Well, really, when one's heart is breaking with vexation,

To see one's friend in the same distress, is a wond'rous consolation!

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iv, 72. (1850)

<sup>8</sup> 'Tis sweet to mingle tears with tears;
Griefs, when they wound in solitude,
Wound more deeply.

(Lacrimas lacrimis miscere iuvat;
magis exurunt quos secretae lacerant curae.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 664. (c. A. D. 60)
Sweet to a mourner is a host of mourners. (Dulce maerenti populus dolentum.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 1009. (c. A. D. 60)
Fellowship in woe doth woe assuage.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 790. (1594)
Grief best is pleased with grief's society.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1111. (1594)

It easeth some, though none it ever cur'd,
To think their dolour others have endur'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1581. (1594)
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish;

One desperate grief cures with another's languish
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 2, 47. (1595)

The mind much sufferance doth o'erskip
When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 6, 113. (1605)

No bond
In closer union knits two human hearts
Than fellowship in grief.

SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc. Bk. i, l. 339. (1795)
The sad relief

That misery loves—the fellowship of grief
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The West Indies Pt. iii
(1810) MISERY LOVES COMPANY. see MISERY

<sup>9</sup> He oft finds med'cine who his griefe imparts
But double griefs afflict concealing harts

SPENSER, Faerie Queene, i, ii, 34. (1590)
Griefe findes some ease by him that like does beare.

EDMUND SPENSER, Daphnida, l. 67. (1591)

<sup>10</sup> Thy hard hap doth mine appease,
Company doth sorrow ease.

UNKNOWN, The Willow Tree. (c. 1620) See
PERCY, Reliques. Ser. iii, bk. ii, No. 9

GRIN, see Smile

GRIST

<sup>11</sup> There is no lykelihooode that those thinges will bring gryst to the mill.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Calvin on Deuteronomy, cxxxiii, 755. (1583)

A pick-purse doctrine, contrived to bring grist to the Popes mill.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat
Armour. Pt. iii, ch. 21. (1661)

And here foreign casuists bring in a bundle of mortal sins, all grist for their own mill.

THOMAS FULLER, The Church-History of Britain. Bk. iii, ch. 6. (1655)

All bring grist to your mill.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 163. (1678)

More grist to the mill.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The School for Guardians. Act i, sc. 4. (1767)

Well, let them go, it brings grist to our mill.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Lame Lover. Act i. (1770)

Sermons to thy mill bring grist.

LORD BYRON, To Murray. (1818)

Meantime the fools bring grist to my mill, so let them live out their day.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 34. (1838)

Some people make fat, some blood, and some bile— . . . and whatever they make is a sort of grist to the mill.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Ch. 10. (1871)

Your stumble, your fall, your misfortune . . . all is grist to the mill of the mean-minded man.

ALEXANDER WHYTE, Bible Characters. Ch. 12. (1896)

All is grist that comes to their mill.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Moving Finger, p. 133. (1942)

1

Thi mylle hath grounde thi laste griste.

UNKNOWN, Hymns to the Virgin, p. 74. (c. 1430)

This grinds life's grist, yet takes small tole.

EDWARD BAYNARD, Health, p. 29. (1740)

Ye might have other grist to grind.

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 13. (1820)

GRUB

2

He knelt down a grub and rose a butterfly. John Chester, Esquire, was knighted and became Sir John.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 40. (1840)

3

So saith . . . a new upstart grub of my books.

SIR THOMAS URQUHART, tr., Rabelais: Prologue. (1653)

This miserable grub who had been an attorney's boy.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 30. (1748)

Mr. Nahum Tate:—This poor grub of literature.

DE QUINCEY, Essays: Shakespeare. (1838)

Clubs have a way of blackballing grubs—especially grubs that are out of the common grubby.

GEORGE DU MAURIER, The Martian, p. 390. (1896)

Grub Street was the former name of a London street, now Milton street, which said Dr. Johnson, was "much inhabited by writers of small histories, dictionaries and temporary poems; whence any mean production is called grubstreet." George Gissing has a novel called New Grub Street (1891) dealing in grimly realistic fashion with the struggles and compromises of the modern literary world.

4

I'll pass my word this night Shall yield us grub, before the morning light.

UNKNOWN, Ancient Poems and Ballads, p. 22. (1659)

How did you procure your Grub and Bub [drink]?

GEORGE PARKER, A View of Society. Pt. 1, ch. 22, p. 171. (1781)

The boys finished the evening with some prime grub, swizzle, and singing.

COL. PETER HAWKER, Diary, i, 68. (1813)

How you'll relish your grub by and by!

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Peter Simple, p. 147. (1833)

The great secret of life is to learn to earn one's grub.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 6. (1843)

GRUNDY

5

Are you afraid that Polydamus and his Trojan ladies will disparage me? (Polydamus et Troiades.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. i, l. 4. (c. A. D. 58)

Polydamus, a gossip of Troy (HOMER, Iliad, xxii, 100), and "the Trojan wives with trailing robes" were the Mrs. Grundys of that day.

What would People say?

SWIFT, A Quiet Life, l. 34. (1719)

What will Mrs. Grundy say?

THOMAS MORTON, Speed the Plough. Act i, sc. 1.

It was this play which, on 8 Feb., 1798, introduced Mrs. Grundy into English literature. She never appears on the stage, but is constantly referred to by Dame Ashfield, her neighbor, who fears her criticism or disapproval. Her frequent question, "What will Mrs. Grundy say?" became proverbial, and Mrs. Grundy herself has become the personification of the tyranny of social opinion in matters of conventional propriety. See O.E.D., iv, 473/1.

What is your opinion, Mrs. Grundy?

THOMAS HOOD, An Open Question. (c. 1840)

Many are afraid of God—And more of Mrs. Grundy.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, The Jester's Plea. (1857)

There be four things that keep us all from having our own way,—

Money, Fortune, Mrs. Grundy, and Policeman A.

D'ARCY THOMPSON, Sales Attici. (c. 1864)

Wherever woman has a home, there Mrs. Grundy has a tongue.

LYTTON, Kenelm Chillingly. Bk. ii, ch. 15. (1873)

Custom, habit, fashion, use, and wont, are all represented in her. . . . "What will Mrs. Grundy say?" quells many a noble impulse, hinders many a self-denying act.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 249. (1875)

What will the neighbors say?

BARBER AND SCHARELITZ, Drawn Conclusions, p. 27. (1942)

GUDGEON

6

You haue made both me and Philautus to swallow a gudgeon.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 97. (1579)

These gentlemen who haue swallowed the gudgeon.

THOMAS LODGE, An Alarum Against Usurers, p. 44. (1584)

He is cozened, or he hath swallowed a gudgeon.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: French, p.19.(1659)
To swallow gudgeons ere th' are catch'd.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, iii, 923. (1664)
He hath swallow'd a Gudgeon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1902.(1732)
To swallow a gudgeon, i.e. to be caught or deceived, to be made a fool of.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary of Archaic Words: Gudgeon. (1847)

1 They would doo no harme, were it not to make fooles and catch gudgins.

REGINALD SCOT, The Discoverie of Witchcraft.
Ch. 12. (1584) A gudgeon, in this sense, is a person who will bite at any bait, or swallow anything: credulous and gullible.

Did every two old Gudgeons swallow greedily?

COLLEY CIBBER, Love Makes a Man. Act i, sc.
1. (1701)

2 Fish not, with this melancholy bait,
For this fool gudgeon, this opinion.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i. 1,
102. (1597)

GUESS

3 I never guess. It is a shocking habit—destructive to the logical faculty.

CONAN DOYLE, Sign of the Four. Ch. 1. (1890)

4 He by gess had got an inklyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8.(1546)

5 Your guess is well-aimed and hits the bull's-eye. (ὀρθῶς καὶ οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ εἰκασας.)

LUCIAN, Icaromenippus. Sec. 2. (c. A.D. 180)

6 Your guess is as good as mine. After all, we're both of us guessing: American: late C. 19-20.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Your. (1941)

7 Once I guessed right, And I got credit by't;
Thrice I guessed wrong, And I kept my credit on.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Letter. (1710) Quoted. The Chinese say, "To guess is cheap, but to guess wrong is expensive."

8 The golden guess

Is morning-star to the full round of truth.

TENNYSON, Columbus, l. 42. (1880) A Latin proverb, "Opinio veritate maior" (Supposition is greater than truth), is quoted by FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Lord Essex. (1596)

GUEST

See also Hospitality

9 Where is good will greater than from guest to host? (τὴ γὰρ ἡ ἐξου ἐξανοίαν ἐστὶν εὐμενέστερον.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 702.(458 B.C.)

10 The unvited fly at dinner. (δειπνεῖν ἀκλητος αὐτα.)

ANTIPHANES, Fragment. No 17. (c. 336 B.C.)

There is room for several shades. (Locus est et pluribus umbris.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 28. (20 B.C.)
"Shades," so-called, were the uninvited guests which a distinguished person brought with him to a banquet.

Unboden gest [knoweth] not, where he shall sytte.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350)

An unbydden geast knoweth not where to syt.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

Heereafter I will bring a stoole on mine arme for an vnbidden guest.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 52. (1579)

And I have heard it said, unbidden guests

Are often welcomest when they are gone.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, ii, 2, 55. (1591)

Quha cum uncaltt, unservd sild sit. [He who comes uncalled, unserved should sit.]

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, Poems, p. 42. (1597)

An unbidden guest

Should travaile as dutch-women go to Church:
Beare their stooles with them.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Divel. Act iii, sc.
2. (1612)

An unbidden guest must bring his stool with him.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)

BAILEY, Dictionary: Unbidden. (1736)

Come uncalt'd, sit unserv'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 77. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1123. (1732) The Dutch say, "Die komt ongeroepen gaat weg ongedankt" (He who comes unbidden goes unthanked).

Unbidden Guests know not where to sit down.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5395.(1732)

The unbidden guest has nowhere to sit.

ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)

And if the proverb says what's true,

Which these old saws are apt to do,

The merry, but unlook'd for guest,

Full often proves to be the best.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of Consolation. Canto xxix. (1819)

11 A house filled with guests is eaten up and ill spoken of.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p.291.(1855)

12 When the guest is dearest is when he is going

(Wenn der Gast am liebsten ist, soll er gehen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes.

p. 316. (1856) A German proverb. This is Cahier's rendering, but perhaps a better one is, "When the guest is dearest (or most appreciated), is when he should depart." In other words, don't wear out your welcome

13 The guest who outstays his fellow-guests loses his overcoat.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 362
(1937) A Chinese proverb.

14 A guest in the house is God in the house.

JEREMIAH CURTIN, tr., With Fire and Sword
Ch. 3. (1890)

15 A gest as good lost as founde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

1 A civil guest
Will no more talk all, than eat all the feast.
HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 51. (a. 1633)

2 He that comth euery daie, shall have a cock-naie [a small egg called "cock's egg"];
He that comth now and then, shall haue a fatte hen.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
A constant Guest is never welcome.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 48. (1732)
He who comes rarely comes well. (Chi raro viene, vien bene.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 207. (1856) An Italian proverb.

3 A guest remembers all his days the host who shows him kindness. (τοῦ γὰρ τε ξείνος μνησεται ἡματα πάντα | ἀνδρὸς ξεινοδόκου, ὅς
κεν φιλότητα παράσχη.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 54. (c. 850 B.C.)
It's an ill guest that never drinks to his host.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1678)
It is an ill Guest that never drinks to his Hostess.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2901. (1732)

4 'Tis equal wrong if a man speed on a guest who is loath to go, and if he keep back one that is eager to be gone. One should welcome the present guest, and send forth him that would go. (χρὴ ξείνον παρεῖντα φιλεῖν, ἐθέλοντα δὲ πέμπειν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 74. (c. 850 B.C.)
This line was omitted in many ancient editions. Pope's rendering supplied the proverb:

Alike he thwarts the hospitable end
Who drives the free, or stays the hasty friend:
True friendship's laws are by this rule express'd,
Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest.

POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 81. (1726) Pope liked the line so well that he repeated it a few years later in his Imitations of Horace, but spoiled it by changing one word:

For I, who hold sage Homer's rule the best
Welcome the coming, speed the going guest.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 159. (1732) There is nothing in the Satire even remotely resembling this.

I sped the parting, welcomed the coming guests.
(καὶ τοὺς μὲν ἐξέπεμπον, οἱ δ' ἤκον ξένοι.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 640. (c. 419 B.C.)
Foster the guest that comes, further him that maun gang.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 35. (1818)
To all guests that must go, bid God's speed and brush away all traces of their steps.

TAGORE, The Gardener. No. 45. (1913)

5 Wherever the storm carries me, I go a willing guest. (Quo me cumque rapit tempestas, deferor hospes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. i, l. 15. (20 B.C.)
As drives the storm, at any door I knock,
And house with Montaigne now, or now with Locke.

POPE, tr., Horace: Epistles, i, 1, 25. (1732)

6 It is more disgraceful to turn out a guest than not to admit him. (Turpius eicitur, quam non admittitur hospes.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 6, l. 13. (c. A.D. 9)

7 Such a geste, such an host.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. M2. (1540)

Lyke hoste, lyke guest.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals' Dictionary Revised, sig.
H2. (1586)

Such oast, such ghest, the prouerbe sayes.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, A Paire of Spy-Knaves,
p. 21. (c. 1613)

Like guest, like landlord.

EDMUND GAYTON, *Pleasant Notes upon Don
Quixot*, p. 9. (1654)

The guest of the hospitable learns hospitality.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 384. (1817)

8 No guest is so welcome that he will not become a nuisance after three days in a friend's house. (Nam hospes nullus tam in amici hospitium devorti potest, quin, ubi triduum continuom fuerit, iam odiosus siet.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 741. (c. 200 B.C.)
Stay not forever as a guest, for love becomes loathing if one sits long by another's hearth

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 35
(c. 900)

As we say in Athens, fishe and gesse [guests] in three days are stale.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 305. (1580)
Gestes and fish say we in Athens are ever stale within three dayes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 386
After three dayes fish is vnsavoury, and so is an ill guest.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals' Dictionary Revised, sig.
B2. (1586)

Two dayes y'ave landed here; a third yee know.
Makes guests and fish smell strong; pray go.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 378. (1648)
Fresh fish and new come guests, smell by they are three days old.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1670)
After three days men grow weary of a wench. a guest, and weather rainy.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

Fish and visitors smell in three days.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

After three days both fish and guests become offensive. (Post tres dies pisces vilescit et hospes.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 162.
(1778) This is the Latin form of the proverb.

The French say, "L'hôte et le poisson en trois jours sont poison"; the Italians, "L'ospite ed il pesce, dopo tre di rincesce"; the Germans, "Dreitaegiger Gast ist ein Last" (The three-day guest is a burden).

The first day the man is a guest, the second a burden, the third a pest.

LABOULAYE, Abdullah. Ch. 9. (c. 1850)

"See that you wear not out your welcome." This is an elegant rendering of the vulgar saying,
"Fish and company stink in three days."

Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, iv, 272. (1869)

Fish and guests are wearisome on the third day.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 441.
(1938) A Japanese proverb.

1
Guests that come by daylight are best received.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 99. (1678)

2
If a man receives no guests at home, when abroad he will meet no hosts.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1578. (1875)

While you've fire in your cook-stove you'll always have guests.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2697. (1875) See also under FRIEND: POT FRIENDS.

GUILT

See also Innocence and Guilt

3
How difficult it is for guilt not to show in the countenance! (Heu quam difficile est, crimen non prodere vultu!)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 237. (1814)

4
The guilty think all men speak of them. (Conscius ipse sibi de se putat omnia dici.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 17. (c. 175 B. C.)

Catoun seith, that he that giltly is Demeth al thing be spoke of him, y-wis.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Canon Yeoman's Prologue, l. 135. (c. 1389)

Even a mouse frightens a guilty man. (Virum improbum vel mus mordeat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. viii, No. 96. (1508) Translating a Greek proverb.

Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 6, 11. (1591)

Terror haunts the guilty mind.

NAT. LEE, The Rival Queens. Act v, sc. 1. (1677)

The guilty conscience needs no accuser.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 190. (1814)

We have high authority for saying that the guilty flee when no man pursueth.

GEORGE BARTON, Triumphs of Crime Detection, p. 137. (1937) See under WICKEDNESS.

5
He sits full still that hes a riven breik.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595)
Poortith takes away pith, and the man sits full still that has a rent in his breeks.

WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 35. (1822)

He sits full still who has riven breeks.

THOMAS FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations, p. 17. (1824) Quoting a Scottish proverb, and adding, "Those who are guilty themselves are often a little shy in exposing the guilt of others."

The Guilty Man may escape, but he cannot be sure of doing so.—Epicurus. "Riven breeks sit still."

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 63. (1852)

6
The gods
Grow angry with your patience. 'Tis their care
And must be yours, that guilty men escape not.

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 12. (1611)

Let no guilty man escape.

ULYSSES S. GRANT, Indorsement, on letter concerning the Whiskey Ring, 29 July, 1875.

7
By his own verdict no guilty man was ever acquitted. (Se iudice, nemo nocens absolvitur.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 2. (c. A. D. 120)

It is so natural and easy to despise heavenly witnesses of our guilt, if only no mortal knows of it. (Tam facile et primum est superos contemnere testes, | si mortalis idem nemo sciat!)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 75.

8
Men's minds are too ready to excuse guilt in themselves. (Ingenia humana sunt ad suam cuique levandam culpam nimio plus facunda.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxviii, ch. 25. (c. 10 B. C.)

9
He that knows no guilt can know no fear.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act iv, sc. 2. (1627)

Secure of constant peace within,

He knows no guilt, who knows no sin.

SWIFT, The Answer, l. 57. (1728)

A quiet Conscience sleeps in Thunder,

But Rest and Guilt live far asunder.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

INNOCENCE HAS NOTHING TO DREAD, see under INNOCENCE

10
Guilt is the flea of the conscience.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Forren Newes: Newes from My Lodging. (1613)

11
A man confesses guilt by avoiding trial. (Fate-tur facinus is qui iudicium fugit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 204. (c. 43 B. C.) See under FLIGHT.

The guilty fear the law, the guiltless Fortune. (Legem nocens veretur, Fortunam innocens.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 339.

He who defends the guilty brings an accusation against himself (Nocentem qui defendit sibi crimen parit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 466.

How evil is he who throws his own guilt upon another! (Quam malus est culpam qui suam alterius facit!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 595

12
Not great Father Neptune himself, with his whole ocean, could wash away so much of guilt. (Non ipse toto magnus Oceano pater | tantum expiarit sceleris.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 717. (c. A. D. 60)

All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 1, 57. (1606)

13
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 19. (1600)

Guilt is always jealous.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 99. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1779. (1732)

BETTER TEN GUILTY ESCAPE, see under INNOCENCE.

GUN

<sup>1</sup> Mrs. Thrale stood to her gun with great courage, in defence of amorous ditties, which Johnson despised.

JAMES BOSWELL, Life of Samuel Johnson, 6 Oct., 1769.

Titmouse, though greatly alarmed, stood to his gun pretty steadily.

WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 6. (1841)

He stuck to his guns.

F. G. TRAFFORD (MRS. J. H. RIDDELL), The Mystery in Palace Gardens. Ch. 1. (1881)
MRS. ALEXANDER, Brown, V.C., p. 259. (1899)

<sup>2</sup> He carries too big a Gun for me. .

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1824. (1732)

This gentleman . . . carried quite as many guns as the two barristers.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books, p. 256. (1912)

<sup>3</sup> Guns will make us powerful; butter will only make us fat.

HERMANN GOERING, Radio Broadcast. (1936)

<sup>4</sup> What great Guns were those!

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons (1594), p. 2. (1535)

You're doubly free

From the great Guns, and squibbling Poetry

JOHN CLEVELAND, Poems, p. 41. (1651)

None of the great guns were at Madame de Coligny's.

LADY GRANVILLE, Letters, i, 71. (1815)

Great oratorical guns are to be fired today

LADY GRANVILLE, Letters, i, 188. (1820)

A worthy clergyman, one of the great guns as they call him.

WALTER SCOTT, Familiar Letters, ii, 234. (1825)

The great guns, and big bugs.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick in England. Ch. 15. (1843)

The colleges mustered in full force from the biggest guns to the smallest.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letters, 29 March, 1867.

I do not despair of its being done. But what I want is some big guns to do it.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 40. (1880)

<sup>5</sup> I tell you you ain't a-going to make a gun [thief] of this here young flat.

AUGUSTUS MAYHEW, Paved with Gold. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1858)

Circumstances had always been against Scuddy Lond, the gun. The word gun . . . is a friendly synonym for thief.

ARTHUR MORRISON, Tales of Mean Streets, p. 255. (1894)

<sup>6</sup> Beyng them selues . . . as sayeth the prouerbe, oute of all daunger of gonneshotte.

RALPH ROBINSON, tr., Utopia, p. 26. (1551)

Out of reach of gunshot.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 25. (1672)

Out of gun-shot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 249. (1678)

<sup>7</sup> Johnny, get your gun, get your gun today, Pigeons a-flying all de way.

MONROE H. ROSENFELD, Johnny, Get Your Gun. (1886) An echo of an older jingle, "Johnny, get your gun and your sword and your pistol."

<sup>8</sup> He was afraid of them 'ere shooting irons.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act iii, sc. 2. (1787)

[He] fell back in confusion when the "shooting stick" was brandished toward his own breast.

R. M. DEVENS, Anecdotes of the War of the Rebellion, p. 237/2. (1866)

<sup>9</sup> What things we see when we don't have a gun.

UNKNOWN Troy (N.Y.) Times, 26 Dec., 1883.

SON OF A GUN, see under SON.

GUTS

<sup>10</sup> The Guts uphold the Heart, and not the Heart the Guts.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4585. (1732)

See under STOMACH.

<sup>11</sup> [Philosophers] who are said by fools to have no bile. (οὐς φασὶ χολὴν οὐκ ἔχειν οἱ νοῦν οὐκ ἔχοντες.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On the Control of Anger. Sec. 457D. (c. A.D. 95) The equivalent of the modern "no guts."

Thou thing of no bowels, thou!

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 1, 54. (1601)

Old Grandmamma Intestinal Fortitude, isn't she?

MARGERY ALLINGHAM, Black Plumes, p. 140. (1940)

He hasn't any intestinal stamina.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 45. (1940)

The present generation is gutless.

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street, p. 20. (1940)

<sup>12</sup> He has more guts than brains.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 249. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1873. (1732)

These blokes have got more guts than sense.

ELLIOT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 171. (1940)

<sup>13</sup> [He] wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 1, 79. (1601)

He has no guts in his brains.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 249. (1678)

"The anfractus of the brain," Ray explains, "look'd upon when the dura mater is taken off, do much resemble guts."

One without Guts in his Brains, whose Cockloft is unfurnish'd.

MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. i, prol. (1694)

They have no guts in their brains.

THOMAS DILKE, The City Lady. Act iii, sc. 2. (1697)

'The fellow's well enough, if he had any guts in his brains.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
"You have no guts in your brains"; you are completely ignorant, you are quite destitute of skill or cunning.

WILLIAM CARR, Dialect of Craven, i, 47. (1828)

1

With guts of brass. (χαλκέντερος.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. A. D. 950) "Brazen-guts" was a nickname applied to Didymus, of Alexandria (c. 65 B. C.-A. D. 10) because of his enormous industry. He was reputed to be the author of three thousand books, of which only part of one has survived.

GUTTER

2

Homesickness for the gutter. (La nostalgie de la boue.)

ÉMILE AUGIER, Le Mariage d'Olympe. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1850)

The women . . . have hardly gotten over their early affinity with the gutter.

MARY E. BRADDON, Mount Royal. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1882)

Take a girl out of the gutter and pretend she's a lady.

WALTER BESANT, Children of Gibeon. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1886)

If he came to die in the gutter, who should say that it had not served him right?

HALL CAINE, The Bondman. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1890)

We picked him out of the gutter.

CONAN DOYLE, Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes: The Stock-Broker's Clerk. (1893)

I came up from the gutter.

LAWRENCE TREAT, O as in Omen, p. 129. (1943)

3

You gazed at the Moon, and fell in the Gutter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5904. (1732)
We are all in the gutter, but some of us are looking at the stars.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii. (1892)

When they come downstairs from their Ivory Towers, idealists are apt to walk straight into the gutter.

LOGAN P. SMITH, Afterthoughts. (1931)

4

He belongs to a class of beings in New York . . . known by the ornithological appellation of "gutter-snipes."

UNDERHILL AND THOMPSON, Elephant Club, p. 57. (1857) Wall Street slang for curbstone brokers.

Unfurl yourselves under my banner, noble savages, illustrious guttersnipes.

MARK TWAIN, Sketches New and Old: Niagara (c. 1869) Raised in the gutter.

Born and bred a guttersnipe.

LEWIS WINGFIELD, Gehenna, ii, 3. (1882)

She's a dissolute little scarecrow,—a gutter-snippet and nothing more.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Light that Failed. Ch. 8. (1891)

H

HABIT

See also Custom, Practice, Use

5

That which has become habitual becomes, as it were, natural; in fact, habit is something like nature, for the distance between "often" and "always" is not great, and nature belongs to the idea of "always," habit to that of "often."

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 3. (c. 330 B. C.)

HABIT IS SECOND NATURE, see under CUSTOM.

6

Men acquire a particular quality by constantly acting in a particular way. (αἱ γὰρ περὶ ἕκαστα ἐνέργειαι τοιούτους ποιοῦσιν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. iii, ch. 5, sec. 10. (c. 335 B. C.)

Habits change into character. (Abeunt studia in mores.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xv, l. 83. (c. 10 B. C.)

Abeunt studia in mores, studies have an influence and operation upon the manners of those who are conversant with them.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. i, sec. 3 (1605)

Habits are the daughters of action.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons. Vol. i, p. 181. (c. 1640)
Sow an act and you reap a habit. Sow a habit and you reap a character. Sow a character, and you reap a destiny.

CHARLES READE, attr. (c. 1870) Something like this has been attributed to C. A. HALL: 'We sow our thoughts, and we reap our actions. we sow our actions, and we reap our habits. we sow our habits, and we reap our characters; we sow our characters, and we reap our destiny.'

A thought,—good or evil,—an act, in time a habit.—so runs life's law.

RALPH WALDO TRINE, Life's Law. (1921)

Habit has a way of changing destinies.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act iii. (1923)

7

Sinful habits, at first as fine as a spider's web, soon grow as tough as cart ropes. . . . They are first like a stranger passing by, then like a lodger, and finally like the master of the house.

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 52a and b. (c. 450) The usual form of the English proverb is, "Habits are at first cobwebs, at last cables." Dr. Samuel Johnson is credited with,

"The diminutive chains of habit are seldom heavy enough to be felt until they are too strong to be broken."

A habit leads a man so gently in the beginning that he does not perceive he is led—with what silken threads and down what pleasant avenues it leads him! By and by the soft silk threads become iron chains, and the pleasant avenues Avernus!

T. B. ALDRICH, Mlle. Olympe Zabriski. (1873)

1 A wise man may, without blame, change his habits with the times. (Temporibus mores sapiens sine crimine mutat.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 7. (c. 175 B.C.)
See also under CHANGE.

2 We are all, more or less, des animaux d'habitude.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 March, 1757. Men are the slaves of habit.

C. B. BROWN, Alcuin. (1798)

Habits keep breeding, to give us plenty to pick from.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 104. (1940)

3 Men's natures are alike; it is their habits that carry them far apart.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvii, ch. 2. (c. 500 B.C.) Giles, tr.

4 Each year one vicious habit rooted out, In time might make the worst man good throughout.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

5 Cultivate only the habits you are willing should master you.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xxv p. 62. (1908)

6 Habit is the enormous fly-wheel of society, its most precious conservative agent.

WILLIAM JAMES, Psychology. Vol. i, p. 121. (1890)

Habit, the power that keeps the world from flying to pieces.

O. HENRY (W.S. PORTER), The Harbinger. (1908)

7 It's a hard task to break up long habit in a short time. (ἔργον ἐστὶ | μακρὰν συνήθειαν βραχεὶ λύσαι χρόνῳ.)

MENANDER, The Cithara Player. Frag. 726K. (c. 300 B.C.)

After a certain age, the vase has got its scent, the cloth its fold. In vain one tries to break the accustomed habit. Neither blows of pitchfork nor strap can change manners. (Certain âge accompli, | Le vase est imbibé, l'étoffe a pris son pli. | En vain de son train ordinaire | On le veut désaccoutumer: . . . | Coups de fourche ni d'étrivières | Ne lui font changer de manières.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Chatte Métamorphosée en Femme. Bk. ii, fab. 18. (1668) La Fontaine is recalling Horace's dicta that the old odor always clings around the vase (Epis., i, ii, 69), and that nature can't be driven out even with a pitchfork (Epis., i, x, 24). The English, of course, is, "You can't teach an old dog new tricks." See under DOG. Habit is habit, and not to be flung out of the window by any man, but coaxed downstairs a step at a time.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

8 Though even a dog may struggle against his chain and break it, yet as he runs away a good length of it will be trailing from his neck. (Cum fugit, a collo trahitur pars longa catenae.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. v, l. 160. (c. A.D. 58)

9 The habit is not a trifle. (ἀλλὰ τὸ γ' ἔθος οὐ μικρόν.)

PLATO, when a man whom he had rebuked for playing at dice protested that he played for a trifle only. (c. 375 B.C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Plato, sec. 38.

Plato did once chide a child for playing with nuts, who answered him, "You chide me for a small matter." "Habit," replied Plato, "is not a small matter." ("L'accoutumance, repliqua Platon, n'est pas chose de peu.")

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22. (1580)

10 Through habit you will be led into it again. (Consuetudine animus rursus te huc inducet.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 1001. (c. 200 B.C.)

Back goes the old woman to the wine-pot. (Anus rursum ad armillum.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xxviii, frag. 832, Loeb.

(c. 131 B.C.) Proverbial for returning to old habits.

He who was born in a slum cannot sleep in a palace. (Qui in pergula natus est, aedes non somniatur.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 74. (c. A.D. 60)

[He] sooner changeth his haire than his habyte.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 107. (1474)

The trick the colt gets at his first backing, Will, while he continueth, never be lacking.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 63. (1721)

The old coachman likes to hear the whip.

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 30. (1851)

11 It is contemptible to reprove a habit you countenance. (Aegre reprehendas quod sinas consuescere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 52. (c. 43 B.C.) "I read this maxim while I was a schoolboy" (Legi quondam in scholis puer), says St. JEROME, Epistle cvii, sec. 8, and he quotes it again in Epis. cxviii.

The man who interferes with another's habits has the worst one.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 142. (1940)

12 Choose the life that is best, and constant habit will make it pleasant. (ἐλοῦ βίον τὸν ἀριστον, ἥδδὲ δ' αὐτὸν ἡ συνήθεια ποιήσει.)

PYTHAGORAS, Precepti. (c. 530 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 123C, 466F.

1 Evil habits, once settled, are more easily broken than mended. (Frangas enim citius quam corrigas quae in pravum induruerunt.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 80)

Ill habits gather by unseen degrees,
As brooks make rivers, rivers run to seas.

JOHN DRYDEN, tr., Ovid's Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 155. (1693)

'Tis easier to prevent bad habits than to break them.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

Small habits well pursued betimes
May reach the dignity of crimes.

HANNAH MORE, Florio. Pt. i. (1786)

2 For the ordinary business of life an ounce of habit is worth a pound of intellect.

THOMAS B. REED, Speech, at Bowdoin College, Maine, 25 July, 1902.

3 Whether people are happy or miserable, poor or prosperous, still we sweep the stairs of a Saturday.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. v. (1860)

4 But when the fox hath once got in his nose,
He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iv, 7, 25. (1591)
The wimple bores a hole for the auger.

DANIEL FEATLEY, Clavis Mystica. Ch. 29. (1636)
The little Wimple will let in the great Auger.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4632. (1732)
To evil habit's earliest wile
Lend neither ear, nor glance, nor smile—
Choke the dark fountain ere it flows,
Nor e'en admit the camel's nose.

LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, The Camel's Nose. (1815)
Lord! how they chided with themselves,
That they had let him in;

To see him grow so monstrous now,
That came so small and thin.

THOMAS HOOD, The Wee Man. (1827)
My father kept calling him . . . the thin edge of the wedge, and telling dear mother . . . not to say a word to let him in.

BLACKMORE, Sir Thomas Upmore. Ch. 17. (1884)

5 How many unjust and wicked things are done from habit. (Quam multa iniusta ac prava fiunt moribus!)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 839. (163
B. C.) There is a Latin proverb, "Plura faciunt homines e consuetudine quam e ratione" (Men do more things through habit than through reason).

6 Habit is overcome by habit. (Consuetudo consuetudine vincitur.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk.
i, ch. 21. sec. 2. (c. 1420)

A nail is driven out by another nail, habit is overcome by habit. (Clavus clavo pellitur, con-suetudo consuetudine vincitur.)

ERASMUS, Diluvulum. (c. 1500)

7 Routine is a ground to stand on, a wall to retreat to. We cannot draw on our boots without bracing ourselves against it.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 23 Jan., 1841.

8 Habit is all powerful, even in love. (La coutume fait tout, jusqu'en amour.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 39. (1746)

9 A good habite makes a child a man,
Whereas a bad one makes a man a beast.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act ii, sc. 1.
(1612)

HAB-NAB

10 Put to the plounge of . . . habbe or nhabbe, to wyne all.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms
(1877), p. 209. (1542) Hab or nab, get or lose, hit or miss, at random.

Philautus determined, hab, nab, to sende his letters.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Ar-ber), p. 354. (1580)

Sing and be mery, hab or nab.

UNKNOWN, Pedlars Prophecy, l. 1174. (1595)

Hob, nob, is his word: give't or take't.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 265. (1599)

Cyphers . . . set down Hab-nab at random

BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, iii, 990. (1664)

The chance and hazard of a throw of the dice, hab nab, or luck as it will.

SIR THOMAS URQUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iii,
ch. 44. (1693)

'Tis meer hab-nab whether it succeeds or not

BERTHELSON, Eng.-Danish Dictionary. (1754)

To obtain a thing by hab and by nab, i. e. by fair means or foul.

CARR, The Dialect of Craven, i, 204. (1828)

It is all hab-nab at a venture.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, ii, 388. (1831)

HAIR

See also Baldness

11 My hair stands on end. (ὀρθίως πλόκαμος ίσταται.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 564.
(467 B. C.) See under FEAR.

12 He hath cut off the hairy scalp of the Two Fighters.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. 110, l. 8.
(c. 4000 B. C.)

The Pawnees took his hair on Pawnee Fork last spring.

RUXTON, Life in the Far West. Ch. 1. (1848)

[They] hurried out to "lift the hair," as they termed scalping.

HENRY CLAY WATSON, *Nights in a Block-
House*, p. 46. (1852)

13 He [the horse] had not turned a hair till we came to Walcot church.

JANE AUSTEN, Northanger Abbey. Ch. 7. (1798)

When I tried her with a lot of little dodges . . . she never turned a hair—as the sporting people say.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Daniel. Ch. 18. (1897)

<sup>1</sup> Keep your hair on, my young friend.

F. M. CRAWFORD, Dr. Claudius. Ch. 6. (1883)

Keep your hair on.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii.

(1903) John Bull's Other Island. Act iii.

In schoolboy phrase, to keep your hair on.

FRANCIS BEEDING, The Ten Holy Horrors, p. 95. (1939) See also under SHIRT.

<sup>2</sup> Let down our back hair and forget.

DOUGLAS GILBERT, American Vaudeville, p. 3. (1940)

Let down your back hair and tell the story.

SELWYN JEPSON, Keep Murder Quiet, p. 3. (1940)

Take down her back hair and get confidential.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 26. (1940)

With me Julie could let down her hair.

BARBER AND SCHABELITZ, Drawn Conclusions, p. 175. (1942)

I'm going back to the house before I let all my hair down.

ANTHONY BOUCHER, The Case of the Seven Sneezes, p. 158. (1942)

Since we're taking our hair down, I might as well know the worst.

G. H. COXE, The Charred Witness, p. 15. (1942)

<sup>3</sup> Better a child had ne'er been born,
Than cut his hair on a Sunday morn.

WILLIAM HENDERSON, Notes on the Folklore of the Northern Counties of England, p. 17. (1866) For variants see Notes and Queries, ser. ix, vol. vi, p. 93, and xii, vii, 67.

<sup>4</sup> I pray the[e] leat me and my fellow haue
A heare of the dog that bote vs last night,
And bitten were we both to the braine aright.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Inebriates were always advised to drink in the morning some of the same liquor they had drunk to excess the night before. The proverb originated from the superstition that when a person had been bitten by a dog, one of the animal's hairs placed over the wound would cure it.

Whoever is bitten by a mad dog is to be fed the caul of its liver.

Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 84a. (c. 450)

In many eastern countries, a portion of the flesh of a mad dog is eaten as a protection against hydrophobia.

Will he take a hair of the dog that bit him?
(Reprenda il du poil de ce chien qui le mordit?)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 46. (1552)

Our ale-knights often . . . say, Give us a hair of the dog that last bit us.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Beste. (1611)

'Twas a hot night with some of us, last night,
John: shall we pluck a hair o' the same wolf to-day, proctor John?

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act i. (1614)

Up among my workmen, my head akeing all day from last night's debauch. . . . At noon dined with Sir W. Batten and Pen, who would needs have me drink two good drafts of sack to-day, to cure me of my last night's disease, which I thought strange but I think find it true.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 3 April, 1661.

They, in the morning, did fall to drinking again, taking a hair of the old dog.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue. Pt.

iii, p. 91. (1674)

To take a hair of the same dog. i. e. To be drunk again the next day.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 164. (1678)

It will be noted that Ray misunderstood the meaning of the saying.

A hair of the same dog next morning,
Is best to quench our fev'rish burning.

EDWARD WARD, British Wonders, 17. (1717)

Take a hair of the same dog next morning

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

The hair of the dog that gave the wound is advised as an application to the part injured.

ROBERT JONES, The Treatment of Canine Madness, p. 204. (1760)

He poured out a large bumper of brandy, exhorting me to swallow "a hair of the dog that had bit me."

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 12. (1817)

Drink again. Another hair of the dog that bit you

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 52. (1840)

What you need is a hair outa the tail o' the dog that bit you.

MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 49. (1942)

<sup>5</sup> Thy tales (quoeth he) shew long heare. and short wit.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

According to the old prouerbe, bush naturall, more hayre than wit.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 38

(1589) Cited by both Ray and Fuller.

What he [time] hath scantied men in hair he hath given them in wit.—Many a man hath more hair than wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Comedy of Errors, ii, 2, 84. (1593)

Item, she hath more hair than wit.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

iii, 1, 361. (1594)

There's great hope of his wit, his hair's so long a-coming.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Mad World, My Masters. Act ii, sc. 1. (1608)

There was formerly a vague notion that abundance of hair denoted a lack of brains, and from this idea arose a proverb. "Bush natural, more hair than wit."

Notes and Queries. Ser. vi, i, 403. (1880) The French form is, "Longues cheveux, courte cervelle" (Long hair, short brain). The Russians say, "Long are a woman's locks, but short a woman's wits."

<sup>6</sup> Many were the hairs that he pulled from his head by the very roots. (πολλὰς ἐκ κεφαλῆς προθελύνοντας ἔλκετο χαίτας.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 15. (c. 850 B.C.) Referring to Agamemnon. ACCIUS, in one of his comedies (c. 110 B. C.), also refers to Agamemnon in the line, "Scindens dolore identidem intonsam comam" (Oft tearing in his grief his unshorn hair), as quoted by CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, iii, 26, 62.

The fool of a monarch plucked out his hair in his grief, as though grief could be assuaged by baldness. (Stultissimum regem in luctu capillum sibi evellere quasi calvitio maeror levaretur.)

BION OF BORYSTHENES, Facetus. (c. 280 B. C.)

Referring to Agamemnon, and the line from Homer. See CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, iii, 26, 63.

The hairy man doth grieve as much as the bald, if he have his hair plucked out. (Autant se fasche le chevelu comme le chauve, qu'on luy arrache le poil.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. (1580) Quoting Bion. In Greece, when any misfortune came, says PLUTARCH, Moralia, 267B, the women cut off their hair and the men let theirs grow.

Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, 2, 113. (1591)

Sir Ralph the Rover tore his hair.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Inchcape Rock. (1802) Tearing her hair, crying and bemoaning herself. W. M. THACKERAY, The Rose and the Ring. Ch. 19. (1855)

1 From his head she made locks to flow in curls like the hyacinth. (κάθ' δὲ κάρητος | ὄλας ἦκε κόμας, ὑακινθίων ἀνθεὶ ὁμοίας.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxiii, l. 158. (c. 850 B. C.) Curly-locks. (οὐλοκίττα.)

TELESILLA. Frag. 8. (c. 450 B. C.) Quoted by POLLUX, ii, 223, who contrasts the phrase with Pherecrates' "curly-pate" (οὐλοκέφαλος.) See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 245. "Curled heads are hasty" is an English proverb.

2 A fine head of hair makes the handsome more comely and the ugly more terrible. (τῆς κόμης, οἱ τοὺς μὲν καλοὺς εὐπρεπεστέρους ποιεῖ, τοὺς δὲ αἰσχροὺς φοβερωτέρους.)

LYCURGUS, Aphorism. (c. 600 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Lycurgus, ch. 22, sec. 1.

I warn you that no rude goat find his way beneath your arms, and that your legs be not rough with bristling hairs! (Admonui, ne trux caper iret in alas, | neve forent duris aspera crura pilis!)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 193. (c. 1 B. C.)

A hairy body, and arms stiff with bristles, give promise of a manly soul. (Hispidia membra quidem et durae per brachia saetae | promittunt atrocem animum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 11. (c. A. D. 120)

A heary man, either he is a foole or els fortunate. (Homo peloso, ó che l'è matto, ouer venturoso.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 30. (1578)

The Latin proverb is, "Vir pilosus aut fortis aut luxuriosus" (The hairy man is either strong or lustful).

You have a handsome head of hair, pray give me a tester [sixpence].

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1678)

"When Spendthrifts come to borrow money," Ray explains, "they commonly usher in their errand with some frivolous discourse in commendation of the person they would borrow of, or some of his parts or qualities."

3 The very hairs of your head are all numbered. (ὅμων δὲ καὶ αἱ τρίχες τῆς κεφαλῆς πάσαι ἡριθμημέναι εἰσίν.)

New Testament: Matthew, x, 30. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Vestri autem capilli capitis omnes numerati sunt." Luke, xxi, 18, has, "But there shall not a hair of your head perish."

4 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him? (οὐδὲ ἡ φύσις αὐτῇ διδάσκει ὑμᾶς ὅτι ἀνὴρ μὲν ἐὰν κομᾷ, ἀτιμία αὐτῷ ἐστίν;)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xi, 14. (A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Nec ipsa natura docet vos, quod vir quidem si comam nutriat, ignominia est illi?"

If a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her (γυνὴ δὲ ἐὰν κομᾷ, δόξα αὐτῇ ἐστίν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xi, 15. The Vulgate is, "Mulier vero si comam nutriat, gloria est illi."

5 Dont you budge a finger's breadth or a nail's breadth. (Digitum transversorum aut unguem latum excesseris.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 57. (c. 210 B. C.) Modifying the old Greek proverb, ὀλίγα ἀνὰ μέσσαν (Only a hair's breadth off).

They took a right-hand turn of their off wheels, missing a man . . . by an ant's breadth.

GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 83. (1942)

6 Even a single hair has its own shadow. (Etiam capillus unus habet umbram suam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 186. (c. 43 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iii, 32 (1508), and by BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 10. (c. 1600) HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 454, gives a slightly different form, "Vel capillus habet umbram suam." The Spanish form is, "Cada cabello hace su sombra" (Every hair has its own shadow), and the French, "Point de cheveu qui ne fasse son ombre" (Never a hair that doesn't cast its shadow).

There is no . . . hair so slender, which hath not his shadowe.

JOHN LYL, Sapho and Phao: Prologue. (1584)

The smallest haire have their shadowes.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde. (1590)

The smallest haire hath his shadow.

THOMAS LODGE, Wit's Miserie. (1596)

I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 191. (1593)

No hair so small, but hath his shadow.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1122. (1640)

1 He combed his hair with an Almain comb, which is the four fingers and the thumb. (Se peignoit du peigne de Almain, c'estoit des quatre doigtz & le poulce.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 21. (1534)

2 His life was joined to his body by a single hair.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. iv, Apologue 11. (c. 1257)

THE SWORD HANGING BY A SINGLE HAIR, see under SWORD.

3 Those who wish to undermine it want but, according to our Scotch proverb, a hair to make a tether of.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter, to G. Ellis, 2 Nov., 1809.

A slight pretext. BEAUTY DRAWS WITH A SINGLE HAIR, see under BEAUTY.

4 An Bailie Grahame were to get word o' this . . . it wad be a sair hair in my neck!

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 23. (1818) A cause of annoyance.

5 The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen As is the razor's edge invisible, Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen, Above the sense of sense.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 256. (1595)

I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 1, 140. (1597)

Nor seeke . . . with nice distinctions, to cut a Feather [with the schoolmen].

WILLIAM AUSTIN, Meditations, p. 169. (c. 1630)

GODDARD, in Plato's Demon, p. 317 (1684) has, "Men who . . . have not the skill to cut a feather."

Machiavel cut the hair when he advised, not absolutely to disavow conscience, but to manage it with . . . prudent neglect.

ARCHBISHOP WILLIAM SANCROFT, Modern Politics. (1652) See D'OVLV, Life, ii, 241. "To cut, or to split hairs" is to make fine or cavilling distinctions.

To cut the hair, i.e. to divide so exactly that neither part have advantage.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 249. (1678)

To cut a Hair betwixt Satyr and Flattery.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Josephus: Caius, x, 901. (1692)

Come, slit me this Hair.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1122. (1732)

It's hard to split the Hair,

That nothing is wanted, and nothing to spare.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6457.

They'll teach you how to split a hair.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 485. (1733)

When Persons have a Mind to split Hairs.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, iii, 75. (1742)

His keen logic would split hairs as a bill-hook would split logs.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Chronicles of Clover-nook, p. 130. (1846) There are a number of similar proverbs. The French say, "Disputer sur la pointe d'une aiguille" (To argue upon the point of a needle); the Germans, "Um des Kaisers Bart streiten" (To quarrel over the Emperor's beard); the Italians, "Favel-lare in punta di forchetta" (To talk on the point of a fork), quoted by MONTAIGNE, bk. iii, ch. 3.

6 Never shake Thy gory locks at me.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 50. (1606)

7 You'll remember your brother's excuse?—To a hair.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 1, 157. (1601)

You fit me to a hair.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

[They] suit my temper to a hair.

WILLIAM COWPER, Letter, 18 Oct., 1765.

I could hit him off to a hair.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Coleridge. (c. 1830)

8 The money would have to be planked down on the nail, or the hair would fly somewhere.

SEBA SMITH, My Thirty Years Out of the Senate, p. 437. (1855) See also under FUR.

9 She had you by the short hairs.

JONATHAN STAGG, Turn of the Table, p. 208. (1940)

They've got us by the short hairs.

CYRIL HARE, Tragedy at Law, p. 154. (1943)

10 The mylk of a cowe that is of oon here [unius coloris].

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, i, 365. (1387)

Two notable knaues, both of a haire.

ROBERT GREENE, An Upstart Courtier. (1592)

A lady of my hair cannot want pitying.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Nice Valour. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1620)

11 You'll have one of these . . . old professors in your hair.

MARK TWAIN, A Tramp Abroad. Ch. 20. (1880)

12 He that lovyth welles to fare,

Ever to spend and never to spare

But he have the more good

His here wol grow throw his hood.

WRIGHT AND HALLIWELL, eds., Reliquiae Antiquae, ii, 67. (c. 1450) He is on the road to ruin.

His here was growen thorowe oute his hat.

JOHN SKELTON, The Bowge of Courte, l. 250. (c. 1520)

Therefore let him look his purse be right good, That it may discharge all that is spent, Or else it will make his hair grow through his hood.

THOMAS INGELEND, The Disobedient Child. (c. 1560)

So that my company they think to be so good, That in short space their hairs grow through their hood.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Like Will to Like. (1587)

Out you durty heeles, you will make your husbands haire grow through his hood, I doubt.

THOMAS DELONEY, Thomas of Reading. Ch. 5. (c. 1600)

His hair grows through his hood. He is very poor, his hood is full of holes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1678)

<sup>1</sup> Ayenst the heere it tourneth.

THOMAS USK, Testament of Love, ii, iv. (1387)

Against the hair. (A contrepoil.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 26. (1552)

All went utterly against the hair with him.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Plutarch's Lives p. 388. (1579)

I will goe against the haire in all things, so I may please thee in any thing.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 394. (1580)

If you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 3, 40. (1601)

He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, i, 2. 26. (1601)

Books in women's hands are as much against the hair, methinks, as to see men wear stomachers.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Mayor of Quintborough. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1625)

He was a wee toustie when you rubbed him against the hair.

WALTER SCOTT, Chronicles of the Canongate: Introduction. (1827)

AGAINST THE GRAIN, see under GRAIN.

AGAINST THE WOOL, see under WOOL.

II—Hair: Gray

<sup>2</sup> My locks grew white, and so

I fetched me indigo.

ABU'L ALA, Sakt al Zand (The Falling Spark of Tinder). No. 38. (c. 1000) "I do not seek to make myself young," explained his contemporary, Kisai of Merv, "only I fear lest they seek in me the wisdom of an old man and do not find it."

My aunt! my poor deluded aunt!

Her hair is almost gray;

Why will she train that winter curl

In such a spring-like way?

O. W. HOLMES, My Aunt. (1831)

<sup>3</sup> Sorrow and years make the hair gray. (Sorgen und Jahr machen graue Haar.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 347. (1856) A German proverb.

<sup>4</sup> Then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave. (Deducetis canos meos cum dolore ad inferos.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xlii, 38. (c. 550 B. C.)

An old Man's grey hairs brought down with sorrow to the grave.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 23. (1850)

Don't bring down your father's hairs with sorrow to the grave.

SHAW, Fanny's First Play. Act ii. (1911)

Bringin' down mother's grey hairs in sorrow to the grave.

H. C. BAILEY, Meet Mr. Fortune, p. 228. (1942)

<sup>5</sup> The snows of the head. (Capitis nives.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 13, l. 12. (23 B. C.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. viii, ch. 6. sec. 17. (c. A. D. 80)

<sup>6</sup> Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head. (Coram cano capite consurge.)

Old Testament: Leviticus, xix, 32. (c. 570 B. C.)

PHILO (De Specialibus Legibus, ii, 238) refers to this when he says, "In the Scriptures the young are commanded to show reverence for the gray hairs that mark the aged."

<sup>7</sup> If you looke for comfort in your hoarie haire, be not coye when you haue your golden lockes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 55. (1579)

I had thought that my hoary haire should haue found comforte by thy golden lockes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 101.

<sup>8</sup> 'Tis not white hair that engenders wisdom. (οὐχ αἱ τρίχες ποιοῦσιν αἱ λευκαὶ φρονεῖν.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 639. (c. 300 B. C.)

The more common proverbial form is πολιὰ χρόνου μῆνυσις οὐ φρονήσεως (White hairs are a sign of age, not of wisdom).

<sup>9</sup> Consider my gray hairs. (Meum caput contemples.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 539. (c. 200 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness. (Corona dignitatis senectus, quae in viis iustitiae reperietur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 31. (c. 350 B. C.)

The beauty of old men is the gray head. (Dignitas senum canities.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 29

The silver livery of advised age.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, v, 2, 47. (1590)

<sup>11</sup> Darling, I am growing old,

Silver threads among the gold

Shine upon my brow today:

Life is fading fast away.

EBEN E. REXFORD, Silver Threads Among the Gold (1873)

<sup>12</sup> Thy white locks, the blossom of old age. (οὐ γὰρ σε μὴ γῆρα τε καὶ χρόνῳ μακρῷ.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 42. (c. 409 B. C.)

This whyte top wryteth myne olde yeres.

CHAUCER, Reeve's Prologue, l. 15. (c. 1386)

On his aged temples grewe the blossomes of the grave.

UNKNOWN, The Beggar's Daughter of Bednall-Green. (c. 1550) See PERCY, Reliques. Ser. ii, bk. ii, No. 10.

Thou seest my whyte hayres are blossoms for the grave.

ROBERT GREENE, Pandosto. (1588) Prose Works (1881-83), iv, 271.

These gray locks, the pursuivants of death.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, ii, 5, 5. (1591) The Germans say, "Graues Haar, des Todes Postilion" (Gray hair, courier of death).

Gray hairs are death's blossoms.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 149. (1678)

1 On the road from Grizzle to Grey.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Robert the Rhymer's Account of Himself. (c. 1820)

We grizzle every day. I see no need of it.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Circles. (1841)

Grizzling like a badger.

JOSEPH THOMAS, Randigal Rhymes, p. 60. (1895)

2 Nor yet had envious age sprinkled my temples with snow. (Aemula necdum | temporibus geminis canebat sparsa senectus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 415. (19 B. C.)

III—Hair: Black, Red, Yellow

3 His longe heer was kembd bihinde his bak. As any ravenes fether it shoon for-blak.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 1285. (c. 1386)

4 If thou meete a red man, and a bearded woman, greet them three myle off.

JOHN FLORIO, Firte Frutes, fo. 30. (1578)

Beware of red men.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 99. (1591)

In all places keepe thee well from redhaired men, and barded women.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 276. (1623) The notion that red-headed men are not to be trusted is firmly established in proverbial lore: "Rotbart nie gut ward" (A redbeard was never good), and it is frequently joined with a like warning against bearded women. The superstition was due to the traditional color of Judas's hair, and the warnings against red hair concern men only. Red-haired women are approved of.

"Har, you lousy sorrel-top," said the trader to the red-faced and red-headed bartender.

J. R. GILMORE, My Southern Friends, p. 58 (1863)

You could see he thought red heads were hell on wheels.

FRANKLIN CHARLES, The Vice Czar Murders, p. 175. (1941)

5 Hir heer was as yelowe of hewe As any basin scoured newe.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose (c. 1240) CHAUCER (?) tr., l. 539. (c. 1365)

This pardoner hadde heer as yelow as wax But smothe it heng, as dooth a strike of flex.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 673

His crise heer lyk ringes was y-ronne And that was velow, and glitered as the sonne

CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 1307.

His heer, his berd was lyk saffroun, That to his girdel raughte adoun.

CHAUCER, Sir Thopas, l. 19.

Hair the color of an unsmoked meerschaum.

O. HENRY (W.S. PORTER), Tobin's Palm. (1906) Gentlemen Prefer Blondes.

ANITA LOOS. Title of book. (1925)

A blonde to make a bishop kick a hole in a stained glass window.

CHANDLER, Farwell, My Lovely, p. 88. (1940)

6 A red beard and a black head, Catch him with a good trick, and take him dead.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 212. (1670)

He is false by Nature, that has a black Head and a red Beard.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1915. (1732)

7 A chaste woman ought not to dye her hair yellow. (τὴν γυναῖκα γὰρ τὴν σφόδρον οὐ δεῖ τὰς τρίχας ξανθὰς ποιεῖν.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 610 K. (c. 300 B. C.)

8 Hair like gold. (Les cheveux . . . de fin or.) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, ii, 95. De Guillaume au Faucon, l. 114. (c. 1250) "Si cheveil rasambloient d'or" (Her hair resembled gold) occurs in ii, 48; "Plus esmerées que or fin" (More shining than gold), in iii, 28; and "Blondes cheveux, luisans con or" (Blond hair shining like gold), in vi, 180

His crisp heer, shyninge as gold so fyn.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 304. (c. 1386)

Her haire, cumly curld, glistered lyke golde

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 211 (1576)

9 To the blak draw thy knyf; with the brown led thy lyf.

UNKNOWN, Harleian MS., l. 3362. (c. 1470)

Of the cullouris of men that is:

To a Red man read thy Reade.

With a Broune man break thy bread.

At a pale man draw thy knyf.

From a black man keip thy wyfe.

Red is wise, the Broun trusty,

The pale envious, & the black lusty.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 104 (c. 1595) To "rede one's reade" is to declare one's counsel, or reveal one's plans

The sallow complectioned fellow, with a blacke beard, . . . [is] to be suspected about Womens matters, according to the old saying.

ROBERT TOFTE, tr., Blazon of Jealousie, p. 21 (1615) Tofte then quotes the lines given above.

The old saw puts it thus, "From a black man keep your wife, With a red man beware your knife."

JOHNSON, Folk Memory, p. 57. (1908)

HALF

10 For those that save themselves, and fly, Go halves, at least, i' th' victory.

BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, iii, 270. (1678)

We would go halves and share it equally.

MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 36. (1835)

<sup>1</sup> That finer shade of feeling, the half-and-half.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Notes and Lectures, p. 264. (c. 1814)

I go half and half with the Longmans.

THOMAS MOORE, Memoirs, ii, 136. (1818)

Our tippie was half-and-half.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 20. (1880)

Half ale, half porter.

The half-and-halfts that one meets in these distant districts are altogether more barbarous than the real savage.

J. F. COOPER, The Prairie. Ch. 3. (1827) Half-breeds, half white, half Indian.

<sup>2</sup> Fools! They know not how much more the half is than the whole. (νήπιοι, οὐδὲ ἴσασιν ὅσῳ πλέον ἤμουν πάντος.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 40. (c. 800 B.C.)

Quoted as "that most true saying" by PLATO, Laws, iii, 690E; Republic, 466C, and by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 36A. DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus, i, 75, cites the proverb and attributes it to Pittacus. (c. 600 B.C.)

The half is more than the whole. (Dimidium plus toto.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ix, No. 95. (1508)

That's just, if the halfe shall judge the whole

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 13. (1546)

There is a proverb, Dimidium plus toto: "The half sometimes more than the whole." The mean life is the best life and the most quiet life of all.

HUGH LATIMER, A Sermon Preached at Stamford. (1550) Sermons, p. 277.

The famous saying of old Hesiod, that "half is more than the whole" . . . is to nothing more applicable than to a numerous party.

THOMAS TWINING, Twining Papers, p. 104. (1782)

The admonition of the poet . . . to prefer a friendly accommodation to a litigious lawsuit, has fixed a paradoxical proverb, The half is better than the whole!

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature, iii, 35. (1791)

The half is oftentimes more, or better than the whole; that is, the half that we possess, or that may be acquired with safety, is better than the whole, if it cannot be obtained without danger. By this enigmatical adage, in frequent use among the ancients, is recommended the "aurea mediocritas," the golden mean, or moderation.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 217. (1814)

<sup>3</sup> This halfe showth what the hole meaneth.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

<sup>4</sup> Whatever it is, he won't give it to us half-baked, but done to a turn. (Quidquid est, incoctum non expromet, bene coctum dabit.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 208. (c. 200 B.C.)

Our . . . halfe-baked Protestants.

BISHOP ROBERT SANDERSON, XII Sermons, p. 330. (1632) Underdone, raw, crude.

A sort of harmless lunatic, and, as we say in Devon, half-baked.

KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 3. (1855)

He is only half-baked; put in with the bread and taken out with the cakes.

Notes and Queries. Ser. iii, vol. vi, p. 494. (1864) A Cornish proverb.

HALIFAX

<sup>5</sup> It is prouerbiall in our countrie; From Hull, Hell, and Halifax, Good Lord deliuer us.

ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits, Fits, and Fancies. p. 112. (1594)

Let them seek him, and neither in Hull, hell, nor Halifax.

THOMAS NASHE, Works, v, 284. (1599)

There is a Proverb, and a Prayer withal, That we may not to three strange places fall: From Hull, from Halifax, from Hell, 'tis thus From all these three, Good Lord, deliver us

JOHN TAYLOR, THE WATER-POET, A Merry Wherry Ferry Voyage. (1623) Works (1872), p. 22.

Newes from Hell, Hull and Halifax.

JOHN TAYLOR, Title of book. (1640)

"From Hell, Hull, and Halifax, — — —, deliver us." This is part of the beggar's and vagrant's litany. . . . Hull is terrible unto them, as a town of good government . . . Halifax is formidable unto them for . . . thieves . . . stealing cloth, are instantly beheaded with an engine.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Yorkshire, iii, 398. (1662) See HALIFAX LAW under LAW.

Hell, Hull, and Halifax all begin with one letter.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Derbicisms, p. 137. (c. 1791)

<sup>6</sup> Gooide brade, botter, and cheese,
Is gooid Halifax amd gooid Friese.

Folk-Lore Record, i, 165. (1878) Because of a similarity between the dialects of Halifax and Friesland.

We have also the expression, "Go to Halifax"

Folk-Lore Record, i, 165. (1878)

I told my critics to go to Halifax.

L. J. JENNINGS, Chestnuts and Small Beer, p. 140. (1920)

HALT

<sup>7</sup> I am not inclined to halt before I am lame.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress, ii, 317. (1684)

<sup>8</sup> I called a halt. (Ego pausam feci.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 459. (c. 194 B.C.)

<sup>9</sup> Halt not before the lame. (Ne clochez pas deuant les boyteux.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 20. (1534) Another French form is, "Il fait mal cloicher deuant boiteux" (It is ill to limp before the lame).

No halting before a cripple.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 100. (1678)

A cripple soon can find a halt.

SHAKESPEARE, The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 308. (1599) See also under EXPERT.

HALTER

<sup>1</sup> If there has been a hanging in the man's family, say not to him, "Hang up this fish."

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 59b. (c. 450)

He that hath had one of his family hanged, may not say to his neighbour hang up this fish. We must abstain from words of reproach, . . . especially when we are not free of the crimes which we reproach others for.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 408. (1678)

Cited also by D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs. Vol. iii, ser. ii, ch. 27. (1791)

The rope must not be mentioned in the house of a man that has been hanged. (No se hà de mentar la sogà en casa del ahorcado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25. (1605);

Pt. ii, ch. 28. (1615) The French say, "Jamais nommer la corde chez le pendu," or "Il ne faut point parler de corde dans la famille d'un pendu"; the Italians, "Non ricordar il capestro in casa dell' impiccato"; the Germans, "Im Hause der Gehenkten soll man nicht vom Stricke reden"; the Portuguese, "Em casa do ladrao, não lembrar baraço." LORD CHESTERFIELD quotes a third French form (Letters, 13 June, 1751), "De ne jamais parler de cordes dans la maison d'un pendu."

Mention not a halter in the house of him that was hanged.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 673. (1640)

Name not a rope in his house that hang'd himself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 138. (1670)

Don't talk of a halter in the company of him whose father was hang'd

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 96. (1710)

It's ill speaking of halters.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 71. (1814)

It had been like trying to discuss a rope with a man whose father had been hanged.

C. S. FORESTER, To the Indies, p. 210. (1940)

When with dwarfs do not talk about pygmies.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 675. (1937)

Although there exist many thousand subjects for elegant conversation, there are people who cannot meet a cripple without talking of feet.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 354. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.

DON'T HALT BEFORE THE LAME, see under HALT.

<sup>2</sup> The business is brought to the halter. (Ad restim res rediit.)

CÆCILIUS STATIUS, Fragments. (c. 177 B.C.)

As quoted by NONIUS MARCELLUS, cc, 21; also by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 21. To be brought to the halter meant to be brought to such a pass that a man might well hang himself.

By your doing I'm brought to the halter. (Opera tua ad restim mihi quidem res redit.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 685. (161 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup>

A halter made of silk's a halter still.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love in a Riddle. Act ii, sc. 1. (1729)

<sup>4</sup>

He hath made a halter to hang himself.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 200. (1639)

Take a halter and hang themselves, as the proverb goes.

JOHN WILSON, tr., The Praise of Folly Sec. 34. (1668) See also under ROPE.

<sup>5</sup>

A halter and a rope for him that will be Pope, Without all right and reason.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 212. (1670)

<sup>6</sup>

The byshop of Rome sent hym a cardinal's hatte; he should haue had a Tiburne tippet, a halfpeny halter.

HUGH LATIMER, Seven Sermons, p. 63. (1549)

A Tyborne typett a roope or a halter.

COLLMANN, ed., Ballads, p. 115. (c. 1570)

The cart at Tyburn drives away when the tippet is fast about the necks of the condemned.

CHRISTOPHER NESSE, Church-History, p. 143. (1680)

Any one whose neck is beyond the compass of a Tyburn tippet.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 3. (1821)

SCOTT, in Old Mortality, ch. 7, refers also to a "St. Johnston's tippet," St. Johnston being in Perth, where executions took place

<sup>7</sup>

Be ware you accord not to wear an hempen cord, for after a collar comes an haulter.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, 193. (1583)

After a collar commeth a halter,

I trowe I shall be hanged to-morrowe.

PERCY, Reliques: King Edward IV and the Tanner of Tamworth. (c. 1590)

Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.—No, if rightly taken, halter.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 356. (1597)

<sup>8</sup>

Nay, stay, quoth Stringer, when his neck was in the halter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 82. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3512. (1732)

Now fitted the halter, now travers'd the cart,

And often took leave, but was loth to depart.

PRIOR, The Thief and the Cordelier. (1709)

<sup>9</sup>

An old thief desires a new halter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 120. (1670)

<sup>10</sup>

No man e'er felt the halter draw,

With good opinion of the law.

JOHN TRUMBULL, M'Fingal, iii, 489. (1776)

HAMLET

<sup>11</sup>

I saw Hamlet Prince of Denmark played; but now the old plays began to disgust this refined age.

JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 26 Oct., 1661.

The play-bill which is said to have announced the tragedy of Hamlet, the character of the Prince of Denmark being left out.

SCOTT, The Talisman: Introduction. (1825)
The Army without Kitchener is like Hamlet without the Prince of Denmark.

UNKNOWN, Times Weekly (London), 17 June, 1910, p. 452.

His book is Hamlet without the Prince of Denmark.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Letters of D. H. Lawrence: Introduction. (1932)

HAMMER

1
Pray to God and ply the hammer. (A Dios rogando y con el mazo dando.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 35. (1615)
The sound of your hammer at five in the morning, or nine at night, heard by a creditor, makes him easy six months longer.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to My Friend, A.B. (c. 1785)

2
He that has a Nail to drive, will not want a Hammer.

DANIEL DEFOE, Memoirs of the Church of Scotland, ii, 38. (1717)

3
Malleus Scotorum, the hammer of Scotland.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain, iii, xiv, 14. (1655) Referring to Edward I. The hammer of Pelagianism.

HENRY HICKMAN, Historia Quinq-Articularis Exarticulata. Epis. A. (1674) Referring to St. Austin.

The Hammer of the Monks.

EDITH THOMPSON, History of England. Ch. 28. (1873) Referring to Thomas Cromwell

4
When my dear volumes touch the hammer.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma, iii, 571. (1717)
The price-deciding hammer falls.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task, vi, 291. (1784)
His books . . . Came to the hammer.

TENNYSON, Audley Court, l. 58. (1842)
He threatened to . . . sell the house under the hammer.

CHARLES READE, It Is Never too Late to Mend. Ch. 10. (1856)

5
I'll hammer it out.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, 5, 5. (1595)

6
I'm now coming at you with hammer and tongs.

UNKNOWN, British Apollo. No. 56. (1708)
Our ships were soon at it, hammer and tongs.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 35. (1833)
We went at it hammer and tongs.

W. P. FRITH, My Autobiography, i, 21. (1887)
To go at it hammer and tongs. To engage very vigorously in combat, contest, or work.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Go. (1941)
It's been hammer and tongs and all the other fire-irons.

DOROTHY BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony, p. 162. (1942) BETWEEN HAMMER AND ANVIL, see under ANVIL.

HAND

7
Is there anything that feet can't do? (τί δῆτα πόδες ἂν οὐκ ἀνεργάσατο;)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 1147. (414 B. C.)

A variation of the proverb, "Is there anything that hands can't do?" (τί δῆτα χεῖρες οὐκ ἂν ἐργάσατο;) The Latin proverb, "Manibus pedibusque" (With hands and feet), means with all one's power.

Whatever is made by the hand of man, by the hand of man may be overturned.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1175. (1650)

Schiller has, "Was Hände bauten, können Hände stürzen" (What hands have built, hands can pull down).

8
In all thy works keep the upper hand.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxiii, 22. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

He faught, and hadde the hyer hond.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 401.
Marcus Attilius had the vppir hande and victory.

JOHN TIPTOFT, EARL OF WORCESTER, tr., Tulle of Old Age (Caxton), g viij b. (1481)

Vp Lorde, let not man haue the vpper hande.

MILES COVERDALE, tr., Psalms, ix, 19. (1535)

I've got the upper hand over you.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 15. (1838)

9
A hand that has been short in rendering services to others should not be stretched out in quest of high places.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 594 (1817) A selfish person is unworthy of preferment.

His hand descends like the foot of a crow, and ascends like the hoof of a camel.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 756. (1817)

Arabs eat with the fingers, and this proverb refers to the fact that some ill-bred persons when putting their hands into the dish make them appear very small, but when they take them out, with a great gob of food, they appear as large as a camel's hoof

10
Two hands in a dish and one in a purse.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333. (1605)

One hand in a purse and two in a dish.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 218. (1639)

Pray, Tom, carve for yourself; they say, two hands in a dish and one in a purse.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Put your hand twice to your bonnet for ance to your poutch [purse].

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737) The Danes say, "Put your hand quickly to your hat and slowly to your purse."

ONE HAND ENOUGH IN A PURSE, see FRIEND: FRIENDS HAVE ALL THINGS IN COMMON.

11
Soft of speech and manner, yet with an inflexible vigour of command . . . "iron hand in a velvet glove," as Napoleon defined it.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets, ii, 48. (1850) The phrase has also been attributed to Charles V.

To manage men one ought to have a sharp mind in a velvet sheath.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. i, ch. 39. (1863)
She runs the town with an iron hand. And no nonsense about a velvet glove.

SALLY WOOD, Murder of a Novelist, p. 195. (1941)
The velvet glove and the iron hand are outmoded.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Corpse with the Eerie Eye, p. 177. (1942)

An iron foot in a velvet shoe.

RUFUS KING, A Variety of Weapons, p. 36. (1943)

1 He saw that his folke was at the worste hande.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, xiv, 352. (c. 1489)

Augustus was on the mending hand.

RICHARD GRENEWAY, tr., Tacitus. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1598) He was convalescing.

The nation . . . is upon the declining hand.

JOHN LAW, Proposals for a Council of Trade, p. 187. (1701)

Mr. Wrigley . . . is now on the mending hand.

JOHN WESLEY, Works (1872) xii, 439. (1789)

2 Wish in one hand and spit in the other.

CHARLES, Vice Czar Murders, p. 212. (1941)

3 Myn handes been nat shapen for a knyf.
As for to reve no man for his lyf.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: The Legend of Hypermnestra, l. 131. (c. 1385)

4 One hand will not clasp.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 91. (1875)

5 Good hand, good hire.

JOHN CLARKE, Puroemiologia, p. 45. (1639)
He . . . worked sometimes on weekly wages and sometimes good hand good hire. Piece-work.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 62. (1917)

6 This hand hath offended—this unworthy hand.

THOMAS CRANMER, thrusting into the fire his right hand, which had previously subscribed to the doctrine of Papal supremacy, as he was being burned at the stake, in 1556.

7 Her hand seemed milk in milk, it was so white.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Of Phyllis. (c. 1640)
We . . . meet in the proverbs of Spain a grave thoughtfulness, a stately humour. . . . How eminently chivalresque . . . White hands cannot hurt. Las manos blancas no ofenden.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 42. (1852)

8 We should by all thinges at the first hand.

EDWARD VII, Literary Remains, ii, 504. (1551)
I had it [the tale] at the second hand.

UNKNOWN, Hay Any Work, 44. (1589)

You have it but at the third or fourth hand.

WILLIAM BEDELL, Letters, xi, 141. (1624)

Willing to put the finishing hand to our principal work.

JUAN Y SANTACILLA, Voyage to South America, ii, 291. (1760)

The compiler did not put his last hand to the work.

ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism, ix, 376. (1865)

The newcomers "took a hand" in all the sports.

EGGLESTON, The Circuit Rider, p. 69. (1874)

9 One hand washes the other. (χείρ χεῖρα κνίσει.)

EPICHRMUS, Apothegm. (c. 550 B.C.) Quoted by PLATO, Axiochus, sec. 366C; by SENECA, Apocolocyntosis, sec. ix, fin, "Manus manum lavat"; by PETRONIUS, Satyricon, sec. 43, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 33, who gives the form, "Manus fricat manum." A somewhat similar proverb is cited by SUIDAS, Lexicon, iv, 42. "One cluster helps another to ripen." An extension of the Greek is, χεῖρ χεῖρα νίπτει, δάκτυλός τε δάκτυλον. (Hand washes hand, and finger finger), i. e. mutual help is part of our existence.

I'll do as much for you, when you like; do it reciprocally; one hand washes the other. (Deinde tu si quid volueris, in vicam faciam; manus manum lavat.)

SENECA (?), Apocolocyntosis. Sec. 9. (c. A.D. 55) Rouse renders "in vicem faciam," "You roll my log and I'll roll yours."

The proverb is common: "One hand claweth another." The Pope was advanced by Pipine; and Pipine was likewise advanced by the Pope.

JOHN JEWEL, Defence of the Apology, iv, 692. (1567)

One hand washeth another, & both wash the face. (Una man lava l'altra, & tutte due lavano il viso.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 221.

(1580) Cited by both Herbert and Fuller

One hand washeth an other, and it appertaineth vnto him, that taketh something, to giue something.

GABRIEL HARVEY, A New Letter of Notable Contents. (1593) Works (Grosart), i, 269.

'Tis through the world, this hand will rub the other.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Phoenix. Act i, sc. 1. (1607)

He that writes often, shall often receive letters for answer: for one hand washeth another.

FYNES MORYSON, An Itinerary, iii, i, 2. (1617)
Asses scratch each other.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 15. (1666)
See under Ass.

One hand will not wash the other for nothing.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 275. (1721)

One of his Hands is unwilling to wash 'tother for nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3787. (1732)
The right hand helps the left and the left the right.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 945. (1842)

One hand washes the other, but it takes two hands to wash the face. (Eine Hand waescht die andere, aber das Gesicht waescht man mit beyden Haende.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 323. (1856) A German proverb.

Two are better than one. . . . So the Greek proverb ran as to friends, "Hand cleanseth hand, and finger finger helps."

DAN PLUMPTRE, Ecclesiastes, iv, 9. (1881)

ONE GOOD TURN DESERVES ANOTHER, see TURN.

- 1
The retainer . . . lendes a hande ouer a stile.
JOHN FLORIO, A Worlde of Wordes: Epistle Dedicatory. (1598)
Too squeamish to lend a hand to an ignoble act.
JOHN MARSTON, Antonios Revenge. Act ii, sc. 1. (1600)
I'll lend a helping hand To raise your fortunes.
MASSINGER, City-Madame. Act i, sc. 2. (1632)
Lend a helping hand.
B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1809)
HELPING LAME DOGS OVER STILES, see under HELP.
- 2
His hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him. (Manus eius contra omnes, et manus omnium contra eum.)
Old Testament: Genesis, xvi, 12. (c. 800 B. C.)
The reference is to Ishmael.
- 3
The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau. (Vox quidem, vox Iacob est: sed manus, manus sunt Esau.)
Old Testament: Genesis, xxvii, 22. (c. 550 B. C.)
But Esau's hands suit ill with Jacob's voice.
JOHN DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 982. (1681)
Orlando's helmet in Augustine's cowl.
HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Cui Bono. (1812)
- 4
His handes did serve in steade of landes.
ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Ovid's Metamorphoses. Bk. iii, l. 745. (1567)
Help hands, I have no lands.
UNKNOWN, Troublesome Raigne of John King of England, 19. (1591)
Fool, says the jester, use thy hands, help, hands, for I have no lands.
ROBERT ARMIN, A Nest of Ninnies, p. 47. (1608)
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.
- 5
Hands, that the rod of empire might have sway'd,
Or wak'd to ecstasy the living lyre.
THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 47. (1750)
- 6
So harde is your hande set on your halpenny, That my reasoning your reason setteth nought by.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1546)
But his mystresse having hyr hand on another halpenny gan thus say unto him.
GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Posies. (1577)
She stood as though her heart had bin on her half-penny.
ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), ii, 45. (1583)
His heart's on's halfpenny.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 36. (1639)
I will lay my hand on my halfpenny ere I part with it.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 250. (1678)
His mind is on his halfpenny.
ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 885. (1681)
"To have his hand on his hawpny," a proverbial phrase for being over attentive to his own interest.
CARR, The Dialect of Craven, i, 216. (1828)

- 7
It were folly for mee
To put my hands betweene the barke and the tree.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)
Between husband and wife. See HUSBAND.
Don't thrust your hand into the fire. (In flammam ne manum iniectio.)
ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 98. (1814)
Don't embroil yourself in a contention in which you have no concern.
- 8
The best of them shall haue both their handis full.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
- 9
Lay your hand on your heart.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)
I am here to finishe the contract by giuing handes, which you haue already begunne betweene your selues by ioyning of heartes.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 83. (1579)
Euery one that shaketh thee by the hand, is not ioined to thee in heart.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 246.
The hearts of old gave hands:
But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 4, 46. (1605)
To be heart and hand, to be fully bent.
HALLIWELL, Dict. of Archaic Words. (1847)
There is a hand that has no heart in it.
C. A. BARTOL, The Rising Faith: Training (c. 1900)
- RIGHT HAND OF FELLOWSHIP, see FELLOWSHIP.
- 10
With unwashed hands. (χερὰ ἀνέπλουσιν.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 266. (c. 850 B. C.) A proverbial expression, quoted by PHILO, De Specialibus Legibus, ii, 6.
I have washed my hands in innocency. (Lavi inter innocentes manus meas.)
Old Testament: Psalms, lxxiii, 13. (c. 350 B. C.)
I wil wash my hands gilltes thereof.
LADY JANE GREY, Epistle, sig. B7. (1554)
Pilat wesching his handis of ye deid of Chryst.
GEORGE BUCHANAN, Chamaeleon. (1570)
Works (1892), p. 53.
I intend to wash my hands quit of the business.
JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. ii, sec. vii, let. 19. (1632)
"Then I wash my hands of you," cries the doctor.
FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. viii, ch. 3. (1749)
He had entirely washed his hands of the difficulty.
CHARLES DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 6. (1853)
You are incorrigible. I wash my hands of you.
EDNA LYALL (ADA E. BAYLY), Knight-Errant, p. 29. (1887)
- 11
The more men the better work. (πλεόνων ὁ τε ἔργον ἀμεινόν.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xli, l. 412. (c. 850 B. C.)
More hands mean more work and more increase. (πλείων μὲν πλεόνων μελέτη, μέζων δ' ἐπιθήκη.)
HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 380. (c. 800 B. C.)
Work divided is in that way shortened. (Divisum sic breve fiet opus.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 82. (c. A. D. 90)

Many hondys makyn lyght worke.

Douce MS., 52. (c. 1350) FÖRSTER, ed.

Yit many hondis togider maken ligt werk.

WRIGHT, ed., Political Poems, ii, 106. (1401)

Though Ascaparde be neuer so starke,

Many handes make lyght warke.

UNKNOWN, Sir Beues, l. 3012. (c. 1440)

Many hands make the burden lighter. (Multae manus onus leuius reddunt.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iii, No. 95.

(1508) Or, "Multae manus onus leuius faciunt." Included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 36, with the rendering,

"Many handes make a lyghte burthen."

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 233, cites another Latin form, "Multorum manibus grande levatur onus" (By the hands of many a great work is made light). Still another form, preserved in the Harleian MS, 3362, fo. 76, is, "Multorum manus alleuiatur opus."

Many handis make light warke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Cited in all later collections, Camden, Ray, Kelly, Fuller, etc.

There is no burthen so heavy, which being sustained by many, becommeth not light.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 89. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Many hands make quick work.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

Many hands will carry off much plunder.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Colloquies, p. 342. (1725)

Cited as "the old saying."

Many hands bring the work quickly to an end. (Viele Hände machen der Arbeit bald ein Ende.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 352. (1856) A German proverb. Similarly,

"Viele Hände machen leichte Bürden" (Many hands make the burden light).

When there's something to do, the more the better; when there's something to eat, not so. (Jèn to 'hao tso 'hùo; jèn shao hao ch'ih 'ho.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 604. (1875)

What is the use of saying that "Many hands make light work" when the same copy-book tells you that "Too many cooks spoil the broth"?

The Observer (London), 11 Feb., 1923, p. 9/7.

1 With his red right hand. (Rubente dextera.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 2, l. 2. (23 B.C.)

His red right hand.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 174. (1667)

In fighting foes the strong right hand is lord. (Hostili in bello dominatur dextera fortis.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 50. (C. A. D. 600)

2 The foot on the cradle, the hand on the distaff, a sign of a good housewife.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 2. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1670)

The foot at the cradle, and the hand at the roke is the sign of a good housewife.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 307. (1721)

The foot on the Cradle, the Hands on the Distaff.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4541. (1732)

The foot at the cradle an' the hand at the reel.

Is the sign o' a woman that means to do weel.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (c. 1725)

The hand that rocks the cradle

Is the hand that rules the world.

WILLIAM ROSS WALLACE, What Rules the World. (1865)

The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world.

ROBERT CARSON, The Bride Saw Red, p. 195. (1943)

3

Thy hand is never the worse for doing thy own work.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 35. (1659)

Ni ffyddra llaw dyn er gwneithr da idd ei hûn.

(Our hand has no stain if it work to our gain.)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746

Dirty hands make clean money.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 110. (1869)

4

That famous old proverb: That it is foolish to petition with empty hands. (Veteri celebratur proverbio: Quia vacuae manus temeraria petitio est.)

JOHN OF SALISBURY, Polycraticus. Bk. v, ch. 10. (c. 1175)

With empty hand men may na haukes tulle [lure]

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reeves Tale, l. 214. (c. 1386) Also The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 415.

With empty hand may noon haukys lure.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 174. (c. 1430)

For empty fystes, men vse to say, cannot the Hawke retaine.

HUGH RHODES, Boke of Nurture, 740. (c. 1530)

He hath his haukes in the mew, but make ye sure. With emptie handes men maie no haukes allure.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Haggard hawkes mislike an emptie hand.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies, p. 65. (1575)

'Tis gold must such an instrument procure;

With empty fist no man doth falcons lure.

WEBSTER, The White Diuel. Act iv, sc. 1. (1612)

With empty hands no tassels you can lure.

POPE, Wife of Bath, l. 172. (1717)

Men lure no hawks with empty hands.

SCOTT, Anne of Geierstein. Ch. 25. (1829)

5

And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand, and their left? (Qui nesciunt quid sit inter dexteram et sinistram suam?)

Old Testament: Jonah, iv, 11. (c. 350 B.C.)

He knows not his right hand from his left

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 1079. (1681)

The poor innocent cannot tell his right hand from his left.

STEVENSON, Black Arrow: Prologue. (1888)

6

You have made a hand like a foot.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 386. (1721)

You have made a Hand of it, like a Foot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5921. (1732)

That's a billet-doux from your mistress.—I don't know whence it comes; but whoe'er writ it, writes a hand like a foot.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

See also WRITING: HANDWRITING.

1

A cold hand and a warm heart.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 380. (1902)

The Germans have the same saying, "Kalte Hand, warmes Herz."

2

The King and he walking hand by hand.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Fall of Princes, iv, ix, 107. (c. 1430)

The kingis . . . raid togidder to the toun, Hand for hand.

WILLIAM STEWART, Croniclis of Scotland, i, 371. (1535)

Let's go hand in hand, not one before another.

SHAKESPEARE, Comedy of Errors, v, 1, 425. (1593)

3

A wette hand quoth Flauius will holde a dead herring.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 414. FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 453. (1732)

4

He is a passing goodman of his handes.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, Morte Darthur. Bk iv, ch. 17. (1485)

He is a tall man of his handes. (Cest ung habille homme de ses mains.)

JEHAN PALSgrave, Dictionary, p. 784. (1530)

They were neuer tall fellows of their hands that were such hacksters in the street.

RICHARD HARVEY, Plaine Percevall, sig. A3. (1589)

Is he valiant, and a talle man of his hands?

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 117. (1591)

Active besides, and tall of his hands. (Promptus manu.)

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy, ii, 23, 65. (1600)

In iii, 70, 136, Holland renders "Viribus ferox" as "a tall man of his hands," and in xxi, 40, 415, "Vigens corpore" with the same phrase.

5

A light hand makes a heavy wound.

THOMAS MANNINGHAM, Diary, p. 52. (1602)

6

The greatest hand at talk I ever came across.

HARRIET MARTINEAU, Society in America. Vol. i, p. 232. (1837)

Your aunt was a great hand for lighting up bright.

SARAH O. JEWETT, Deephaven. Ch. 3. (1877)

He was a great hand to play the piano.

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 118. (1902)

7

Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth. (μή ἡριστερὴ σου τὴ δεξιὰ σου.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 3. (c. A. D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Nesciat sinistra tua quid faciat dextera tua."

Let your left hand turn away what your right hand attracts.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 47b. (c. 450)

Thy right hand knows nothing of thy left hand.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 778.

(1817) A saying of Mohammed.

Let not the right side of your brain know what the left side doeth.

SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iv. (1904)

Never let your right hand know what your left hand is doing.

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 26. (1941)

Good little town, London, for anyone who wants to prevent his dexter hand from knowing what he's doing with his sinister.

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 201. (1943)

My left hand never learnt what my right one's been doing.

LAWRENCE TREAT, O as in Omen, p. 23. (1943)

I am a bad hand at criticising men.

J. H. NEWMAN, Letters, i, 227. (1830)

He was always but a poor hand at writing a letter.

HARRIET MARTINEAU, The Loom and the Luggie. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1833)

The children of Israel went out with an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians. (In manu excelsa.)

Old Testament: Numbers, xxxiii, 3. (c. 550 B. C.)

To carry things with a high hand.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Dispatch. (1808) See

GURWOOD, Dispatches of Wellington, iv, 96.

The dominant party carrying it with a high hand

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. iii, pt. iv, ch. 2. (1837)

I took the high hand in despair.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, Silverado Squatters, p. 71 (1883)

What my right hand has dared to do, it does not dare to write. (Quod facere ausa mea est, non audet scribere, dextra.)

OVID, Heroides, Eleg. xii, l. 115. (c. 10 B. C.)

I scarcely seem able to keep my hands off you. (Vix tenuere manus.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i3, l. 203. (A. D. 7)

Paws off, Pompey.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 12.

(1834) "Although she liked to be noticed, . . . Ben was the only one she ever wished to be handled by—it was 'Paws off, Pompey,' with all the rest."

He belonged to the Wandering Hand Society The girls would have had a time with him

RAYMOND CHANDLER, Farewell, My Lovely, p. 169. (1940)

If he ones apperceyve you howe you play on bothe the handes, he wyll never truste you after.

JEHAN PALSgrave, La Langue Françoysse, 433. (1530) To play on both hands, i. e. to be guilty of double dealing.

He playeth on both hands.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 47. (1633)

1 They kiss the hand by which they are oppressed. (Illam osculantur, qua sunt oppressi, manum.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 1, l. 5. (c.25 B.C.) They kissed my hands and maligned me with snakish tongue. (Osculabantur mihi manus et ore vipereo detrahebant.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Epistles. Epis. xlv, sec. 2. (A.D. 385)

An Italian . . . will tell you that he kisseth your hand a thousand times over, when he wisheth them both cut off.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 28 Feb., 1634.

Many kiss the hand they wish cut off.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 285. (1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1670)

Many kiss the Hands they wish to see cut off.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3352. (1732)

Many kiss the hands they would fain see chopped off.

H. S. MERRIMAN (HUGH S. SCOTT), In Kedar's Tents. Ch. 24. (1897)

Kiss the hand which you cannot bite.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. p. 48. (1853) A Persian proverb.

2 If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. (Oblivioni detur dextera mea.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxvii, 5. (c.400 B.C.)

3 Don't shake hands too eagerly. (μή βαδῖως δεξιὰν ἐμβάλλειν.)

PYTHAGORAS, Apothegm. (c. 525 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 17. There is a similar Latin proverb, "Ne cuius dextram inieceris" (Do not effusively offer your right hand to everyone). See also under FRIEND

4 Give me your right hand. (Cedo tuam mi dexteram.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 307 (c. 200 B.C.)

I'm shaking hands with my guardian angel. (Teneo dextera genium meum.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 138. (c. 200 B.C.)

Where then the pledge of clasped right hands? (Ubi illae sunt densae dexterae?)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. vii, epis. 1. (50 B.C.) Quoting from an unknown poet.

To join right hand to right hand. (Dextrae iungere dextram.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 408. (19 B.C.)

My right hand is to me as a god. (Dextra mihi deus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. x, l. 774.

Let each man render me his bloody hand:

First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 1, 184. (1599)

Ferdinand: Here's my hand.

Miranda: And mine, with my heart in 't.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 1, 89. (1611)

Tip us yer bunch of fives, old faker!

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), The Draft in Baldinsville. (1862)

5 You keep the hand under the mantle. (Manum intra pallium continentes.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae, xii, x, 21.

(c. A.D. 80) To speak calmly, without gestures. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 31, in the proverbial form, "Manum habere sub pallio."

6 They two are hand and glove.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347. (1678)

He and I were Hand in Glove.

SWIFT, Stella's Birthday, l. 26. (1723)

They put both their Hands in one Glove.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4960. (1732)

Connected as the hand and glove

Is, madam, poetry and love.

DAVID LLOYD, Epistle to a Friend. (c. 1792)

I'm on your side now, hand and glove.

STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 34. (1883)

They were hand in glove.

NGATO MARSH, Death of a Peer, p. 312. (1940)

7 "I fought for my own hand," said the smith.

SCOTT, Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 34. (1828)

To rule for his own self and hand.

TENNYSON, The Coming of Arthur, l.218. (1869)

[They] were fighting for their own hand.

J. A. FROUDE, Caesar. Ch. 9. (1879)

8 The hand which turns from the plough to the sword never objects to toil. (Nullum laborem recusant manus, quae ad arma ab aratro transferuntur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. li, sec. 10. (a.A. D. 64) There's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 2, 21. (1590)

She makes her hand hard with labour.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: The Milkmaid. (1614)

And blessed are the horny hands of toil!

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance Behind the Curtain, l. 204. (1843)

9 A hand open as day.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iv, 4, 31. (1598)

A hand as lib'ral as the light of day.

WILLIAM COWPER, Hope, l. 408. (1781)

Stout heart and open hand!

SCOTT, Marmion, Canto i, st. 10. (1808)

See also under LIBERALITY.

10 In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 2, 140. (1598)

I solemnly protest I had no hand in it.

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 1. (1766)

11 Give me your hands, if we be friends,

And Robin shall restore amends.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 444. (1596)

Browning was sure to be . . . given a "hand" every time he came to bat.

H. C. PALMER, Stories of the Base Ball Field, p. 66. (1890)

It's a good act—we got a good hand.

CARL SANDBURG, Slabs of the Sunburnt West, p. 39. (1922)

Give the little girl a hand.

TEXAS GUINAN, asking for applause for one of her entertainers. (c. 1930)

1 They clawed the money off of his table hand over fist.

SEBA SMITH, Major Downing, p. 116. (1833)
Quickly, easily.

A heavy squall was coming up hand over fist.

W. C. RUSSELL, A Sailor's Sweetheart, ii. 173. (1880)

Brad is making it hand over fist.

GEORGE ADE, People You Know, p. 32. (1903)

2 If I can't get a "hand-out" for it, I can at least expatiate on its merits.

SWEET AND KNOX, Texas Siftings, p. 195. (1882) Food handed out to a beggar.

I was refused food in house after house. Then I got a "hand-out."

JACK LONDON, The Road, p. 27. (1907)

When Rapp picked him up there, he was living on "hand-outs."

WILLA CATHER, Professor's House, p. 195. (1925)

3 Here's the back of my hand to you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Now my hand is in.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

4 The gods hear men's hands before their lips.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Althea. (1864) See also WORD AND DEED.

5 To have not only clean hands, but clean minds.

THALES. (c. 600 B. C.) See under CLEANLINESS.
The Latin proverbial form is, "Lotis (or lautis) manibus."

He that hath clean hands and a pure heart. (Innocens manibus et mundo corde.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxiv, 4. (c. 250 B. C.)

God looks with favor at pure, not full, hands. (Puras deus non plenas adspicit manus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 544. (c. 43 B. C.)

Clean hands want no Washball.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1111. (1732)

6 Hands across the sea, Feet on English ground,
The old blood is bold blood the wide world round.

BYRON WEBBER, Hands Across the Sea. (c. 1890)

Hands across the sea. Friendship with people or nations abroad.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

7 [He] was remarkably partial to holding a lone hand.

JANE WEST, A Table of the Times, i, 217. (1799)

Playing against a lone hand.

R. HARDIE, Hoyle Made Familiar, p. 37. (1830)

I wasn't playing a lone hand in that game.

MURDOCH, A Yoshiwara Episode, p. 81. (c. 1890)

TRY A HAND, see under TRYING.

8 Than they faght hand ovyr hedd.

UNKNOWN, Le Bone Florence of Rome, l. 475. (c. 1440)

Hande over heed, confusedly.

PAISGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, 836. (1530)

Bid guests to his bridal, hand-over-head, come who would.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 284. (1555)

Hand over head, as men took the Covenant.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 250. (1678)

ISAAC D'ISRAELI cites this (Curiosities of Literature, ser. ii, i, 462), with the comment, "Among our own proverbs, a remarkable incident has been commemorated; Hand over head, as men took the Covenant."

Give not your almes hand over head; do good with discretion.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 75. (1681) See also ALMS.

He . . . went at the leading skiffs hand over head.

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 1. (1863)

Hand-over-head. In a reckless thoughtless manner.

F. T. ELWORTHY, West Somerset Word-Book, p. 316. (1886)

HANDKERCHIEF

9 Then draw I forth

My handkercher, and having made my choice,
I thus bestow it.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Sea-Voyage. Act iii, sc. 1. (1622) Expressing a condescending preference.

The story of the Sultan's throwing a handkerchief is altogether fabulous.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to the Countess of Mar, 10 March, 1718.

I imagine he must do something more than merely throw his handkerchief.

R. P. WARD, Tremaine. Bk. ii, ch. 39. (1825)

"And so, . . . you condescend to fling to me your royal pocket handkerchief," said Blanche.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 64. (1850)

10 He has only to throw the handkerchief, and she is his. (Il n'a qu'à . . . jeter le mouchoir. elle est à lui.)

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 216. (1890)

HANDLE

11 Everything has two handles, by one of which it ought to be seized and by the other not. (πάν πράγμα δύο ἔχει λαβάς. τὴν μὲν φορητὴν, τὴν δὲ ἀφόρητον.)

EPICTETUS, Encheiridion. Sec. 43. (c. A. D. 120)

Quoted by BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, ii, 3.

There is nothing but hath a double handle.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. 2, sec. 6. (1650)

Most things have two Handles; and a wise Man takes hold of the best.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3472. (1732)

Everything hath two handles, saith the ancient adage.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature, iii, 334. (c. 1800)

<sup>1</sup> He flies right off the handle for nothing.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick in England. Ch. 28. (1843) To become suddenly angry.

The old woman would go off the handle if I should come back without you.

ANN STEPHENS, High Life in New York, ii, 10. (1843)

Flying into a passion is one thing; flying off the handle is another.

E. G. PAIGE, Dow's Patent Sermons, iii, 252. (c. 1849)

George's voice was just "turning," and . . . it was apt to fly off the handle and startle everybody.

MARK TWAIN, Innocents Abroad. Ch. 4. (1869) I'm afraid . . . he'll fly off the handle, and never come again.

W. D. HOWELLS, The Minister's Charge, p. 215. (1886)

You go flying off the handle and the same as tell me that I'm a thief.

MRS. WILSON WOODROW, Sally Salt, p. 240. (1912)

No sense in flying off the handle.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 191. (1942)

<sup>2</sup> If old Cran was to slip off the handle, I think I should make up to [his daughter].

T. C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick in England. Ch. 28. (1843) To die.

My old gentleman means to be Mayor . . . before he goes off the handle.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10. (1872)

<sup>3</sup> Take things always by their smooth handle.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Charles Clay. (1817)

Lamb loved paradox. . . As Hartley Coleridge adds, it was his way always to take hold of things "by the better handle."

CANON AINGER, Charles Lamb, p. 176. (1881)

<sup>4</sup> Mister Coxswain! thanky, Sir, for giving me a handle to my name.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 4. (1833) In ch. 64, "His Majesty has given me a handle to my name." A title of rank or honor attached to the name.

She entertained us with stories . . . mentioning no persons but those who "had handles to their names," as the phrase is.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 23. (1855)

<sup>5</sup> He is determined to carry on the contest "to the handle."

UNKNOWN, Editorial, Louisville (Ky.) Public Advertiser, 9 May, 1833. To the hilt, to the limit.

He was enjoying his trip "up to the handle."

Knickerbocker Magazine. Vol. xlv, p. 435. (1855)

If he isn't playin' possum right up to the handle, then he is a fool.

JOHN HABBERTON, Jericho Road, p. 101. (1876)

HANGING

See also Gallows, Halter

<sup>6</sup> Hanging is too good for him, said Mr. Cruelty.
JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

<sup>7</sup> Thou mayst answer, "a-byd, a-byd," but he That hangeth by the nekke, sooth to seyne, In grete disese abydeeth for the peyne.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk ii, l. 985. (c. 1380)

To be hanged by the neck till he was dead—that was the end.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 52. (1838) "Suspendatur per collum" (Let him be hanged by the neck) is the law phrase.

<sup>8</sup> All are not hanged that are condemned.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 501. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> Take courage, younger than thou have been hanged.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4307.

<sup>10</sup> I fear hanging, whereunto no man is hasty.

W. D. HAZLITT, ed., Old Plays, ii, 120: Jacke Juggeler. (c. 1550)

There's no haste to hang true men.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act ii, sc. 1. (1599)

Londoners . . . aim more at dispatch than justice; and, to make quick riddance (though no haste to hang true men), acquit half and condemn half.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: London, ii, 341. (1662)

No haste to hang true men.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 101. (1678)

<sup>11</sup> He that hangth him selfe a sondaie (said hee) Shall hang still vncut down a mondaie for mee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

<sup>12</sup> Suggs lost his money and his horse, but then he hadn't got the hang of the game.

JOHNSON J. HOOPER, Simon Suggs, p. 44. (1845)

To get the hang of a thing, is to get the knack, or habitual facility, of doing it well.

JOHN BARTLETT, Dictionary of Americanisms: Hang. (1859)

<sup>13</sup> It is my destenye to be hanged.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 19. (1519)

Hanging gangs by haps.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595)

MARRIAGE AND HANGING GO BY DESTINY, see under MARRIAGE.

<sup>14</sup> He that is hang'd in a crabb tree will never love verjuyce [crab-apple cider].

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)

Hang a dog on a crabtree, and he'll never love verjuice. Generally men and beasts shun those things, by or for which they have smarted.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1670)
Affliction makes a man both honest and wise; for the smart brings him to a sense of his error, and the experiment to a knowledge of it. . . . Hang a dog upon a crab-tree (we say), and he'll never love verjuice.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop, Fab. 59. (1692)

<sup>1</sup> Gan sore muse and henge in a balaunce.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Fall of Princes, i, 14. (1430)

See under BALANCE.

As yet the matter hangeth in suspence.

THOMAS WILSON, Logike, fo. 77B. (1551)
Such as hung in the wind, as neuters.

JOHN PROCTOR, Historie of Wyates Rebellion. (1555) See ARBER, Garner, viii, 70.

The business of money hangs in the hedge.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 27 Oct., 1666.

The cause would not have hung upon the Hedges so long as it did.

WILLIAM SMITH, Annals of University College, p. 321. (1728)

He has been hanging between life and death

JANE W. CARLYLE, Letters, iii, 144. (1862)

<sup>2</sup> Quha ever bess hangit with his cord needs never to be drowned.

SIR DAVID LYNDESAY, The Thrie Estaitis, l. 2096. (1540)

You were not born to be drowned, but rather to be hanged. (Tes destinees fateles ne sont à perir en eau. Tu feras hault en l'air certainement pendu.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 24. (1548)
The water will never reave [rob] the widdie [gallows].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 101. (c. 1595)
He that is born to be hanged, shall never be drowned.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 324. (1605) The proverb, in practically this form, is common to most European languages.

He hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 1, 32. (1611)

If a gallows were on land,
This fellow could not drown.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, v, i, 217. (1611)
Long with two others escaped (the rest drowned). One of the three said nothing but Gallows claim thy right, which within half a year fell out accordingly.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, Pilgrim. Ch. 19. (1625)
Since as the proverb old 'tis found,
Who's born to hang, will ne'er be drown'd.

CHARLES COTTON, Scarronides. Bk. iv. (1670)
He had a proverb in his favour, and he got out of the water, . . . not being born to be drowned.

DANIEL DEFOE, Colonel Jacque. Ch. 7. (1723)
If born to swing, I never shall be drown'd.

HENRY FIELDING, The Covent Garden Tragedy. Act i, sc. 3. (1732)

If he be hang'd he'll come hopping; and if he be drown'd he'll come dropping.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>3</sup> One doesn't correct the man who is hanged: one corrects others by him. (On ne corrige pas celui qu'on pend: on corrige les autres par lui.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1595)

<sup>4</sup> There's nothing better for me to do than to tie a rope around my neck and stretch myself out into one long capital I. (Unam faciam litteram longam.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 77. (c. 210 B. C.)

Nothing indeed remains for me but that I should hang myself. (Ad restim mihi quidem res redit planissime.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 686. (161 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> What do you want with a drachma?—To buy myself a rope.—What for?—To make myself a swinging shape. (Quid ea drachuma facere vis?—Restim volo mihi emere.—Quam ob rem?—Qui me faciam pensilem.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 88. (c. 195 B. C.)

You lack a penny to buy a halter with. (Egenti as, laquei pretium.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. ii, l. 98. (30 B. C.)

A proverb originating in Attic comedy. GIVE HIM ENOUGH ROPE AND HE'LL HANG HIMSELF. see under ROPE

<sup>6</sup> Get it, and be hanged. (Exige, ac suspende te.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 903. (c. 190 B. C.)

Get a thick rope and hang yourself. (Cape crasam ac suspende te.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 814. (c. 200 B. C.)

Get a rope and hang yourself. (Capias restim ac te suspendas.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 396. (c. 194 B. C.)

Get out of the house and hang yourself. (Abi domum, abi cito ac suspende te.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 255. (166 B. C.)

Why don't you go and hang yourself and be thought a hero in Thebes? (τί οὐκ ἀπ' ἡρώτων ἴνα θήβησιν ἥρωας γένη;) )

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, vi, 17. (c. A. D. 130) Suicide was honored in Thebes.

Hang yourself, brave Crillon we have tought at Arques and you were not there. (Pends-toi, brave Crillon, nous avons vaincu à Arques, et tu n'y étais pas.)

HENRY IV OF FRANCE, Letter to Louis de Balbes Crillon, the Ney of the sixteenth century.

This is the version that Voltaire gives, but that inveterate "inventor of history," as he has been called, changed the king's letter to suit himself, for it was written before Amiens, 20 Sept., 1597, and not after Arques in 1589, at which time Crillon had not joined Henry's party. See Collection des Documents Inédits de l'Histoire de France, vol. iv, 1847, p. 848. The sentence was later engraved on a plaque in the lobby of the Hotel de Crillon at Paris.

Go, hang yourselves all.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 136. (1599)

Hang yourself for a pastime.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1678)

- 1
Better be half hanged than ill wed.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 48. (1670)
Better be half hanged than lose estate.
THOMAS OTWAY, The Souldier's Fortune. Act
v, sc. 3. (1681)
- 2
A hangman's is a good trade, he doth his work
by daylight.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1678)
- 3
If you would not live to be old, you must be hanged when you are young.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 126. (1670)
- 4
As good be hanged for an old sheep as a young lamb.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 350. (1678)
KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 46. (1721) A very old proverb, since hanging is mentioned as the punishment for sheep stealing.
As good be hang'd for a Sheep as a Lamb.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 683. (1732)
In for the lamb, as the saying is, in for the sheep.
SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, i, 60. (1748)
We may as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb.
FREDERICK MARRYAT, Midshipman Easy. Ch.
17. (1836)
Others . . . comforted themselves with the homely proverb, that, being hanged at all, they might as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb.
DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 53. (1841)
Better to be hanged for a sheep than a lamb.
C. S. FORESTER, Payment Deferred, p. 50. (1926)
You might as well swing for a skunk as a weasel.
BRETT HALLIDAY, *Bodies Are Where You Find
Them*, p. 232. (1941)
- 5
If he . . . had hanged himself in Thisbe's garter, it would have been a fine tragedy.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
v, i, 366. (1596)
Go hang thyself in thine own heir-apparent garters.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 2, 46. (1597)
Let them hang themselves in their own straps.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 3, 13. (1599)
I bid him hang himself in his own garters.
CYRIL TOURNEUR, The Atheist's Tragedie. Act
ii, sc. 5. (1611)
He may go hang himself in's own garters.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 246. (1678)
Go hang yourself in your own garters, for I'm sure the gallows groans for you.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
- 6
I'll see thee hanged on Sunday first.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1,
301. (1594)
I'll see thee hanged first.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 1, 44. (1597)
Part with my country seat. . . I'll see him hanged first.
JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, pt.iii, ch.9. (1712)
- 7
Hanging is a sharp argument.
R. L. STEVENSON, Familiar Studies of Men and Books. Ch. 6. (1882)

- 8
Be hang'd and forget all.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
If I ever hang, it shall be about a fair lady's neck.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.
You are always out of the way when you should be hang'd.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.
- 9
Yet, though I always have my Will,
I'm but a meer Depender still:
An humble Hanger-on at best,
Of whom all People make a Jest.
SWIFT, Another Riddle, l. 19. (1724)
He is a perpetual hanger-on; yet no-body knows how to be without him.
SWIFT, Wonder of Wonders. (1727)
Charlotte . . . is still hanging on at her mother's . . . with nothing to do.
JANE WELCH CARLYLE, Letters, iii, 61. (1860)
To hang on by one's eyelashes; to persist at any cost.
J. S. FARMER, Americanisms: Hang. (1893)
- 10
Therefore it hangeth together as Germaines lippes, as we use to saie.
THOMAS WILSON, Logike, fo. 25B. (1551)
Mark how well the sequel hangs together.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 6, 4. (1592)
It hangs together as pebbles in a wyth.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 155. (1639)
They hang together like pebbles in a halter.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 250. (1678)
- 11
We must, indeed, all hang together, or most assuredly we shall all hang separately.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Retort, to John Hancock, who, in his address to the Continental Congress, just previous to the signing of the Declaration of Independence, had said,
"We must be unanimous; there must be no pulling different ways; we must all hang together." See SPARKS, Life of Franklin. Pt. ii, ch. 9, p. 409; VAN DOREN, *Benjamin
Franklin*. Ch. 19, p. 551.
Stick together or get stuck separately.
CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse,
p. 243. (1942)
- 12
And he believed doubtlesse, that Hanging was the worst use man could be put to.
SIR HENRY WOTTON, Reliquiae Wottonianae. p.
69. (c. 1630)
The very worst use to which you can put a man is to hang him.
LORD LYTTON, Paul Clifford. Ch. 36. (1830)

II—Hanging: Some Euphemisms

- 13
And forth we ride[n], . . .
Un-to the watering of saint Thomas.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 826.
(c. 1386) Saint Thomas, a place used for executions in Surrey on the Kent road, dedicated to Thomas à Becket. Horses were watered there.

He may, perhaps, take a degree at Tyburn, . . . come, to read a lecture . . . at St. Thomas à Waterings.

BEN JONSON, The New Inne. Act i, sc. 3. (1631)
If Death would briefly say, . . . "I bring to you Saint Giles his bowl," 'twould put them all in fear.

Roxburghe Ballads: Death's Dance. (c. 1575)

Criminals on their way to the gallows at Tyburn were presented with a cup of water at or near the church of St. Giles in the Fields.

Trusting in friendship makes some be trust up, Or ride in a cart to kis Saint Giles his cup.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Mirror of Man. (1594)
Those advent'rous youths, who make their exit At fair of Paddington.

B.E., New Canting Dictionary, sig. I2. (1690)

Paddington Fair, an execution of malefactors at Tyburn.

See she takes naught of mine, . . . or she goes to Paddington fair for it!

S. J. WEYMAN, Shrewsbury. Ch. 42. (1898)

<sup>1</sup>
We say of one that's hanged, he makes a wry mouth.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Moue. (1611)

<sup>2</sup>
Welch parsley, which, in our vulgar tongue, is Strong hempen halters.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Elder Brother. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1620)

This is a rascal deserves . . . To dance in Hemp Derricks Caranto: Lets choke him with Welch Parsley.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Hey for Honesty. Act iv, sc. 1. (1638)

<sup>3</sup>
What is their end? thei proue if Hempe be strong.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 62. (1578)

To be hang'd, to kicke the winde.

JOHN FLORIO, Worlde of Wordes, p. 96. (1598)

<sup>4</sup>
"Stabb'd with a Bridport dagger." That is, hanged . . . at the gallows; the best . . . hemp growing about Bridport.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Dorset, i, 453. (1662)

"At Bridport be made good daggers." Nowadays, at any rate, a Bridport dagger is a grimly humorous euphemism for a hangman's rope.

Times (London) Literary Supplement, 21 Oct., 1910, p. 384.

<sup>5</sup>
The priggar went to heaven in a string.

ROBERT GREENE, Conny-catching. Pt. ii, B26. (1592) The phrase referred originally to the Jesuits who were hanged in the reign of Elizabeth.

Thou shortly shalt to Heaven in a string.

RICHARD CORBET, Certain Elegant Poems. (c. 1630) in CHALMERS, English Poets, v, 582.

But some are gone to heaven in a string.

Roxburghe Ballads, iv, 141. (1679)

Then may he boldly take his Swing,

And go to Heaven in a String.

THOMAS WARD, England's Reformation, p. 178. (a. 1708)

<sup>6</sup>
He will ride backwards up Holborn-hill. He will come to be hanged. Criminals . . . were, till about the year 1784, executed at Tyburn, the way to which from Newgate, was up Holborn-hill. They were generally conveyed in carts . . . with their backs towards the horses.

FRANCIS GROSE, ed., Provincial Dictionary: London, p. 197. (1787)

<sup>7</sup>
Thou art at an ebbe at Newgate, thou hast wrong.

But thou shalt be a flote at Tyburne ere long.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. (1546)

"He that is a low ebb at Newgate, may soon be afloat at Tyburn." I allow not this satirical proverb, as it makes mirth on men in misery.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Middlesex (1640), ii, 314. (1662)

<sup>8</sup>
Ware hem of hempyn lane.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, 454. (c. 1420)

Stop a tyd, and be welle ware

Ye be nay cawte in an hempen snare.

JOHN SKELTON, Against Garnesche, l. 162. (a. 1529)

Ye shall have a hempen caudle then.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 7, 95. (1590)

I . . . scaped dauncing in a hempen circle.

THOMAS NASHE, The Unfortunate Traveller, 67. (1594)

Lamentable hempen tragedies acted at Tiburne.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Seuen Deadly Sinnes of London, vii, 44. (1606)

Hempen-widow, one whose husband was hanged.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. (a. 1700)

A man who was hanged is said to have died of a hempen fever.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue. (1785)

<sup>9</sup>
[Lads] That shepherded the moonlit sheep A hundred years ago.

A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad. No. 9. (1898) "To keep sheep by moonlight" was to be hanged in chains.

<sup>10</sup>
Whoever refus'd to do this, should presently swing for't, and die in his Shoes.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 45. (1694)

I have been told by a fortune-teller that I should die in my shoes.

UNKNOWN, The Matchless Rogue, p. 87. (1725)

Ye sharpers so rich, who can buy off the noose, Ye honest poor rogues, who die in your shoes.

JOHN GAY, Newgate's Garland, l. 4. (1725)

All come to see a man "die in his shoes."

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: The Execution. (1837)

<sup>11</sup>
The three theues were conueied foorth to blesse the worlde with their heeles.

PAINTER, Pallace of Pleasure, p. 63. (1566)

- 1
You'll go up a ladder to bed.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 256. (1678)
- 2
Why, colonel, you break the King's laws; you stretch without a halter.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
- 3
Did ever one yet dance the Tyburn Jigg,
With a free air, or a well-pawder'd Wigg?
SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Relapse: Epil. (1697)
You may dance on the Ropes, without reading Euclid.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5943. (1732)
You'll dance at the End of a Rope, without teaching.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6022.
To see a fellow-being dancing in the air after death, in the manner practised in England.
JOHN RICHARDSON, Movements of the British Legion. Ch. 8, p. 210. (1837)
You'll dance upon nothing presently.
AINSWORTH, Jack Sheppard. Ch. 31. (1839)
Just as the Felon condemn'd to die . . .
From his gloomy cell in a vision elopes,
To caper on sunny greens and slopes,
Instead of the dance upon nothing.
THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Death. St. 9. (1840)
This poor soldier . . . is to dance on the top of nothing.
CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Vol. iii, bk. viii, ch. 4. (1862)
- 4
Some of vs erelong maie happe leape at a dasie.
UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act v, sc. 2. (1553)
I will go neare for this to make ye leape at a dasye.
JOHN STILL (?), Gammer Gurton's Nedle. Act v, sc. 2. (1575)
At last hee leapt at a daysie . . . with a halter about his necke.
ROBERT GREENE, Black Book's Messenger: To the Reader. (1592)
He sayd: Haue at yon dasie that growes yonder; and so leaped off the gallows.
UNKNOWN, Pasquil's Jests, p. 48. (1604)

HAP

See also Chance

- 5
Hap helpeth hardy men alday.
CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women: Lucretia, l. 1773. (c. 1385)
FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE, see under FORTUNE.
- 6
Happe, how happe may.
Al sholde I deye, I wole hir herte seche.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 796, (c. 1380)
"I care not," sayd Rycharde, "hap as it hap wyll."
WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, p. 332. (c. 1489)
Hap and be happy, hap that hap may.
R. B., Appius and Virginia. (1575) In DODSLEY, Old Plays, iv, 151

- Let hap what hap will.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 134. (1576)
Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about her.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 4, 107. (1594)
Hap good or hap ill, I will walke on still.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, 7. (1599)
- 7
Give me hap and cast me in the sea.
THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Churchyards Charge, p. 28. (1580) See under LUCK.
- 8
Hap and a half-pennie, is warlds geir enough.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595)
Hap and half-penny goods enough.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 126. (1639)
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 100. (1670)
With the comment, "Good luck is enough, though a man have not a penny left him."
- 9
One may through hap . . . hit the naile on the head.
JAMES HART, Anatomie of Urines. Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1625)
They must needs hit the mark sometimes, though not by aim, by hap.
THOMAS FULLER, Holy State: Of Fools. (1642)
- 10
I hope good happe be not all out worne.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1541)
Some have the hap, some stick i' the gap.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 125. (1639)
Some have the happ and others stick in the gap.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)
Some has hap, and some sticks in the gap.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 296. (1721)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6274. (1732) "Hap and mishap govern the world."

HAPPINESS

See also Bliss, Delight, Joy, Pleasure

I—Happiness: What It Is

- 11
True happiness is of a retired nature, and an enemy to pomp and noise.
ADDISON, The Spectator, 17 March, 1711.
- 12
Happiness comes from the health of the soul.
(ἐκ δ' ὑγιείας φρενῶν ὁ δῆλος.)
AESCHYLUS, Eumenides, l. 535. (458 B.C.)
Do you wish never to be sad? Live rightly! (Vis nunquam tristis esse? Recte vive!)
ISIDORUS, Scriptura, xiii, 223. (c. A.D. 625)
Oh, make us happy and you make us good!
ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. iv, l. 302. (1868)
The three secrets of happiness: To see no evil, hear no evil, do no evil.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 363. (1938) A Chinese proverb.
BE GOOD AND YOU WILL BE HAPPY, see under GOOD.
- 13
Doing well and happiness are the same thing.
(τὴν δ' εὐπράγαν καὶ τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν εἶναι ταὐτόν.)
ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 3, sec. 1. (c.

330 B. C.) Jean-Jacques Rousseau is credited with a more definite definition: "Happiness: a good bank account, a good cook, and a good digestion."

1 Most of the happiness in this world consists in possessing what others can't get.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Encyclopedia of Wit and Wisdom. (1874)

2 The happiness of ordinary persons seems to me to consist in slavishly following the majority, as if they could not help it.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.)

3 A happy life consists in tranquillity of mind. (In animi securitate vitam beatam.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, sec. 20. (45 B. C.)

It is neither wealth, nor splendor, but tranquillity and occupation, which give happiness.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Mrs. A. S. Marks, 1788.

No creditor at the door and nobody sick. (Mên ch'ien wu chai chu, chia chung wu ping jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 852. (1875)

Three meals per day, one sleep per night. (Jib tu san ts'an, yeh mien yi su.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 858.

Peace in a thatched hut—that is happiness.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 363. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

4 The happiest person is the person who thinks the most interesting thoughts.

TIMOTHY DWIGHT, Thoughts for the Inner Life. (1899)

5 The chiefest point of happiness is that a man should be willing to be what he is. (Quod sis, esse velis.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 22. (1511)

To be strong is to be happy.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend, ii, 731. (1851)

6 Human felicity is produced not so much by great pieces of good fortune that seldom happen, as by little advantages that occur every day.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. (1798)

The streams of small pleasures fill the lake of happiness.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Trifles. (1839)

7 Death after a life of least pain and greatest pleasure. (δυνατόν ἐλάχιστα θάνατον ἡσυχία τε πλείστα.)

HOMER, when asked by Hesiod to define happiness. ALCIDAMUS (?), Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec. 321. (c. 400 B. C.)

8 Is it by riches or by virtue that men are made happy? (Utrumne Divitiis homines an virtute beati?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 73. (35 B. C.)

It's pretty hard to tell what does bring happiness. Poverty and wealth have both failed.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 191. (1930)

9 Happiness is not a reward—it is a consequence.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Christian Religion. (c. 1890)

Happiness and Beauty are by-products.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1893)

Happiness is a habit—cultivate it

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1914)

10 The happiness of a man is to do the true work of a man. (εὐφροσύνη ἀνθρώπου ποιεῖν τὰ ἴδια ἀνθρώπου.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. viii, No. 26. (C. A. D. 174)

The only happiness a brave man ever troubled himself with asking much about was, happiness enough to get his work done.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 5 (1843)

11 Happiness is a woman. (Das Glück aber ist ein Weib.)

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Also Sprach Zarathustra: Von der Seligkeit Wider Willen. Last line (1885)

12 Reason shows me that if my happiness is desirable and a good, the equal happiness of any other person must be equally desirable.

HENRY SIDGWICK, The Methods of Ethics. Ch. 3. (1874)

13 Happiness is a wine of the rarest vintage, and seems insipid to the vulgar taste.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts. (1910)

II—Happiness: Apothegms

14 Heart-joy is life to a man and happiness in a man prolongeth days.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus) xxx, 22. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr

15 Wherefore, O mortal men, why seek ye for happiness abroad, when it is placed within yourselves? (Quid igitur o mortales extra petitis intra uos positam felicitatem?)

BOETHIUS, Consolatio Philosophiae. Bk. ii, sec. 4, l. 72. (C. A. D. 520)

To enjoy true happiness we must travel into a very far Country, and even out of our selves; for the Pearl we seek for is not to be found in the Indian, but in the Empyrean Ocean.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 11. (1682)

Man is the artificer of his own happiness.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 21 Jan., 1838.

Happiness grows at our own firesides, and is not to be picked up in strangers' gardens.

JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: Happiness. (c. 1840)

He who leaves his house in search of happiness pursues a shadow.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 363. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

1 Unhappy, hope; happy, be cautious. (Sperate, miseri; cavete, felices.)

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, closing advice in final paragraph. (1621)

2 What is given by the gods more desirable than a happy hour? (Quid datur a divis felici optatius hora?)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxii, l. 30. (c. 57 B. C.)

There is an hour wherein a man could be happy all his life could he find it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1141. (1650) The Italians say, "Il tempo buono viene una volta sola" (The good time comes only once); the Germans, "Einmal im Leben geht das Glück an Jedem vorbei" (Happiness passes every one once in life).

To fill the hour—that is happiness.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience. (1844) Repeated in Works and Days.

3 If a man should ascend alone into heaven and behold clearly the structure of the universe and the beauty of the stars, there would be no pleasure for him in the awe-inspiring sight, which would have filled him with delight if he had had someone to whom he could describe what he had seen. (Si quis in caelum ascendisset naturamque mundi et pulchritudinem siderum perspexisset, insuavem illam admirationem ei fore, quae iucundissima fuisset, si aliquem cui narraret habuisset.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Sec. 88. (44 B. C.)

Happiness seems made to be shared. (Le bonheur semble fait être partagé.)

CORNEILLE, Notes par Rochefoucauld. (c. 1670) Also attributed to Racine.

All who joy would win

Must share it,—Happiness was born a twin.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 172. (1818)

4 I know not how to call happy any child of man. (οὐκ οἶδ' ὅπως εἰτοίμ' ἄν εὐτυχεῖν τινα | θνητῶν.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 981. (c. 428 B. C.) In Medea, l. 1228, Euripides repeats the thought: "Amongst mortals, no man is happy" (θνητῶν γὰρ οὐδεὶς ἐστὶν εὐδαίμων ἀνὴρ.)

Ye scarce shall find

One happy lot in all the life of men.

(ὅν δ' ἄν εὐτυχὲς μόλις ποτ' ἐξεύροις τις ἀνθρώπων βίω.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 382. (c. 419 B. C.)

Man is not born for happiness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, iv, 206. (c. 1776)

CALL NO MAN HAPPY BEFORE HIS DEATH, see under DEATH.

5 Happiness is not steadfast, but transient. (ὁ δ' ἄλβος οὐ βέβαιος, ἀλλ' ἐφήμερος.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 558. (c. 420 B. C.)

No happiness lasts for long. (Nulla longi temporis felicitas.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 928. (c. A. D. 60)

Calme continueth not long without a storme, neither is happiness had long without heaviness.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 215. (1576)

Happiness too swiftly flies.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College. (1742)

The highest happiness, the purest joys of life, wear out at last. (Das beste Glück, des Lebens schönste Kraft, ermatten endlich.)

GOETHE, Iphigenie auf Tauris. Act iv, sc. 5. l.

9. (1787) The German proverb is, "Das Glück hat Flügel" (Happiness has wings)

6 The happiness of the hart, causeth a faire colour in the face. (Allegrezza di cuore, fa bella peladura di viso.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

With happiness comes intelligence to the heart.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 292. (1937)

7 Let him who would be happy for a day, go to the barber; for a week, marry a wife; for a month, buy him a new horse; for a year, build him a new house; for all his life time, be an honest man.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Wales, iii, 48? (1662) An Italian proverb.

8 Happiness in this world, when it comes, comes incidentally. Make it the object of pursuit, and it is never attained.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE: American Note-Books, Nov. 1852.

9 Happy is he that chastens himself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Happy is he that serveth the Happy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1788. (1732)

10 Happy man happy dole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

Sweet Bianca! Happy man be his dole.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 1, 144. (1594) I Henry IV, ii, 2, 84; Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 4, 68; Winter's Tale, i, 2, 163. The meaning is, may happiness be his portion.

A short life and a merry life, I cry. Happy man be his dole.

JOHN TATHAM, The Rump. Act i, sc. 1. (1660)

Here's five thousand crowns bid for his head. Happy man be his dole that catches him.

JOHN CROWNE, Juliana. Act i, sc. 1. (1671)

11 Nor can you suppose that anyone is happy but the man who is wise and good. (Neve putes alium sapiente bonoque beatum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 20. (20 B. C.) Better to be happy than wise.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

BACON, Promus. No. 970. (c. 1594) FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22. (c. 1595) CAMDEN, Remains p. 319. (1605) RAY, p. 99.

There is an old proverb, "It is better to be happy than wise."

BARNABY RICH, His Farewell to Militarie Profession, p. 7. (1581)

The days that make us happy make us wise.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Biography. (1910)

1 A man of gladness seldom falls into madness.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6235. (1732)

2 If the happiness of the mass of mankind can be secured at the expense of a little tempest now and then, or even of a little blood, it will be a precious purchase.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Ezra Stiles, 1786.

3 The happy man cannot be harried.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 313. (1721)

4 One is never as happy or as unhappy as one thinks. (On n'est jamais si heureux ni si malheureux qu'on s' imagine.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 49. (1665)
A man is never as unhappy as he thinks, nor as happy as he had hoped. (On n'est jamais si malheureux qu'on croit, ni si heureux qu'on avait espéré.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées, No. 572.

5 Happiness and misery depend as much on temperament as on fortune. (Le bonheur et le malheur des hommes ne depend pas moins de leur humeur que de la fortune.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 61. (1665)
There are extremes of happiness and misery which are beyond our power to feel. (Il y a un excès de biens et de maux qui passe notre sensibilité.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 464.
Happiness or misery usually go to those who have the most of the one or the other. (Le bonheur ou le malheur vont d'ordinaire à ceux qui ont le plus de l'un ou de l'autre.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Postumes. No. 551.

6 Happiness makes us base.

JOHN MARSTON, Sophonisba. Act ii. (1606)

7 One would suffer a great deal to be happy.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to James Steuart, 19 July, 1759.

8 It is one thing to have bene happy, it is another thing to bee happy.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 196. (1576)

9 For any man to win the prize of perfect happiness is impossible. (τυχεῖν δ' ἐν ἀδύνατον | εὐδαιμονίαν ἀπασαν ἀνελόμενον.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. vii, l. 55. (c.485 B.C.)
There is no man who is happy in everything. (οὐκ ἔστιν ὅστις πάντ' ἀνὴρ εὐδαιμονεῖ.)

EURIPIDES, Siheneboea. Frag. 661, T.G.F. (c. 400 B.C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, ii, 21, 2, and by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 103B.

Nothing is happy in every way. (Nihil est ab omni | parte beatum.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 27. (23 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 87. (1508)

Here on earth is no sure happiness.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Fairie Queene. Bk. vi, canto xi, st. 1. (1596)

10 The happiness of the blessed is no fugitive. (δραπέτας οὐκ ἔστιν ὀλβος.)

PINDAR, Fragments. Frag. 134. (c. 485 B.C.)

11 Man's real life is happy, chiefly because he is ever expecting that it soon will be so.

E. A. POE, Marginalia. (1844)

12 O Happiness! our being's end and aim!

Good, Pleasure, Ease, Content! whate'er thy name.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 1. (1734)

13 The happy know no hours.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma, iii, 257. (1718) The usual form of the proverb is, "Happiness takes no account of time."

For the happy the hour never strikes. (Dem Glücklichen schlägt keine Stunde.)

SCHILLER, Die Piccolomini. Act iii. (1799)

Happiness never lays its finger on its pulse.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On Death. (1863)

14 To call yourself happy is to provoke disaster. (Irritare est calamitatem cum te felicem voces.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 280. (c. 43 B.C.) To avert the disaster one must touch wood, according to the old superstition.

He that talks much of his happiness summons grief.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 855. (1640)

15 Happiness has not always the ready ear. (Non semper aurem facilem habet felicitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 457. (c. 43 B.C.)

16 He is not happy who does not think himself so. (Non est beatus esse se qui non putat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 482. (c. 43 B.C.) One of the most famous of Publilius's maxims. Seneca quotes it, Ad Lucilium, ix, 21, and La Fontaine puts it into French, "Je ne trouve d'heureux que ceux qui pensent l'être." Seneca has another form, "Felix est non qui aliis videtur, sed qui sibi" (He is not the happy man who seems so to others, but he who seems so to himself). ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, v, 4, cites yet another form, "Non est beatus, esse qui se nesciat" (He is not happy who does not know himself happy).

Happiness generally depends more on the Opinion we have of Things, than on the Things themselves.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1795. (1732)
He is happy. that knoweth not himself to be otherwise.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1918.

Happiness is nothing if it is not known, and very little if it is not envied.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 80. (1758)
There are men who are happy without knowing it. (Il y a des hommes qui vivent heureux sans le savoir.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 482. (1746)
No man can enjoy happiness without thinking that he enjoys it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 150. (24 August, 1751)

The will of a man is his happiness. (Des Menschen Wille, das ist sein Glück.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Lager, vii, 25. (1799)
He that thinks himself the happiest man, really is so.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. (1820)

All happiness is in the mind.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 307. (1855)
He who does not consider himself fortunate is unfortunate.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 5. (a. 1902)

THINKING MAKES IT SO, see under THOUGHT.

1
Never believe that a man can become happy through the unhappiness of another. (Non est quod credas quemquam fieri aliena infelicitate felicem.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, sec. 67. (a. A. D. 64)

Never believe that anyone who depends upon happiness is happy. (Numquam credideris felicem quemquam ex felicitate suspensum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 1.

2
While all excesses are hurtful, the most dangerous is unlimited happiness. (Cum omnia quae excesserunt modum noceant, periculosissima felicitatis intemperantia est.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 4, sec. 10. (c. A. D. 45)
Unbroken happiness is a bore; one should have ups and downs in life. (Un bonheur tout uni nous devient ennuyeux; il faut du haut et du bas dans la vie.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Fourberies de Scapin. Act iii, sc. 1. (1671)

A lifetime of happiness! It would be hell on earth.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act. i. (1903) PEARSON, G.B.S., p. 111, quotes Shaw as saying, "There is nothing so insufferable as happiness, except perhaps unhappiness."

Happiness, to some elation,
Is to others mere stagnation.

AMY LOWELL, Happiness. (1914)

3
No man is happy but by comparison.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Virtuoso. Act ii. (1676)

4
O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes!

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, v, 2, 48. (1600)

5
We have no more right to consume happiness without producing it than to consume wealth without producing it.

BERNARD SHAW, Candida. Act i. (1903)

6
When a man is happy, every effort to express his happiness mars its completeness. I am not happy at all unless I am happier than I know.
ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 7. (1863)

7
Mankind are always happier for having been happy; so that, if you make them happy now, you make them happy twenty years hence by the memory of it.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy:
Lect. 22, On Benevolent Affections. (1806)

8
So long as we can lose any happiness, we possess some.

BOOTH TARKINGTON, Looking Forward, p. 172. (c. 1935)

9
O too happy, should they know their blessings. (O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 458. (29 B. C.)
O thrice, four times happy they! (O terque quaterque beati.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 94. (19 B. C.)
Happy, alas! too happy. (Felix, heu! nimium felix.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 657. (19 B. C.) The Greek proverbial phrase for supreme happiness is τὸ ἀγαθόν.

Happiness, unless it tempers itself, destroys itself (Ipsa felicitas, se nisi temperat, premit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxiv. (c. A. D. 64)
Quoted by Montaigne, ii, 20.

What thing so good which not some harm may bring?

Even to be happy is a dangerous thing.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF STIRLING, Darius: Chorus. (1603)

A man too happy for mortality.

WORDSWORTH, Vaudracour and Julia, l. 53. (1805)

Happiness is no laughing matter.

RICHARD WHATELY, Apothegms. (c. 1850)
Great happiness, great danger. (Gross Glück, gross Gefahr.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 319. (1856)

10
I firmly believe, notwithstanding all our complaints, that almost every person upon earth tastes upon the totality more happiness than misery.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to the Countess of Upper Ossory, 19 Jan., 1777.

11
Happy days are here again,
The skies above are clear again.
Let us sing a song of cheer again,
Happy days are here again!

JACK YELLEN, Happy Days Are Here Again. Sung in a musical comedy, Chasing Rainbows. (1929) Roosevelt campaign song, 1936. Merriment comes in sparks, joy in flashes, and happiness in lightnings.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 115. (1940)

III—Happiness: Proverbial Comparisons

- 1
As happy and contented as cats in a dairy.
S. V. BENÉT, Devil and Daniel Webster. (1936)
- 2
As happy as a pig in muck.
CARR, The Dialect of Craven, ii, 43. (1828)
"As happy as a sow i' muck," or "in a muck-hill";
a phrase setting forth the contented state of those who live for sensual pleasure.
E. PEACOCK, Lincs. Glossary, p. 233. (1877)
- 3
They were married in a fortnight's time; and are now as happy as the day is long.
RICHARD GRAYES, The Spiritual Quixote. Bk. xi,
ch. 8. (1772)
Happy as the day's long.
BORROW, Lavengro. Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1851)
She'll be as happy as the day is long.
P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 241.
(1942)
- 4
Then was I as fayn as foul on feir morwen.
WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Version
A, xi, 109. (1362) Version B, x, 153, has,
"Thanne was I also fayne as foule of faire
morwe." (1377)
This sotted preest, who was gladder than he?
Was never brid gladder agayn the day.
CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns
Yemannes Tale*, l. 789. (c. 1386)
As fayn as fowel is of the brighte sonne.
CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 1579.
As glad ther-of as fowel of day.
CHAUCER, The Shipmannes Tale, l. 38.
As fowel is fayn, whan that the sonne up-ryseth.
CHAUCER, The Shipmannes Tale, l. 51.
Sir John was as glad of thys as ever was fowle of daye.
JOHN LYDCATE, Minor Poems, p. 111. (c. 1430)
As glad as fowl of a fair day.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 185. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 285. (1678)
- 5
Happy as a clam in high water.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 494. (1940)
He was as happy as a sandlark.
PETER CHEYNEY, You Can't Keep the Change,
p. 3. (1944)
- 6
Thought ourselves as happy as a king.
UNKNOWN, Tragical History of Guy, Earl of Warwick. Act v. (1661)
Full as an egg was I with glee;
And happy as a king.
JOHN GAY, New Similes. (1720)
[He] again stayed dinner, and was as happy as a prince.
MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary, i, 359. (1781)
My father mixed a jug of . . . punch, and sat down as happy as a king.
CHARLES LEVER, Charles O'Malley. Ch. 75. (1840)
Only tip him a nod now and then . . . and he'll be as happy as a king.
DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 37. (1861)

IV—Happiness: The Greatest Happiness of the Greatest Number

- 7
Our object in the establishment of the state was not the exceptional happiness of any one class, but the greatest possible happiness of the city as a whole. (οὐ μὴν πρὸς τοῦτο βλέποντες τὴν πόλιν οἰκίζομεν, ὅπως ἐν τῇ ἡμῖν ἔθνος ἔσται διαφερόντως εὐδαιμον, ἀλλ' ὅπως ὅ τι μάλιστα ὅλη ἡ πόλις.)
PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 420B.
(c. 375 B. C.)
A few are justly destroyed that many may be reformed. (Ut plures corriganntur, rite pauci eliduntur.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 727. (c. 43 B. C.)
That action is best which procures the greatest happiness for the greatest numbers; and that worst, which, in like manner, occasions misery.
FRANCIS HUTCHESON, Inquiry into the Original of Our Ideas of Beauty and Virtue:
Pt. ii, sec. 3, *An Inquiry Concerning Moral
Good and Evil*. (1725)
The greatest happiness of the greatest number.
(La massima felicità divisa nel maggior numero.)
CESARE DI BONESANA BECCARIA, *Trattato dei
Delitti e Delle Pene: Introduction*. (1764)
The greatest happiness of all those whose interest is in question [is] the right and proper, and only right and proper and universally desirable, end of human action.
JEREMY BENTHAM, Note on His Principles of Morals and Legislation. (1780)
The aggregate happiness of society . . . is, or ought to be, the end of all government.
GEORGE WASHINGTON, *Letter to Comte de
Moustier*, 1 Nov., 1790.
The only orthodox object of the institution of government is to secure the greatest degree of happiness possible to the general mass of those associated under it.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xviii, p. 135
(c. 1800)
Priestley was the first (unless it was Beccaria) who taught my lips to pronounce this sacred truth—that the greatest happiness of the greatest number is the foundation of morals and legislation. . . . It is the greatest good to the greatest number which is the measure of right and wrong.
JEREMY BENTHAM, Works. Vol. x, p. 142. (1830)
The author of the phrase was Francis Hutcheson, as given above, but it was Bentham who never lost an opportunity to emphasize it as the basic principle of legislation and morality, and who gave it such wide popularity that it became proverbial.
The truth once known, all else is worthless lumber;
The greatest pleasure of the greatest number.
LORD LYTTON, King Arthur. Bk. viii, l. 70.
(1848)
The greatest happiness of the greatest number—long a prominent doctrine in English politics.
BENJAMIN KIDD, Social Evolution, ch. 10, p. 290
(1894)

HARD

- <sup>1</sup> Things hardly attained are longer retained.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 101. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670)
- <sup>2</sup> To work hard, live hard, die hard, and go to hell after all, would be hard indeed.
R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch. 6. (1840) "Sailors," Dana remarks, "seldom get beyond the common phrase which seems to imply that their sufferings and hard treatment here will excuse them hereafter."
- <sup>3</sup> Let the hardest come to the hardest.
JOHN EACHARD, Contempt of the Clergy, p. 114. (1670)
Now the hard had come to hard.
CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, iv, 598. (1864)
- <sup>4</sup> Harde with harde neuer made good wal. (Duro con duro non fece mai buon muro.)
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578) See under WALL.
- <sup>5</sup> You need not bee so crustie, you are not so hard bakt.
JOHN LYL, Mother Bombie. Act ii, sc. 3. (1592)
She is as crousty as that is hard bak'd.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 352. (1678)
I'm not as romantic as most hard-boiled women.
E. S. GARDNER, The D. A. Cooks a Goose, p. 109. (1942)
I know your weakness . . . but I'm hard-boiled.
LEE THAYER, Murder Is Out, p. 240. (1942)
- <sup>6</sup> You are too hard for me.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, ii, 1, 258. (1595)
The Hollander was too hard for the Frenchman.
RICHARD VERSTEGAN, A Restitution of Decayed Intelligence, ii, 31. (1605)
You think I am hard and cold.
TENNYSON, The Grandmother, l. 17. (1864)
I'm a kind of a hard lot.
MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 30. (1876)
Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 11.

II—Hard: Comparisons

- <sup>7</sup> As hard as an egg at Easter.
MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 32. (1846)
- <sup>8</sup> "Hard," replied the Dodger. "As nails," added Charley Bates.
CHARLES DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 9. (1838)
My landlord is . . . as hard as nails.
SHAW, You Never Can Tell. Act i. (1896)
Violet's as hard as nails.
BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iv. (1903) See also Heartbreak House. Act ii.
Hard and sharp as nails! I take off my hat to him.
S. J. WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 35. (1922)
As hard as nails.
ELIZABETH DALY, Murders in Volume 2, p. 89. (1941)
STAGG, The Yellow Taxi, p. 79. (1942)
LODWICK, Running to Paradise, p. 226. (1943) etc., etc.

- Hard as nails and as sour as vinegar.
GEORGE BELLAIRS, Murder Will Speak, p. 78. (1943)
- <sup>9</sup> I shall be as unyielding as hard stone or iron.
(ἐξω δ' ὡς ὄρε τις σρεπὴ λίθος ἢ σίδηρος.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 494. (c. 850 B. C.)
Harder than stone. (Plus durs que pierre.)
UNKNOWN, Du Vilain Qui Conquist Paradis par Plait, l. 61. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 210.
Ye ben harder then is any stone.
CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: The Legend of Phyllis, l. 161. (c. 1385)
Hard as ston, Pierides and Meduse.
JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 63. (c. 1440)
[He] hath a hert as harde as a stone.
WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, p. 347. (c. 1489) See also under HEART.
Thy bread is . . . hard as a flint.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Eglogues, p. 18. (c. 1510)
A mightie cragge, as hard as flint or steele.
THOMAS CHURCHYARD, The Worthies of Wales, p. 104. (1587) "As hard as a rock" is the modern proverbial phrase.
- <sup>10</sup> Hard as any horn.
JOHN LYDGATE, The Assembly of Gods. St. 89. (c. 1420)
This wood is as hard as horne.
ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 113. (1545)
As hard as horn.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 202. (1670)
- <sup>11</sup> As hard as a pine-knot.
J. K. PAULDING, The Diverting History of John Bull and Brother Jonathan, p. 5. (1812)
- <sup>12</sup> The wood was as hard as a bone.
WALTER SCOTT, in LOCKHART, Life, v, 326. (1824)
Hard as any bane.
ROBERT NICOLL, Poems, p. 83. (1837)
- <sup>13</sup> "Aw'm as hard as brazill," said Tip.
EDWIN WAUGH, The Owl Blanket, p. 85. (1867)
Brazil [iron pyrites] is so extremely hard as to have given rise to a common proverbial saying, "As hard as brazil."
GEORGINA JACKSON, Shropshire Word-Book, p. 48. (1879)

HARE

- <sup>14</sup> It is a common saying that it is best first to catch the stag, and afterwards, when he has been caught, to skin him. (Et vulgariter dicitur quod primo oportet cervum capere, et postea, cum captus fuerit, illum excoriare.)
H. de BRACON, De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Angliae. Bk. iv, ch. 31, sec. 4. Rolls, ed., iii, 234. (c. 1300)
To make a ragout, first catch your hare. (Pour faire un civet, prenez un lièvre.)
LA VARENNE, Le Cuisinier Français, p. 40. In a cook book published in 1747, attributed to

Dr. Hill. See Notes and Queries, 10 Sept., 1859, p. 206. The point of the proverb depends, of course, on a play upon the meaning of "prenez," which may mean to catch or apprehend, as well as the cook-book meaning.

The sagacious Mrs. Glasse prefaces her receipt for hare-soup by the pithy direction, first catch your hare.

GEORGE BRIMLEY, Essays: My Novel. (1853)

The reference is to The Art of Cookery Made Plain and Easy, by MRS. HANNAH GLASSE (1747), but Mrs. Glasse did not say, "First catch your hare." She said "Take a hare when it is cased," that is, when it is skinned. "Cased" was later corrupted to "catch."

Don't loose the falcon until you see the hare.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 209. (1937)

DON'T COUNT YOUR CHICKENS BEFORE THEY ARE HATCHED, see under CHICKEN.

1 The fleshe of hares be hoote and drye, in-genderers of melancholye.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Government of Health, fo. 90. (1558)

What sayest thou to a hare, or the melancholy of Moor-ditch?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 2, 86. (1597)

Hare, a black meat, melancholy, and hard of digestion.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, i, ii, ii, 1. (1621)

A hare being melancholy meat.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 133. (1666)

Will your ladyship have any of this hare?—No, madame, they say 'tis melancholy meat.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

2 He that will have a Hare to breakfast must hunt overnight.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 323.

(1605) JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13.

(1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2365. (1738)

If a man wants a hare for his Sunday dinner, He had best catch it over night.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, 589. (1883)

3 The hare jumps up where one least expects it. (Donde no [or menos] se piensan, salta [or levanta] la liebre.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, chs. 10, 30. (1615)

The Hare starts, when a Man least expects it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4586. (1732)

Hares pop out of the ditch just when you are not looking for them.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 10. (1869)

4 The life of a hare. (λαγὼ βίος.)

DEMOSTHENES, Aeschines. (c. 330 B. C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 78, who gives the Latin, "Leporis vita," and adds, "The hare, said to be the most timid of all animals, perpetually on the watch, and even in its sleep said not to close its eyes." Aesop wrote a fable about them: The hares, weary of a life of constant fear and anxiety, rushed to a pond to drown themselves, but some frogs, alarmed at the noise, leaped into the water, and the hares decided to keep on living, since there were some creatures whom even they could frighten.

5 He who runs after two hares catches neither. (ὁ δύο πῶκας διώκων οὐδ' ἕτερον καταλαμβάνει.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iii, No. 36.

(1508) Erasmus gives the Latin, "Duos insequens lepores neutrum capit," and explains that its meaning is that he who tries to do two things at the same time accomplishes neither.

For certayne a woman may not have two hertes, no more than a greyhound may renne after two bestes.

UNKNOWN, Livre du Chevalier de la Tour. (1371)

Who hunteth two hares, loseth the one and leaueth the other. (Chi duo lepri caccia, uno perde, l'altro lascia.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578) The French say, "On ne court pas deux lièvres à la fois," or, "Qui court deux lièvres n'en prend aucun."

In running after two hares, I catch neither.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 394. (1580)

The hound that follows two hares, will catch neither.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 232. (1630)

Keep to your debate. You have two hares a-foot. You will lose both.

THOMAS BURTON, Diary, 9 March, 1658.

If you run after two Hares, you will catch neither.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2782. (1732)

Don't think to hunt two hares with one dog.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

We shall be like the man who hunted many hares at once and caught none.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 24. (1880)

6 The hare does not eat the grass around his burrow.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 219. (1937)

7 God send you readier meat than running hares. KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 113. (1721)

8 Men mytten as well haue hunttyd an hare with a tabre.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Richard the Redeles, i. 58. (1399) A tabor is a small drum.

Men with a tabour may lyghtly catche an hare.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems (Percy Soc.). p. 154. (c. 1430)

And yet shall we catche a hare with a taber, As soone we catche ought of them.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

In deed it is hard to take hares with foxes.

RICHARD STANYHURST, Description of Ireland. (1577) See HOLINSHED, vi, 52.

You shal assoone catch a Hare with a taber as you shal perswade youth . . . to such severity of life.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 44. (1579)
Hares are not to be caught by drumming. (On ne prend pas le lièvre au tabourin.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Lièvre. (1611)
Will any goe to catch a Hare with a Taber and a Pipe?

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH, A True Relation of Virginia, iv, 155. (1624)

Drumming is not the way to catch an Hare.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1341. (1732)
It is a mad Hare, that will be caught with a Tabor.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2864.

To fright a hare is not the way to catch her.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Denham Tracts, ii, 108. (1846)

1
You are a hare yourself, and you're hunting for game! (Lepus tute es, et pulpamentum quaeris!)

LIVIVS ANDRONICUS, Fragments. Frag. 6, Loeb. (c. 235 B. C.) From a Greek proverb, meaning, "What you have in yourself, you are seeking in another." Quoted by TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 426. (161 B. C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 7.

2
There went the hare away.

HENRY MEDWALL, A Goodly Interlude of Nature. Pt. ii, l. 589. (c. 1500) There the matter ended.

And here gothe the hare awaie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

There goes the hare away.

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedy. Act iii. sc. 12. (1594)

And here went the hare away.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Liuy, xxxv, 45. (1600)

Where we least think there goes the hare away.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote, ii, 30. (1620) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 100. (1670)

3
He knows both th' hare an' th' hare-gate.

NODAL AND MILNER, Lancs. Glossary, p. 154. (1882) He knows both the hare, and the way the hare runs.

4
He is gone to seek a hayre in a hennes nest, which is as sildome scene as a blacke swan.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington, p. 103. (1599)

5
Like the hare, I shall be worred in the seat I started from.

WALTER SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 34. (1818) "The hare always returns to her form."

6
Thou mad March hare.

JOHN SKELTON, A Replycacion Against Certain Young Scholars, l. 35. (1501) See under MADNESS.

7
He had not seen a Hare the Lord knows when.
SWIFT, On Mr. Pulteney, l. 26. (1731)

8
By swift pursuit as you chase a hare. (κατὰ πόδας ὥσπερ ὁ λαγῶς.)

XENOPHON, Memorabilia. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 9. (c. 375 B. C.) Xenophon is using an old Greek proverb: "You have to run fast to catch a hare."

9
As I saye in our Englyshe prouerbe; Set the hares head against the gose gyblet.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 36. (1539) To let one thing serve as a set-off to another.

Set the hare's head against the goose giblet.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Cited also by RAY and FULLER.

I'd set mine old debts against my new driblets, And the hare's foot against the goose giblets.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shoemaker's Holiday. Act ii, sc. 1. (1599)

As I have been bawd to the flesh, so you have been bawd to your money, so set the hare-pie against the goose-giblets.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight. Act v. (1633)

10
Thou hast a crokyd tunge heldyng with hownd and wyth hare.

UNKNOWN, Jacob's Well, p. 263. (c. 1440) To try to keep in with both sides; to play a crooked part.

There is no such titifyls [knaves] in England's ground,

To holde with the hare, and run with the hound. Fire in the tone hand, and water in the tother.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
I meane not to run with the Hare and holde with the Hounde, to carye fire in the one hand and water in the other.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 107. (1579)
He holds with the Hare, and runs with the Hounds.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 287. (1709) "He holds with the Church, and runs with the Conventicle; makes a Hare of the one and a Hound of the other, and only takes Puss's Part, to set the Dog after her."

He beats a gourd in the east, a ladle in the west. (Tung te 'hu lu, hsi ta p'iao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1035. (1875)

HARES MAY PULL DEAD LIONS BY THE BEARD, see under LION.

THE HARE AND THE TORTOISE, see under RACE.

HARM

11
Senek seith: that "the wyse man that dredeth harmes escheweth harmes; ne he ne falleth in-to perils, that perils escheweth."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 31. (c. 1387)

Yf he wil seche harm he shal fynde harme.

CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe, p. 50. (1481)

Harm watch, harm catch.

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act v, sc. 4. (1614) WILSON, The Cheats, ii, 5. (1663)

HICKERINGILL, Priest-craft. Ch. 1. (1705)
The French say, "Qui mal cherche, mal trouve" (Who looks for evil finds it).
Harm-watching, harm thou still dost catch—
That rule should save thee many a sore.

THOMAS HOOD, Hints to Paul Pry. (c. 1840)

1 But harm y-doon, is doon, who-so it rewe.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l.
789. (c. 1380)

2 Who is ferre from his disshe is nygh his harme.

FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350)

A man far from his good, is nye his harme.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

CAMDEN, Remains, p. 302. (1605) RAY, Proverbs, p. 92. (1678)

He that is far from his geir, is neir his skaith.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (c. 1595)

We say (more generally) a man thats far from his good is neere his harme.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Plat. (1611)

3 [They] have been made sheriffs, to keep them out of harm's way.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 17, 61. (c. 1655)

He took care to keep himself out of harm's way.

WILLIAM DAMPIER, Voyages, i, 205. (1697)

People send Children . . . to School to keep them
out of Harm's way.

STEELE, The Spectator. No. 136. (1711)

4 She can no more harme than can a she ape.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

5 No harm's been done you, if you none admit.
(οὐδὲν πέποιθας δεινὸν ἂν μὴ προσποιῇ.)

MENANDER, Epitrepontes. Frag. 179, Kock. (c.
300 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia,
475B.

There is no harme doone, man, in all this frale.
Neither pot broken, nor water spylt.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Why then, no harme, no force (quoth the fellow), and so went his wayes.

UNKNOWN, Pasquill's Jests, p. 21. (1604)

6 I meant no harm.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ix. (1738)

MRS. RADCLIFFE, The Romance of the Forest. Ch. 10. (1791)

HARP

7 "Harpe and carpe, Thomas!" she saide,
"Harpe and carpe along wi' me."

THOMAS OF ERCELDOUNE (?), Thomas the Rhymer. (a. 1297)

Still harping on my daughter.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 189. (1600)

O gracious duke! Harp not on that.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 1, 64.
(1604)

Ever harping upon things they ought not to allude to.

STEELE, The Spectator. No. 504. (1712)

8 His [Jabal's] brother's name was Jubal: he was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ. (Nomen fratris eius Iubal: ipse fuit pater canentium cithara et organo.)

Old Testament: Genesis, iv, 21. (c. 550 B.C.)

9 Haue among you blynd harpers (sayde I)
The mo the merrier.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 65. (1542)

He draws out; now Have at ye, Harpers!

FLETCHER, The Mad Lover. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1620)

Have among you, my blind harpers!

MARTIN PARKER, *The Poet's Blind Man's
Bough*. (1641)

Have among you, my blind harpers; an expression used in throwing or shooting at random among a crowd.

FRANCIS GROSE, ed., *Dictionary of the Vulgar
Tongue: Harper*. (1785)

10 Ye harpe on the stryng that geueth no melody.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Thou harpest on that string, which long since was out of tune, but now is broken.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Ar-
ber), p. 387. (1580)

Hee harpeth on that string that will make no good musicke.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 222. (1633)

Not good it is to harp on the frayed string.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Bel-lerophon at Argos, l. 479. (1868)

11 The harper is laughed at who always blunders on the same string. (Citharoedus | ridetur, chorda qui semper oberrat eadem.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 355. (c. 20 B.C.)

For though the beste harpou upon lyve

Wolde on the beste souned joly harpe

That ever was, with alle his fingers fyve,

Touche ay o streng, or ay o werbul harpe,

Were his nayles poynted never so sharpe,

It shulde maken every wight to dulle,

To here his glee, and of his strokes fulle.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l.
1030. (c. 1380)

He should harp no more vpon that string.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 49/2. (c.
1513)

He shoulde moreouer talke of many matters, not alwayes harp vpon one string.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 137. (1579)

Neuer harp on yat string.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 249.

Harp not on that string, madam; that is past

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 4, 364. (1595)

Ever touching Upon that string.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act ii, sc. 3. (1636)

The poor girl has been harping upon this string ever since you have been gone.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, i,
478. (1753)

I will harp on that string no longer.

WALTER SCOTT, in LOCKHART, Life, v, 72. (1821)

<sup>1</sup> We wept, when we remembered Zion. We hanged our harps upon the willows. (In salicibus in medio eius, suspendimus organa nostra.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxvii, 2. (c. 250 B. C.)
No wonder if I hate my jocund rhymes,
And hang my pipe upon a willow bough.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Piscatorie Eclogs, iv. (1633)
All our fine project gone to pot!—We may now hang up our harps among the willows.

SMOLLETT, The Reprisal. Sc. 1. (1587)

<sup>2</sup> I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps. (ἡ φωνὴ ἣν ἤκουσα ὡς κιθαριῶν κιθαρίζοντων ἐν ταῖς κιθάραις αὐτῶν.)

New Testament: Revelation, xiv, 2. (c. A. D. 90)
The Vulgate is, "Vocem, quam audivi, sicut citharodorum citharizantium in citharis suis."

<sup>3</sup> Our life contains a thousand springs,
And dies if one be gone.

Strange! that a harp of thousand strings
Should keep in tune so long.

ISAAC WATTS, Hymns. Bk. ii, No. 19. (1707)
And he played on a harp uv a thousand strings
—sperits of just men made perfect.

HENRY TALIAFERRO LEWIS (?), The Harp of a Thousand Strings. (1855) This mock sermon, which was widely reprinted in the newspapers, has been attributed to Lewis, on the authority of an article published in the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal in 1881. The Harp of a Thousand Strings is the title of a compilation of odd tales by Samuel Putnam Avery and included in the contents without attribution is a sermon, The Harp of a Thousand Strings. Tom Masson, in his Masterpieces of Humor, credits it to Joshua S. Morris.

I played on it like a harp of a thousand strings.
O. HENRY, Next to Reading Matter. (1909)

NOT ALL WHO CARRY HARPS ARE HARPISTS, see under APPEARANCE.

HARVEST

<sup>4</sup> "You mustn't spit on the grape-harvest," as Papa Noah said. (Faut pas cracher zur la vendange, a dit le papa Noé.)

HONORÉ DE BALZAC, Les Paysans. Ch. 4. (c. 1840)

<sup>5</sup> He that hath a good harvest may be content with some thistles.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 198. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

He that hath a good crop, may be doing with some thistles.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 150. (1721)

<sup>6</sup> Good harvests make men prodigal, bad ones provident.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Année. (1611)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

Short harvests make short addlings [earnings]
MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 54. (1846)

<sup>7</sup> Harvest comes not every Day, tho' it comes every Year.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1799. (1732)

Harvest will come, and then every Farmer's rich
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1800.

<sup>8</sup> Surely (quoth I), ye haue in this time thus worne

Made a long haruest for a little corne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)
You make a long Haruest for a lyttle corne, and angle for the fish that is already caught.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 97. (1579)

I will not make a long haruest for a small crop
ROBERT GREENE, Works, v, 208. (1587)

A long harvest of a little corn.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1605)

To make a long harvest of a little corn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1670)
Not to make a long harvest of so little corn; not to be tedious in a trifle.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 1207. (1681)
But why . . . should I make so long a harvest of so little corn?

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 175. (1748)

<sup>9</sup> The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved. (Transiit messis, finita est aestas, et nos salvati non sumus.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, viii, 20. (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> Earth is here [Australia] so kind, that just tickle her with a hoe and she laughs with a harvest.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Wit and Opinions: A Land of Plenty. (c. 1845)

It used to be said of the Egyptian delta that if you tickled it with a hoe it would laugh with a harvest.

SIR W. F. BUTLER, From Naboth's Vineyard, v, 210. (1907)

<sup>11</sup> Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest. (ἐπάρατε τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ὑμῶν καὶ θεάσασθε τὰς χώρας ὅτι λευκαὶ εἰσιν πρὸς θερισμὸν.)

New Testament: John, iv, 35. (c. A. D. 95)
Vulgate is, "Levate oculos vestros, et videte regiones, quia albae sunt iam ad messem."

<sup>12</sup> My Haruest shall cease, seeing others haue reaped my corne, for anglyng for the fish that is already caught that were but meere folly.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 97. (1579)
See also SOWING AND REAPING.

And thus of all my harvest hope I have Nought reaped but a weedy crop of care.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: December, l. 121. (1579)

<sup>13</sup> Live within your harvest. (Messe tenus propria vive.)

PEPSIUS, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 25. (c. A. D. 58)

1 He that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame. (Qui autem stertit aestate, filius confusionis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 5. (c. 350 B. C.)

2 Who eat their corn while yet 'tis green,
At the true harvest can but glean.

SADI, Gulistan. (c. 1250)

YOUR HARVEST IS STILL IN THE BLADE, see under CHICKEN: COUNTING CHICKENS BEFORE HATCHED.

3 The seedsman

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain.
And shortly comes to harvest.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 7, 24.
(1606)

Harvest follows seed-time.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 183. (1639)

Seed time and Harvest . . . Shall hold thir course.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 899. (1667)

4 In harvest time, harvest folke, servants and all,
Should make all together good cheere in the hall.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: August's Husbandry.
(1573)

You sunburnt sicklemen, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow and be merry.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iv, 1, 134. (1610)

HAS-BEEN

5 Being now but un-while, and as an hes-beene.

WILLIAM BIRNIE, The Blame of Kirk-Buriall,
p. 34. (1606)

My han' afore's a gude auld has-been.

ROBERT BURNS, The Inventory. (1786)

John Jones may be described as "one of the has-beens."

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 820.
(1827) An American variant is, "It is better to be a has-been than a never-was."

HASH

6 We therefore mean to make a dash
To settle fighting Europe's hash.

T. G. FESSENDEN, Pills Political, p. 114. (1809)

The hash of the Yankees he'll settle.

UNKNOWN, Song. (c. 1820) In BROCKETT,
North Country Glossary: Hash.

My finger was in an instant on the trigger, and another second would have settled his hash.

E. E. NAPIER, Excursion to South Africa ii,
389. (1849)

You've to settle yet Gibson's hash.

ROBERT BROWNING, Youth and Art. (1864)

Uncle Sam's boys, with fixed bayonets, and a grim determination to "settle their hash."

J. C. GREGG, Life in the Army, p. 248. (1866)

7 As a hash-slinger Sal could walk over everything.

BRET HARTE, Gabriel Conroy, p. 246. (1876)

The so-called "hash-slingers" of the boundless West.

A. A. HAYES, The Jesuit's Ring, p. 53. (1887)

Bills of fare were not fashionable, but instead the "hash-slinger" (if a gentleman) or "biscuit-shooter" (if a lady) repeated a list of the grub.
STEDMAN, Bucking the Sagebrush, p. 49. (1904)

8 To serve up . . . the cold Hashes of plain repetition.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transposed,
ii, 368. (1672)

Old pieces are revived . . . the public are again obliged to ruminate over these hashes of absurdity.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Polite Learning in Europe.
Ch. 10. (1759) See also under CABBAGE.

A well-done hash of my own words.

DARWIN, in Life and Letters, ii, 319. (1860)

9 The hash of tongues a Pedant makes.

POPE, Satires of Donne. Sat. iv, l. 52. (1735)

Froude writes up to me we have made a hash of it.

J. H. NEWMAN, Letters, i, 459. (1833)

Lord Grey has made somewhat of a hash of New Zealand and its constitution.

LORD HOUGHTON, in Life. Vol. i, ch. 9. (1847)

HASTE

See also HURRY

10 Loosen every rope. (πάντα κάλων ἐξίέναι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 756. (424 B. C.)

That is, loosen the ropes that reef the sail.

Full speed ahead.

With oar and sail speed your fastest. (Remegio veloque quantum poteris festina.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 157. (c. 200 B. C.)

With sails and oars. (Velis remisque.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 11, sec. 25. (45 B. C.) A variation is

"Remis ventisque" (With oars and wind).

Add sails to your oars. (Remis adice vela tuis.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 790. (c. 1 B. C.)

Suidas gives the Greek form, πληρέσειν ιστίοις
(With full—or all—sails).

It will streight weie anker, and hoyst vp sayle.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

11 The dog, hastening to produce its young, brings them into the world blind. (ἡ κῶων ἀκαλαβῆς ἐπειγομένη τυφλά τίκτει.)

ARISTOPHANES, Peace, l. 1078. (421 B. C.) Cited

by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 35. who gives the Latin, "Canis festinans caecos parit catu-los," and adds that the proverb applies to people who are in so much haste to finish what they undertake that they leave it imperfect, a variation of "Haste makes waste."

The Italians say, "Cagna frettolosa fa catel-lini ciechi" (A hasty bitch bears blind puppies), or "Gatta frettolosa fa i gattini acerbi"

(A hasty cat bears premature kittens).

As the latin prouerbe sayeth: The hastye bitche bringeth furth blind whelpes.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Utopia: To the Reader.
(1556)

Whelpes are ever blinde that dogs in haste do get.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace. p. 192. (1576)
They perceive their haste to have brought forth blind whelpes.

ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 234. (1642)
The swiftest bitch brings fourth the blyndest whelpes.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies, p. 68. (1575)
Hastiness begets Blindness, as the Bitch brought forth her Puppies.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 261. (1709)
The hasty bitch brings forth blind puppies.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

<sup>1</sup>
Haste is ever the parent of failure. (ἐπειχθῆναι μὲν οὖν πᾶν πρῆγμα τικτεὶ σφάλματα.)

ARTANABUS, Apothegm. (c. 500 B.C.) See HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, 10.

Haste is improvident and blind. (Festinatio improvida est et caeca.)

QUINTUS FABIUS MAXIMUS, to Lucius Aemilius. (216 B.C.) See LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk xxii, ch. 39, sec. 22. See under DELAY

<sup>2</sup>
Make haste slowly. (τῇ εὐδελ βραδέως.)

CAESAR AUGUSTUS, his favorite maxim. (c. 27 B.C.) As quoted by Suetonius, The Deified Augustus, sec. 25, and by Aulus Gellius, Noctes Atticae, bk. x, ch. 11, sec. 5, who says, "This was very elegantly expressed by the deified Augustus with two Greek words; for we are told that he used to say in conversation, and write in his letters, 'σπεῦδε βραδέως.' The Latin equivalent is, of course, 'Festina lente,' to which Erasmus devotes five pages of his Adagia, chil. ii, cent. i, No. 1, tracing it back to the Egyptians. It was Erasmus' favorite maxim, and he thought it should be inscribed wherever it could meet the eye, on public buildings, over fireplaces, and on rings and seals. It was included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, with the rendering, "Make slowe hast, or haste the slowly," and the comment, "This is as much as to saye temper thy hast with slouth. To this agree the oure Englyshe proverbe which is: An hasty man neuer getteth good. Also, soft fyre maketh swete malt." See under FIRE.

Stay a while, be never too sudden in your enterprises. Can you tell what Octavian Augustus said? Festina lente. (Attendez vn peu: ne soyez iamais tant soudain à voz enterprises. Sçavez vous que disoit Octavian Auguste? Festina lente.)

RABETAI, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 33. (1534)
Festina Lente, especially in Loue: for momentarie fancies are oftentimes the fruites of follies.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde. (1590)
To make haste slowly is an august motto. (Augusta empresa correr á espacio.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 531. (1647)
<sup>3</sup>
She hastens with slowness. (Elle se hâte avec lenteur.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Lièvre et la Tortue. Bk. vi, fab. 10. (1668) The Germans have the same phrase, "Eile mit Weile."

Make haste slowly. (Hâtez-vous lentement.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Chant i, l. 171. (1674)
Usually quoted, "Hâte-toi lentement."

Strive not to run like Hercules, a furlong in a breath: Festination may prove Precipitation, deliberating delay may be wise cunctation, and slowness no sloathfulness.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 33. (1682) Paraphrasing Caesar Augustus.

<sup>4</sup>
Quicker than boiling asparagus. (Citius quam asparagi coquantur.)

CAESAR AUGUSTUS. (c. 27 B.C.) An expression frequently in his mouth when he wished any business to be executed speedily. See ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 5. Sometimes quoted, "Velocius quam asparagi coquantur" Fire in the hand. (πῦρ παλάμῃ.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. x, No. 82. (1523) Citing an old Greek proverb, with the Latin, "Ignem palma." The whole proverb is, "No longer than you can hold fire in your hand."

As shortly as a horse will licke his eare.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
I will do it in the saying of a Credo. (En un credo las bare.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25. (1605)
As gabbled quickly over. So the verb "to patter" refers to the rapid and mechanical way in which the Paternoster and other Latin prayers were often repeated.

All at once, like sticks on a dog. (Todo junto como al perro los palos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 68. (1615)
Sharp's the word.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Rival Fools. Act i. (1709)
He is making out his case like a house on fire.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. ii, ch. 34. (1857)
Up and dust. Hurry! Move fast!

J. R. BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 728. (1877)
Before you could say Jack Robinson.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 3. (1884)
Git up and hump yourself.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 11
In three shakes of a sheep's tail.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 41.
He bolted before you could say Balbus.

SHAW, Androcles and the Lion. Act ii. (1912)
Well, make it snappy.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 146. (1940)
It was going hell-bent for election.

SUE MACVEIGH, Streamlined Murder, p. 83. (1940)

Immediately, if not sooner.

SUE MACVEIGH, Streamlined Murder, p. 83.

<sup>5</sup>
Of fule haist cummis [comes] no speid.

JOHN BARBOUR, Troy-book. Bk. ii, l. 1682. (c. 1375)
Foole haste is no speed.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595)
Fool's haste is no speed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 235. (1678)
Cited also by Kelly and Fuller.

I wish it may not prove fool's haste.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 12 Jan., 1827.

<sup>1</sup>
Not to[o] fast for [fear of] breaking your shinnes.

JOHN BARET, An Alvarie. Canto A 59. (1580)

"A prouerbe," Baret explains, "applied vnto those, that take no deliberation in bringing any thing to passe."

I, Costard, running out, that was safely within, Fell over the threshold and broke my shin.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 1, 117. (1595)

Not too fast for falling.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 125. (1599)

<sup>2</sup>
There is one that toileth and laboureth, and maketh haste, and is so much the more behind. (Est homo laborans, et festinans. et dolens impius, et tanto magis non abundabit.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xi, 11. (c. 190 B. C.) The Scots say, "Aye in a hurry, and aye ahint."

<sup>3</sup>
It is a saynge that an yll haste is not good.

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, p. 320. (c. 1530)

No hast but good (quoth she) . . .

Ye myst the cushion, for all your hast to it.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

No haste but good, . . . for whip and whurre [hurry],

The olde prouerbe doth say, neuer made good furre [furlong].

NICOLAS UDALL, Roister Doister. Act i, sc. 3. (c. 1550)

No haste but good, stay yet a while.

GEORGE WAPULL, The Tyde Taryeth No Man. Sig. F2. (1576)

No haste but good speed.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 115. (1639)

No more haste than good speed. Spoken when we are unreasonably urged to make haste.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 261. (1721)

<sup>4</sup>
Too hastily, less prosperously. (Nimis propere, minus prospere.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Bk. i, p. 245. (1814)

<sup>5</sup>
A hasty man drinks his tea with a fork.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 363. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

If in haste, go around.

CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 441. Japanese.

<sup>6</sup>
This asketh haste, and of an hastif thing Men may nat preche or maken taryng.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 359. (c. 1386)

<sup>7</sup>
The commune proverbe seith thus: "he that sone demeth, sone shal repente."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 11. (c. 1387) "He that sone demeth, sone repenteth."—Ibid, sec. 18.

Men sen alday that rape rewth. [Men say always that haste rueth.]

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 1625. (c. 1390)

Bydde hym that he be not to hasty of takyng of orderes . . . for oftyn rape rewth.

MARGARET PASTON, Paston Letters, iii, 78. (1473) Hastyngesse engendreth repentaunce.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, p. 62. (1477)

Thinges dunne in haste bringeth spedye Repentance.

HENRY SPELMAN, Dialogue, p. 2. (c. 1580) Acts done in haste, by leisure are repented.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Argalus and Parthenia, p. 29. (1621) MARRY IN HASTE REPENT AT LEISURE, see under MARRIAGE.

<sup>8</sup>
In wikked haste is no profit.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 13. (c. 1387)

Show alter weddyng, that hast maketh waste.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

I find this proverb true, that haste makes waste.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Memories, iii, 7. (1575)

It is good that men looke before they leape, hast makes waste.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, sig. E8. (a. 1591)

Festina lente, Not too fast;

For haste (the proverb says) makes waste.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 1253. (1663)

Haste makes waste, and waste makes want, and want makes strife between the goodman and his wife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 151. (1678)

"Make haste and leave nothing to waste," says the old proverb

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book Vol. ii, col. 927. (1827)

Haste makes waste no less in life than in house-keeping.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 28 Dec., 1852.

Work hastened, work spoiled. (Besogne hâtée, besogne gâtée.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 382. (1856) A French proverb.

Haste makes waste, and waste makes a rich man poor.

Cornish Proverbs, in Notes and Queries, iii, vi, 495. (1864) The Dutch say, "Haast verkwist" (Haste is prodigal).

Haste makes waste, waste makes want.

Want makes a poor boy a beggar.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 488. (1940)

<sup>9</sup>
He hasteth wel that wysly can abyde.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, Bk. i, l. 956. (c. 1380) The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 13. (c. 1387) LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 121. (c. 1430)

<sup>10</sup>
Beth nought to hasty in this hote fare;

For hasty man ne wanteth never care.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. iv, l. 1567. (c. 1380)

Folhaste is cause of mochel wo.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 1861. (c. 1390)

An hasty man wanteth neuer woo.

Peter Idle's Instructions to His Son, l. 238. (c. 1420)

Trwe that prouerbe than preuyd so,
That ouer-hasty man wantyd neuer woo.

JOHN MEIHAM, Works (E.E.T.S.), p. 36. (1449)

The hasty man neuer wanteth wo.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1605)

The hastie person never wants woe.

CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1. (1605)
An impatient spirit is never without woe.

The Spectator. No. 438. (1712)

The choleric man never wants woe.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

A wilful man never wanted woe.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 2. (1721)

<sup>1</sup>
Thei take it wysely faire and softe.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 347.
(c. 1380)

But feir and sofft with ese, homward they hir led.

UNKNOWN, Tale of Beryn, p. 28. (c. 1400)

For soft and essele men goo far.

UNKNOWN, Coventry Plays, p. 50. (c. 1450)

The prouerbe, spede thee faire and softly, is a lesson of counsaile.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus, p. 286. (1542)

Qui vadit plane, vadit sane. (Who goes evenly goes safely.)

HUGH LATIMER, Seven Sermons. (1549)

Who goeth softly, goeth wel. (Chi va pian, va san.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 14. (1578) A rendering of the Latin proverb given above.

Soft and fair goes far.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 3. (1639)

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 774. (1640)

DRYDEN, Sir Martin Mar-all. Act ii, sc. 2. (1668) etc., etc.

Goe as the snaile faire and softly.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), ii, 28. (1583)
Hulie [softly] and fair men rides far journeyes.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595)

Soft pace goes far.

FRANCIS MERES, Palladis Tamia, fo. 259. (1598)

The proverb is old and true, "Fair and softly goeth far."

EDWARD TOPSELL, The Historie of Foure-Footed Beastes, p. 210. (1607)

Fair and softly goes far in a day. . . . He that goes softly, goes sure and also far. He that spurs on too fast at first setting out, tires before he comes to his journey's end.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 87. (1670)

"Fair and softly wins the race" is a variation.

He who goes slowly goes safely and goes far. (Chi va piano va sano e va lontano.)

GOLDONI, I Volponi. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1780) RAY,

Proverbs, p. 87 (1670) gives the Italian form as

"Chi va piano va sano e anche lontano."

The French say, "Pas à pas on va bien long"

(Step by step one goes very far); the Portuguese,

"Molle, molle, se vai longe" (Gently, gently, goes far).

Fair and softly gangs far.

SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 45. (1818)

I'm slow, but fair and easy goes far in a day.

K. F. PURDON, The Folk of Furry Farm. Ch. 2. (1914)

<sup>2</sup>
When things are done hastily, they are not done thoroughly.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiii, ch. 17. (c. 500 B.C.)
Haste manages all things badly. (Mala cuncta ministrat Impetus.)

STATIUS, Thebaid. Bk. x, l. 705. (c. A.D. 92)

Ther nis no werkman, what-so-ever he be,

That may bothe werke wel and hastily.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 588. (c. 1386) See under WORK

Good and quickly seldom meet.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 582.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1670)

According to the Italians, Hastily and well never met. A man of sense may be expeditious, but he is never in a hurry.

JOHN TRUSLER, Proverbs Exemplified, p. 138.

(1790) The Italian proverb is, "Presto e bene, non si conviene." The French say, "Le bien ne se fait jamais mieux que lorsqu'il opère lentement."

<sup>3</sup>
Haste never comes alone, viz. hath ever some trouble or other t'accompany it.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Haste. (1611)

Haste comes not alone.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 827. (1640)

<sup>4</sup>
Haste is slow. (Festinatio tarda est.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, History of Alexander.

Bk. ix, ch. ix, sec. 12. (c. A.D. 50) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 10.

<sup>5</sup>
Haste never carries justice in its train. (οὐρο-τὸ ταχὺ τὴν δικὴν ἔχει.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 452. (c. 420 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup>
He that rides or he be ready, wants some of his geir.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 48. (c. 1595)

Over fast, over louse [loose].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82.

<sup>7</sup>
It is not good to make hast vnto foure places, vnto a Fraye, vnto a drunken companye, vnto a feaste vnbydden, and vnto talke with a foole.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 23. (1578)

<sup>8</sup>
Rubbe, and a Great Cast.

THOMAS FREEMAN. Title. (1614) A warning saying, from the game of bowls.

Rub and a good cast.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 213. (1639)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1678)

With the addition, "Be not too hasty, and you'll speed the better."

<sup>9</sup>
As hasty as Hopkins, that came to Jail over-night, and was hang'd the next Morning.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 695. (1732)

<sup>10</sup>
Reflection insures safety, haste, regret; reflection may produce prosperity, haste, misfortune.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 114. (c. 1050)

Deliberation with the chance of success is better than haste with the probability of failure.

IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim. No. 649.

1 The fleetest the rider the greater the chance of stumbling.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 648. (c. 1050)

His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see, Did stumble with haste.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, ii, 237. (1595)

They stumble that run fast.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 3, 94. (1595)

Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 6, 15. (1595)

Haste trips up its own Heels.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1801. (1732)

He who hastens his steps stumbles on the smooth street. (Quien caminando lleva priesa | en camino llano tropieza.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 275. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

2 Foot-hoot, in his felonye.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, (c. 1240) Chaucer (?) tr., l. 3827. i. e. Hot-foot.

The mayster-hunt anoon, fot-hoot,
With a gret horne blewe three moot.

CHAUCEER, Book of the Duchesse, l. 375. (c. 1369)

3 Make haste to an ill way, that you may get out of it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 129. (1640)

Who hath no haste in his business, mountains to him seem valleys.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 995

4 Hast and wisdom things far od.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)

5 Toward your woorkyng (quote he) ye make such tastings,

As approue you to be none of the hastings.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

They are none of the hastings, who being slow and slack, go about business with no agility

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 243. (a. 1661)

A reference to the ancient family of Hastings. You are none of the Hastings; you'll not break your shins for haste.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 1114. (1681)

6 All haste comes from the devil. (Omnis festinatio est a Diabolo.)

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, 5 Sept., 1633.

A medieval Latin proverb. "Haste is of the devil" has been quoted as from the Koran, but is not to be found there.

Hurry comes from the devil, and slow advancing from Allah.

SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 83. (1812) Quoting a Turkish proverb, sometimes given, "Haste is of the devil; God works slowly."

Haste comes from the devil, leisure from God.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 363. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

7 Hasty people will never make good midwives.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

8 He that believeth shall not make haste. (Qui crediderit, non festinet.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 16. (c. 725 B. C.)

9 Seeing men in haste, do not seek to overtake them.

KANG-HSI, Sacred Edict. Sec. 2. (c. 400 B. C.)

10 He who advances hastily will retire quickly.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vii, pt. i, ch. 44. (c. 300 B. C.)

11 Freind, take heed,
Untymous spurring spills [spoils] the Steed.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae, p. 15. (c. 1580)

Untymous spurring spills the steed. That is, too much haste spoils business.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 343. (1721)

12 More quickly, stayed, shall I speed on. (Velo-cius ibo retentus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, No. 46. (c. A. D. 85)

His horse . . . taught him that "discreet stays make speedy journeys."

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. i, p. 63. (1580)

Sir Amyas Pawlet, when he saw too much haste made in any matter, was wont to say, "Stay a while, that we may make an end the sooner"

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. (1625) JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, 5 Sept., 1633, attributes the saying to Sir Francis Walsingham.

Stay till the lame messenger come, if you will know the truth of the thing.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 333.

(1640) Herbert also cites, "Stay a little, and the news will find you."

Stop a little, to make an End the sooner.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4263. (1732)

A wise man used to say, "Stay a little, that we may make an end the sooner."

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help, p. 271. (1859)

13 Too great haste leads us to error. (Le trop de promptitude à l'erreur nous expose.)

MOLIÈRE, Sganarelle. Sc. 12. (1660)

Error is always in haste.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1382. (1732)

In haste is error. (Many chung yu ts'o.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 89. (1875)

14 Haste gives itself the leg. (La hastiveté se donne elle mesme la jambe.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1595)

Haste gets in its own way.

15 Haste makes Work which Caution prevents.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 300. (1693)

1 In my haste to be done I am making less speed. (σπειδων γάρ ταχὺ πάντα διεξελθεῖν μάλλον βραδύνω.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. vii, sec. 528D. (c. 375 B. C.) See also Politics, 264B, where he speaks of the "proverbial penalty of making less speed because of too much haste." See also SOPHOCLES, Antigone, 231; THEOGNIS, 335, 401.

The faster you go the worse you are entangled. (Ipsa illos velocitas implicat.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 64) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 10. The French say, "Habille-toi lentement quand tu es pressé" (Dress slowly when you are in a hurry).

The more hast, the worse spede.

FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350) The earliest discovered use of the proverb in English. In frequent use thereafter.

The slowar pass, the further in rennyng;

The more I renne, the more wey I lese.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 75. (c. 1430) He that hasteth ouer faste, maketh an ende the later. (Qui nimium properat, serius absoluit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. v, No 60. (1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 48. (1550) Taver-ner adds, "Ouer muche in nothyng is com-mendable."

Soche persones, as do make moste hast in the beginning, haue commonly (accordyng to our Englishe prouerbe) worst spede toward the end-ying.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus, p. 41. (1542)

Most times he seeth, the more haste the lesse speede.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546) Early vp, and never the nere.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2.

When a man hath most haste, he speedeth worst.

UNKNOWN, Jacke Jugeler. (c. 1560) See HAZ-LITT, Old Plays, ii, 121.

The greater hurry, the worst speed.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus. Pt. i, canto i, l. 23. (1705)

The more haste the worse speed, quoth the tailor to his long thread.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 313. (1721)

Unhappily there is such a thing as more haste and less speed.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 15 Feb., 1829.

Raw Haste, half-sister to Delay.

TENNYSON, Love Thou Thy Land. (1832)

Motto, Maggiore fretta, minore atto. Got it out of a book—means the more haste the less speed.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 38. (1884)

Do nothing in a hurry. Nature never does. "Most haste, worst speed."

LORD AVEBURY, Use of Life. Ch. 12. (1894)

"The more haste, the worse speed." . . . When we remember that speed really meant success in Old English, the sense becomes "The more haste, the worst success," which is a perfectly wise and sensible saying.

W. W. SKEAT, A Student's Pastime, p. 79. (1896)

2 It disappeared in all directions as fast as poppy seeds thrown to ants. (Minus divorce distrahitur cito, | quam si tu obicias formicis papaverem.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 409. (c. 194 B. C.)

Lord Ronald . . . flung himself upon his horse and rode madly off in all directions.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, Nonsense Novels: Gertrude and Governess. (1911)

3 Who fastest walks, but walks astray,
Is only furthest from his way.

PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 196. (1718)

The more Haste we make in a wrong Way, the further we are from our Journey's End.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4661. (1732)

4 He that hasteth with his feet sinneth. (Qui festinus est pedibus, offendet.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 2. (c. 400 B. C.)

5 Nothing must be done hastily but killing of fleas.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 151. (1678)

Nothing to be done in haste, but gripping of fleas.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 261. (1721)

Do nothing hastily, but catching of Fleas.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1309. (1732)

Do nothing rashly, but kill fleas.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Derbicisms, p. 136. (c. 1791)

The Germans say, "Nichts mit Hast als Flöhe fangen"; the Dutch, "Geen ding met der haast dan vlooijen te vangen"; the Italians, "Mai si fa cosa ben in fretta, che il fuggir la peste e i rumori, e pigliar pulci" (Nothing is done well in haste except running from the plague and quarrels, and catching fleas).

6 Be not too hasty to outbid another.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1670)

Be not hasty to outbid another.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 853. (1732)

"Be not in a hurry to tie what you cannot untie."

7 It is better to walk and rest, than to run and be oppressed.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 6, Apologue 4. (c. 1258)

The mule goes slowly, but goes day and night.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 6, Apologue 4.

Moche rening maketh moche werinesse.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the

Philosophirs, fo. 48. (1477) Quoting Socrates

He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 1, 36. (1595)

8 Unless we hasten, we shall be left behind. (Nisi properamus, relinquemur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cviii, sec. 24.

(a. A. D. 64)

9 Celerity is never more admired
Than by the negligent.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 7. 25.

(1606)

This sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 1, 77. (1600)

<sup>1</sup>
Too hasty burnt his lips.
JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 519. (1623)

HAT

<sup>2</sup>
There are always bad hats in every family.
WALTER BESANT, Children of Gibeon. Bk. ii, ch. 32. (1884)

He's a more than usual thoroughgoing bad hat.
NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 246. (1940)

A bad hat, I suppose.
MICHAEL INNES, Appleby on Ararat, p. 107. (1941)

<sup>3</sup>
We could outdo his best efforts at the drop of a hat.

ANTHONY BOUCHER, The Case of the Seven Sneezes, p. 251. (1942)

<sup>4</sup>
One hat is worth more than a hundred bonnets. (Val più una beretta che cento scuffie.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 181. (1856) An Italian proverb

<sup>5</sup>
Ne knewe hem more than myn olde hat.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 320. (c. 1380)

<sup>6</sup>
Here's your hat, what's your hurry?
BARTLEY C. COSTELLO. Title and refrain of popular song. (1904) Quoted by ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 158. (1942)

<sup>7</sup>
They would say, "While my hat covers my family" . . . I have only one to feed.

CHARLES DICKENS, Hard Times, p. 141. (1854)
His hat had so long covered his family, that he hardly knew how to set about obtaining his own consent to marry.

R. S. SURTEES, Ask Mamma. Ch. 16. (1858)
His hat covers his family don't it?—He has no one belonging to him I ever heard of.

MRS. J. H. RIDDELL, Daisies and Buttercups, ii, 239. (1882)

[He] sat down, thanking the crown of his hat that it covered the whole of his domestic interests.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 40. (1894)

<sup>8</sup>
"Well, if I knew as little of life as that, I'd eat my hat and swallow the buckle whole," said the clerical gentleman.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 42. (1836)

If you don't run up against him next day . . . you may eat your hat.

MISS E. E. MONEY, A Little Dutch Maiden. Bk. ii, ch. 8, p. 148. (1887)

If he did that I'll eat my hat.

WALBRIDGE McCULLY, Doctors, Beware, p. 195. (1943)

<sup>9</sup>
Pull down your hat on the wind's side.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 336. (1640)

As the wind blows seek your beel. Advising us to make our interest as the times change.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 19. (1721)
Pull down thy Hat on the windy Side.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3978. (1732)

<sup>10</sup>
A hat is not made for one shower.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 675. (1640)

<sup>11</sup>
We are not fond of a new hat. There is a certain insolence about it.

LEIGH HUNT, The Indicator. No. 28. (1821)

<sup>12</sup>
Passing round the hat in Europe and America.

LOWELL, Among My Books. Ser.i.p.370.(1870)

Allow me to take round the hat.

FENN, Lady Maude's Mania. Ch. 30. (1890)

<sup>13</sup>
That is strictly under your hat.

ERNEST MCGAFFEY, Show-Girl, p. 127. (1908)

He says to keep it under my hat.

A. R. HILLIARD, Justice Be Damned, p.23.(1941)

I suggest that we keep this matter under our hats.

GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 51. (1942)

TO TALK THROUGH YOUR HAT, see under TALK.

<sup>14</sup>
Throw in his hat, and with a spring
Get gallantly within the ring.

JOHN HAMILTON REYNOLDS (PETER CORCORAN), The Fancy (1820)

My hat's in the ring. The fight is on and I'm stripped to the buff.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Newspaper Interview, at Cleveland, Ohio, 21 Feb., 1912.

<sup>15</sup>
He is fond of wearing a high hat. (Ai tai kao mao tzü.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1303. (1875) A conceited fellow.

Jack Conway's invention of "high hat," is as brilliant a synecdoche, or naming of the part for the whole, as any to be found in Shakespeare or the Bible.

MAX EASTMAN, Enjoyment of Laughter, p. 82. (1936)

<sup>16</sup>
Put your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 95. (1600)

A man's hat in his hand never did him any harm.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 266. (1710)

I live by pulling off the hat.

MATTHEW GREEN, On Barclay's Apology. (c. 1730)

<sup>17</sup>
My hat to a half-penny, Pompey proves the best Worthy.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 563. (1595)

Ne'er will be caught again, . . . you bet your hat on it.

ROBERT GRANT, Little Tin Gods, p. 6. (1879)

I'd bet my hat he's got money.

WILL N. HARBEN, Abner Daniel, p. 213. (1902)

1
Where did you get that hat?
Where did you get that tile?
Isn't it a nobby one,
And just the proper style?
JOSEPH J. SULLIVAN, Where Did You Get That Hat? A popular song, written in 1888. "All round my hat I wore a green ribbon" was the refrain of a popular song of c. 1830.

2
A man does not look the worse for a somewhat dilapidated hat. . . . Men wear their hats for use, women theirs for ornament.
H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 25 Dec., 1859.
It's the life of an old hat to cock it.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 490. (1940)

3
The man whose estate lies under his hat need never tremble before the frowns of fortune.
TROLLOPE, What I Remember, iii, 169. (1889)

4
She's knockt trade into a cockt up hat.
ARTEMUS WARD, The Crisis. (1860)
Would that we could do something at once dignified and effective to knock Mr. Bryan once for all into a cocked hat.
WOODROW WILSON, Letter to Adrian H. Joline, 29 April, 1907. Given to public by Joline in January, 1912. See Literary Digest, 20 Jan., 1912.

5
All good hats are made out of nothing.
OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 17. (1891)

HATCHET

6
Hang up thyn hachet and thi knyf.
CAMDEN, ed., Political Songs, p. 223. (c. 1320)
"To hang up one's hatchet," to cease from labor.
Hang up thin hachet and take thi reste.
UNKNOWN, Hymns to the Virgin, p. 69. (c. 1430)
When thou hast well done hang up thy hatchet.
RICHARD HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 140. (c. 1530)
I have hangd up my hatchet, God speede him well.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
I have hang'd up my hatchet and scap'd my self.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

7
Many . . . habituate themselves by degrees to a mode of the hatchet-flinging extreme.
GEORGE PARKER, Life's Painter. Ch. 12. (1780)
To make exaggerated statements.
The ladies titter, knowing, as we do, the skipper's habit of slinging the hatchet.
T. B. FOREMAN, Trip to Spain, p. 97. (1893)

8
Meeting with the Sachem they came to an agreement and buried two Axes in the Ground; . . . which ceremony to them is more significant and binding than all Articles of Peace, the Hatchet being a principal weapon.
SAMUEL SEWALL, in New England Historical Register, xxiv, 121 (1680)

They use . . . in concluding of peace . . . burying a Tomahawk.

ROBERT BEVERLEY, The History and Present State of Virginia, iii, 27. (1705)
They . . . have laid down the hatchet of war.
SHELDON, History of Deerfield, i, 415. (1724)
To use an Indian figure, may the hatchet henceforth be buried forever.

JOHN JAY, Correspondence and Public Papers, iv, 147. (1794)
If neither side will lay down the hatchet, your paths will always be red with blood.

ZEBULON PIKE, Sources of the Mississippi: Appendix, p. 7. (1805)
The chiefs met; the amicable pipe was smoked, the hatchet buried, and peace formally proclaimed.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Captain Bonneville's Adventures, iii, 219. (1837)
Gentle Reader, wouldst thou not have imagined that the war hatchet was buried for ever?
JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1796), iv, 485. (1794)
Buried was the bloody hatchet.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Song of Hiawatha. Pt. xiii, l. 7. (1855)
She and her husband had buried the hatchet.
W. E. NORRIS, Clarissa Furiosa. Ch. 43. (1897)
"Let us bury the hatchet," Lady Bugle wrote
LORD BERNERS, The Camel. Ch. 11. (c. 1930)
I suggested that we bury the hatchet. "Two bits says I know where you'd like to bury it," Sammy said—"in my head."

BUDD SCHULBERG, What Makes Sammy Run, p. 8. (1941)

9
Three Nations of French Indians . . . had taken up the Hatchet.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Journal, 1753.
I persuaded the Choktah to take up the bloody tomahawk.

JAMES ADAIR, The History of the American Indians, p. 239. (1775)

We will dig up the tomahawk, and be off on the war-trail.

HENRY KINGSLEY, Ravenshoe. Ch. 45. (1861)
A dreadful solitude surrounded our steps. . . .
"They must have dug up the hatchet," he said.
STEVENSON, Master of Ballantrae. Ch. 11. (1889)

HATE

See also Love and Hate

10
It does not matter much what a man hates provided he hates something.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books, p. 217. (c. 1880)

11
Hatred is a settled anger. (Odium ira inveterata.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iv, ch. 9, sec. 21. (45 B.C.)

Hatred is self-punishment.

HOSEA BALLOU, MS. Sermons. (c. 1825)

Hate, it is the anger of the weak. (La haine, c'est la colère des faibles!)

ALPHONSE DAUDET, Lettres de Mon Moulin: La Diligence de Beaucaire. (1869)

Hatred is the coward's revenge for being intimidated.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii. (1905)

1 Hate not at the first harm.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 235. (1639)

Hate at first sight.

R. W. EMERSON, Works and Days. (1870)

2 Hatred is like fire—it makes even light rubbish deadly.

GEORGE ELIOT, Janet's Repentance. (1857)

Hating people is like burning down your own house to get rid of a rat.

HARRY E. FOSDICK, The Wages of Hate (c.1930)

3 Everybody hates me. (πάντες με μισοῦσιν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses, i, 18, 19. (c. A. D. 100)

4 What so dreadful as celestial hate! (χαλεπὴ δὲ θεοῦ ἔπι μῆνις.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 178. (c. 850 B. C.) Pope, tr., l. 227.

Can heavenly natures nourish hate,
So fierce, so blindly passionate?

(Tantaene animis caelestibus irae?)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 11. (19 B. C.) Conington, tr.

Unimaginable as hate in Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 54. (1667)

Can so much gall find place in godly souls?
(Tant de fiel entre-t-il dans l'âme des dévôts?)

NICOLAS BOILEAU, Le Lutrin. (1674)

And hated, with the gall of gentle souls.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh, i, 341. (1856)

5 The sad hate the merry; the merry hate the sad;

The swift hate the slow; the lazy hate the brisk.

(Oderunt hilarem tristes tristemque iocosi.
Sedatum celeres, agilem navumque remissi.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 89. (20 B. C.)

All men naturally hate each other. (Tous les hommes se haïssent naturellement.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, art. xvii, No. 97. (c. 1660)

He hated a fool, and he hated a rogue, and he hated a whig. He was a very good hater.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to Earl Bathurst.

(c. 1775) PIOZZI, Anecdotes of Johnson, p. 83.

I like a good hater.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (PIOZZI, Anecdotes, p. 89.)

She hated easily; she hated heartily; and she hated implacably.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 15. (1855)

A violent hater of the old Dutch school.

JOHN RUSKIN, Praeterita. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1887)

6 After hate cometh loue.

LAYAMON, Brut, l. 8322. (c. 1725) See LOVE AND HATE.

7 Hatred is gained as much by good works as by evil. (L'odio s'acquista così mediante le buone opere, come le triste.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 19. (1513)

8 Rich men regard anger as a kind of profit: to hate is cheaper than to give. (Odisse quam donare vilius constant.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, No. 13. (A. D. 103)

Picking quarrels with friends saves giving them presents.

9 What a man hateth, the same thing he takes to heart. (Ce qu'on hait, on le prend à cœur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 50. (1580)

10 I hate them with perfect hatred. (Perfecto odio oderam illos.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxix, 22. (c.250 B. C.)

You hated her like a snake. (Te odisse aequae atque anguis.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 761. (c. 200 B. C.)

He hateth me lyke poison.

JEHAN PALSgrave, La Langue Françoyse, p. 579. (1530)

I do hate him as I hate the devil.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour. Act i. sc. 1. (1599)

I do hate him as I do hell-pains.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 1, 155. (1604)

He loves no beef that grows on my bones. He hates me vehemently.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 157. (1721)

I hate him worse than poison.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 9. (1839)

You hate it like a cat hates pepper.

JAKE FALSTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 75. (1938)

She hates my guts.

CHENEY, Farewell to the Admiral. p. 189. (1943)

11 Take care that no one hates you justly. (Id agas tuo te merito ne quis oderit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 325. (c.43 B. C.)

12 To offend is my pleasure; I love to be hated. (Déplaîre est mon plaisir; j'aime qu'on me haïsse.)

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act ii, sc. 8. (1898)

13 Men hate those whom they have injured.

SENECA, De Ira, ii, 33. See under INJURY

14 Hatred openly proclaimed loses its chance for vengeance. (Professa perdunt odia vindictae locum.)

SENECA, Medea. l. 154. (c. A. D. 60)

The greatest hatred, like the greatest virtue and the worst dogs, is silent. (Der grösste Hass ist, wie die grösste Tugend und die schlimmsten Hunde, still.)

JOHANN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus. Ch. 12. (1792)

15 Cherish those hearts that hate thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 443. (1612)

16 The hatred of relatives is the most violent. (Acerrima proximorum odia.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iv, sec. 70. (c. A. D. 109)

1 Hatred is heavier freight for the shipper than it is for the consignee.

AUGUSTUS THOMAS, The Witching Hour Act iv. (1907)

Hatreds, like chickens, come home to roost.

JOSEPH SHEARING, Blanche Fury, p. 84. (1939)

2 The hated man seldom ends well.

UNKNOWN, The Owl and the Nightingale, l. 942. (c. 1240)

He who is hated by all cannot expect to live long. (Qui vit haï de tous ne saurait longtemps vivre.)

CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act i, sc. 2. (1640)

II—Hate and Fear

3 Let them hate, so long as they fear. (Oderint dum metuant.)

ACCIIUS, Atreus. Frag. 168, Loeb. (c. 140 B.C.)

A favorite maxim of Caligula. See SUETONIUS, Twelve Caesars: Caligula, ch. 30, sec. 1. Quoted by CICERO, Pro Roscio, sec. 48, and Philippicae, i, sec. 14, as an ancient saying. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ix, 52. Suetonius, in his life of Tiberius, quotes as a favorite saying of Tiberius, "Oderint, dum probent" (Let them hate me, provided they respect me).

The famous words, "Let them hate if only they fear," are so dread and shocking that you might know they were written in the times of Sulla. (Oderint, dum metuant.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 55) Seneca quotes this sentence again in De Clementia, i, 12, 4, and ii, 2, 2.

Least of all could he subscribe to the saying: "Oderint dum metuant."

JULES ROMAINS, Verdun, p. 80. (1940)

4 Whom men fear they hate, and whom they hate, they wish dead. (Quem metuunt odierunt, quem quisque odit periisse expetit.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Thyestes. Frag. 410, Loeb. (c. 180 B.C.) See CICERO, De Officiis, ii, 7, 23.

In time we hate that which we often fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 3, 12. (1606)

Those who are fear'd, are hated.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

HAVE

5 We can't have everything at the same time. (Non possunt omnia simul.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xiv, epis. 15. (44 B.C.) One can't have everything.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 19. (1910)

6 In wealth men differ: some have, some have not. (χρήμασιν δὲ διάφοροι | ἔχουσιν, οἱ δ' οὐ.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 636. (c. 420 B.C.)

There are only two families in the world, the Have's and the Haven't's. (Dos linajes solos hay en el mundo, el tener y el no tener.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 20. (1615)

The rich and the poor—the have-nots and the haves.

LORD LYTON, Athens. Ch. 1. (1837)

These two parties still divide the world—Of those that want and those that have.

TENNYSON, Walking to the Mail, l. 69. (1842) The have's and the have-not's were always face to face, ready to shoot down or to rush in.

W. F. BUTLER, Autobiography. Ch. 9. (1911)

I was born a have-not and I'm going to be a have.

HULBERT FOOTNER, Murderer's Vanity, p. 33. (1940)

Down with the ups and up with the downs.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly, p. 50. (1940)

7 Have at it and have it. One might add many capital English proverbs of this kind, all so characteristic of the activity and boldness of our forefathers.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius: The World We Live In. (1852) See also under BOLDNESS

8 Hold fast whan ye haue it.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546) As to haue is good happ, so to hould fast is a great vertue.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. F1. (1583) Hold fast while you have it.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 233. (1639)

Then rang, clear and distinct, Humphry Chetham's motto—"Quod tuum tene!" (What you have, hold!)

MRS. LINNAEUS BANKS, Manchester Man Ch 10. (1876)

9 Better to have than wish.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Better to have than to heare of a good thing

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 256 (1639)

Better keep now than seek anon.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

10 The opposition between the men who have and the men who are is immemorial.

WILLIAM JAMES, The Varieties of Religious Experience. Ch. 11. (1902)

11 To habben and to holden.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text A. passus ii, l. 70. (1362)

He gaffe hym his syster Achefflour, To have and to holde.

UNKNOWN, Sir Perceval, 24. (c. 1395)

My wedded wife, to have and to hold from this day forward.

Book of Common Prayer: Matrimony. (1549)

Now I come to the Habendum, to haue and to holde.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Phoenix. Act ii. sc 2. (1607)

The clause beginning "to have and to hold" is the habendum et tenendum combined.

ELPHINSTONE, Conveyancing, p. 100. (1884)

12 It is the Way of Heaven to take from those who have too much, and give to those who have too little. But the way of man is not so. He takes away from those who have too little, to add to his own superabundance.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 77. (c. 450 B. C.) Giles, tr.

How unfair it is that those who have less are always adding to the possessions of those who have more. (Quam inique comparatumst, ei qui minus habent | ut semper aliquid addant ditioribus.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 41. (161 B. C.)

Unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath. (τῷ γὰρ ἔχοντι παντὶ δοθήσεται καὶ περισσούθησεται τοῦ δὲ μὴ ἔχοντος καὶ ὃ ἔχει ἀρῶθησεται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 29. (c. A. D. 50)

Mark, iv, 25. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Omni enim habenti dabitur, et abundabit: ei autem, qui non habet, et quod videtur habere, auferetur ab eo."

For the empty are empty things, and for the full are the full things.

Apocrypha: II Esdras, vii, 25. (c. A. D. 90)

If you are poor now, Aemilius, you will always be poor. Wealth is given today to none save the rich. (Semper pauper eris, si pauper es, Aemiliane. Dantur opes nullis nunc nisi divitibus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 81. (c. A. D. 90)

As sayth this sentence, oft and long sayd before, He that hath plentie of goodes shall haue more, He that hath but a little, he shall haue lesse, He that hath right nought, right nought shall possesse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. xi. (1562)

For now a few have all, and all have nought.

EDMUND SPENSER, Mother Hubberd's Tale, l. 141. (1591)

We give to the rich and take from the poor

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

All strive to give to the rich Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 544. (1732)

The French say, "Tout va à qui n'a pas besoin" (Everything goes to him who needs nothing).

To him that has, there shall be added more; Who is penurious, he shall still be poore.

ROBERT HERRICK, Once Poore, Still Penurious. (1648)

He that has a goose, will get a goose.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 132. (1721)

To him that hath much, shall much be given. (Cui sunt multa bona, huic dantur plurima dona.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 67. (1859) "Every one bastes the fat hog."

By right or wrong, Lands and goods go to the strong.

Property will brutally draw

Still to the proprietor;

Silver to silver creep and wind,

And kind to kind.

R. W. EMERSON, The Celestial Love. (1867)

Them ez hez, gits.

E. R. SILL, A Baker's Duzzen uv Wise Sawz. (a. 1887)

Breathing strange saws, saying: "From him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." Which is the same as to say: "Nothing from nothing leaves nothing."

O. HENRY, The Unprofitable Servant. (1911)

1 That's a dismal word, the very worst of words, "had," when one has nothing. (Miserum istuc verbum et pessimum est, habuisse, et nihil habere.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1321. (c. 200 B. C.) The Germans say, "Habe gehabt ist ein armer Mann" ("I have had" is a poor man). There is a Latin proverb, "Tanti quantum habeas sis" (According to what you have is your value), not according to what you have had.

To have may be taken from us, to have had, never. (Habere erepitur, habuisse numquam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 64)

2 She's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 3, 145. (1597)

One had better sometimes play with a good gamester than a bungler, for one knowes not where to have him.

UNKNOWN, Shuffling, Cutting and Dealing, p. 6. (1659)

Women are all hypocrites alike. You never know when you have them.

MRS. OLIPHANT, The Marriage of Elinor Bk ii, ch. 20. (1892)

3 Have is have, however men do catch.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, i, 1, 173. (1596)

Learn this of me: to have, is to have.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, v, 1, 44. (1600)

4 He has it! (Hoc habet.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 296. (19 B. C.) The deathblow. The expression used by spectators when a gladiator was struck.

He has it! The deed is done! (Habet! peractum est!)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 901. (c. A. D. 60)

They have made worms' meat of me: I have it, And soundly too.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 112. (1595)

When one gladiator wounded another, he shouted "he has it," "hoc habet," or "habet."

BYRON, Childe Harold: Notes, iv, 142. (1816)

I ups . . . and let one Injun have it.

RUXTON, Life in the Far West, p. 8. (1848)

If she catches him she'll let him have it hot.

LUCAS MALET, The Wages of Sin, ii, 102. (1891)

I shall let her have it, you'll see.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, David Grieve, iv, 1. (1892)

5 Using and enjoying is the true having.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral and Religious Aphorisms. (1753)

Do well and have well, see under DEED.

HAWK

- 1
Like a semidormant, and semivigilant, betwixt hawke and buzzard.
RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Barnabees Journal, sig.
M2. (1638)
A fantastical levity that holds us off and on, betwixt hawk and buzzard, as we say.
SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Aesop's Fables. No. 352.
(1692)
I entered Richmond between hawk and buzzard.
J. P. KENNEDY, Swallow Barn, p. 17. (1832) At twilight.
Between a hawk and a buzzard; in a state of perplexity and indecision.
ANNE BAKER, Northants Glossary: Buzzard.
(1854)
- 2
With empty hand men may na haukes tulle.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reve's Tale,
l. 214. (c. 1386) Repeated in The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 415, with "lure" instead of "tulle."
For empty fystes, men vse to say, cannot the Hawke retayne.
HUGH RHODES, The Boke of Nurture, 740. (c.
1530)
- 3
High flying hawks are fit for princes.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 41. (1639)
Cited by both Ray and Fuller.
- 4
The gentle hawk half mans herself. (Oiseau débonnaire de lui-même se fait.)
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Débonnaire.
(1611) i. e. becomes tractable.
The gentle hawk mans herself.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)
- 5
He has been out Hawking for Butterflies.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1863. (1732)
He's a Hawk of the right Nest.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2439.
Our Ancestors grew not great by Hawking and Hunting.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3817.
By Hawk and by Hound small Profit is found.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6339.
- 6
This have I herd ofte in seying,
That man [ne]may, for no daunting,
Make a sperhauke of a bosarde.
(Ce oi dire en reprovier,
Ne l'en ne puet faire esprevier
En nule guise de busart.)
GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, l.
3701. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 4031. (c.
1365) The modern French proverb is, "On ne saurait faire d'une buse un épervier."
Nultow never, late ne skete
A goshawk maken of a Kete,
No faucon mak[en] of busard,
No hardy knyht mak of coward.
UNKNOWN, Kyng Alisaunder, l. 3047. (c. 1300)
- A carreine kite will neuer bee good hawke.
SAINLIENS, Frenche Littleton. (1566)
It is impossible of a kyte or cormerant to make a good sparhawk.
PAINTER, Pallace of Pleasure, iii, 68. (1567)
A Bytter wyl neuer be good hauke. (Vn Auolior non sara mai bon sparauiere.)
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)
A Carron Kyte will never be a good Hawk.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 316. (1605)
Seldom doth a good hawk come out of a kite's egg.
WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 39. (1820)
- 7
The first point of hauking is holde fast.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
RAY, Proverbs, p. 10. (1678)
If thou hadst learned the first point of hauking.
thou wouldst haue learned to haue held fast
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 93. (1579)
'Tis the first point of falconry to hold fast.
JOHN WILSON, The Projectors. Act ii, sc. 1.
(1665)
Hold fast is the first Point in Hawking.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2520. (1732)
- 8
She hath one poynt of a good hauke. she is hardie.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
- 9
We hate the hawk because he always lives in arms. (Odimus accipitrem quia semper vivit in armis.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 147. (c. 1 b. c.)
- 10
As the hawk is wont to pursue the frightened doves. (Ut solet accipiter trepidas urgere columbas.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. v, l. 606. (A. D. 7)
- 11
The haughty Hauke will not pray on carrion.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 21. (1576)
- 12
One crowe neuer pulleth out an others eyes.
JAMES SANFORD, tr., Hours of Recreation, p.
210. (1572)
Hawks winna pike out hawks' een.
WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 30. (1818)
Hawks do not peck out hawks een.
JAMES PAYN, Thicker than Water. Ch. 4. (1883)
- 13
I know a hawk from a handsaw.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 397. (1600)
He can't discern a hare from a brake-bush.
THOMAS PECKE, Parnassi Puerperium, p. 143.
(1659)
Tis either a hare or a brake-bush. γλοῖον ἢ κυνή.
Aut navis aut galerus. Something, if you knew what.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 179. (1670)
Either the tod [fox] or the bracken bush.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 97. (1721)
As different from . . . modern Popery, as a hawk from a handspike.
G. S. FABER, Letters on Tractarian Secession,
p. 171. (1846)

HAY

- 1
Make not orts [leavings] of good hay.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 262. (1639)
Hee hath oft made orts of better hay.
UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS., iii, 29. (1639)
To make orts of good hay.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 188. (1670)
Make no Orts of good Hay.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3317. (1732)
- 2
His boat's crew was a pretty raw set . . .
and, as the sailor's phrase is, "hadn't got the hayseed out of their hair."
R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch.
5. (1840)
It takes some of our young men from the country a good while to get the hay-seed out of their hair.
SYLVESTER JUDD, Richard Edney. Ch. 15. (1850)
The mistake of supposing that I could convert a thoroughbred New Yorker into a contented
Hayseed by main force.
AUGUSTIN DALY, A Test Case, p. 75. (1892)
I'll stop these hayseeds.
FRANK NORRIS, The Pit. Ch. 9. (1902)
He thought she was a hayseed.
SINCLAIR LEWIS, Main Street, p. 211. (1920)
- 3
Between hay and grass, in an unformed state;
hobble-de-hoy.
J. M. DIXON, Idiomatic English Phrases: Between. (1891) See under GRASS.
- 4
Why I am not in the hay
Instead of here, I cannot say.
MARGARET FISHBACK, How About an Aspirin?
(1940)
WOMAN'S PLACE IS IN THE HAY, see under WOMAN.
- 5
Whan the sunne shinth make hay: whiche is to say,
Take time whan time comth, lest time steale
awaie.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)
The Germans say, "Man muss Heu machen, weil die Sonne scheint," or "Wärme dich weil das Feuer brennt" (Warm yourself while the fire burns); the Hindus, "Turn the mill while there is sugarcane," or "Winnow while there is wind," the Arabs, "Be like the ant in the days of summer." There are many other variations. See OPPORTUNITY, and STRIKE WHILE THE IRON IS HOT, under IRON.
Yt is well, therefore, to make hay while the sunne shines, when winde is at will to hoist vp saile.
MELBANCKE, Philotimus, p. 24. (1583)
The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay,
Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iv, 7, 61. (1591)
He, drawing out one handful of gold, and another of siluer, cryed, . . . I haue made hay whilst my sunne shined.
THOMAS DEKKER, Works, iv, 308. (1625)
Make hay while Sun shines.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 328. (1636)

- It is good to make Hay while the Sun shines.
DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 181. (1709)
Get in your hay while the sun shines.
DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 24. (1843)
Make hay while the sun shines, is truly English, and could have had its birth only under such variable skies as ours.
R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch.
2, p. 49. (1852)
We must lose no time; we must make our hay while shines the sun.
CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 63. (1860)
They were making hay while the sun shone.
LORD DUNSANY, The Two Bottles of Relish
(1926)
Best make talk while the electricity shines.
MICHAEL INNES, Appleby on Ararat, p. 164.
(1941)
- 6
He has hay on his horns, give him a wide berth! (Faenum habet in cornu: longe fuge!)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 34. (35 B.C.)
A proverb cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 81, and many others. It alludes to the custom of tying wisps of hay to the horns of vicious oxen in order to warn people away from them. "His est niger, caveto" (This is a dangerous fellow, look out for him), was another.
She was (as they say) horne mad.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)
Sure my master is horn-mad.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 57. (1592) See also Much Ado about Nothing, i, 1, 280, and Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 4, 51.
A sharp thorny-toothed satirical rascal, fly him;
he carries hay in his horn.
JONSON, Poetaster. Act iv, sc. 3. (1601)
Lust ha's no eares; He's sharpe as thorn;
And fretfull, carries Hay in's horne.
ROBERT HERRICK, Oberon's Palace. (1648)
Horace . . . compares one who attacks his friends
. . . to a pushing ox, that is marked by a bunch of hay put upon his horns: Faenum habet in cornu.
BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 6 Oct., 1769.
- 7
Methinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
iv, l. 34. (1596)
Sick of the mulligrubs with eating chopped hay
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 56. (1678)
It goes down like chopt hay.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 235. (1678)
'Twill go down like chopt hay.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
- 8
Hay is for horses.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
- 9
Hanged hay never does [fattens] cattle.
WILBRAHAM, Cheshire Glossary, p. 33. (1836)
Hanged hay is hay that has been weighed or hung on the steel yard [i. e. bought hay].
J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 64. (1917)

HEAD

See also Heart and Head

1 Round-heads and wooden-shoes are standing-jokes.

ADDISON, The Drummer: Prologue. (1715)

2 He carries an old mind with a youthful body.
(γέροντα τὸν νοῦν, σάρκα δ' ἠβώσαν φέει.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 622. (467 B. C.)

Young in limbs, in judgement old.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 71. (1597)

I never knew so young a body with so old a head.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 163. (1597)

You set an old mans head on a young mans shoulders.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 7. (1639)

Old head and young hands.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347. (1678)

There is no putting an old head on young shoulders.

UNKNOWN, First Floor. Act ii, sc. 1. (c. 1780)

As the proverb says, a grey head is often placed on green shoulders.

UNKNOWN, Intrigues of a Day, iii, 3. (1814)

You appear to have an old head upon very young shoulders.

MARRYAT, Percival Keene. Ch. 19. (1842)

You should not expect to find old heads upon young shoulders.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 11. (1850)

Nature is full of freaks, and now puts an old head on young shoulders, and then a young heart beating under fourscore winters.

R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age. (1870)

Old heads on young shoulders have many laughs at young heads on old shoulders.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 98. (1940)

3 Touch a hair of that white head, and I'll wring your neck off.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night viii, p. 158. (1854)

"Who touches a hair of yon gray head

Dies like a dog! March on!" he said.

J. G. WHITTIER, Barbara Frietchie. (1864)

4 The head follows the body.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 41a. (c. 450)

And a comment on this (Gen. R., c. 9): "If the body is taken away, of what use is the head?" The welfare of the upper classes depends upon that of the lower.

A head without a body is as useless as a body without a head.

SIMEON ASHKENAZI (?), Yalkut Vichi, 162 (c. 1250)

Samson with his strong body, had a weak Head, or he would not have laid it in a harlot's lap.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756

5

It flies too high over Mens Heads.

FRANCIS BACON, Holy Warre: Dedication. (1622)
Talking over the heads of the company.

LYTTON, Ernest Maltravers, p. 111. (1837)

[He] quickly became cognizant that his wife was over his head.

HAWLEY SMART, Outsider. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1886)

6

Your head will never fill your pocket.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 582. (1855)

7

Thy heed'll nivver saav thy legs. [Your head will never save your legs.]

CARR, Dialect of Craven, i, 216. (1828)

You'd ought to . . . learnt her head to save her heels.

SARAH O. JEWETT, Life of Nancy, p. 253. (1895)

8

Into the mud over head and heels. (In lutum per caputque pedesque.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode xvii, l. 9. (c. 57 B. C.)

He souces him in the water over heed and eares.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 725/2. (1530)

And Gyb, our cat, in the milke pan she spied over head and eares.

JOHN STILL (?), Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act i, sc. 3. (c. 1565)

Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd one!

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, i, 2, 185. (1610)

He is in debt over head and ears.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 434. (1681) See under DEBT.

Over head and ears in love with some lady.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The plunge [into love] must have been very sudden, if you are already over head and ears.

T. L. PEACOCK, Crotchet Castle. Ch. 16. (1831)

I am over head and ears in love with somebody else.

W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act ii. (1889)

HEELS OVER HEAD, see HEEL.

9

Namooore up payne of lesing of youre heed.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knight's Tale, l. 849. (c. 1386)

Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 4, 242. (1592)

The gravest citizen seems to lose his head.

TENNYSON, Princess: Conclusion, l. 59. (1847)

It has now and then an odd Gallicism—such as "she lost her head," meaning she grew crazy.

E. A. POE, Marginalia, lxxiv. (c. 1840)

10

That they had ofte, for the nones,

Two hedes in one hood at ones.

CHAUCER (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 7387. (c. 1365) From RABELAIS, "Ils mirent quatre testes en un chaperon" (They put four heads in one hood), i. e. they unite the intelligences of four persons.

The watyr foulis han here hedis leid Togedere.

CHAUCER, Parlement of Foules, l. 554. (1382)

Nay let vs our heddес togyder cast.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 572. (1526)

They will laye theyr heddes together and conspire.

ROBINSON, tr., More's Utopia. Ch. 1. (1551)
Lay their heads together and consult.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Holy War, p. 122. (1682)
We'll put heads together and consider what is to be done.

S. BARING-GOULD, Court Royal, i, 1. (1886)

1
He that has no head needs no hood. (Qui n'a point de teste n'a que faire de chaperon.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chaperon. (1611)

He that hath no head needs no hat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 101. (1670)

He that hath no head deserves not a laced hat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2145. (1732)

The Germans say, "Wer keinen Kopf hat, braucht keinen Hut"; the Italians, "A chi ha testa, non manca capello" (He who has a head will not lack a hat), the English form of which is, "A good head will get itself hats."

2
[He] had a contempt for those . . . who had not "their head screwed on the right way."

MANDELL CREIGHTON, Life and Letters. Ch. 1. (1843)

3
It came from you, and not out of my own head.

DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Pt. ii, ch. 12. (1719)

Were not all these answers given out of his own head?

JOWETT, Dialogues of Plato, i, 288. (1875)

4
It's my old girl that advises. She has the head.

CHARLES DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 27. (1852)

5
Scarce their heads above ground they could keep.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Moon-Calf. (1627)

I have almost drowned myself to keep his head above water.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, iv, 1. (1712)

If I can hold my head above water, it is all I can.

HENRY FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch.

13. (1742) To avoid ruin by a continual struggle.

Carry me discreetly through the world, and keep my head above water.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. v, ch. 1. (1809)

I'm . . . just able by the greatest caution and prudence to keep my head above water.

R. S. SURTEES, Plain or Ring? Ch. 39. (1860)

[He] has promised to keep our heads above water.

TENNYSON, Promise of May. Act iii, l. 165. (1886)

6
Long-headed, wise, of great reach and foresight.

B.E., Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Long-headed. (c. 1695)

He had a long head as well as a fanciful brain.

MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. ix, ch. 8. (1809)

Madame . . . was a woman that the Scotch would call long-headed.

MADAME D'ARLAY, Diary, iv, 301. (1815)

Men of the world, long-headed customers, knowing dogs, shrewd fellows.

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 66. (1840)

The little fellow has a long head—a very long head; and it's as thick as it is long.

ROBERT HENRY NEWELL (ORPHEUS C. KERR), Orpheus C. Kerr Papers. No. 1. (1862)

Mr. Lincoln is a long-headed and long-purposed man.

J. R. LOWELL, McClellan or Lincoln? (1864)

7
At last, being past the mystery of his traunce, he repaired to his house, with his head full of proclamacions.

SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello, ii, 146. (1567)

Avoir des moucherons en teste. To be humorous, moodie, giddie-pated; or to have many proclamations or crotchets in the head.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Moucheron. (1611)

His head is full of proclamations, much taken up to little purpose.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. 18. (1690)

8
The poet . . . squibs each jacobinick sap-head.

T. G. FESSENDEN, Original Poems, p. 44. (1798)

They're all a pack of d——d swell-heads.

J. J. COOPER, Simon Suggs' Adventures. Ch. 4. (1845)

You don't seem to know anything somehow—perfect saphead.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 3. (1884)

9
A scalde [scabby] mannys hede is lefe [easy] to breke.

FÖRSTER, ed., Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350)

Frangitur ex facile caput infantis glabriori—A scallyd mannys hed ys good to be broke.

UNKNOWN, Harleian MS., 3362. (c. 1470)

A skalde manis hede is sone brokyn.

RICHARD HILLS, Commonplace-Book, p. 130. (1500)

A scalde head is soon broken.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

MERES, Palladis Tamia, fo. 302. (1598)

BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, ii, vi, 2.

(1621) MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

A scal'd head is eith [easy] to bleed.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 11. (1721)

"A thing that was but tender before will easily be put out of order."

10
One good Head is better than a hundred strong Hands.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3753. (1732)

Your Head's so hot that your Brains bubble over.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6050.

11
And still they gaz'd, and still the wonder grew
That one small head could carry all he knew

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 215

(1770) The French say, "En petit tête git grand sens" (In a little head may lie great learning). But there is an English proverb.

"One head cannot hold all wisdom."

12
Libertie looseth the reynes, and geues you head.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, p. 24. (1579)

Sir, give him head: I know he'll prove a jade.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 2, 249. (1594)

With that he gave his able horse the head.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 1, 43. (1598)

What a Fool have I been to give him his Head so long.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tender Husband. Act i, sc. 1. (1703)

He had yielded so far to the necessities of the case as to give the Lady Jane her head.

MRS. LYNN LINTON, Paston Carew. Ch. 34. (1886)

She let him have his head for a bit.

BESANT, Children of Gibeon, iii, 148. (1886)

1 One who has a head of glass should never engage in throwing stones.

FRANCIS GROSE, The Olio, p. 281. (1793)

THOSE WHO LIVE IN GLASS HOUSES, see HOUSE.

2 Hir heed for-hoor was, whyt as flour.

GUILIAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose (c. 1240) Chaucer (?) tr., l. 356. (c. 1365)

An head that's white to maids is no delight

UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS., iii, 30. (1639) See also under HAIR: GRAY.

3 The Duke of Exceter . . . was there made shorter by a head.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, fo. 166b. (1548)

Off with his guilty head!

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 5, 3. (1591)

Your great goodness, out of holy pity,

Absolved him with an axe.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 263. (1612)

Off with his head; so much for Buckingham!

COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (alt.), iv, 3. (1700)

The Queen . . . began screaming "Off with her head! Off with . . ." "Nonsense!" said Alice, very loudly and decidedly, and the Queen was silent.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 8. (1865)

4 And, if a member don't agree with his peculiar whim,

To lay for that same member for to "put a head" on him.

BRET HARTE, The Society Upon the Stanislaus. (1871)

5 A forgetful head makes a weary pair of heels.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1869)

An older form is, "A witless head makes weary feet."

6 Be not a Baker, if your head be of butter.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 322. (1640)

Don't turn Baker, if your Head be of Butter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1321. (1732)

He who has a head of butter, should not come near the oven. (Die een hooft van boter heeft, moet bij geen' oven komen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 295. (1856) A Flemish proverb. The Spanish form is, "No seas hornéra si teneis la cabeza de manteca."

7 He that hath a head of wax, must not walk in the sun.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 427. (1640)

If your head is wax, don't walk in the sun.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

The Italians say, "Chi ha capo di cera non vada al sole"; the French, "Qui a tête de cire ne doit pas s'approcher du feu" (He who has a head of wax should not come near the fire).

8 An idle head is a box for the wind.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 653. (1640)

9 Thy head is great . . . and without wit within.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Epigrams. Cent. vi, No. 56. (1562)

Meikle head, little wit.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 78. (c. 1595)

Great head and small necke is the beginning of a gecke [fool].

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, 518. (1623)

Great head and little wit.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 17. (1633)

Cited by both Ray and Fuller. The Italians say, "Capo grasso, cervello magro" (Fat head, lean brain); the Scots, "Muckle head, little art."

Such as take lodgings in a head

That's to be let unfurnished.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. i, canto i, l. 161. (1663) See also under MIND.

10 So many heds so many wits.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546) See under OPINION.

11 Then haue ye his head fast vnder your gyrdell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

You have him at your mercy.

I list not ha' my head fastened under my child's girdle.

CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 2. (1605)

I will not doe so meane a fellow such honour, as to . . . put my neck under his girdle.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian, sig. Q3. (1642)

I am a man little inclined to put my head under my wife's girdle.

SCOTT, Anne of Geierstein. Ch. 25. (1829)

12 Breake my heade, and than geue me a plaster.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

13 "Shut up your head," roared John.

MARY J. HOLMES, Lena Rivers. Ch. 35. (1856)

Specimen Jones told them all to shut their heads.

OWEN WISTER, The General's Bluff. In Harper's Magazine, Sept., 1894, p. 511/2.

He never opens his head to nobody.

H. H. JACKSON, Zeph, p. 44. (1885)

He hardly opened his head for the whole twenty-one miles.

MARGARET DELAND, Old Chester Tales, p. 307. (1898)

1 When two go together, one discerneth before the other how profit may be had; whereas if one alone perceive aught, yet is his wit the shorter, and but slender his device. (σύν τε δὴ ἐρχομένῳ, καὶ τε πρὸ δ τοῦ ἐνόησεν | δῆκως κέρδος ἔη.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 225. (c. 850 B. C.) Quoted by PLATO, Protagoras, 348D; Symposium, 174D; and by CICERO, Ad Familiares, ix, 7.

If you will attend to me, two together will be searching, and so mayhap we shall find what we seek. (σύν τε δύο σκεπτομένῳ τυχὸν εὐρήσομεν.)

PLATO, II Alcibiades, sec. 140A. (c. 375 B. C.)

Two good men are better than one. (τοῦ δὲ ἐνὸς οἱ δύο ἀγαθοὶ βελτίους.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. iii, ch. 11, sec. 7. (c. 330 B. C.) Aristotle says this is the meaning of Homer's line given above. The corollary is, of course, that two bad men are worse than one.

Two have more wit than one.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis, i, 1020. (c. 1390) Two wyttes be farre better than one. (Deux avis valent mieux qu'un.)

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 594. (1530)

Two heddis are better then one.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

A proverb in many languages.

This olde sayinge, Twoc wyttys (or moe) to bee better then one.

SIR WILLIAM FORREST, The Second Gresield, p. 51. (1558) PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 110. (1576)

Two is better than one head.

SPENSER, Mother Hubberds Tale, l. 82. (1591)

Two wits is better nor ane.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 96. (c. 1595)

Many heads are better than one.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 247. (1721)

Two Heads are better than one, quoth the Woman, when she had her Dog with her to the Market.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5331. (1732)

Two heads are better than one, if only sheep's heads.

Cornish Proverbs, in Notes and Queries. Ser. iii, vi, 494. (1864) Cited by NORTHALL, Folk-phrases, p. 32. (1894) with the comment, "A sheep's head in folk figure, means a daft or unreasoning head."

I have a feeling that two heads will be better than one.

BENTLEY, Trent's Last Case. Ch. 14. (1930)

One man sees short, two men see long.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 376. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

TWO EYES CAN SEE MORE THAN ONE, see under EYE.

2

From his head to the very soles of his feet. (ἐκ κεφαλῆς ἐς πόδας ἀκρῶς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 640. (c. 850 B. C.)

To feet from head. (ἐς πόδας ἐκ κεφαλῆς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 353. (c. 850 B. C.)

From the feet to the head. (ἐκ τῶν ποδῶν ἐς τὴν κεφαλὴν.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 650. (388 B. C.)

Your discourse is a puzzle from head to foot. (Quin nec caput nec pes sermoni apparet.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 729. (c. 200 B. C.)

From her little finger-tips to the topmost hair of her head. (Usque ab unguiculo ad capillum summum.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 623. (c. 200 B. C.)

Fro the croune til the to.

UNKNOWN, The Lay of Havelok the Dane, l. 1847. (c. 1300)

Ffro the sole of the ffoot to the hyest ascencion.

UNKNOWN, Coventry Mysteries, p. 241. (1468)

From head to foot. (A capite usque ad calcem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 37. (1508)

From the top of his head to the bottom of his milt. (Depuis le sommet de la teste iusques au fond de la ratelle.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 29. (1532)

From the crown of his head to the sole of his foot.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 2,

9. (1598) THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Mad World,

My Masters, i, 3. (1608) BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune, ii, 2. (c.

1613) etc., etc.

From top to toe.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 228. (1600)

From the crowne of the head to the right toe

UNKNOWN, Chester Plays, x, 439. (1607)

From the crown of my head to the sole of my foot, I shall ever acknowledge myself your worship's humble servant.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Memoirs of Martinus Scriblerus. Bk. i, ch. 8. (c. 1714)

Mr. Merdle was found out from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. ii, ch. 33. (1857)

A gentleman? That he is, from head to foot.

TENNYSON, Promise of May. Act iii, l. 272. (1886)

3

He was "off his head."

THOMAS HOOD, The Turtles. (1844)

He is off his head: he does not know what he says.

WILLIAM BLACK, The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton. Ch. 13. (1872)

One poor girl went off her head in the midst of all.

MARK PATTISON, Memoirs, p. 156. (1883)

"Awful sick," said Bob, "clean out of his head all night."

EGGLESTON, Hoosier School-Boy, p. 75. (1883)

David Ransom is clean out of his head.

MARY W. FREEMAN, Six Trees, p. 14. (1903)

There was class in the way she went out of her head.

CARL SANDBURG, Cornhuskers, p. 34. (1918)

4

Some men counte them nygardis and hard-heedis that wyll haue a rekenynge of expensis.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, p. 63. (1519)

A flintie fellowe and a hard head.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles, p. 36. (1576)

Hard-head and Block-head, terms of reproach with us.

JOHN BULWER, Anthropometamorphosis, p. 22. (1650)

We Americans have hard heads.

R. B. PEAKE, Americans Abroad, i, 1. (1824)

It is a hard head that gets on in this world.

LORD LYTTON, My Novel. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1853)

1 She holds up her head like a hen drinking.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 294. (1721)

"Spoken of one who affectedly holds her head high."

She holds up her head like a hundred pound aver [horse].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 294. Come, miss, hold up your head, girl; there's money bid for you.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

2 Two heads may lie on one pillow, and nobody knows where the luck lies.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 333. (1721)

Your head cannot get up, but your stomach must follow after.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 366.

Your head will never fill your father's bonnet.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 372.

3 Looked on Medusaes heade, and so had beene tourned into a stone.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 80. (1579)

Supposing that their adversaries grew Like Hydra's head.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Lawes of Candy. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1613) The hydra was the fabulous many-headed snake whose heads grew again as fast as they were cut off. To kill it was the second labor of Hercules.

The fruitful heads of Hydra.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act i, sc. 1. (1690)

4 Be sure alwaies, that your head be not higher then your hat.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 284. (1580)

5 If like a rustie Iade thou wilt take the bitt in thy mouth, . . . thou shalt . . . haue thy head runne against a stone wall.

JOHN LYLY (?), Pappe with an Hatchet. (1589) Works (1902), iii, 410.

6 A well-drawn man is he; and a well-taught, That will not give his head for nought.

HENRY MEDWALL, A Goodly Interlude of Nature. l. 721. (c. 1500)

Such a one as will not give his Head for the polling, nor his Beard for the washing.

JOHN HOOKER, Description of Excester, p. 82. (c. 1583)

The time was, when he would not haue giuen his head for the washing.

THOMAS NASHE, Have with You to Saffron-Walden. (1596) Works (Grosart), iii, 106.

For my part it shall ne'er be said,

I for the washing give my Head.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii. l. 256. (1663)

He will not give the head for the washing. Spoken of sturdy people, who will not readily part with their interest, or be bullied out of it.

JAMES KELLY, Complete Collection of Scottish Proverbs, p. 154. (1721)

I find, Mr. Neverout, you won't give your head for the washing, as they say.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

To give the head for the washing, to submit to being imposed upon.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary of Archaic and Provincial Words: Head. (1847)

7 Hang the pensive head.

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 147. (1637)

8 He is of the race of the mushroom; he covers himself altogether with his head. (Fungino genere est; capite se totum tegit.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 851. (c. 194 B.C.)

9 Richard, keep thy head, And hold thy peace.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma, iii, 186. (1717)

If only [he] can contrive to keep his head.

SIR GEORGE TREVELYAN, Life of Macaulay. Vol. i, ch. 1, p. 22. (1876)

10 The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 31. (c. 350 B.C.) See HAIR: GRAY.

11 The head is made for the eyes. (La teste estre faicte pour les œilz.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 7. (1545)

Quoting GALEN, bk. ix., who argues that the head is placed at the upper end of the body to enable the eyes to see as far as possible.

12 I have a pretty good headpiece of my own. (I'ay assez belle entendouoire.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 27. (1548)

13 Cover your head by day as much as you will, by night as much as you can.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 41. (1678)

14 To have a soft place in one's head.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 193. (1670)

It is a sound head that has not a soft place in it.

JAMES KELLY, Complete Collection of Scottish Proverbs, p. 133. (1721)

15 This olde hag, havying had her head washed thus without sope.

BARNABY RICH, His Farewell, 161. (1581) "To wash the head without soap," to scold.

16 The hill of the hair.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hymiskvitha. St. 24. (c. 900) In St. 32 the head is given another name, "the helmet-stem."

O human head! Majestic box! O wondrous can, from labels free! If man is craving fame or rocks, he'll get them if he uses thee!

WALT MASON, The Human Head. (1913)

<sup>1</sup> His head was turned by too great success.
(Motum illi felicitate nimia caput.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiv, 8. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>2</sup> The very head and front of my offending.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 80. (1605)

The head and front of your offending is . . . your not writing.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter to J. Ballantyne, 25 July, 1813.

He was the head and front of every movement for good.

JOHN W. BURGON, Lives of Twelve Good Men. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1888)

<sup>3</sup> There's more in your head than the comb will take out.

SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iii. (1907)

There's more than nits in his head.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 118. (1917)

<sup>4</sup> All theyr Playes . . . thrust in Clownes by head and shoulders.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, An Apologie for Poetrie, p. 65, (1581) Arber.

Any, whom necessity . . . thrusts out by head and shoulders.

NATHANIEL WARD, The Simple Cofler of Agawam in America, p. 24. (1647)

He . . . hunts perpetually for texts . . . introduces them by head and shoulders upon the most trifling occasions.

ABRAHAM TUCKER, The Light of Nature Pursued, ii, 116. (1768)

He is head and shoulders above them.

NOAH WEBSTER, Dictionary: Head. (1864)

Head and shoulders higher than his neighbours.

D. C. MURRAY, Rainbow Gold. Vol. ii, bk. iv, ch. 5. (1885)

<sup>5</sup> My boy breaks glasses and pipes; and . . . I only say, "Ah, Jack! thou hast a head, and so has a pin."

STEELE, The Tatler. No. 83. (1709)

Ay, thou hast a head, and so has a pin.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Girzy, t'ou has a head, and so has a nail.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Ch. 8. (1823)

<sup>6</sup> I should like to see your head stroked down with a sandal. (Utinam tibi committigari videam sandalio caput.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 1028. (161 B. C.)

Doubt not her care should be

To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd stool.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 1, 64. (1594)

She flew in my face, and call'd me fool, And comb'd my head with a three-legg'd stool.

UNKNOWN, Westminster Drollery, p. 38. (1671)

Somebody will comb your head backward yet.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 286. (1721)

She combed his head with a joint-stool; she threw a stool at him.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Comb. (1785)

I reckon they're [girls are] all alike. They'll all comb a body.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 25. (1876)

It is very usual now . . . to say of a termagant wife who beats her husband: she will comb out his head with a three-legged stool.

F. T. ELWORTHY, The West Somerset Word-book, p. 150. (1886)

<sup>7</sup> I'll . . . beat his old head off.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 6. (1855)

In society in the evenings yawns his weary head off.

MRS. OLIPHANT, Memoirs of Montalambert, i, 29. (1872)

The standing danger of having one's head talked off one's shoulders.

GERALD, A Spotless Reputation. Ch. 7. (1897)

<sup>8</sup> One head will be given for many. (Unum pro multis dabitur caput.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 815. (19 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> A scabbed Head doth never love the Combe.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 516. (1623)

Scabby Heads love not the Comb.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4072. (1732)

A proverb in many languages.

But George disliked much to hear.

About his Scottish home;

Thus scabby heads, the proverb says,

For ever hate a comb.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Orson and Ellen. (1796)

A SCABBED HORSE ABIDES NO COMB, see under HORSE.

<sup>10</sup> My head, though I beat it in sorrow, has never been bowed.

ZEB-UN-NISSA, Diwan. Ghazal 18. (c. 1670) Magan Lal, tr.

Under the bludgeonings of chance,

My head is bloody, but unbowed.

W. E. HENLEY, Invictus. (1888)

<sup>11</sup> It is better to have a swelled head than a shrivelled brain.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, p. 16. (1906)

II—Head: The Aching Head

<sup>12</sup> It is a fortunate head that never ached.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 427. (1855)

<sup>13</sup> The grief of the head is the grief of griefs.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)

<sup>14</sup> She sighs for ever on her pensive bed,

Pain at her side, and Megrim at her head.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto iv, l. 23. (1712)

<sup>15</sup> The old saying is, "Don't cut off your head because it aches."

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 36. (1880)

<sup>1</sup>
Lady A.: Miss is in love. Miss: I wish my head may never ache till that day.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>2</sup>
I fear in preferring the company of the ladies to that of the bottle, I only exchange a head-ache for a heartache.

ROYALL TYLER, The Bucktails. Act iii, sc. 2. (1815)

<sup>3</sup>
When the head is sick the other members suffer. (Cui caput infirmum cetera membra dolent.)

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs John to Edward II, p. 31. (c. 1230) There are a number of versions of this Latin proverb. The best known is, "Si caput dolet, omnia membra languent" (If the head aches, all the members languish). Another, in Medieval Latin, is, "Dum caput infestat, labor omnis membra molestat" (When the head aches, it troubles all the limbs). The Italians say, "Quando la testa duole, ogni membro se console" (When the head suffers, every limb sympathizes with it.)

Of that the heed is syk, the limmes aken.

JOHN GOWER, In Praise of Peace, l. 260. (c. 1399) God sende that hed (said she) a better nurs, For whan the hed aketh, all the bodie is the wurs.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546) When the head aches, all the members feel it. (Quando la cabeza duele, todos los miembros duelen.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1615) Shelton renders it, "When the head aches, all the body is out of tune."

When the head acheth, all the body is the worse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

When the Head aketh, all the Body feels it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5588. (1732)

III—Head and Tail

<sup>4</sup>
For in oure wil ther stiketh ever a nayl
To have an hoor heed and a grene tayl,
As hath a leek.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reeve's Prologue, l. 23. (c. 1386)

The maidens mock, and call him withered leek,
That with a green tail hath an hoary head.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Satires. Bk. iv, No. 4. (1597) Gray and green make the worst medley.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 149. (1678)

<sup>5</sup>
Neither head nor feet. (Nec caput nec pedes.)
CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. 31, sec. 2. (44 B. C.) That is, they were in confusion; one could make neither head nor tail of them.
On a loose sheet or two that had neither head nor taile.

RICHARD BAXTER, Infant Baptism, p. 213. (1651) Their Tale . . . had neither head nor Taile.

MARGERY MASON, The Tickler Tickled, p. 7. (1679)

I could make neither head nor tail on 't.

HENRY FIELDING, The Author's Farce. Act iii, sc. 1. (1729)

I couldn't make head or tail of it.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 11. (1889)

HEADS I WIN, TAILS YOU LOSE, see under CHEATING.

<sup>6</sup>
It is better to be the head of a Lizard than the tail of a Lion.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 581. (1640)

Better be the head of a dog than the tail of a lion.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 101. (1678)

Ray has a number of similar proverbs on the same page: "Better be the head of an ass, than the tail of a horse," "Better be the head of a pike, than the tail of a sturgeon," "Better be the head of a sprat, than the tail of a sturgeon." The French say, "Mieux vaut être tête de chien que queue de lion" (Better the head of a dog than the tail of a lion); the Italians, "E meglio esser capo di gatto che coda di leone" (Better to be the head of a cat than the tail of a lion), or "E meglio esser capo di lucertola che coda di dracone" (Better to be the head of a lizard than the tail of a dragon). The Spanish form is, "Mas vale cabeza de raton que cola de leon" (The rat's head is worth more than the lion's tail).

The ancient . . . spirit of Englishmen was once expressed by our proverb, "Better be the head of a dog than the tail of a lion"; i. e. the first of the yeomanry rather than the last of the gentry.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature Ser. ii, p. 447. (c. 1800)

It is better to be the head of a live sardine than the tail of a dead trout.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads Off at Midnight Ch. 9. (1938)

Better the beak of a chicken than the rump of an ox.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 353. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

Be a head, though only the head of a potato
CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 444. Japanese.

<sup>7</sup>
Cut off the head and tail and throw the rest away.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 346. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1227. (1732)

HEALING, see Cure

HEALTH

<sup>8</sup>
Health and cheerfulness mutually beget each other.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 387. (1712)

Cheerfulness, sir, is the principal ingredient in the composition of health.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Apprentice. Act ii, sc. 4. (1756)

The ground-work of all happiness is health.

LEIGH HUNT, The Indicator. No. 39. (1821)

Happiness lies, first of all, in health

G. W. CURTIS, Lotus-Eating: Trenton. (1852)

Health is the condition of wisdom, and the sign of cheerfulness.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success. (1870)

1 Disease ever presses close against it [health], its neighbor with a common wall. (νόσος γὰρ <ἀεί> | γείτων ἀμύτοιχος ἐπέλθει.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1002. (458 B.C.)

The Apothecary's mortar spoils the luter's music.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 924. (1640)

Health and sickness surely are men's double enemies.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1009.

2

Health, eldest of gods, with thee may I dwell for the rest of my life! (Ἕγχεῖα, πρεσβύτα μακάρων.)

ARIPHRON, Paeon to Health, l. 1. (c. 397 B.C.)

As quoted by ATHENAEUS, xv, 701F.

3

A healthy body is the guest-chamber of the soul; a sick, its prison.

FRANCIS BACON, Augmentis Scientiarum: Valetudo. (1605)

4

Better is a poor man healthy in body than a rich man stricken in his flesh.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxx, 14. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

5

Health and a good constitution are better than gold, and a good spirit than wealth without measure. (Salus animae in sanctitate iustitiae melior est omni auro et argento: et corpus validum quam census immensus.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxx, 15. (c. 190 B.C.)

There is no wealth above the wealth of health. (Non est census super censum salutis corporis.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxx, 16.

If health be yours, you have more than enough. (Tibi cum valeat corpus, superesse putato.)

CATO (?), Disticha de Moribus. Bk. iv, No. 36.

(c. 175 B.C.) Another Latin proverb is, "Valere malo quam dives esse" (To be healthy is better than to be rich). The Italians say, "Chi ha la sanità, è ricco, e non lo sa" (He who has his health is rich, and does not know it).

There is no greater riches than health.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 457. (c. 1050)

Health and strength is above all gold (as saith Jesus Syrach).

THOMAS COGAN, The Haven of Health: Epistle Dedicatory. (1584)

Gold that buys health can never be ill-spent.

DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Westward Hoe. Act v, sc. 3, l. 345. (c. 1605)

Health and an able body are two jewels.

FLETCHER, The Wild-Goose Chase. Act ii. (1621)

Health is a jewell.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 314. (1639)

Ask no more which is the greatest wealth,

Our rich possessions, liberty, or health.

ROWLAND WATKINS, Flamma Sine Fumo: Sickness. (c. 1662)

Health is better than wealth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 153. (1678)

Health is great riches.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2477. (1732)

A good wife and health are a man's best wealth.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

Health surpasses riches.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Health. (1736)

Health is worth more than learning.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John G. Jefferson, 1790.

Health is better than wealth.

WALTER SCOTT, Letters, i, 255. (1812)

Good health is above wealth.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 364. (1855)

The first wealth is health.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power. (1860)

6

Health is a call loan.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Sayings. (1858)

7

He who has good health is young.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 400. (1855)

We are usually the best men when in the worst health.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 551.

8

One day in perfect health is much.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 781. (1817)

Give me health and a day, and I will make the pomp of emperors ridiculous.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Beauty. (c. 1870)

9

Here is your goot-hell, unt your family's goot-hell, un may you all live long unt broswer.

CHARLES BURKE, Rip Van Winkle. Act i, sc. 1. (1865) Repeated with variations in dialect throughout the play. DRINKING HEALTHS, see under DRINKING.

10

Unbought health, a deity presiding over the affairs of men. (Praesens numen, inempta salus.)

CLAUDIAN, Idylls. No. vi, l. 76. (c. A.D. 395)

An expansion of the Latin proverb, "A numine salus" (Health is from the Deity), used as a physicians' motto which Samuel Foote is said to have translated, "God help the patient."

11

Guard the health of both body and soul. (εὖ τὸ σῶμα ἔχειν καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν.)

CLEOBULUS, Maxim. (c. 550 B.C.) See STOBÆUS, Florilegium, iii, 79.

Good bye and look out for yourself. (Vale atque salve.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 116. (c. 200 B.C.)

Bad health and good bye. (Male vive et vale.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 996. (c. 194 B.C.)

Pay attention to the most important thing of all, the care of your health. (Sit tibi praecipue, quod primum est, cura salutis.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 30. (c. 175 B.C.)

Take care of yourself. (Cura, ut valeas.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ii, epis. 2. (60 B.C.)

Literally, "Take care that you be healthy," the phrase with which Cicero ended many of his letters to his old friend. In a letter to Cicero, Balbus starts with the letters, "S.V.B.," short for "Si vales bene" (I hope you are well).

If you have any care for me, take care of yourself. (Si tibi cura mei, sit tibi cura tui!)

OID, Heroides. Epis. xiii, l. 166. (c. 10 B. C.)

If you are well, it is well; I also am well. (Si vales bene est, ego valeo.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xv, sec. 1. (A. D. 64) Good bye, Jim, take keer of yourself.

J. W. RILEY, The Old Man and Jim. (1892)

<sup>1</sup> The poorest man would not part with health for money, but the richest would gladly part with all their money for health.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 225. (1820)

<sup>2</sup> He is healthier than a pumpkin. (ὁ γιγαστερόν θήν ἐστι κογκύντας πολύ.)

EPICHARMUS, Apothegm. (c. 550 B. C.)

You were as tough as a dog's leash. (ἦσθ' ἱμὰς κύνειος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 231. (422 B. C.)

Healthier than a cucumber. (ὁ γιγαστερος κολοκύντης.)

DEMETRIUS, On Style. (c. 300 B. C.) Speaking of the use of hyperbole. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 225.

Healthier than Croton. (ὁ γιγαστερος Κρότωνος.)

STRAHO, Geographica. Sec. 262. (c. 2 B. C.) Croton was noted for its athletes, of whom Milo was one.

Healthier than an unripe grape. (ὁ γιγαστερος δμφακος.)

PHOTIUS, Sententiae. (c. A. D. 875) Erasmus cites still another. κολοκύντας [or δμφακος] ὑγιειστερος (Healthier, or sounder, than a bell).

SOUND IN WIND AND LIMB, see under SOUNDNESS.

<sup>3</sup> Ye maie wryte to your freendis, that ye are in helth,

But all thyng maie be suffred sauynge welth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Health and money go far.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 449. (1640)

Health without money is half an ague.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 511. (1640)

A rendering of the Italian proverb, "Sanità senza quattrini è mezza malattia" (Health without pence is half sickness). Quattrini are the smallest coins, like the English farthing or the French sou. Herbert, perhaps, thought that malattia meant malaria.

Health without wealth is half a sickness.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2479. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Health is no other (as the learned hold)

But a just measure both of Heat and Cold.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides: Health. (1648)

<sup>5</sup> What have I gained by health? Intolerable dullness. What by early hours and moderate meals? A total blank.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to William Wordsworth, 22 Jan., 1836.

<sup>6</sup> Soft-laughing Health. (πρηνέλως Ἑγμεία.)

LICYMNIUS, Fragments. Frag. 1. (c. 400 B. C.) Quoted by SEXTUS EMPIRICUS, xi, 49

<sup>7</sup> Men are less sensitive to good then to ill. (Segnius homines bona quam mala sentiunt.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxx, ch. 21. (c. 10 B. C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12, the French being, "Les hommes sont moins sensibles au plaisir qu'à la douleur." He adds, "We are never as conscious of perfect health as we are of the least of maladies" (Nous ne sentons point l'entière santé, comme la moindre des maladies).

He knows the value of health who lost his strength in fever.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. viii, Apologue 4. (c. 1257)

In sickness health is known.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 119. (1666)

Health is not valued till Sickness comes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2478. (1732)

Sickness is felt, but Health not at all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4160.

We are not so sensible of the greatest Health as of the least Sickness.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

The healthy know not of their health, but only the sick: this is the Physician's Aphorism.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Characteristics. (1831)

<sup>8</sup> Perfect health.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 132. (1576)

My health is blithe and lusty, though well stricken in age. (La santé, forte et alaigre, jusques bien avant en mon age.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580)

I have good health, good thoughts, and good humor, thanks be to God Almighty.

WILLIAM BYRD, Diary, 2 Nov., 1709. A frequent entry.

Health that snuffs the morning air.

JAMES GRAINGER, Solitude, l. 35. (c. 1760)

That vulgar corn-fed glow of health.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act ii. (1787)

One hears sometimes of a child being "the picture of health."

JANE AUSTEN, Emma. Ch. 5. (1815)

The very picture of health. A very symbol or emblem of good health. Punch, 1871, "He looks the picture of health."

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>9</sup> Health is beauty, and the most perfect health is the most perfect beauty.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Of Men and Manners, 1764.

Health and wealth create beauty.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 405. (1855)

<sup>10</sup> Health is the first good lent to men;

A gentle disposition then;

Next, to be rich by no by-ways;

Lastly, with friends t'enjoy our dayes.

(ὕγιαλνεν μὲν ἀριστόν ἀνδρὶ θνατῷ.

δευτερον δὲ καλὸν φὺὰν γενέσθαι, τὸ τρίτον δὲ πλουτεῖν ἀδῶλως, καὶ τὸ τέταρτον ἡβᾶν μετὰ τῶν φίλων.)

SIMONIDES (or EPICHRMUS), Four Things Make Us Happy Here. (c. 475 B.C.) As rendered by Robert Herrick. For "gentle disposition" the Greek has what more probably means "personal beauty." See BERKE, Poet. Lyr. Gr. viii. Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, ii, 21, 5.

You have heard people singing over their cups the old catch, in which they enumerate the best things in life,—first health, then beauty, and thirdly, as the author of the catch puts it, wealth got without guile.

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 451E. (c. 385 B.C.) It will be noted that Plato follows the old song very closely.

Men say the chief good is health, beauty the second, wealth the third. (λέγεται γὰρ ὡς ἀριστον μὲν ὑγιαίνειν, δεύτερον δὲ κάλλος, τρίτον δὲ πλοῦτος.)

PLATO, Laws. Sec. 661A. (c. 345 B.C.)

Health and good sense are the two blessings of life. (ὕγεια καὶ νοῦς ἐσθλὰ τῷ βίῳ δύο.)

MENANDER, Monostikoi. No. 15. (c. 300 B.C.) O health! health! the blessing of the rich! the riches of the poor! who can buy thee at too dear a rate, since there is no enjoying this world without thee?

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act ii, sc. 2. (1605)

Jonson was no doubt familiar with the Latin verses of unknown authorship, "O beata sanitas! te praesente amoenum | Ver floret gratiis; absque te nemo beatus" (O blessed health! with thee the pleasant spring blooms in its beauty; without thee no one is happy).

He that wants health wants all.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 140. (1902)

1
There's no joy even in beautiful Wisdom,
Unless one has holy Health.
(οὐδὲ καλὰς σοφίας ἐστὶν χάρις εἰ μὴ τις ἔχει σεμνὰν ὑγίειαν.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 70. (c. 475 B.C.)

Quoted by SEXTUS EMPIRICUS, xi, 556

Without health, life is no life. (ἀβλος βλος, βλος ἀβλος.)

ARIPHON, Paeon to Health. (c. 397 B.C.)

Quoted by RABELAIS, Bk. iv, Prologue.

Life isn't just living, but living in health. (Non est vivere, sed valere vita est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, No. 70. (c. A. D. 90)

2
It is better to lose health like a spendthrift than to waste it like a miser.

R. L. STEVENSON, Aes Triplex. (1874)

3
Better in health than in good conditions.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

4
Measure your health by your sympathy with morning and Spring.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 25 Feb., 1859.

5
I am in a moment of prettywellness.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to the Countess of Upper Ossory, 14 Jan., 1792.

6
He was a wonderful hand to moralize, 'specially after he begun to enjoy poor health.

F. M. WHITCHER, Widow Bedott Papers. (1855)
I'm afraid she enjoys ill-health.

CHRISTOPHER HALE, Murder in Tow, p. 101. (1943)

7
Health—silliest word in our language, and one knows so well the popular idea of health. The English country gentleman galloping after a fox—the unspeakable in full pursuit of the uneatable.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act i. (1893)

II—Health: Some Admonitions

8
If, after eating, one does not walk four cubits before sleeping, his food, being undigested, causes offensive breath.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 41a. (c.450)
After lunch, rest; after supper (or dinner), walk. (Post prandium stabis, post coenam ambulabis.)

ARNOLD OF VILLANOVA (?), Regimen Sanitatis Salerni. (c. 1290) This proverb has still older antecedents in the writings of Plutarch. A later medieval jingle modified it to, "Post coenam stabis vel passus mille meabis" (After dinner stand or walk a mile).

Before supper walk a little; after supper do the same. (Sub coenam paulisper inambula; coenatus idem facito.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: De Ratione Studii. (1522)
That old English saying: After dinner sit a while, and after supper walke a mile.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, p. 186. (1588) Included in almost all later collections, and a proverb in many languages. The Italians say, "Dopo pranza sta, dopo cena va" (After dinner rest, after supper walk); the Germans, "Nach dem Essen sollst du stehen, | Oder tausend Schritte gehen" (After dinner you must stand a while, or walk a thousand paces).

Come, ladies, shall we talk a round? As men Do walk a mile, women should talk an hour.

After supper: 'tis their exercise.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act ii, sc. 1. (1608)

As having sup't 'tis good to walk a mile,
So after dinner men must sit awhile.

GEORGE WITHER, Abuses, 171. (1613)

Some tell us after supper walk a mile, But we say, after supper dance a measure.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iii, 135. (1846)
He neighed . . . for he felt quite inclined for a little exercise, . . . "After supper, trot a mile."

R. D. BLACKMORE, Cripps. Ch. 4. (1875)

Omit to stretch after every meal

And lumps in your throat you'll certainly feel.

(Ch'ih fan pu ch'êng yao, pi ting 'hou pao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 337. (1875)

Rest after a meal, even if your parents are dead.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 443. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

Dine and recline, if for two minutes; sup and walk, if for two paces.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 518. (1938) An Egyptian proverb.

<sup>1</sup> When you shut out the sun from the window, the doctor comes in at the door.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 356. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>2</sup> In spring keep well covered, in autumn delay putting on thick garments, and you will never be ill.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 378. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

Till April's dead Change not a thread.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 23. (1869)

<sup>3</sup> A man should defend himself against a draught as he would against an arrow.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts): Health. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr. Quoted as an old saying. The Chinese say, "Back to the draught is face to the grave."

Air coming in at a window, is as bad as a Cross-Bow-shot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 782. (1732) From the Italian, "Aria di sinistra colpo di balestra."

If cold wind reach you through a hole, Say your prayers, and mind your soul.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 16. (1846)

<sup>4</sup> Foure thinges kyl a man before his tyme. A fayre wife, an vnquiete householde, vnmeasurable eatyng and drinking, and a corrupt ayre.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 25. (1578)

<sup>5</sup> Cloathe warme, eate little, drink wel, so shalt thou lyue. (Vesti caldo, mangia poco, bevi assai, che viverai.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

Galen being asked what dyet he vsed that he lyued so long aunswered: I haue dronke no wine, I haue touched no woman, I haue kept my selfe warme.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 275. (1580)

Keepe warme ('tis meete) thy head and feete; In all the rest, live like a beast.

(Tenez chauds les pieds et la teste;

Au demourant, vivez en beste.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

Quoting a "common saying always in the mouth of the people." Florio, tr. RAY, Proverbs, p. 41 (1678) cites a similar Italian proverb, "Asciuto il piede calda la testa, e del resto vive da bestia," which he renders, "Keep your feet dry and your head hot, and for the rest live like a beast." The French is, "Tenez chauds les pieds et la tête; Au demourant, vivez en bête."

Foot and head kept warm, no matter for the rest.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Demeurant. (1611)

A coole mouth, and a dry foot preserve a man long time alive.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Pied.

A cool mouth, and warm feet, live long.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 22. (1640) The Italian is, "Testa freda e piè caldi."

Dry feet, warm head, bring safe to bed.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 404.

Head and feet keep warm, the rest will take no harm.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 39. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6255. (1732)

Keep your mouth wet, feet dry.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733

<sup>6</sup> He that goes to bed thirsty, riseth healthy.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 37.

(1678) with the French, "Qui couche avec la soif se leve avec la santé."

EARLY TO BED AND EARLY TO RISE, see under RISING.

<sup>7</sup> The chief box of health is time.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 910. (1640)

Health is the first muse.

R. W. EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration. (1875)

<sup>8</sup> If it be well with belly, feet, and sides, A King's estate no greater good provides.

(Si ventri bene, si lateri est pedibusque tuis, nil | divitiarum poterunt regales addere maius.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xii, l. 5. (20 B.C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 42. The translation is Florio's. The French is, "Avez-vous l'estomac bon, la poitrine excellente? n'êtes-vous point tourmenté de la goutte? les richesses des rois ne pourroient ajouter à votre bonheur."

<sup>9</sup> A man will pass his summers in health, who will finish his luncheon with black mulberries. (Ille salubris | aestates peraget, qui nigris prandia moris | finiet.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 21. (35 B.C.)

Leeke purgeth the bloud in march.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Government of Health, fo. 64. (1558)

Eate Leeke in Lide [March], and Ramsins [wild garlic] in May.

And all the yeare after Physitians may play.

JOHN AUBREY, The Natural History of Wiltshire, p. 51. (c. 1685) Reminiscent of the modern, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away."

Why should the man die in whose garden sage grows? (Cur moriatur homo cui Salvia crescit in horto?)

ARNOLD OF VILLANOVA (?), Regimen Sanitatis Salerni. (c. 1290) Quoted by COGAN, Haven of Health, ch. 11, p. 32. (1588)

He that would live for ay must eat Sage in May.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 36. (1678)

"The sage was by our ancestors esteemed a very wholesome herb," Ray explains, "and much conducing to longevity," and he quotes the Salernian maxim.

He that would live for aye,
Must eat Butter and Sage in May.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6253. (1732)

Venetians say, "Salvia salva" (Sage saves).
Eat well of cresses.

JOHN GRANGE, The Golden Aphroditis, sig. F3.

(1577) Cress was supposed to help the memory.

<sup>1</sup>
Taught to be strong and to live for himself.
(Sibi valere et vivere doctus.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 961.

(c. 45 B. C.) MONTAIGNE quotes this, "Mihi nempe valere et vivere doctus," with the French, "Vivre, me bien porter, voilà ma science" (To live and keep myself well, that's my learning).

<sup>2</sup>
Promote health by keeping an easy stomach.

J. C. NEVIN, Precious Characters. (DOOLITTLE,
Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 390. 1872)

<sup>3</sup>
Languor seizes the body from bad ventilation.
(Aëre non certo corpora languor habet.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 318. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup>
He who can believe himself well, will be well.
(Qui poterit sanum fingere, sanus erit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 504. (c. 1 B. C.)

The surest road to health, say what they will,
Is never to suppose we shall be ill.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Night, l. 69. (1761)

Say you are well, or all is well with you,
And God shall hear your words and make them true.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Speech. (c. 1886)

Every day, in every way, I am getting better and better. (Tous les jours, à tous points de vue, je vais de mieux en mieux.)

EMIL COUÉ, formula of auto-suggestion used at his clinic at Nancy. First announced c.
1910.

<sup>5</sup>
We make a wineless offering to Dionysius.
(τῷ Διονύσῳ ῥηφάλια θύομεν.)

PLUTARCH, *Moralia: Advice About Keeping
Well*, sec. 132E. (c. A. D. 95)

<sup>6</sup>
To cure bad health, think nothing unclean.
(Nihil turpe ducas pro salutis remedio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 468. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup>
It was a sign of health that he was willing to be cured. (Pars sanitatis velle sanari fuit.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 249. (c. A. D. 60)

It is a step toward health to know what the complaint is. (Ad sanitatem gradus est novisse morbum.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia. (1524) Quoted.

<sup>8</sup>
Both for bodily and mental health court the present. Embrace health wherever you find her.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 28 Dec., 1852.

<sup>9</sup>
He had had much experience of physicians, and said, "The only way to keep your health is to eat what you don't want, drink what you don't like, and do what you'd druther not."

MARK TWAIN, *Pudd'nhead Wilson's New
Calendar*. (1893)

The doctor is sure that my health is poor, he says that I waste away; so bring me a can of the shredded bran, and a bale of the toasted hay.

WALT MASON, Health Food. (1915)

<sup>10</sup>
He destroys his health by laboring to preserve
it. (Aegrescitque medendo.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 46. (19 B. C.)

Some reckon he killed himself with purgations.

CHARLES WRIOTHESLEY, A Chronicle of England. Vol. i, p. 16. (1485) Like Jeremy Bentham's "Valetudinarian who quacked himself to death."

It is a grievous illness to preserve one's health by a too strict regimen. (C'est une ennuyeuse maladie que se conserver sa santé par un trop grand régime.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No.
633. (1665)

<sup>11</sup>
Dine rightly and sup lightly,
Sleep upstairs and you'll live sprightly.

(Disne honnestement et soupe sobrement, Dors en hault et vivras longuement.)

UNKNOWN. An old French proverb. The only proverb discovered which says that sleeping upstairs is healthful.

HEAP

<sup>12</sup>
He 'lowed there was a heap sight more corn.

EDWARD EGGLESTON, The Circuit Rider, i, 14.
(1874)

He's a heap sight . . . happier than us.

G. W. CABLE, Bonaventure, p. 49. (1888)

He would a heap sight ruther go back on the old crittur.

ELIZABETH B. CUSTER, Following the Guidon,
p. 27. (1890)

<sup>13</sup>
[He] lies embrewed here, All on a heap.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, ii, 3, 223.
(1608)

A young woman . . . struck me all on a heap.

The British Apollo. Vol. iii, No. 133. (1711)

He seem'd struck of a heap.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, i, 205. (1741)

"Mr. Longman, who had struck me of a heap."—Ibid, ii, 119.

Struck me all of a heap.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act ii, sc. 2. (1775)

The interrogatory seemed to strike the honest magistrate, to use the vulgar phrase, 'all of a heap.'

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 24. (1818)

HEARING

See also Ear; Eye and Ear; Speech: Speaking and Hearing

<sup>14</sup>
You have heard what you have heard.
(ἡκούσαθ' ὧν ἡκούσατα.)

AESCHYLUS, Eumenides, l. 679. (458 B. C.)

1 A hundred hearings are not equal to one seeing.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 363. (1938) A Chinese proverb. See also under EYE: EYES AND EARS.

2 Perfection of hearing is not hearing others, but oneself. Perfection of vision is not seeing others, but oneself.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.) Giles, tr.

3 He may be heard where he is not seen.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 58. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1670)

4 Hearing he hears not. (Audiens non audit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 35. (1523) The Germans say, "Wer nicht hören will, der muss fühlen" (Who will not hear must be made to feel).

5 Every man hears only what he understands. (Es hört doch jeder nur was er versteht.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

6 "The more you hear," he said, "the less you'll learn."

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street, Pt. iv, st. 19. (1912)

7 Zealous in hearing. (Studiosus audiendi.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, De Viris Illustribus: Epaminondas. (c. 40 B. C.)

He knows me to be a very patient hearer.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 49. (1758)

8 Ill hearing makes wrong rehearsing.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 187. (1721)

Ill hearing makes ill rehearsing.

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 35. (1820)

9 He would in no case heare of reconciliation.

DAVID POWEL, tr., Historie of Cambria, p. 274. (1584)

Send us your prisoners, or you will hear of it.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, i, 3, 124. (1597)

The learned antiquary will not hear of it.

WILLIAM BURTON, A Commentary on Antoninus His Itinerary, p. 150. (1658)

She would not hear of it.

MRS. S. BOYS, Coalition, i, 143. (1785)

10 He cannot hear on that ear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1670)
See under DEAFNESS.

11 The blind hear well, the deaf see well. (Ku chē shan t'ing, lung chē shan shih.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1319. (1875)

12 If we can listen we shall hear. By reverently listening to the inner voice, we may reinstate ourselves on the pinnacle of humanity.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 26 Jan., 1841.

HEART

13

Fasting is only saving bread, but if you have conquered the heart you have conquered everything.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, Invocations. (c. 1075)

Senek seith: that "he that overcometh his herte, overcometh twyes."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 77. (c. 1387)

14

Although my hap be hard, my heart is high.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Aurora. Sonnet 30. (1604)

I said to Heart, "How goes it?" Heart replied: "Right as a Ribstone Pippin!" But it lied.

HILAIRE BELLOC, For False Heart. (c. 1930)

15

The heart perceives that which the eye cannot see.

ALGAZALI, Ethics. Bk. ii, ch. 21, Maxim 38. (c. 1100)

The heart has its reasons, which the reason knows nothing of. (Le cœur a ses raisons, que la raison ne connaît pas.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, art. 17, No. 5. (1660)

The heart has arguments with which the understanding is unacquainted.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. (1860)

The heart has eyes that the brain knows nothing of.

CHARLES H. PARKHURST, Sermons: Coming to the Truth. (1913)

WHAT THE EYE DOESN'T SEE THE HEART DON'T LONG FOR, see under EYE.

16

We'll summon our hearts of oak. (τὸν πρωτόδη θυμὸν ἅπαντες καλέσμεν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 383. (422 B. C.)

Oak and brass of triple fold

Encompassed sure the heart, which first made bold To the raging sea to trust a fragile bark.

(Illi robur et aes triplex | circa pectus erat, qui fragilem truci | commissit pelago ratem | primus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 3, l. 9. (23 B. C.)

"Robur" means, literally, a very hard kind of oak; figuratively, strength or hardness of any kind. See ECCLESIASTES under GIFT.

Calumny confounds a wise man and destroys the oak of his heart. (Calumnia conturbat sapientem, et perdet robur cordis illius.)

ST. JEROME, Ecclesiastes, vii, 8. (A. D. 405)

Here is a dozen of yonkers that have hearts of oake at fourscore yeares.

UNKNOWN, Old Meg of Herefordshire. (1609)

Soul of fibre and heart of oak. (Alma de esparto y un corazón de encina.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 70. (1615)

He was heart of oak; he wore like iron.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 24. (1672)

He was . . . a heart of oke, and a pillar of the Land.

ANTHONY WOOD, Athenas Oxonienses, ii, 221 (1691)

Where are the rough brave Britons to be found With Hearts of Oak, so much of old renowned?

SUSANNA CENTLIVRE, The Cruel Gift: Epilogue (1717)

Heart of oak are our ships,
Heart of oak are our men.

DAVID GARRICK, Heart of Oak. (c. 1770)
Their hearts were made of English oak, their swords of Sheffield steel.

WALTER SCOTT, The Bold Dragoon. (1812)
Our ships were British oak,
And hearts of oak our men.

S. J. ARNOLD, The Death of Nelson. (c. 1825)
He thought to quell the stubborn hearts of oak.
LORD TENNYSON, Buonaparte. (1832)

A nation of hearts of oak.
DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 12. (1870)

<sup>1</sup>
I have not eaten the heart.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. cxxv,
l. 13. (c. 4000 B.C.)

Eating our hearts for weariness and sorrow.
(ῥομοῦ καμάτω τε καὶ ἀλγεσι θυμὸν ἔδοντες.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ix, l. 75. (c. 850 B.C.)
Repeated in x, 143, and elsewhere. In x, 379, the phrase is simply, θυμὸν ἔδων (Eating the heart). Used by APOLLONIUS RHODIUS,
Argonautica. Bk. i, l. 1289. (c. 225 B.C.)

Eat not thy heart. (καρδίαν μὴ ἔσθλειν.)

PYTHAGORAS, Praecentum. (c. 525 B.C.) As quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras, sec. 17, who adds, "By not eating your heart, he meant not wasting your life in troubles and pains." ATHENAEUS, Deipnoso- phistae, bk. x, sec. 452D, also quotes it, with the explanation. "Cultivate indifference to pain."

Do not eat your heart; as much as to say, "Do not injure your soul by wasting it with worries."
(μὴ ἔσθλειν καρδίαν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Education of Chil- dren. Sec. 12E. (c. A.D. 95) Cited by ERAS-MUS, Adagia, i, 1, 2, with the Latin, "Cor ne edito."

Eating his heart out, in the words of the poet.
(ὃν θυμὸν κατέδων, τοῦτο δὴ τὸ τοῦ ἔπους.)

HELIODORUS, Aethiopica. Bk. i, ch. 14. (c. A.D. 350)
Not to eat our heartes: that is, that wee should not vexe our selues with thoughts, consume our bodies with sighes, or with care to pine our carcasses.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 148. (1579)
Quoted as a saying of Pythagoras.

To eat thy heart through comfortlesse dispaire.
EDMUND SPENSER (?), Mother Hubbard's Tale,
l. 904. (1590)

He could not rest; but did his stout heart eat.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene, i, ii, 6. (1596)

The Parable of Pythagoras is darke, but true;
Cor ne edito; eat not the Heart.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship. (1597)
I will not eat my heart alone.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. cviii, l. 3. (1850)
Eating his heart out and getting no further.

W. A. WALLACE, Only a Sister? Ch. 18. (1890)
In the desert | I saw a creature, naked, bestial, |
Who, squatting upon the ground, | Held his heart in his hands, | And ate of it. | I said, "Is it good, friend?" | "It is bitter, bitter," he answered; |
"But I like it."

STEPHEN CRANE, The Black Riders. No. 3. (1895)

He could eat my heart with garlic.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 137. (1670)

He could e'en eat my heart without salt.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 370. (1855)

<sup>2</sup>
Hearts of seven bull-hides' stoutness. (θυμὸν ἑπταβοείων.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 1017. (405 B.C.)
The reference is to Homer's description of Ajax' shield, with its seven-fold casing of bull-hide.

God loveth such as are stout-hearted and of good courage.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, iii, 146. (c. 622)

Better is stout heart than mighty blade.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Fafnismol. St. 28.
(c. A.D. 900)

The biggest limbs have not the stoutest hearts.

ROBERT GREENE, The Pinner of Wakefield, l.
1091. (1599)

A stout heart breaks bad luck. (Buen corazón quebranta mala ventura.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1615)
The Germans say, "Kühner Muth, das beste Harnisch" (A stout heart is the best armor).

<sup>3</sup>
The heart carries the feet.

SIMEON ASHKENAZI (?), Yalkut Vayasha. (c.
1250)

The heart is everything, the rest is useless. (Le cœur fait tout: le reste est inutile.)

LA FONTAINE, Belphégor. (1678)

Great beauty, great strength, and great riches are really and truly of no great use: a right heart exceeds them all.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

The heart ay's the part ay

That makes us right or wrang.

ROBERT BURNS, Epistle to Davie. St. 5. (1784)

<sup>4</sup>
Open not thine heart to every man, lest he requite thee with a shrewd turn.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
viii, 19. (c. 190 B.C.)

The heart of man declareth [to him] his opportunities better than seven watchmen on a watchtower.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxxvii, 14.

<sup>5</sup>
One hour for thy heart, and one hour for thy Lord.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 327.
(1817) Divide your time between worldly and heavenly affairs.

<sup>6</sup>
That which cometh from the heart will go to the heart.

JEREMIAH BURROUGHS, In Hosea. (1652) The German proverb is, "Was von Herzen kommt, das geht zu Herzen."

Whatever comes from the heart goes to the heart.
JOHN PLATT, Morality, p. 10. (1878)

Heart speaks to heart. (Cor ad cor loquitur.)

CARDINAL J. H. NEWMAN, Motto, of his coat of arms as cardinal. Adopted 1879. Suggested by his long friendship for Ambrose St. John.

Let's have a heart-to-heart, and find out how we stand.

S. E. WHITE, Rules of the Game, p. 444. (1910)
Sit down and have a heart-to-heart talk.

A. R. BOSWORTH, Full Crash Dive, p. 353. (1942)

1 Here's a heart for any fate!

LORD BYRON, To Thomas Moore. (1817)

With a heart for any fate.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)

2 Myn herte, bare of blis and blak of hewe.

CHAUCER (?), Anelida and Arcite, l. 213. (c. 1372)

Black heart and rotten liver. (Hei hsin lan kan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1264. (1875)

3 Gentil herte is fulfild of pitee.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 562. (c. 1386)

Gentil herte kytheth gentilnesse.

CHAUCER, The Squire's Tale, l. 475.

A kind heart loseth nought at last.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 45. (1639)

A gentle heart is tied with an easy thread.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 728. (1640)

Kind hearts are more than coronets,

And simple faith than Norman blood.

TENNYSON, Lady Clara Vere de Vere. St. 7. (1833)

4 Plukke up your hertes, and beth gladde and blythe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 384. (c. 1389)

I take heart, je prens couraige.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, 748/1. (1530)

Take good hart, And tell thy grief.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene, iii, x, 26. (1590)

Take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 3, 174. (1600)

5 Her herte was so wyfly and so trewe.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: The Legend of Lucretia, l. 164. (c. 1385)

I account more strength in a true heart than in a walled city.

JOHN LYL, Endimion. (1591)

My heart Is true as steel.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, ii, 1, 196. (1596) See also under CONSTANCY.

He's a velvet true heart.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 83. (1678)

Where hearts are true Few words will do.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 86. (1875)

6 She told ek al the prophesies by herte.

CHAUCER, Troilus. Bk. v, l. 1494. (c. 1380)

[We] rehearsed by heart the chapter Veniens.

NICHOLAS POCOCK, Records of the Reformation. Bk. i, ch. 50. (1528)

To learne by harte, or without booke. . . . To say by harte.

JOHN BARET, An Alvearie, H 202. (1573)

I had said them [prayers] rather by heart than with my heart.

THOMAS FULLER, Good Thoughts in Bad Times: Personal Meditations. Sec. 19. (1645)

7 They were not of double heart. (Non in corde duplici.)

Old Testament: I Chronicles, xii, 33. (c. 300 B.C.) Double heart, duplicity. The Hebrew is, "Without a heart and a heart."

Ther treccherous lippis in herte and herte speeken.

JOHN WYCLIF, Psalms, xii, 2. (1382)

God doth abhor a Heart and a Heart, and his soule detesteth a double minded Man.

SAMUEL HARSNET, Sermon on Ezekiel, xxxiii, 2. (1583)

A heart and a heart God cannot abide.

W. D. MONTAGU, EARL OF MANCHESTER Al Mondo, p. 86. (1633)

8 The heart of man is more dangerous than mountains and rivers, more difficult to understand than Heaven itself.

CHUANG-TSEZ, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B.C.)

We have hearts within,

Warm, live, improvident, indecent hearts.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 462 (1856)

In each human heart are a tiger, a pig, an ass, and a nightingale. Diversity of character is due to their unequal activity.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

9 His heart's on 's halfpenny.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 36. (1639)
See under HAND.

10 Read it heart and soul.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Letters, p. 261. (1798)

Entering heart and soul into the . . . war.

MARK PATTISON, Essays, i, 4. (1845)

He threw himself, heart and soul, into every requirement of the time.

J. W. BURGON, Lives of Twelve Good Men Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1888)

11 Yet (heart a gold) restraine thy heat.

PETER COLSE, Penelope's Complaint, 169 (c. 1550)

The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 1, 44. (1599)

A fine fellow, and what I call a heart of gold.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 10 Jan., 1831.

A woman with a heart of gold.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p. 183. (1941)

12 The heart of the wise, like a mirror, should reflect all objects, without being sullied by any.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.)

The human heart is a mirror

Of the things that are near and far.

ALICE CARY, The Time to Be. (1866)

13 Not long dayes, but strong hearts, dispatch a worke.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Grand. (1611)

Not a long day, but a good heart, rids work.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 25. (1640)

1
I have so little heart in the affair.
MADAME D'ARBLAY, Letter, 20 Jan., 1780.
The Germans lost heart.
CHARLES MERIVALE, The Fall of the Roman Empire. Vol. i, ch. 10. (1850)
His whole heart was in the game.
LORD LYTTON, My Novel. Bk. i, ch. 12. (1853)
[He] seems to have plucked up a little heart.
FREEMAN, Norman Conquest. Vol. i, ch. 5. (1867)
[He] puts his heart into all he does.
MRS. LYNN LINTON, Paston Carew. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1886)

2
The heart of a man is of itself but little, yet great things cannot fill it.
THOMAS DEKKER, Four Birds of Noah's Arke. (1609)
The heart is a small thing, but desireth great matters. It is not sufficient for a kite's dinner, yet the whole world is not sufficient for it.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, ch. 12. (1635)

3
There are strings in the human heart which had better not be wibrated.
DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 22. (1841)

4
Don't be down-hearted.
DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 21. (1852)
We are not downhearted. The only trouble is, we cannot understand what is happening to our neighbours.
JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, at Smethwich, 18 Jan., 1906.
Are we downhearted? No! let 'em all come.
CHARLES KNIGHT, Here We Are! Here we Are Again. (1914) "Are we downhearted? No!" was an expression which came into great vogue with British soldiers during the first World War. Frequently quoted, recently by H. C. BAILEY, The Apprehensive Dog, p. 248. (1942)

5
The enlightened heart is its own heaven; the ignorant heart is its own hell.
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 286. (1872)

6
[He] had taken the young disciple to his heart.
EDWARD DOWDEN, Shelley. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1886)
He hugged his old conviction to his heart.
EDNA LYALL, Knight Errant. Ch. 18. (1887)

7
This contrivance of his did inwardly rejoice the cockles of his heart.
JOHN EACHARD, Observations upon the Answer to Contempt of Clergy. (1671)
It terrifies the cocales of my heart.
SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots, p. 126. (1685)
An expedition . . . which would have delighted the very cockles of your heart.
WALTER SCOTT, Letter, 30 Sept., 1792.
Here's a glass of grog for you. . . See if that don't warm the cockles of your old heart.
MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 12. (1834)
I had just had the inmost cockles of my heart rejoiced by a letter from Lyell.
DARWIN, Life and Letters, ii, 112. (1858)

To warm the cockles of one's heart. Applied to something that causes one to rejoice or feel very happy: [a cliché since] mid. C. 19-20. A cockle is zoologically Cardium, from καρδιά, "heart."
ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

8
That is the end of all men and the living will lay it to his heart. (Vivens cogitat quid futurum sit.)
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 2. (c. 250 B. C.)
Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 5, 15. (1605)
A lesson . . . to lay to heart.
R. C. FRENCH, Proverbs, p. 141. (1853)

9
Faint heart makes feeble hand. (ὡς ἀνὰνδρις χειρῶν.)
EURIPIDES, Suppliants, 1. 314. (c. 421 B. C.)
Trust not a faint heart with a high emprise. (Grande aliquid caveas timido committere cordi.)
CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624
Bot as men sein, wher herte is failed,
Ther shal no castell ben assailed.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, Bk. iv, 1. 6573. (c. 1390)
False harte neuer japed fayre lady.
RICHARD TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 43. (1550)
Faint harts faire ladies neuer win.
UNKNOWN, Black Letter Ballads, p. 16. (c. 1570)
Faint heart, hath been a common phrase,
Fair lady never wives.
UNKNOWN, The Roche of Regard. (1576)
Faint hart neither winneth Castell nor Lady.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 364. (1580)
Faint heart never won fair lady.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 321. (1605) The first discovered use of the proverb in exactly its modern form. In frequent use thereafter. The French say, "Jamais couard n'aura belle amie" (Never will the coward have a fair lady), or "Jamais honteux n'eut belle amie" (Never did the bashful have a fair lady).
Faint heart sleeps alone
S. M. FULLER, The Dark Page. Ch. 1. (1944)

10
Neirest the heart, neirest the mouth.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 265, with the explanation, "Spoken to them who, designing to name one person, by mistake name another, perhaps a mistress or sweetheart."

11
Who hath not a hart let hym haue legges.
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)
He that hath no heart, hath legs.
Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 78. (1629)
He that has no Heart, ought to have Heels
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2146. (1732)

12
A loyal Heart may be landed under Traytor's Bridge.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 260. (1732)

Sacrifice not thy Heart upon every Altar.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4062.

1 What availeth an open eye, if the heart be blind?

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 415. (c. 1050)

He whose heart is closed will not be benefited by open eyes.

RABBI J. KIMCHI, Shekel Hakodesh.

The blindness of the heart is indeed blindness.

ABRAHAM BEN NATHAN HAYARCHI, Sepher Humanhig, p. 5.

2 He hath the sore, which no man heleth,
The whiche is cleped lacke of herte.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 12. (1390)

3 It is commonly sayde, that nothing is hard unto a willing heart.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 148. (1574) Pettie, tr. See under DIFFICULTY.

4 The great conservative is the heart.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, Journal, 6 Jan., 1854.

5 Nothing can destroy the human heart.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 353. (c. 1821)

6 Humble hearts have humble desires.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 7. (1640)

A small heart hath small desires.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 808.

Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,

An humble and a contrite heart.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Recessional. (1897) From Psalms, li, 17, "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise."

7 Happier are the hands compassed with iron than a heart with thoughts.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 584. (1640)

8 A good heart cannot lie.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 801. (1640)

The heart, they'll say, will never lie that's leal.

ALEXANDER ROSS, Helenore, l. 89. (1768)

Leal heart leed never.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 206. (1862)

9 Her herte is full hie whan her eye is full low.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

10 Nor suche foly feelee,

To set at my hert that thou settest at thy heele.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Never set at thy heart, thy wives churlish part,
That she sets at her heel.

UNKNOWN, Tom Tyler, l. 807. (c. 1580)

I will not sett at my heart what I should sett at my heel.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

Never lay sorrow to your heart, when others lay it to their heels.

Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, viii, 506. (1871)

11

My heart leaps to my mouth. (πάλλεται ἡτορ ἀπὸ στόμα.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 452. (c. 850 B. C.)

My heart's jumping. (Cor salit.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 551. (c. 200 B. C.)

My heart was in my nose. (Mihi anima in naso esse.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 62. (c. A. D. 60)

Hauyng their herte at their verai mouth for feare.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Paraphrase of Luke, xxiii. (1548) See also under FEAR

Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave

My heart into my mouth.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 1, 92. (1605) Cordelia is saying that she is unable to speak what is in her heart.

I fell across a beam that lay in the way, and faith my heart was in my mouth.

ADDISON, The Drummer. Act i, sc. 1. (1716)

A ring at the door-bell brings everybody's heart into everybody's mouth.

J. G. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Kate Coventry Ch. 13. (1856)

My heart flew into my mouth so suddenly that if I hadn't clapped my teeth together I should have lost it.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi Ch. 9. (1874)

It brings my heart into my throat.

HENRY JAMES, A Passionate Pilgrim. (1875)

My heart jumped up amongst my lungs.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 8. (1884)

Emma went in with her heart in her mouth.

DOROTHY BOWERS, Fear and Miss Betony, p. 137. (1942)

12

She had an understanding heart. (φρεσὶ κέχρητ' ἀγαθῆσι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 266, xvi, 398. (c. 850 B. C.) A phrase repeated many times.

Our Ida has a heart.

TENNYSON, The Princess, vi, 218. (1847)

"Have a heart," said Diluvio.

ELLIOT PAUL, Mayhem in B-Flat, p. 155. (1940)

13

A watchman's part compels my heart

To keep you off its beat.

THOMAS HOOD, I'm Not a Single Man. (1839)

14

Dismaied and out of heart.

JOHN HOOKER, tr., Irish History. Ch. 8. (1586)

After he had lost his boy, he drew quite out of heart.

WILLIAM WALKER, Idiomatologia Anglo-Latina, p. 234. (1690)

15

Sweet-heart and bag-pudding.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6/1. (1659)

Sweet heart and honey-bird keeps no house.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 57. (1678)

16

I am pained at my very heart; my heart maketh a noise in me. (Ventrem meum doleo; sensus cordis mei turbati sunt in me.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, iv, 19. (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup>
The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked. (Pravum est cor omnium, et inscrutabile.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xvii, 9. (c. 700 B. C.)
Our hearts are uncircumcised; little will they believe.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, ii, 82. (c. 622)
Few Hearts that are not double; few Tongues that are not cloven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1525. (1732)
The heart is like a viper, hissing, and spitting poison at God.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, The Freedom of the Will. (1754)

<sup>2</sup>
Let not your heart be troubled. (μὴ παρασέσθω ὑμῶν ἡ καρδία.)

New Testament: John, xiv, 1. (c. A. D. 70)
The Vulgate is, "Non turbetur cor vestrum."

<sup>3</sup>
Let thine heart be merry. (Pariterque laetetur.)

Old Testament: Judges, xix, 6. (c. 700 B. C.)
Nabal's heart was merry within him, for he was very drunken. (Cor Nabal iucundum: erat enim ebrius nimis.)

Old Testament: 1 Samuel, xxv, 36. (c. 600 B. C.)
A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance. (Cor gaudens exhilarat faciem.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 13. (c. 350 B. C.)
He that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast. (Secura mens quasi iuge convivium.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 15.

A merry heart doeth good like a medicine. (Animus gaudens aetatem floridam facit.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 22.
The heart of a man changeth his countenance, whether for good or for evil. (καρδία ἀνθρώπου ἀλλοιοῖ τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ, ἐὰν εἰς ἀγαθὰ ἐὰν τε εἰς κακὰ.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 25. (c. 190 B. C.) Quoted Ber. Rabbah, fo. 64b.

Your heart hangeth on a joly pin.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 272. (c. 1386)

Wee women commonlie saie, that a merrie heart makes a faire face, and a good complexion.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk iv, p. 162. (c. 1574) Young, tr.

As a good roote is known by a faire blossome, so is the substaunce of the heart noted by ye shew of the countenance.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 318. (1580)

A light heart lives long.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2. 18 (1595)

In faith, lady, you have a merry heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 1, 324. (1598)

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,

And merrily hent the stile-a:

A merry heart goes all the day,

Your sad tires in a mile-a.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv, 3, 132. (1610)

The joy of the heart fairly colours the face.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly, p. 46. (1611)
The heart's mirth doth make the face fayre.

Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 54. (1629)

The joy of the heart makes the face merry.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 128. (1633)

As long lives the merry heart as the sad.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 112. (1678)

"As long lives the merry man, As the wretch for all the craft he can."

No sky is heavy if the heart be light.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine, l. 362. (1763)

A blithe heart makes a beaming face. (Cœur réjoui rend le teint fleuri.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 369. (1856)

<sup>4</sup>
Have you geer, have you none, tine [lose] heart and all is gone.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 142. (1721)

"Spoken to dissuade people from desponding."

We manna weary at thir rugged braes;
Tyne heart, tyne a'.

ALEXANDER ROSS, Helenore, 83. (1778)

When ye deal wi thae folk, it's tyne heart tyne a'.

SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 50. (1818)

<sup>5</sup>
The hearts of all the French were turned to water.

KINGSLEY, Hereward the Wake. Ch. 20. (1865)

My heart was water when I thought of betraying him.

S. J. WEYMAN, Shrewsbury. Ch. 13 (1898)

<sup>6</sup>
I saw a sight that made my heart stand still.

MARY KINGSLEY, Travels in West Africa, p. 297. (1897)

<sup>7</sup>
Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens. (Levemus corda nostra cum manibus ad Dominum in caelos.)

Old Testament: Lamentations, iii, 41. (c. 600 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup>
For his heart was in his work, and the heart Giveth grace unto every Art.

LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship. l. 7. (1849)

<sup>9</sup>
His heart kep' goin' pitypat,
But hern went pity Zekle.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'. (1848)

Camilla's heart went pit-a-pat.

H. S. CUNNINGHAM, Caeruleans, i, 143. (1887)

<sup>10</sup>
Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. (ὅπου γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ θησαυρὸς ὑμῶν, ἐκεῖ καὶ ἡ καρδία ὑμῶν ἐσται.)

New Testament: Luke, xii, 34. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Ubi enim thesaurus vester est, ibi et cor vestrum erit."

For of the body he is full lord

That hath the herte in his tresor.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 2084. (c. 1365)

Only where the heart is can the treasure be found.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel. Ch. 1. (1900)

Where your heart is there your treasure is. That's an old saying, isn't it?

JOSEPH SHEARING, Airing in a Closed Carriage, p. 79. (1943)

1 Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way? (οὐχὶ ἡ καρδία ἡμῶν καιομένη ἦν ὡς ἐλάλει ἡμῖν ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ;)

New Testament: Luke, xxiv, 32. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Nonne cor nostrum ardens erat in nobis dum loqueretur in via?"

When the Heart is a fire, some Sparke will fly out of the Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5589. (1732)

2 The human heart is like a millstone in a mill: when you put wheat under it, it turns and grinds and bruises the wheat to flour; if you put no wheat, it still grinds on, but then 'tis itself it grinds and wears away.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table Talk: Of Temptation and Tribulation. (c. 1539) Paraphrased by FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Sinnegedichte (c. 1650), and translated by Longfellow.

3 My sekenes sat ay so nigh my herte.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Complaint of the Black Knight, l. 18. (c. 1402)

Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart. SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 1, 394. (1604)

Whose sinnes began to sit so near his heart.

JOHN SPEED, The History of Great Britaine. Bk. iv, ch. 3, sec. 19. (1611)

When discontent sits heavy at my heart.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 4. (1713)

The anguish . . . which sat heavy at his heart.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 30. (1821)

4 A prowde hert in a beggers brest.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 56. (c. 1430)
See POVERTY AND PRIDE.

5 Where the minde is past hope, the heart is past shame.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 341. (1580)

Where the Heart is past Hope, the Face is past Shame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5665. (1732)

6 The heart should have no witness but itself.

HELEN MACINNES, Assignment in Brittany, p. 202. (1942)

7 [His] heart lies in the right place.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. (1809)

To have one's heart in the right place.

DUGALD STEWART, Elements of the Philosophy of the Human Mind. Pt. iii, ch. 1, sec. 4: The Poet. (1827)

Their hearts are in the right place.

DISRAELI, Infernal Marriage. Pt. i, ch. 1. (1834)

His heart is in the right place.

HELEN MACINNES, Above Suspicion, p. 179. (1941)

8 It's a poor heart that never rejoiceth.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 5.

(1833) DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 4.

(1841) Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 5. (1850)

It is a poor heart that never rejoices.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Speech, to U.S. Congress, 19 May, 1943.

9 Once more to you, With a heart and a half.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act iv, sc. 2. (1636)

10 Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. (ἐκ γὰρ τοῦ περισσεύματος τῆς καρδίας τὸ στόμα λαλεῖ.)

New Testament: Matthew, xii, 34. (c. A. D. 65)

Repeated in Luke, vi, 45. The Vulgate is, "Ex abundantia cordis os loquitur." Luther translates this, "Wes das Herz voll ist, des geht der Mund über" (Whatever the heart is full of, with that the mouth runs over), and defended this by adding, "If I should follow the asses who will lay the literal words before me and translate thus: 'From the superfluity of the heart the mouth speaks,' tell me, is that talking German?" See Vom Dolmetschen, Weimar ed., xxx, ii, 637. TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 57, points out that Luther's form drove out others which were trying to establish themselves, such as, "Ex habitu cordis sonitus depromptur oris" (The sound of the mouth is derived from the habit of the heart), and "Quod in cordi, hoc est in ore" (What is in the heart, that is in the mouth). Schiller tried a different rendering in Wallenstein's Tod, i, 173, but it is Luther's which has fixed itself in tradition. A Swabian proverb is built on the same model, "Wes der Magen voll ist, läuft das Maul über" (Whatever the stomach is full of, with that the mouth runs over).

After the habundance of the herte speketh the mouth ful ofte.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 42. (c. 1389)

11 So gets ay, that sets ay,
Stout stomachis to the brae.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, Cherrie and Slae, xxxvi, 21. (c. 1580)

Set hard heart against hard hap.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 15. (1639)
Cited by Ray and Fuller.

Set a stout heart to a stay [steep] brae. Set about a difficult business with courage and constancy.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 287. (1721)

Oh, it was a steep brae that I had to climb, and it needed a stout heart.

JOHN GALT, Annals of the Parish. Ch. 1. (1821)

"Stout heart to a stay brae" then, my brave boy!

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to His Brother, 11 Feb., 1830.

12 High heaven is not high; man's heart is ever higher.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. (DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 326. (1872)

1 Soldiers, straight at my heart! (Soldats, droit au cœur!)

MARSHAL MICHEL NEY. Last words at his execution, 7 Dec., 1815.

2 A brave heart in evil case is the companion of its lord.

ONKHU, Reflections. Par. 3. (c. 1580 B.C.) No. 5645, British Museum. Gardiner, tr.

3 Hearts have as many fashions as the world has shapes. (Pectoribus mores tot sunt, quot in orbe figurae.)

OID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 759. (c. 1 B.C.)

4 A good heart helps in misfortune. (In re mala, animo si bono utare, adiuvat.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 202. (c. 200 B.C.)

There is no good above that of a good heart.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxx, 16. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

A good heart's worth gold.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 34. (1598)

A good heart conquers ill fortune.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch. 35. (1620)

5 "With ev'ry pleasing, ev'ry prudent part, Say, what can Chloe want?"—She wants a heart.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 159 (1735)

Some hearts are hidden, some have not a heart.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Let. 17, l. 73. (1810)

6 A gen'rous heart repairs a sland'rous tongue.

POPE, tr., Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 432. (1725)

7 Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop. (Moeror in corde viri humiliabit illum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xii, 25. (c. 350 B.C.)

Heaviness of the heart breaketh strength.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxviii, 18. (c. 190 B.C.)

Remember yow that Jesus Syrak seith: "a man that is joyous and glad in herte, it him conserveth florissing in his age; but soothly sorweful herte maketh his bones drye."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 6. (c. 1387)

This lies heavy in my heart. (Das frisst mir ins Herz hinein.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 16. (1808)

8 The heart knoweth his own bitterness. (Cor quod novit amaritudinem animae suae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 10. (c. 350 B.C.)

Every Heart hath its own Ache.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1418. (1732)

A burnt tortoise keeps its pain inside.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 784. (1875)

9 The fining pot is for silver, and the furnace for gold: but the Lord trieth the hearts. (Sicut igne probatur argentum, et aurum camino: ita corda probat Dominus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 3. (c. 350 B.C.)

10 My heart is like wax; it is melted in the midst of my bowels. (Factum est cor meum tamquam cera, liquescens in medio ventris mei.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxii, 14. (c. 350 B.C.)

His heart was . . .

Wax to receive, and marble to retain.

LORD BYRON, Beppo. St. 34. (1817)

It made their hearts . . . melt like wax within them.

KINGSLEY, Hereward the Wake. Ch. 31. (1866)

11 He fashioneth their hearts alike. (Qui finxit sigillatim corda eorum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxiii, 15. (c. 350 B.C.)

Every human heart is human.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha: Intro., l. 91. (1855)

The same heart beats in every human breast.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Buried Life, l. 23. (c. 1870)

Hearts are unlike as faces.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 441. (1938)

A Japanese proverb.

12 Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. (Cor mundum crea in me Deus.)

Old Testament: Psalms, li, 10. (c. 650 B.C.)

Would I were as happy as my heart is clean!

(Tam felix utinam quam pectore candidus essem!)

OID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 14, l. 43. (A. D. 13)

Brave hearts and clean! and yet—God guide them!—young.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 29. (1870)

13 Exalt not thy heart, that it be not brought low.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 25. (c. 3550 B.C.)

Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

14 One knows not what may be in the heart [of another].

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction, l. 134. (c. 3550 B.C.)

The proverb is repeated twice in the Eloquent Peasant story (B 2. 8–9, B 2. 29–30x).

A man knows not what is in the heart of his fellow.

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. xi, l. 163. (c. 550 B.C.)

There is nothing more unfathomable than the heart of man. (οὐδὲν ἀφραστότερον πέλειαι νόου ἀνθρώποισι.)

UNKNOWN, Homer's Epigrams. No. 5. (c. 400 B.C.)

The heart is deep. (Cor altum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxiv, 6. (c. 350 B.C.)

No one but God and I know what is in my heart.

ROBERT HICHENS, Garden of Allah, p. 181. (1904)

15 A honey tongue, a heart of gall.

WALTER RALEGH, The Nymph's Reply. (c. 1599) See under DISSIMULATION.

16 The mouth sheweth often what the hart thinketh.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, p. 26. (1477)

Gonzaga . . . thought, what the heart did think, the tongue would clink.

ROBERT GREENE, Mamillia. (1583) Works
(Grosart), ii, 116.

What his heart thinks his tongue speaks.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii,
2, 14. (1598) See also under CANDOR.

What the Harte thinketh, the Tongue speaketh.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 334.
(1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

When the heart is full the tongue will speak.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 356. (1721)

The mouth obeys badly when the heart murmurs.
(La bouche obéit mal lorsque le cœur murmure.)

VOLTAIRE, Tancrède. Act i, sc. 4. (1759)

He who expands his heart contracts his mouth.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 364.
(1938) A Chinese proverb.

1
The thirst of the heart cannot be slaked with a drop of water.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. 5, Apol. 8. (c. 1258)

2
The Lord hath sought him a man after his own heart. (Quaesivit Dominus sibi virum iuxta cor suum.)

Old Testament: I Samuel, xiii, 14. (c. 700 B. C.)

I am going to give you a mission after your own heart.

MRS. HUNGERFORD, Rossmoyne. Bk. i, ch. 6.
(1883)

3
I have the heart of a child. (ἀβάκην τὰν φρέν' ἔχω.)

SAPPHO. Fragments. Frag. 74. (c. 610 B. C.) See
EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 235.

4
His heart is loftier than his destiny. (Hsin kao ming pu kao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
672. (1875)

If the heart be not wounded, the eyes will not weep. (Jên pu shang hsin lei pu liu.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 802.

Though conversing face to face, their hearts are a thousand miles apart. (Tui mien yü yü, hsin ko ch'ien shan.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2282.

5
Brent brow and lily skin,
A loving heart and a leal within,
Is better than gowd or gentle kin.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 36. (1818)

6
I'll warrant him heart-whole.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 49. (1600)

7
I will wear him . . . in my heart of heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 78. (1600)

From heart of very heart, . . . welcome.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, 5, 171.
(1601)

His deep engrave In your heart's heart.

DRUMMOND OF HAWTHORNDEN, Poems (1711)
39/1. (c. 1640)

In my heart of hearts I feel your might.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality.
(1806)

She should be admitted to his heart of hearts.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of
Barset. Bk. ii, ch. 73. (1867)

8
And let me wring your heart; for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 36. (1600)

9
O tiger's heart wrapt in a woman's hide!

How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child?

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, i, 4, 137. (1591)

Tyger's heart wrapt in a Player's hide.

ROBERT GREENE, A Groat's Worth of Wit.
(1592) Parodying Shakespeare's line in his famous attack on the poet.

10
Set your heart at rest.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
ii, 1, 121. (1596) RAY, Proverbs, p. 190. (1670)

11
I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 1, 64. (1605)

"Young Strephon wears his heart upon his sleeve,"

Thus Sardon spoke, with scoffing air;
Perhaps 'twas envy made the gray-beard grieve—
For Sardon never had a heart to wear.

R. W. GILDER, Strephon and Sardon. (c. 1891)

He had not worn his heart on his sleeve, exactly, but it had been visible to men, and especially to women.

JAMES PAYN, In Marker Overt. Ch. 23. (1895)

Idiot that I am to wear my heart on my sleeve.
BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii.
(1903)

Custance doesn't wear his heart on his sleeve—or his mind in his face.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly,
p. 187. (1940)

He's not one to wear his heart on his sleeve, as the saying is.

GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 110. (1941)

12
Cursed be the heart that had the heart to do it!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 2, 15. (1592)

I hadn't the heart or face to do it.

TENNYSON, The Promise of May. Act iii, l. 377.
(1882)

13
Yet I am not harte seke.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 1640. (1526)

It will make you sick at the heart to see it.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 77.
(1581) Pettie, tr.

Heart sick with thought.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
i, 1, 69. (1594)

Heart-sick of his country's shame.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task, ii, 244. (1784)

I have concealed our troubles until I am heartsick.

MRS. HENRY WOOD, Mrs. Halliburton's Trou- bles. Bk. iii, ch. 24. (1862)

1
I thought to undermine the heart
By whispering in the ear.
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Siege of a Heart (c. 1635)

2
Thou shalt rest sweetly if thy heart reprehend thee not. (Suaviter requiesces, si cor tuum te non reprehenderit.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 6, sec. 1. (c. 1420)

Only the heart without a stain knows perfect ease (Ganz unbefleckt genießt sich nur das Herz.)

GOETHE, Iphigenie auf Tauris. Act iv, sc. 4. (1787)

3
If the teeth ache, they can be pulled. If the heart aches, what then? Shall we pluck it out?
H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 23 Feb., 1857.

4
In thy soft heart there is no stubborn flint. (Nec in tenero stat tibi corde silex.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. i, l. 64. (19 B. C.)
Mine is a soft heart. (Molle cor esse mihi.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 3, l. 32. (c. A. D. 13)
My heart is not made of horn. (Neque enim mihi cornea fibra est.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 47. (c. A. D. 58)

5
From the bottom of the heart. (Imo pectore.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 377. (19 B. C.)

6
Men are to be caught on the rebound.
WHYTE-MELVILLE, Satanella. Ch. 8. (1872)
Many a heart is caught in the rebound, i. e. after a repulse by another.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 41. (1902)

7
Weele waite on you with all our hearts.—And a piece of my luer too.

UNKNOWN, Mucedorus, sig. F4. (1598)
With all my heart and a piece of my liver.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

8
Thy hart is in thy hose!
UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays. No. 12, l. 424. (c. 1410)

Myn herte fil doun ynto my too [toe].
UNKNOWN, Hymns to the Virgin, 91. (c. 1430)
Their hertes be in theyr hose.

JOHN SKELTON, Works (Dyce), ii, 35. (c. 1525)
Your hert is in your hose all in despaire.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)
Peter being feared . . . as if his herte had been in his hele clene gon.

NICOLAS UDALL, Paraphrase of Erasmus, Luke, xxiii, 174b. (1548)
When the Bishop heard this, . . . his heart was in his heeles.

JOHN FOXE, Book of Martyrs. Bk. iii, ch. 11. (1563)

Young Eustace wore his heart in 's breeches.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Elder Brother. Act v, sc. 1. (c. 1613)

Whose soul and spirit . . . are now even in her shoes.

DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence, i, 271. (1767)

My heart sank, as the saying is, into my boots.
STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 13. (1883)
[It] sent the sister's heart into her shoes.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere, ii, 153. (1888)

Cholera was decimating the troop, and the hearts of brave men were in their boots.

ARCHIBALD FORBES, Barracks, Bivouac, and Battle, p. 2. (1891)

My head was adamant, but, as the saying is, my heart was in my boots.

E. V. LUCAS, Domesticities, p. 39. (1900) See also under FEAR.

II—The Broken Heart

9
Yet wole I telle it, though myn herte breste.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 599. (c. 1380)

For which right now myn herte ginneth blede.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde, iv, 12.
No truer word, save God's, was ever spoken,
Than that the largest heart is soonest broken.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Epigram. (c. 1846)

As an egg, when broken, never
Can be mended, but must ever
Be the same crushed egg for ever—
So shall this dark heart of mine!

THOMAS HOLLEY CHIVERS, To Allegra Florence in Heaven. (1845)

10
The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart. (Iuxta est Dominus iis, qui tribulato sunt corde.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxiv, 18. (c. 250 B. C.)

How else but through a broken heart
May Lord Christ enter in?

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol. Pt. v, st. 14. (1898)

11
Now cracks a noble heart.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 370. (1600)
My old heart is crack'd, is crack'd!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 1, 92. (1605)

12
When your heart is broken, your boats are burned. It is the end of happiness and the beginning of peace.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

13
Don't tell me about women breaking men's hearts. The only thing they can ever break is their bank-roll.

EUGENE WALTER, The Easiest Way. Act iii. (1909)

Hearts don't break; they bend and wither.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 490. (1940)

III—The Hard Heart

14
For many a man so hard is of his herte,
He may nat wepe al-thogh him sore smerte.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 229. (c. 1386)

Salomon seith: "he that hath over-hard an herte, atte laste he shal mishappe and mistyde."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 56.

1 I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. (Auferam cor lapideum de carne vestra, et dabo vobis cor carneum.)

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xxxvi, 26. (c.590 B.C.)

There is no flesh in man's obdurate heart.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task, ii, 8. (1784)

Are your hearts of flesh or stone?

WALTER SCOTT, Lord of the Isles, vi, 29. (1814)

2 Hardhearted man. (σχετλιώτατε ἀνδρῶν.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. iii, ch.155. (c.455 B.C.)

3 His heart within him is pitiless as bronze. (χάλκεον δέ οἱ ἦτορ νηλεές ἐν στήθεσιν.)

HESIOD, Theogony, l. 764. (c. 750 B.C.)

4 Hard of heart, like adamant. (ἀδάμαντος ἔχον κρατερόφρονα θυμόν.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 147. (c. 800 B.C.)

The phrase "heart of adamant" is repeated in Theogony, l. 239. Adamant (from ἀ not + δαμάω, I tame), was applied by the Greeks to their hardest metal, probably steel, and by Theophrastus to the hardest gem then known, the emery-stone of Naxos.

She's not a woman of adamant. (οὐκ ἀδαμαντίνια ἐστίν.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. iii, l. 39. (c. 270 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, who gives the Latin, "Adamantinus," adamantine. A proverbial phrase for any one inexorable or not to be moved.

5 The heart in thy breast is of iron. (σοί γε σιδήρεος ἐν φρεσὶ θυμός.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 357. (c. 850 B.C.)

Repeated in xxiv, 205; xxiv, 521; Odyssey, xxiii, 172, and elsewhere.

The heart in my breast is not of iron, but hath compassion. (οὐδέ μοι αὐτῇ | θυμός ἐνὶ στήθεσσι σιδήρεος, ἀλλ' ἐλεήμων.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. v, l. 190. (c. 850 B.C.)

A heart of iron and fashioned out of rock. (σιδηρόφρων τε καὶ πέτρας ἐργασμένος ὄστις.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l.244. (470 B.C.)

Love hath melted in me a heart of iron. ("Ἔρος . . . | κῆμε μάλθακον ἐξ ἐπότησε σιδαρίων.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxix, l. 24. (c. 270 B.C.)

6 Thy heart is ever harder than stone. (σοὶ δ' αἰεὶ καρδίη στερεωτέρη ἐστὶ λίθου.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxiii, l. 103. (c. 850 B.C.)

His heart is as firm as a stone; yea, as hard as a piece of the nether millstone. (Cor eius indurabitur tamquam lapis, et stringetur quasi malleatoris incus.)

Old Testament: Job, xli, 24. (c. 400 B.C.)

With hearts of stone are there many. (Lapideus sunt corde multi.)

ENNIUS, Erechtheus. Frag. 144, Loeb. (c. 180 B.C.)

Care makes my heart a stone, hardship wastes my body. (Lapis cor cura, aerumna corpus conficit.)

PACUVIUS, Periboea. Frag.301, Loeb. (c.160 B.C.)

Your hearts become hard, like stones or even harder.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, ii, 69. (c. 622)

It mighte han maad an herte of stoon to rewe.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 114. (c. 1380)

Som tyrant is, as ther be many oon,

That hath an herte as hard as any stoon.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale, l. 745. (c. 1388)

Me thynketh myn hert ys harder than a ston.

UNKNOWN, Pety Job, l. 318. (c. 1400) See Twenty-Six Political Poems, p. 131.

A lord that hath no pite in him, hath a hert as harde as a stone.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, p. 347. (c. 1489)

Your mvsing wald perss ane hairt of stane.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Poems, lxxv, 40. (c. 1510)

Joyn then all hearts that are not stone.

THOMAS PESTEL, Psalm for Christmas Morning. (a. 1659)

I should have a heart as hard as stone were I to remain here.

JAMES BOSWELL, Letters, ii, 364. (1789)

It was enough to melt the very heart of a stone.

JACK DOWNING, Life and Writings: Introduction. (1834)

The widow's lamentations . . . would have pierced a heart of stone.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 14. (1837)

His heart is hard as stone. (Tieh shih hsin 'chang.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, i, 231. (1872)

You must have a heart of stone.

PATRICK HAMILTON, Angel Street. Act i. (1941)

7 The heart is hardest in the softest climes; The passions flourish, the affections die.

W. S. LANDOR, Hellenics. No. xv. (1847)

8 Albeit their heartes seeme tender, yet they harden them lyke the stone of Sicilia, the which the more it is beaten the harder it is.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 56. (1579)

9 As hard-hearted as a Scot of Scotland.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 285. (1678)

10 Worse than a bloody hand is a hard heart.

SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act v, sc. 2. (1819)

11 My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine,

It shall be stony.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, v, 2, 50. (1590)

My heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 1, 193. (1605)

12 O the dullness and hardness of the human heart! (O hebetudo et duritia cordis humani.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 23, sec. 1. (c. 1420)

13 A heart as hard as flint.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, May, 1675. Hard is her heart as flint or stone.

JOHN GAY, Poems (Underhill), ii, 278. (1720)

A selfish, spiteful heart, that is as hard as a flint.
WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 22. (1823)

IV—Heart and Head

A faithless heart betrays the head unsound.
JOHN ARMSTRONG, The Art of Preserving Health. Bk. iv, l. 284. (1744)

His madness was not of the head, but heart.
LORD BYRON, Lara. Canto i, sec. 18. (1814)
For his was error of head, not heart.

THOMAS MOORE, The Irish Slave, l. 45. (c. 1820)

Here the heart
May give an useful lesson to the head.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 85. (1784)
A thick head can do as much damage as a hard heart.

HAROLD WILLIS DODDS, Epigram. (c. 1932)

Hearts may agree though Heads differ.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2480. (1732)

Who hath no head, needs no heart.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 994. (1640)

An honest heart being the first blessing, a knowing head is the second.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Peter Carr. (1785)

Every one speaks well of his heart, but no one dares speak of his head. (Chacun dit du bien de son cœur, et personne n'en ose dire de son esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 98. (1665)
Not every one who knows his own mind knows his own heart also. (Tous ceux qui connaissent leur esprit ne connaissent pas leur cœur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 103. (1665)
The head cannot impersonate the heart for long. (L'esprit ne saurait jouer longtemps le personnage du cœur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 108. (1665)

The head is always the dupe of the heart. (L'esprit est toujours la dupe du cœur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 102. (1665)
Monsieur de Rochefoucauld, in his Maxims, says, that l'esprit est souvent la dupe du cœur. If he had said, instead of souvent, presque toujours [almost always], I fear he would have been nearer the truth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

La Rochefoucauld went even farther, for he wrote "toujours" not "presque toujours."

Nine times in ten, the heart governs the understanding.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 May, 1749.

His heart runs away with his head.
GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Who Wants a Guinea. Act i, sc. 1. (1805)

My books don't tell one that it is a good heart that gets on in the world: it is a hard head.

LORD LYTTON, My Novel. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1853)

We possess nothing that is not mortal except the blessings of heart and head. (Nil non mortale tenemus | pectoris exceptis ingenii que bonis.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 7, l. 44. (c. A. D. 10)

The head alone knows what dwells in the heart.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 95. (c. 900)

If wrong our hearts, our heads are right in vain.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 281. (1745)

HEAT

See also Hot

We see that one self same sunshine doth both harden the clay, and dissolve the wax.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Hemetes. (1579) Works, ii, 476.

By the heat of the sun wax is softened, and yet clay is hardened.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861) ii, 476. (1629)

The same heat that melts the wax, will harden the clay.

WILLIAM SECKER, The Nonsuch Professor in His Meridian Splendor, ii, 25. (1660)

It's not so much the heat as the humidity.

LONDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea Act i. (1906)

It's not the heat that gets you, it's the humidity.

JONATHAN LATIMER, The Lady in the Morgue, p. 29. (1936)

As they put it in Saint Louis, it isn't the heat, it's the humidity.

ROBERT G. DEAN, Layoff, p. 216. (1942)

We must do something, and i' the heat.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 1, 312. (1605)

All-conquering heat, oh, intermit thy wrath!

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 451. (1727)

Heat, ma'am! It was so dreadful here that I found there was nothing left for it but to take off my flesh and sit in my bones.

SYDNEY SMITH. (c. 1830) See Lady Holland, Memoir. Ch. 9. But "Heat breaks no bones" says a Russian proverb.

He gives off more heat than cold. (Et il remest plus chaud que brese.)

MONTAIGLON, ed., Recueil des Fabliaux: De Constant du Hamel, l. 162. (c. 1250)

After great heat cometh cold.

CHAUCER (?), Proverbs, l. 3. (c. 1390)

A matter begon with such heate, shoulde not ende with a bitter colde.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 303. (1580) See also under ARGUMENT.

Neither heat nor cold abides always in the sky. (Ne caldo, ne gelo resta mai in cielo.)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Italian, p. 47. (1678)

TO BLOW HOT AND COLD, see HOT AND COLD.

HEATHEN

<sup>1</sup> The Heathens when they died, went to Bed without a Candle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4589. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> The heathen, in his blindness,
Bows down to wood and stone.

REGINALD HEBER, From Greenland's Icy Mountains. (1812)

The 'eathen in 'is blindness bows down to wood an' stone;

'E don't obey no orders unless they is 'is own.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The 'Eathen. (1892)

<sup>3</sup> A very heathen in the carnal part,
Yet still a sad, good Christian at her heart.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 67. (1735) Referring to the Duchess of Hamilton.

<sup>4</sup> Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? (Quare fremuerunt Gentes, et populi meditati sunt inania?)

Old Testament: Psalms, ii, l. (c. 350 B. C.) Repeated in Acts, iv, 25.

HEAVEN

See also Paradise

<sup>5</sup> No coming to heaven with dry eyes.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 373. (1629) "The proverb is too true for many, No man comes to heaven with dry eyes."—Ibid, p. 180. The Dutch say, "Men komt niet lagchende in dem Hemel" (Men go not laughing to heaven)

<sup>6</sup> Heaven only knows how dear he was to me.
ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 164. (1711)

"For heaven's sake, no," said his companion.

WALTER SCOTT, The Black Dwarf. Ch. 3. (1816)

How in heaven's name did you manage it?

EDNA LYALL, In Golden Days. Bk. iii, ch. 14. (1885)

<sup>7</sup> Jerusalem the golden, with milk and honey blest.

(Urbs Syon aurea, patria lactea, cive decora.)
BERNARD OF CLUNY, Hora Novissima: Urbs Syon Aurea. (c. 1150)

Where the wicked cease from troubling,
And the weary are at rest.

GERALD MASSEY, Jerusalem the Golden. (c. 1870)

That heaven, in which "the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 10. (1850)

<sup>8</sup> I can hardly think there was ever any scared into Heaven.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 52. (1643)

No Man was ever scared into Heaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3607. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> What cares heaven for the cries of the dogs?

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 81. (1817)

What do government officials care for the complaints of the lower classes?

<sup>10</sup>

I am in heaven. (In caelo sum.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ii, No. 9. (c. 50 B. C.)
With delight.

I knew a man . . . caught up to the third heaven.
(ἤλθον οὐρανόν.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, xii, 2. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Ad tertium caelum."

And we have created over you seven heavens.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, ii, 178. (c. 630) Sale, tr. The Mohammedans recognized seven heavens, as well as the Jews, corresponding to the seven planets. The Egyptian cosmography had eleven heavens.

Hee seemed to bee rapt into the thirde heaven.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 133. (1576)

He looked upon himself as approaching to the seventh heaven.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 26. (1824)

The Sheik . . . rolled his eyes . . . between every draught, as though the drink . . . had come from the seventh heaven.

A. W. KINGLAKE, Eothen. Ch. 17. (1844)

Lady Ramsay was in the seventh heaven of delight.

rita, After Long Grief. Ch. 22. (1883) The highest heaven, from the Jewish and Moslem seventh heaven, the abode of Jahveh, or Allah, and the most exalted angels.

<sup>11</sup>

Heaven means to be one with God.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) As quoted by FARRAR, What Heaven Is.

Heaven is the presence of God.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Seek and Find. (1879)

Heaven is to be at peace with things.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Sonnets. No. 49. (1894)

<sup>12</sup>

Heav'n would no bargain for its blessings drive.

JOHN DRYDEN, Astrea Redux, l. 137. (1660)

Heaven is a cheap Purchase, whatever it cost.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2481. (1732)

'Tis heaven alone that is given away,

'Tis only God may be had for the asking.

LOWELL, Vision of Sir Launfal: Prelude. (1848)

<sup>13</sup>

The way to Heaven is as near in the Holy Land (if not nearer) as in England or Spain.

ELEANOR OF CASTILE, wife of Edward I, when she insisted on accompanying him on a crusade. (1270) See CAMDEN, Remains, p. 283.

Whersomeuer one dye, the waye to the other worlde is all like.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 35. (1477) Quoting Pythagoras.

We know the way to heaven to be as ready by water as by land.

FRIAR ELSTOWE, when threatened by Essex with drowning in the Thames. (1532) See FROUDE, History of England. Ch. 5; STOWE, Annales of England, p. 562.

A terrible tempest did arise, and Sir Humphrey said cheerfully, . . . "We are as near heaven here at sea as at land."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Devon, i, 418. (1583) These words, uttered by Gilbert, are said to have been heard by the men on board his companion ship, the Hind, just before his own ship, the Squirrel, disappeared among the icebergs off the Azores in 1583.

He sat upon the deck,

The Book was in his hand;

"Do not fear! Heaven is as near,"

He said, "by water as by land."

LONGFELLOW, Sir Humphrey Gilbert. (1848)

All places are distant from heaven alike.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 4. (1621)

To one bewailing himself that he should not die in his own country: "Be of comfort," saith he [Diogenes], "for the way to heaven is alike in every place."

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 19. (1669)

1 He will never get to Heaven, that desires to go thither alone.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2411. (1732)

Heaven is worth the whole World.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2482.

Heaven will make amends for all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2483.

2 Hello, Central! give me heaven,
For my mama's there.

CHARLES K. HARRIS, Hello, Central! Give Me Heaven. (1901)

3 All this, and Heaven too!

PHILIP HENRY. (a. 1696) See MATTHEW HENRY, Life of Philip Henry, p. 70. Title of novel by Rachel Field. (1938)

All this and a place in the country.

LEE THAYER, Hanging's Too Good, p. 6. (1943)

4 Olympus, where they say, is the abode of the gods, which stands for ever. (Ὀλύμπιον δὲ θεῶν ἔδος ἀσφαλὲς αἰεὶ ἔμμεναι.)

HOMER, The Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 42. (c. 850 B. C.)

5 Heaven is largely a matter of digestion.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 34. (1914)

The Coney Island of the Christian imagination.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Roycroft Book of Epigrams.

6 Heaven protects children, sailors and drunken men.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 12. (1861) Quoted as a saying. See DRINKING: DRUNKENNESS.

7 Great is the idleness which prevails in heaven. (Magna otia caeli.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 394. (c. A. D. 120)
Perhaps a play upon the Latin proverb, "In caelo quies" (In heaven there is rest).

8 By continual use of the gates of Heaven it is possible to preserve them from dust. (T'ien mǎn k'ai hoh nǎng wéi t'zu.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue) Sec. 10. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

The gates of heaven . . . are not unlocked with a golden key.

WILLIAM SECKER, The Nonsuch Professor, ii, 134. (1660)

The ways of men are narrow, but the gates of heaven are wide.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 489. (1940)

9 The net of Heaven has large meshes, and yet nothing escapes it.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 73. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

10 Heaven has no favourites; it always aids the good man.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 79. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

Heaven always favors good desires. (Siempre favorece el cielo los buenos deseos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

Heaven responds to man as quickly as shadow to form or echo to voice. (T'ien chih ying jên min ju ying hsiang.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2315. (1875)

Heaven stands by the good man. (Ch'i jên t'ien hsiang.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2327.

11 Heaven does not speak.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. v, pt. i, ch. 5, sec. 5. Quoting Confucius.

12 We are no nearer heaven on top of Mount Cenis than at the bottom of the sea. (Nous ne sommes pas plus prez du ciel sur le mont Cenis, qu'au fond de la mer.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

13 It is the opinion of Socrates and mine also, that the wisest judging of heaven is not to judge of it at all. (C'est, à l'advis de Socrate, et au mien aussi, le plus sagement jugé du ciel. que n'en juger point.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

Heaven were not Heaven, if we knew what it were.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Against Fruition. (c. 1635)

14 A Persian's Heav'n is easily made,
'Tis but black eyes and lemonade.

THOMAS MOORE, Intercepted Letters. No. vi, l. 32. (1806)

That Prophet ill sustains his holy call,

Who finds not heav'n's to suit the tastes of all.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan, l. 558. (1817)

15 If his wife or any of his children had been diseased or troubled, he would say vnto them: "We may not looke at our pleasures to goe to heauen in Fetherbeddes."

SIR THOMAS MORE, in HARPSFIELD, Life, p. 75. (c. 1520)

Wee cannot goe to heaven on beds of down.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentleman, p. 152. (1630)

To go to heaven in a featherbed. Non est e terris mollis ad astra via. (Not easy is the passage from the earth to the stars.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 243. (1678)

None go to heaven on a featherbed.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 718. (1681)

There is no going to Heaven in a Sedan.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4910. (1732)

1 That they may be considered wise, they rail at heaven. (Ut putentur sapere, coelum vituperant.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 6, l. 26. (c. 25 B. C.)

2 A man must go old to the court, and young to a cloister, that would go from thence to heaven.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1678)

3 Sydney Smith said that his idea of Heaven was eating foie gras to the sound of trumpets.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Table-Talk. (1856)

4 Our daily bread depends on Heaven; Heaven knows how each man gets his living. (Ch'ih fan k'ao t'ien; ch'ih fan pu man t'ien.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2320. (1875)

Men deceive good men; men fear bad men; Heaven does neither. (Jên shan jên ch'í t'ien pu ch'í; jên o jên p'a t'ien pu p'a.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2322.

Man may not know, but Heaven does. (Jen pu chih t'ien chih.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2340

5 Heaven . . . The treasury of everlasting joy.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, ii, 1, 17. (1590)

6 I hope we shall meet in heaven.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

7 In heaven I hope to bake my own bread and clean my own linen.

H. D. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts. 3 March, 1841.

Heaven is a place where you can have a little conversation.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT. As recorded by THOREAU, Winter, 17 Jan., 1860.

Heaven might be defined as the place which men avoid.

H. R. THOREAU, Excursions. (1863)

8 No man must go to Heaven who has not sent his heart thither before.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety. (c. 1755)

9 Heaven lies about us in our infancy.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St. 5. (1803)

Infancy: The period of our lives when, according to Wordsworth, "Heaven lies about us." The world begins lying about us pretty soon afterward.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

10 Heye he sit that akere's deleth.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. (c. 1300) In Anglia, 51.267.

He sits above that deals aikers [acres].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595)

Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge

That no king can corrupt.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 1, 100. (1612)

Well, God's above all.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 105. (1605)

II—Heaven and Earth

11

If you are ignorant about things of earth, how can you know about things of heaven?

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 96a. (c. 450)

12 He finds no ascent to heaven and no seat on earth.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 603. (1817)

So perplexed he knows not where to turn.

13

The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool. (Caelum sedes mea, terra autem scabellum pedum meorum.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxvi, 1. (c. 725 B. C.)

14

If heuene be on this erthe . . .

It is in cloistere or in scale.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman Text B, passus x, l. 300. (1377)

I shal have myn hevene in erthe here.

CHAUCER, Marchantes Tale, l. 403. (c. 1388)

Certainly, it is Heaven upon Earth, to have a Man's Minde move in Charitie.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth. (1597)

A Heaven on Earth.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 208. (1667)

15

Heaven is our heritage,

Earth but a player's stage.

THOMAS NASHE, In Plague Time. (c. 1600)

16

I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. (καὶ εἶδον οὐρανὸν καινὸν καὶ γῆν καινὴν . . . καὶ ἡ θάλασσα οὐκ ἔστιν ἔτι.)

New Testament: Revelation, xxi, 1. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Et vidi caelum novum, et terram novam. Primum enim caelum, et prima terra abiit, et mare iam non est."

17

Without scaling mountains no one can know the height of heaven; without descending valleys, no one can know the depth of earth.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 18. (1875)

18

Absent thee from felicity awhile,

And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 357. (1600)

III—Heaven and Hell

<sup>1</sup>
A man may go to Heaven with half the pains which it costs him to purchase Hell.

FIELDING, Jonathan Wild. Bk. iv, ch. 15. (1743)
Heaven has a shining path—none walk along it; Hell's gateless wall to force, the nations throng it.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 323. (1872) The Germans say, "In die Hölle kommt man mit grösserer Mühe, als in den Himmel" (Men take more trouble to get to hell than to heaven), or, less literally, "The way to hell is more difficult than the way to heaven."

<sup>2</sup>
All of Heaven and Hell is not known till hereafter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 540. (1732)
Better go to Heaven in Rags, than to Hell in Embroidery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 898.
Hell is wherever Heaven is not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2489.

<sup>3</sup>
In heaven all is bliss, in hell all is misery; on earth, between the two, both one thing and the other. (En el cielo todo es contento; en el infierno todo es pesar; en el mundo, como en medio, uno y otro.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 211. (1647)

<sup>4</sup>
They that be in hell, wene there is none other heuen.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
CAMDEN, Remains, p. 334. (1605)

They verifie the olde Proverb, which is, That such as were never but in Hell, doo thinke that there is no other Heaven.

SIR JOHN SMYTHE, Discourses Concerning the Formes of Weapons: Proeme. (1590)

He that is in hell thinks there is no other heuen.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Colours of Good and Evil. Sec. 6. (1597) From the Italian, "Chi è in inferno non sa ciò che sia cielo" (He who is in hell knows not what heaven is).

For, those the proverb saith, that liue in hell, Can ne'er conceive what 'tis in heauen to dwell.

GEORGE WITHER, Juvenalia: Motto. (1621)

They that be in hell, think there's no better in heauen.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 102. (1670)

<sup>5</sup>
I desire to go to Hell, not to Heaven. In Hell I shall enjoy the company of popes, kings and princes but in Heaven are only beggars, monks, hermits and apostles.

NICCOLO MACHIAVELLI. On his deathbed. (1530)
The Germans say, "Himmel fur Klima; Hölle fur Gesellschaft" (Heaven for climate, Hell for Society).

<sup>6</sup>
The mind is its own place, and in it self Can make a Heav'n of Hell, a Hell of Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 254. (1667)

Heaven and hell are near man, yea, in him.

SWEDENBORG, Arcana Coelestia. Sec. 8919. (1749)

I sent my Soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that After-life to spell:

And by and by my Soul return'd to me,
And answered, "I Myself am Heav'n and Hell."

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., Omar Khayyám. (1859)

Heaven but the Vision of fulfill'd Desire,
And Hell the Shadow from a Soul on fire.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., Omar Khayyám.
Heaven and hell are within the heart.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 363. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>7</sup>
Hell is veiled in delights, and Heaven in hardships and miseries.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 85.

<sup>8</sup>
Between us and heaven, hell or nothingness there is nothing but life, which of all things in the world is the frailest. (Entre nous et le ciel, l'enfer ou le néant, il n'y a donc que la vie, qui est la chose du monde la plus fragile.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, art. 2. (c. 1660)

<sup>9</sup>
To be in hell is to drift: to be in heaven is to steer.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

<sup>10</sup>
I had rather rule within my dark domain than to rehabit Coelum Imperium, and there live . . . a slave of the Most High.

ANTHONY STAFFORD, Niobe. (1611)

Better to reign in Hell than serve in Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 263. (1667)

The devil used to say that it was better to reign in Hell than to be a valet-de-chambre in Heaven.

FIELDING, Jonathan Wild. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1743)

<sup>11</sup>
For 'tis not where we lie, but whence we Fell,
The loss of Heaven's the greatest Pain in Hell.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

To appreciate heaven well

'Tis good for a man to have some fifteen minutes of hell.

WILL CARLETON, Gone With a Handsomer Man. (1885)

IV—The Heavens

See also Sky

<sup>12</sup>
Tho' the Heavens be glorious, yet they are not all Stars.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5010. (1732)

<sup>13</sup>
The road to the heavens remains. (Restat iter caeli.

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 37. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>14</sup>
The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handywork. (Caeli enarrant gloriam Dei, et opera manuum eius annunciant firmamentum.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xix, 1. (c. 250 B. C.)

HEAVY

- 1
Each heart as heavy as a log.
COWPER, The Yearly Distress. St. 4. (c. 1780)
- 2
Heavy as golde is.
PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise: Massif. (1530)
- 3
The weght of wickedness that makis youre herts heuyere than lede.
RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE, The Psalter, iv, 3. (c. 1335)
- Myn herte is hevye so led.
Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 121. (c. 1320)
- My synnnes ben hevye as hevye leed.
THOMAS BRAMPTON, Paraphrase on the Seven Penitential Psalms, p. 13. (1414)
- Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 5, 17. (1595)
- Try his wit, señor, you'll find it as heavy as lead.
DRYDEN, Love Triumphant. Act i, sc. 1. (1694)
- He is heavy as lead.
BERNARD MANDEVILLE, The Fable of the Bees, p. 54. (1714)
- My head is as heavy as so much lead.
DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 7. (1850)
- 4
They are as heavy as dumplings.
H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 7 Oct., 1857.

HEDGE

- 5
Without a hedge a vineyard is laid waste.
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxvi, 25. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.
- 6
Better to keep under an old hedge than creepe under a new furs-bush.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 25. (1639)
- Learne to Lye Warm; or, An Apology for that Proverb,
'Tis Good Sheltering under an Old Hedge.
UNKNOWN. Title of tract. (1674) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 351. (1678)
- Better shelter under an old Hedge, than a young Furzbush.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 922. (1732)
- It's better sheltering under an auld hedge than under a new-planted wood.
SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 46. (1818)
- 7
You'd break a gap where the hedge is whole.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 80. (1639)
- You seek a brack [gap] where the hedge is whole.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 165. (1670)
- 8
He has made many a white hedge black.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 191. (1639)
- By stealing linen.
- 9
Where the hedge is lowest, men maie soonest ouer.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
- Where the hedge is lowest that commonlie is sonest cast to ground.
WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 65. (1564)
- A low hedge is easily leapt over.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 317. (1605) Cited by Ray and Fuller.
- The devil chose rather to assault Eve than Adam. . . . He labours to creep over where the hedge is lowest.
WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, i, 296. (1655)
- Men loup the dike where it is leaghest.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 250. (1721)
- Where the Hedge is lowest, Men leap over.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5666. (1732)
- 10
One who ever loved to be on the better side of the hedge.
PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy, lxi, epit. 1246. (1600) In the better position.
- We are on the safer side of the hedge.
RICHARD BAXTER, Worc. Petit. Def., p. 24. (1653)
- To be on the wrong side of the hedge, or mistaken.
ROBERT AINSWORTH, Thesaurus Linguae Latinae: Erro. (1816)
- 11
A wall between preserves love.
SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 168. (1710)
- A hedge between keeps friendship green.
A. B. CHAELES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 93. (1875)
- LOVE YOUR NEIGHBOR, YET PULL NOT DOWN YOUR HEDGE, see under NEIGHBOR.
- 12
I am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lurch.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 2, 25. (1601)
- This rocking trick, to hedge thus, . . . to dodge and shuffle with God.
ISAAC BARROW, Sermons, iii, 397. (c. 1670)
- Now, Criticks, do your worst, that here are met; For, like a Rook, I have hedg'd in my bet.
GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, The Rehearsal. (1672)
- [Some] like cunning Betters, sate judiciously hedging, and so ordered their matters that which side soever prevailed, they would be sure to be the Winners.
ANDREW MARVELL, Mr. Smirke. (1676)
- That's laying against yourself.—I love a hedge.
FIELDING, Pasquin. Act iii, sc. 1. (1736)
- To make a hedge; to secure a bet, or wager, laid on one side, by taking the odds on the other.
Sporting Magazine, xviii, 100. (1801)
- Prophecy as much as you like, but always hedge.
O. W. HOLMES, Essays: Bread and Newspapers. (1861)
- It was . . . natural for him to trim and hedge.
LORD WOLSELEY, Life of Marlborough, ii, 291. (1894)
- 13
Man seith to biworde, haegc sitteth that aceres dacleth.
SKEAT, Early English Proverbs, ch. 6. Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. (1130) Hedge abides that fields divides.
- NO HEDGE WITHOUT EARS, see under EARS.

HEEL

<sup>1</sup>
To travel long out West, a man must be, in the local phrase, "well heeled."

BEADLE, The Undeveloped West, p. 351. (1873)
Well provided with money.

<sup>2</sup>
This was his signal to "heel" himself and come upon the ground.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Life Amongst the Modocs, p. 301. (1873) To arm himself, from arming a game-cock with a gaff or spur. A cock is said to be heeled when his spurs are on.

The man had gone off to "heel himself," and there would soon be trouble.

W. WRIGHT, Big Bonanza, p. 363. (1877)

Her stripling brought an armful of aged sheet-music from their room—for this bride went "heeled" as you might say.

MARK TWAIN, A Tramp Abroad. Ch. 32. (1880)

<sup>3</sup>
It's time to lend my horse a heele.

ZACHARY BOYD, Zion's Flowers, p. 62. (c. 1620)
Ply'd | With iron heel, his courser's side.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 484. (1663)

The word heel is taken for the spur itself. Hence we say . . . "he knows the heels; he obeys the heels; he answers the heels."

OSBALDISTON, The British Sportsman, p. 395. (1792)

<sup>4</sup>
Touch me not on the sair heel.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595)

<sup>5</sup>
Let your uncle kick his heels in your hall.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Minor. Act ii. (1760) To stand waiting impatiently.

I'll trouble him [not] to leave me here kicking my heels.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 13. (1833)

<sup>6</sup>
He was clapt in Prison, and came not out but with his heels forward.

G.H., tr., History of the Cardinals of the Roman Church. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1670)

How came you hither, sir?—Faith, like a Corpse into Church, boy, with my heels foremost.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love Makes a Man. Act iv, sc. 2. (1701)

<sup>7</sup>
Many a one hath had better counsell from his heeles, then from his elbows.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, xix, 8. (1612)

One pair of heels sometimes is worth two pair of hands.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2/1. (1659)

One Pair of Heels is worth two Pair of Hands; that is, it is better to run for it than be beaten.

NATHAN BAILEY, Household Dictionary: Heel. (1736) See also under LEG.

<sup>8</sup>
Showing the hollow of the foot. (τὸ κοῖλον τοῦ ποδὸς δείξαι.)

HESYCHIUS, Lexicon. (c. A. D. 500) The Latin is, "Volam pedis ostendere."

Shewe a fayre paire of heeles.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
In the field a fayre payre of heeles to shew.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig. D3. (1577)
Darest thou . . . play the coward with thy indenture and show it a fair pair of heels and run from it?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 52. (1597)
But for these shackles, debt would often shew credit a light pair of heeles.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 55. (1630)

He hath shewed them a fair pair of heels.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1678)

Folly will show a clean pair of heels.

WALTER SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 40. (1819)

Your husband will show them a clean pair of heels off the Nore.

BESANT AND RICE, Chaplain of the Fleet. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1881)

Black Dog, in spite of his wounds, showed a wonderful clean pair of heels.

STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 2. (1883)

When a person runs away through fear, he shews a pair of clean heels.

WILLIAM DICKINSON, Glossary of Cumberland, p. 66. (1899)

<sup>9</sup>
I forthwith took to my heels. (Pedibus protinam me dedi.)

NAEVIUS, Colax. Frag. 36, Loeb. (c. 220 B. C.)
He found himself a refuge in his heels. (Pedibus perflugium peperit.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 161. (c. 200 B. C.)

I took to my heels as fast as I could. (Ego me in pedes quantum queo.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 844. (161 B. C.)

With what timid foot he speeds away! (Ut timido pede vadit!)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xxviii, frag. 845, Loeb. (c. 131 B. C.)

This Manes had taken his heeles and renne away.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, i, 127. (1542)

Let us take our heels and run away.

WILLIAM WALKER, Idiomatologia Anglo-Latina: Preface. (1690)

The rabble incontinently took to their heels.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker. Bk. vii, ch. 11. (1809)

We just unfurled our heels and shoved.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 40. (1884)

I told the king to give his heels wings.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 342. (1889)

<sup>10</sup>
His yeomen bolde cast their heeles in their necke, and friskit it after him.

THOMAS NASHE, Lenten Stuffe, p. 8. (1599)
They leaped headlong.

<sup>11</sup>
You're treading on my heels. (Calces deteris.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 952. (c. 200 B. C.)

There bene also somme as men saie

That folwen Simon ate heles.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 18. (1390)

Death preaceth hard at your heeles.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Calvin upon the Psalms, xlix, 13. (1571)

I kept close at his heels.

JOHN TYNDALL, Glaciers of the Alps. Bk. i, ch. 16. (1860)

1

Let him cool his heels there till morning.

WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Match at Midnight. Act iii. (1633) To be kept waiting.

O whilst their heels cool how do their hearts burn?

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Courtier. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 17. (1642)

In this parlour Amelia cooled her heels, as the phrase is, near a quarter of an hour.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. vi, ch. 9. (1752)

2

[He] laid an archer by the heels.

REGINALD SCOT, The Discoverie of Witchcraft. Bk. iii, ch. 15. (1584)

Seized upon him and clapped him by the heels.

GUIBON GODDARD, Introduction to Burton's Diary, i, 160. (1654)

Now a new Misfortune feels,

Dreading to be laid by th' Heels.

SWIFT, The Legion Club, l. 197. (1736)

3

It is young Orlando, that tripped up the wrestler's heels.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 225. (1600)

Thy Constancy hath trip'd up Fortune's heel.

JOHN TAYLOR, King's Majesty. (1618)

Death has tripped up my heels.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Rosamund. Sc. 7. (1707)

I wish it were in my power to kick up his heels.

BARING-GOULD, The Gaverocks, iii, 58. (1887)

4

Better a fair pair of heels than die at the gallows.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 67. (1620)

Better a fair Pair of Heels, than a Halter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 861. (1732)

5

[He] turn'd short on his heel.

WILLIAM THOMPSON, The Royal Navy-men's Advocate, p. 38. (1757)

[He] turned upon his heel, and was striding out of the room.

FRANCES BURNEY, Cecilia, i, 61. (1782)

He turned round on his heels and marched out.

SCOTT, Cruise of the Midge. Ch. 8. (1834)

6

Go with their hose out at heeles.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, 82b. (1553)

Worne out at heeles and elbows.

ABRAHAM FRAUNCE, The Lawiers Logike. Pt. i, iv, 27. (1588)

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 2, 164. (1605)

Down at heels and out at elbows.

WILLIAM DARRELL, A Gentleman Instructed in the Conduct of a Happy Life, p. 212. (1732)

Her shoes went down at heel.

R. H. BARRHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: St. Odille. (1840)

Fray'd i' the knees, and out at elbow . . . and bursten at the toes, and down at heels.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act i, sc. 1. (1875)

You've certainly run down at the heels.

HILEA BAILEY, The Smiling Corpse, p. 112. (1941)

7

He toke a surfet with a cup,

That made hym tourne his heels up.

WYNKYN DE WORDE, Maid Emyln. (c. 1500)

He strake him with his bullet full in the forehead . . . and withall turned vp his heeles.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles of Ireland, iii, 93/2. (1577)

I would not for a duckat she had kicked vp her heeles.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. (1604) Passer oultre, to tipe up the heeles, to die.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Passer. (1611)

He hath turned up their heels, and hath given them an everlasting fall.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Heavenly Foot-man, p. 148. (1688)

His heels he'll kick up,

Slain by an onslaught fierce of hiccup.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Flight of the Duchess. Pt. xvii, l. 33. (1845)

8

Exit the heel to end heels.

JEAN WEBB, No Match for Murder, p. 9. (1942)

I felt like a heel.

LEE THAYER, Hanging's Too Good, p. 85. (1943)

Gabrielle was his Achilles heel. She'd be glad to know that. Though she might resent being called a heel.

LAWRENCE TREAT, O as in Omen, p. 231. (1943)

HEEL OF ACHILLES, see under ACHILLES.

9

Ay hele ouer hed hourlande aboute.

UNKNOWN, Early English Alliterative Poems, C, 269. (c. 1350)

I couped Mungo's ale Clean heels o'er head.

ALEXANDER ROSS, Helennore. (1768)

He gave [him] such an involuntary kick in the Face as drove him Head over Heels.

UNKNOWN, The Contemplative Man, i, 133. (1771) "Head over heels," although fairly common in modern usage, is a meaningless corruption of "heels over head."

Why did you hurl royalty . . . head over heels out of yonder Tuileries' window?

THACKERAY, Paris Sketch-Book, p. 32. (1840)

A total . . . summerset, or tumble heels-over-head.

CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, iv, 523. (1864)

HEIR

See also Inheritance

10

The heir of eternity, self-begotten and self-born.

Book of the Dead. Ch. 15. (c. 4000 B. C.) (Papyrus of Nekht.)

Behold I am the heir of eternity, to whom hath been given everlastingness.

Book of the Dead. Ch. 61, l. 10. (c. 4000 B. C.) (Papyrus of Nefer-uben-f.)

I the heir of all the ages, in the foremost files of time.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 178. (1842)

The Fork is commonly the Rake's Heir.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4536. (1732)

I gave the mouse a hole, and she is become my heir.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 99. (1640)

Let an ill man lie in thy straw, and he looks to be thy heir.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 273.

Heir follows heir as wave succeeds on wave. (Heres | heredem alterius velut unda super-venit undam.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 175. (20 B. C.)

Never think of leaving perfumes or wine to your heir. Let him have your money, but give these to yourself. (Unguentum heredi numquam nec vina relinquas. | Ille habeat nummos, haec tibi tota dato.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 126. (C.A. D. 85)

Our lawyers have this saying, that God onely makes heirs.

DUDLEY NORTH, Oeconomics, p. 25. (1669)

North is referring to Coke's dictum, "Haerem Deus facit, non homo" (God, not man, makes the heir), sometimes given, "Deus solus haerendem facere potest" (Only God can make an heir).

The tears of an heir are laughter behind a mask. (Heredis fletus sub persona risus est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 258. (c. 43 B. C.) Quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, bk. xvii, ch. 14; BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia, No. 18; MONTAIGNE, bk. i, ch. 37, the French being, "Les pleurs d'un hérétier sont des ris sous le masque." The Germans say, "Des Erben Weinen ist heimliches Lachen" (The heir's crying is secret laughter).

It is better to bring forth an heir than to seek one. (Heredem ferre utilius est quam quaerere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 259. (c. 43 B. C.) One can trust the heir by birth more than the heir by will. (Magis fidus heres nascitur quam scribitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 364. There is a law maxim, "Haeres legitimus est quem nuptiae demonstrant" (The legitimate heir is he whom the marriage rites indicate as such).

He stows treasure in the tomb who makes an old man his heir. (Thesaurum in sepulcro ponit qui senem heredem facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 692.

Land was never lost for want of an heir.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 165. (1678)

The Italians say, "Ai ricchi non mancano parenti" (The rich never want kindred)

The next heir is always suspected and hated. (Suspectum semper invisumque qui proximus destinaretur.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, sec. 21. (A. D. 109)

Merely to come into the world the heir of a fortune is not to be born, but to be still-born, rather.

H. D. THOREAU, Life Without Principle. (1854)

HELL

See also Heaven and Hell

I—Hell: Definitions

Hell is the work of prigs, pedants and professional truth-tellers.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books. (c. 1890)

Eek Job seith: that "in helle is noon-ordre of rule."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 10. (c. 1389)

The religion of Hell is patriotism and the government is an enlightened democracy.

J. B. CABELL, Jurgen. Ch. 38. (1919)

Hell is no other, but a soundlesse pit, Where no one beame of comfort peeps in it.

ROBERT HERRICK, Noble Numbers: Hell. (1648)

The fire of Hell this strange condition hath, To burn, not shine (as learned Basil saith).

ROBERT HERRICK, Noble Numbers: Hell Fire.

Hell hath no limits, nor is circumscrib'd In one selfe place, for where we are is hell, And where hell is, must we euer be.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus, l. 553. (c. 1590)

Himself is his own dungeon.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 385. (1634)

The heart of man is the place the Devils dwell in: I feel sometimes a Hell within my self.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 51. (1643)

The Hell within him, for within him Hell He brings.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 20. (1667)

Which way I fly is Hell; my self am Hell.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 75.

I fear no further hell than that I feel.

EDWARD YOUNG, Busiris. Act i, sc. 1. (1719)

Hell is the place where the satisfied compare disappointments.

PHILIP MOELLER, Madame Sand. Act ii. (1917)

Hell is both sides of the tomb, and a devil may be respectable and wear good clothes.

CHARLES H. PARKHURST, Sermons: The Pharisee's Prayer. (1909)

Hell is a place where you have nothing to do but amuse yourself.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

1 Hell is a city much like London.

P. B. SHELLEY, Peter Bell the Third. Pt. iii, l. 1. (1819)

2 Hell itself may be contained within the compass of a spark.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 19 Dec., 1837.

II—Hell: Apothegms

3 To go to heaven in a wheelbarrow [i. e. to go to hell].

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 144. (1629) The context is, "This oppressor must needs go to heaven. . . . But it will be, as the by-word is, in a wheelbarrow: the fiends and not the angels, will take hold on him."

He may go to hell on a hard-trotting horse and a porcupine saddle.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night iii, p. 45. (1854)

That girl of ours is riding to hell on a broomstick.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous With the Past. p. 21. (1940)

We're goin' to hell in a hand basket.

BAYARD KENDRICK, The Odor of Violets, p. 55. (1941)

4 Helle hund, thaes nama . . . waes Ceruerus.

KING AELFRED, tr., Boethius. Ch. 35, sec. 6. (c. 888)

From that hell hounde,

That leyth in cheynes bounde.

SKELTON, Phyllyp Sparrowe, l. 89. (c. 1525)

The whoreson old hellcat.

MIDDLETON, The Witch. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1600)

We cannot be too bitter, she's a hell-cat.

CHAPMAN AND SHIRLEY, The Ball. Act iii, sc. 2. (1632)

A hell-cat, who hates me as she does the devil.

MARRYAT, The Dog-fiend. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1837)

Ef dey ever wuz a hellian he wuz one!

J. C. HARRIS, Sister Jane, p. 136. (1896)

Did you ever see a straighter-nosed gang of hellions?

O. HENRY, The Four Million, p. 8. (1903)

Three children that was known to be hellions.

WILSON, Ma Pettingill, p. 225. (1919)

5 There are no fans in hell.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 661. (1817) This Arabic [proverb] . . . worthy of Mecca's prophet himself, and of the earnestness with which he realized Gehenna, There are no fans in hell.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, p. 75. (1853)

6 Break 'em with a snaffle, an' they bolt hell-western crooked.

CANFIELD, Maid of the Frontier, p. 100. (1898)

This event sure knocks me hell-west and crooked.

S. E. WHITE, Arizona Nights, p. 286. (1907)

7 Hell Maria!

CHARLES GATES DAWES, while testifying at a Congressional Committee hearing, 2 Feb., 1921. "Some meticulous editor tried to make sense by writing in the 'and' [Hell and Maria]. Thus Dawes got his nickname and the great Dawes myth its start."—STANLEY FROST, Hell an' Maria—Revised. The Outlook, 27 Aug., 1924.

8 Hell and Chancery are always open.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2486. (1732)

9 Hell's broken loose.

ROBERT GREENE, Frier Bacon and Frier Bungay. Act iv, sc. 1. (1594)

They should say, and swear, hell were broken loose.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act iv, sc. 1. (1596).

Hell is empty, and all the devils are here.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 214. (1611)

Fye, fye Hell is broke loose upon me.

PETER HAUSTED, The Rivall Friends. Act v, sc. 10. (1632)

With thee Came not all Hell broke loose?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 918. (1667)

Since hell's broke loose, why should not you be mad?

DRYDEN, Oedipus. Act ii, sc. 1. (1678)

All hell is broke loose yonder.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. ii, act ii, sc. 2. (1694)

Hey, what a clattering is here! One would think hell was broken loose.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

A furious cannonade roared . . . till daybreak. Hell seemed broke loose.

CHARLES READE, White Lies. Ch. 21. (1857)

Why here you have the awfulest of crimes

For nothing! Hell broke loose on a butterfly!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. iv, l. 1601. (1868)

10 No hell will frighten men away from sin.

THOMAS HAWES, Speech in Season. Bk. i, Hell. (c. 1770)

Hell is given up so reluctantly by those who don't expect to go there.

H. L. WILSON, The Spenders, p. 241. (1902)

11 There is nobody will go to hell for company.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1168. (1650)

HEAVEN FOR CLIMATE, HELL FOR COMPANY, see under HEAVEN AND HELL.

12 Hell from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming. (Infernus subter conturbatus est in occursum adventus tui.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xiv, 9. (c. 725 B.C.)

Thou shalt for this sinne dwell

Right in the devils ers of helle.

CHAUCER, Romaunt of Rose, l. 7577. (c. 1365)

Ah, Tam! ah, Tam! Thou'll get thy fairin'!

In Hell they'll roast thee like a herrin'!

ROBERT BURNS, Tam O'Shanter. (1790)

Hair-hung and breeze-shaken over hell.

EDWARD EGGLESTON, Circuit Rider. Ch. 27. (1874)

Judge Gary never saw a blast furnace until after his death.

BENJAMIN STOLBERG, The Story of the CIO. Ch. 3. (1938)

1 He that goes down to hell never comes up.
(Qui descenderit ad inferos, non ascendet.)

Old Testament: Job, vii, 9. (c. 350 B.C.) This is the Vulgate version. The Revised Version is, "He that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more."

That is ones in helle out cometh hit neuere. | Job the prophete, patriarke reproueth thi sawes, Quia in inferno nulla est redemptio.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus xviii, l. 148. (1377)

There is no redemption from hell. (In inferno nulla est redemptio.)

POPE PAUL III, jestingly, to Michael Angelo, who had refused to alter a portrait which he had jestingly introduced among the condemned in his "Last Judgment." (1541)

O villain! thou wilt be condemned into everlasting redemption for this.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iv, 2, 58. (1598)

It is so deep . . . that it reacheth to hell, and ther's no redemption.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Two Wise Men. Act i, sc. 1. (1619)

From Hell each man says, Lord deliver me,
Because from Hell can no redemption be.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, A Verry Merry Wherry-Ferry-Voyage. (1622)

"There is no redemption from Hell." There is a place . . . by the Exchequer Court commonly called Hell. . . . Formerly the place was for the king's debtors, who never were freed thence, until they had paid their uttermost due.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Westminster ii, 413. (1662)

2 Hell will never be full till you be in it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 160. (1721)

Hell will never have its due, till it have its hold of you.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 405. (1855)

3 When we rode Hell-for-leather,
Both squadrons together.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Shillin' a Day. (1892)

Hell for leather. At great speed; in urgent or desperate haste: [a cliché since] late C. 19-20

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Hell. (1941)

4 Come hell or high water, she must see how her daughter was faring.

JOHN KOBLER, Some Like It Gory, p. 129. (1940)

The world is going to go on anyhow, come hell or high water.

THEODORE DREISER, America Is Worth Saving, p. 208. (1941)

Nothing is going to interfere now, hell or high water.

THEODORA DUBOIS, Death Is Late to Lunch, p. 62. (1941)

Come hell or high water, Daisy takes Tom to church.

THEODORA DUBOIS, The Body Goes Round and Round, p. 161. (1942)

5 What you farmers need to do is to raise less corn and more hell.

MRS. MARY ELIZABETH LEASE, "THE KANSAS PYTHONESS," Speech, for the Populist cause during the 1890 campaign in Kansas, when corn was piled high along railroad tracks, or being burned for fuel.

What's the matter with Kansas? . . . We have decided to send three or four harpies out lecturing, telling the people that Kansas is raising hell and letting the corn go to weeds.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, Editorial, Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, 15 Aug., 1896.

He is a four-flusher, a ring-tailed, rip-snorting hell-raiser, and a grandstander.

WHITE, Editorial, Emporia Gazette, 13 Jan., 1914.

6 Fellow-soldiers, let us to breakfast, knowing that we shall sup in Hades. (οὕτως ἀριστᾶτε ὡς ἐν Ἅδου δευπνήσοντες.)

LEONIDAS, to his Lacedaemonians at Thermopylae. (353 B.C.) As quoted by Stobaeus, Plutarch, and Diodorus. SENECA, Epistles, lxxxii, 21, gives the Latin, "Prandete tamquam apud inferos cenaturi"

7 Hell's bells, Harry, no harm in being polite.
SINCLAIR LEWIS, Main Street, p. 352. (1920)

8 That fear of hell, which troubles the life of man from its deepest depths, must be sent packing. (Metus ille foras praeceps Acheruntis agendus, | funditus humanam qui vitam turbat.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 37. (c. 45 B.C.)

9 The prisons were hells on earth.

MACAULAY, History of England, i, 207. (1849)

10 Cromwell resolved to compel the "rebel" owners of land to take refuge in Connaught. . . . "Hell or Connaught," a phrase that has come down to our time.

W. O'C. MORRIS, Ireland 1494-1868, p. 154. (1896)

The alternative was like that which Cromwell gave, . . . only that Connaught was left out

W. F. BUTLER, Autobiography. Ch. 16. (1911)

FROM HULL, HELL, AND HALIFAX, GOOD LORD, DELIVER US, see under HALIFAX.

11 We have met the enemy and given them hell.

C. E. NORTON, Army Letters, p. 161. (1863)

They give us plenty hell, too, when they catch us

UPTON SINCLAIR, King Coal, p. 351. (1917)

12 I shall see you at Orcus' house. (Apud Orcum te videbo.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 606. (c. 200 B.C.) Orcus was the infernal deity who punished perjury. He departed unto Acheron without funds for the trip. (Abit ad Acheruntem sine viatico.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 71. (c. 194 B.C.) Acheron was one of the rivers across which the dead were ferried.

<sup>1</sup> Quick, open up, I beseech you, unclothe this door of hell! For I verily believe it is nothing else, a place where no man enters save him who has lost all hope. (Pandite atque aperite propere ianuam hanc Orci, obsecro. | nam equidem haud aliter esse duco, quippe quo nemo advenit, | nisi quem spes reliquere omnes.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 368. (c. 190 B. C.)
Leave all hope, ye that enter here. (Lasciate ogni speranza, voi ch' entrate.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 9. (c. 1300) Cary translates it, "Abandon hope, all ye who enter here," and Longfellow, "All hope abandon, ye who enter here." Dante adds, "These words, of color obscure, saw I written above a gate"—the gate through which he entered hell.

Written over the gate here are the words "Leave every hope behind, ye who enter." Only think what a relief that is! For what is hope? A form of moral responsibility. Here there is no hope, and consequently no duty.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

<sup>2</sup> Harrow or rake hell, and scum the Devil.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1670)
Harrow Hell, and rake up the Devil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1798. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> To him [the fifth angel] was given the key of the bottomless pit. (ἐδόθη αὐτῷ ἡ κλεῖς τοῦ ῥέματος τῆς ἀβύσσου.)

New Testament: Revelation, ix, l. (c. 90 A. D.)
Literally, "There was given to him the key of the well of the abyss." The Vulgate follows this, "Data est ei clavis putei abyssi."

Vnder hym the horrible put of helle open.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Personnes Tale. Sec. 96. (c. 1386)

I synke into helle pitte.

UNKNOWN, York Mysteries, xxxvii, 348. (c. 1440)
The most botomles pit in hell.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Tereus and Progne, final sentence. (1576)

Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit! I dare damnation.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 132. (1600)

Into the yawning pit Of bottomless perdition

POLLOK, The Course of Time, x, 476. (1827)

<sup>4</sup> You've pass'd a hell of time.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxx. (1609)

I've had a hell of a time in your service.

MASON L. WEEMS, Letters, ii, 354. (1806)

We had, what would be called in western parlance, a hell of a scare.

Spirit of the Times, 16 May, 1846, p. 138/2.

Hell of a fight.

G. A. JACKSON, Diary, p. 521. (1859)

<sup>5</sup> If I owned Texas and Hell, I would rent out Texas and live in Hell.

GENERAL PHILIP HENRY SHERIDAN, at the officers' mess of the Fourth Infantry, at Fort Clark, Texas, in 1855. Sheridan was at that time a second lieutenant.

<sup>6</sup> If I cannot influence the gods, I will move all hell. (Flectere si nequeo superos Acheronta movebo.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 312. (19 B. C.) Juno says this as she turns to the Furies to stay Aeneas.

All hell shall stir for this.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, v, 1, 72. (1599)

<sup>7</sup> We shall have . . . hell to pay before much time elapses.

LORD WELLINGTON, in GURWOOD, Dispatches, viii, 235. (1811)

Lord Bacon played Hell and Tommy when casually raised to the supreme seat in the council

DE QUINCEY, The Caesars, ix, 135. (1832)

I've played hell-and-tommy already with a lot of them.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY, Donna Quixote. Ch. 32. (1879)

I tried every place . . . and played like hell.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Bk. i, ch. 29. (1855)

<sup>8</sup> A crime it is, therefore in bliss
You may not hope to dwell,

But unto you I shall allow
The easiest room in Hell.

MICHAEL WIGGLESWORTH, The Day of Doom (1662) God is speaking to the children damned for Adam's fall.

It doesn't matter what they preach,

Of high or low degree;

The old Hell of the Bible

Is Hell enough for me.

FRANK L. STANTON, Hell. (1898)

<sup>9</sup> [I dreamed that] I cut one of your throats from ear to ear, saying, "Go to hell across lots."

BRIGHTMAN YOUNG, Discourses, i, 83. (1853)

"Across lots," by the most direct way.

I would send them to hell across lots if they meddled with me.

BRIGHTMAN YOUNG, Speech. (1857)

You may go to the devil across lots.

THEODORE WINTHROP, John Brent. Ch. 17. (a. 1861)

<sup>10</sup> One Hell receives all mortals alike. (πάντας ὁμῶς θνητῶς εἰς Ἄϊδης δέχεται.)

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (C. A. D. 300) See GREEK ANTHOLOGY. Bk. vii, epig. 342.

III—Hell: The Primrose Way

<sup>11</sup> A single path leads to the house of Hades. (ἀπλὴ γὰρ οἶμος εἰς Ἄϊδου φέρεται.)

AESCHYLUS, Telephus. Frag. 131, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.) Quoted by PLATO, Phaedo, 108A, who adds, "I think the path is neither simple nor single, for if it were, there would be no need of guides." To which, no doubt, the modern commentator would retort that nobody needs a guide to go to hell. See also CICERO, Tusc. Disp., i, 43, 104; CLEMENT OF ALEXANDRIA, Miscellanies, iv, 7, 583; DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS, Art of Rhetoric, vi, 5.

1

The descent to Hades is much the same from whatever place we start. (παρταχόμεν ὁμοίᾳ ἐστὶν ἢ εἰς ἕδον κατὰ βασις.)

ANAXAGORAS (428 B. C.), when, on his death-bed at Lampsacus, his friends asked him if he wished them to take him back to Clazomona, his native land. See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Anaxagoras, ii, 3, 11. The story is told also by CICERO, Tusculan Disputations, i, 43, 104, who Latins the phrase: "Undique enim ad inferos tantumdem viae est."

2

The way of sinners is made smooth with stones, but at the end thereof is the pit of Hades. (Via peccantium complanata lapidibus, et in fine illorum inferi, et tenebrae, et poenae.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxi, 11. (c. 190 B. C.)

3

The road to hell is easy to travel; at any rate men pass that way with their eyes shut. (εὐκόλον τὴν εἰς ἄδου ὁδὸν καταμύοντας γοῦν ἀπιέναι.)

BION, Apothegm. (c. 100 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion, iv, 49.

Easy is the descent to Avernus: night and day the door of gloomy Dis stands open; but to retrace thy steps and pass out to the upper air, this is the task, this is the toil! (Facilis descensus Averno.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 126. (19 B. C.) Avernus, according to Latin mythology, was the entrance to the infernal regions.

All down hill, it is easy to descend. (Omnia proclivia sunt, facile descenditur.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 13. (c. A. D. 55)

The gates of hell are open night and day, Smooth the descent and easy is the way.

JOHN DRYDEN, tr., Aeneid, vi, 192. (1697)

It is all very well to talk about facilis descensus Avernus, but in all kinds of climbing, as Catalani said of singing, it is far more easy to get up than to come down.

E. A. POE, The Purloined Letter. (1841)

The descent to Avernus is easy and the return very difficult.

DEAN INGE, Outspoken Essays, p. 58. (1922)

4

Wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction. (ὅτι πλατεῖα καὶ εὐρύχωρος ἡ ὁδὸς ἢ ἀπάγουσα εἰς τὴν ἀπώλειαν.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 13. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Lata porta, et spatiosa via est, quae ducit ad perditionem."

Long is the way

And hard, that out of Hell leads up to Light.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 432. (1667)

A passage broad, Smooth, easy, inoffensive, down to Hell.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 304.

5

The way to Hell's a seeming Heav'n.

QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emblem 11. (1635)

6

The primrose way to the everlasting bonfire.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 3, 23. (1606) In Hamlet, i, 3, 50, Shakespeare speaks of "The primrose path of dalliance." See under PREACHING AND PRACTICE.

The lovely way that led

To the slimepit and the mire

And the everlasting fire.

A. E. HOUSMAN, Hell Gate. (1896)

IV—Hell: Its Pavement

7

Hell is paved with infants' skulls.

RICHARD BAXTER, Sermon, at Kidderminster. (c. 1651) Baxter was a non-conformist divine, and Hazlitt, in his Table-Talk, says that he was stoned almost to death by the women of Kidderminster, for quoting this from the pulpit.

Hell is paved with the skulls of great scholars, and paved in with the bones of great men.

GILES FIRMIN, The Real Christian. (1670) St. Chrysostom is credited with saying, "Hell is paved with priests' skulls," a sentiment which perhaps contributed to his deposition and banishment. The Germans, in an old proverb traced back to 1600, say, "Die Hölle ist mit Mönchskapen, Pfaffenfalten, und Pickelhauben gepflastert" (Hell is paved with monks' cowls, priests' drapery, and spiked helmets).

8

Hell is full of good intentions or desires. (L'enfer est plein de bonnes volontés ou désirs.)

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX, Apothegm. (c. 1150) The attribution is by ST. FRANCIS DE SALES, Letters. Letter 74. (Blaise ed.) Bk. ii, let. 22. (Leonard ed.) The letter was written in 1605 to Madame de Chantal, and St. Francis says to her, "Do not be troubled by St. Bernard's saying that hell is full of good intentions and desires." JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 10 (1678), cites this as "Hell is full of good meanings and wishes, but heaven is full of good works." The Spanish form is, "El infierno está lleno de buenas palabras"; the Italian, "Di buona volontà sta pieno l'inferno."

Hell is full of good desires.

EDWARD HELLOWES, tr., Guevara's Familiar Epistles, p. 205. (1574)

One said, that hell is like to be full of good purposes, but heaven of good works.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 489. (1629)

Hell is full of good meanings and wishings.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 176. (1640)

It is a saying among Divines, that hell is full of good intentions and meanings.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoëtamia, p. 203. (1654)

The proverb saith, "Hell is full of good wishes,"—of such, who now, when it is too late, wish they had acted their part otherwise.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, i, 412. (1655)

No saint . . . was more sensible of the unhappy failure of pious resolves than Johnson. He said one day, . . . "Sir, hell is paved with good intentions."

JAMES BOSWELL, Life of Samuel Johnson, 14 April, 1775. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 65, refers to this as the queen of all proverbs. Most European languages have it. "Hell is paved with good intentions"—as much as to say, they are more often formed than executed.

SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 7. (1819) It has been more wittily than charitably said that hell is paved with good intentions; they have their place in heaven also.

SOUTHEY, Colloquies on Society. Sec. 5. (1824) Hell may be paved with good intentions, but it is assuredly hung with Manchester cottons.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER, in BUTLER, Life, p. 96. (1839) You recollect what pavement is said to be made of good intentions. It is made of bad intentions too.

CHARLES DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iv, ch. 10. (1865)

No matter how good one's sentiments may be, if one has not taken advantage of every concrete opportunity to act, one's character may remain entirely unaffected for the better. With mere good intentions, hell is proverbially paved.

WILLIAM JAMES, The Principles of Psychology. Ch. 10. (1890)

Hell is paved with good intentions, not with bad ones.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

He knew that his hell of good intentions was often paved with fickle promises.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 252. (1920) Hell isn't merely paved with good intentions; it's walled and roofed with them.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Time Must Have a Stop. Ch. 12. (1944)

HELP

<sup>1</sup> Leather help. (σκληρή ἐπικουπία.)

ARISTOPHANES, Lysistrata, l. 110. (412 B.C.) In other words, "useless support." THEOCRITUS, x, 45, speaks of "Fig-wood men (ἄνδρες σῦκινος), and SUIDAS, xii, 93, of a "Fig-wood dagger" (σῦκινη μάχαιρα), both referring to the spongy nature of fig wood.

<sup>2</sup> What is past my help is past my care.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Double Marriage. Act i. (c. 1613) See under CURE.

<sup>3</sup> One can't help many, but many can help one.

BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 99. (1917)

<sup>4</sup> All is not in hand that helps.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 4. (c. 1595)

All is not at hand that helps. Support may come from whence we cannot foresee.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 21. (1721)

<sup>5</sup> It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him. (Faciamus ei adiutorium simile sibi.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 18. (c. 550 B.C.)

Hence the absurd combination, "helpmeet." If ever woman was a help-meet for man, my Spouse is so.

JOHN DRYDEN, Marriage à la Mode. Act iv, sc. 1. (1673)

Socrates had the like Number of Helpmeets.

UNKNOWN, The Entertainer. No. 15. (1718)

A woman is to be a helpmate, and a man is to be the same.

DANIEL DEFOE, Religious Courtship. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1722)

Much more passes on this subject between Selwyn and his helpmeet.

EUGENIA DE ACTON, The Nuns of the Desert, i, 22. (1805)

She next addressed her amiable help-mate.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 44. (1815)

A true helpmeet for him, young, beautiful, rich, and withal virtuous.

SAMUEL SMILES, The Huguenots in France. Vol. ii, ch. 2. (1873)

Mrs. Murray was the model of all that is contained in the old-fashioned word of "help-meet" to her husband.

LADY HERBERT, Edith, p. 19. (1881)

<sup>6</sup> There is no helpe in it.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 26. (1581) Pettie, tr.

There is no help for it.

WILLIAM HOLDER, Elements of Speech. (1669)

It is their way, and there is no help for it.

JANE WELSH CARLYLE, Letters, iii, 162. (1863)

I was really sorry to dispel my old friend's illusion, but there was no help for it.

W. P. FRITH, Autobiography. Vol. ii, ch. 5. (1887)

<sup>7</sup> For bothe she helpe and hindre may.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?) tr., l. 1039. (c. 1365)

<sup>8</sup> If you do not ask their help, all men are good-natured.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs, No. 268. (1937)

<sup>9</sup> Give a helping hand to a man in trouble. (Da dextram misero.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 73. (1869) Another Latin proverb is, "Cadenti porrigo dextram" (To a falling man I stretch out my right hand).

<sup>10</sup> It is, to geue him, as muche almes or deede As cast water in tems, or as good a deede, As it is to helpe a dogge ouer a style.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

My wit should be so crippled with the gowt,
That it must haue assistance to compile,
Like a lame dog, that's limping o'er a stile.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Works, p. 249. (1630)

I once knew a man out of curtesie, help a lame dog over a stile, and he for requittal bit him by the fingers.

WILLIAM CHILLINGWORTH, The Religion of Protestants. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 33. (1638)

I would have it understood whether we confirm it as a law, or help a lame dog over a stile.

THOMAS BURTON, Diary, iv, 316. (1659)

You're a clever fellow to lead a lame dog over a stile.

CHARLES SHADWELL, The Hasty Wedding. Act ii. (1720)

Come, help your lame Dog o'er the Style.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Upon the Horrid Plot Discovered by Harlequin, l. 15. (1722)

Help the lame Dog over the Style.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2490. (1732)

Lame Hares are ill to help.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3134. (1732)

You love to help a lame dog over the stile.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1732)

Let me display a Christian spirit,
And try to lift a lame dog o'er a stile.

JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1795), i, 509. (1788)

Do the work that's nearest,
Though it's dull at whiles,
Helping, when we meet them,
Lame dogs over stiles.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Invitation, to Thomas Hughes. (c. 1871) See Memoirs of Kingsley, by his wife, ch. 15.

1 I looked, and there was none to help. (Circumspexi, et non erat auxiliator.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiii, 5. (c. 725 B. C.)

2 Help is good at all plays, but at meat.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 125. (1721)

3 He who finds the proper course has many to help him.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, pt. ii, ch. i, sec. 4. (c. 300 B. C.)

4 It is a kingly action, believe me, to help the fallen. (Regia, crede mihi, res est succurrere lapsis.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 9, l. 11. (A. D. 13)

I am known throughout the world as the Help-Bringer. (Opiferque per orbem | dicor.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 521. (A. D. 7)

5 A very present help in trouble. (Adiutor in tribulationibus.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xli, 1. (c. 250 B. C.)

Quoted by ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles, xii, 1. The version in the Book of Common Prayer is, "A very present help in time of trouble."

6 Vain is the help of man. (Vana salus hominis.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lx, 11; cviii, 12. (c. 250 B. C.)

7 Help wounds the pride of the conquered. (Auxilium profligatis contumelia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 44. (c. 43 B. C.) He who wishes to help and cannot shares the misery. (Prodesse qui vult nec potest, aequae est miser.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 499. What is always ready does not always help. (Quod semper est paratum non semper iuvat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 563. What a tragedy is help where it harms what it supports! (Quam miserum auxilium est ubi nocet quod sustinet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 578.

8 If I had not lifted up the stone, you had not found the Jewell.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 399. (1678)

He may not score, and yet he helps to Win
Who makes the Hit that brings the Runner in.

GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 17. (1924)

9 Comfort, or counsel, or my purse—'tis thine. (Aut consolando aut consilio aut re iuvero.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 86. (163 B. C.) Quoted by CICERO, Ad Familiares, vii, 8.

10 Slow help is no help.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 19. (1852) There is a Latin proverb, "Post bellum auxilium" (Help after the battle).

HE GIVES TWICE WHO GIVES QUICKLY, see under GIFT.

11 Help him who helps you.

UNKNOWN, Eloquent Peasant, B2, 108. (c. 2000 B. C.) Gunn, tr. Referred to as a motto.

He receives help in adversity who gives it in prosperity. (Habet in adversis auxilia qui in secundis commodat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 245. (c. 43 B. C.)

One thing asks the help of another. (Alterius sic | altera poscit opem res.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 410. (c. 20 B. C.)

In this world one should help another. (En ce monde il se faut l'un l'autre secourir.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 16. (1668)

The French also say, "Il faut entr' aider; c'est la loi de nature" (We must help one another; it is the law of nature).

Help, for help in harvest.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 170. (1721) "That is, help me now, and I will help you in your throngest [busiest] occasion."

HELVE

12 Here I sende thaxe after the helve awaie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

"To throw the helve after the hatchet," is to add new loss to that already incurred: to throw good money after bad.

Rather throw the helve after the hatchet, and leave your ruines to be repaired by your prince.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles of England (1807), iv, 338. (c. 1580)

If the axe were gone, is this the remedy, to hurl the helve after it?

J. BRIDGES, Defence of the Government in the Church of England, p. 90. (1587)

I abandon myself through despair . . . and as the saying is, throw the Helve after the Hatchet.

CHARLES COTTON, tr., Montaigne. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1685)

Monsieur Martigny will be too much heartbroken to make further fight, but will e'en throw helve after hatchet.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 26. (1824)

At night I flung helve after hatchet, and spent the evening in reading.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 26 April, 1829.

To throw the helve after the hatchet. (Ad perditam securim manubrium adiciere.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 7. (1869)

A proverb in many languages. The French say, "Jeter le manche après la cognée"; the Dutch, "Men moet de steel de bijl niet na werpen"; while the Spanish form is, "Echar el mango tras el destreal." They also say, "Don't throw the rope after the bucket."

See under ROPE.

HEN

See also Chicken

1 One-legged hens, I know, are the least apt to scratch up a garden.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Proverbial Philosophy. (1858)

2 A hen is only an egg's way of making another egg.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Life and Habit. (1877)

3 Let the hen live, although it be with her pip. (Viva la gallina, aunque sea con su pepita.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1615)

Let well enough alone. There is a similar African proverb, "Though your coat is dirty, do not burn it." LET WELL ALONE, see WELL.

The hen will lay on one egg. (Sobre un huevo pone la gallina.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)

Shelton renders it, "The hen lays as well upon one egg as many."

4 It is not the hen which announces the break of day.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 364. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

5 A blacke hen may bring foorth white eggs.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 50. (1633)

A black hen lays a white egg. This is a French proverb, Noire geline pond blanc œuf. I conceive the meaning of it is, that a black woman may bear a fair child.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 63. (1670)

O! the wonderful works of nature, that a black hen should lay a white egg.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial i. (1738)

6 What is hatcht by a hen, will scrape like a hen.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 179. (1591)

He thats borne of a henne loves to be scraping.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Grater. (1611)

He that comes of a hen must scrape.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 417. (1640)

Like hen, like chicken.

MASSINGER, The City-Madame. Act i. (1658)

That which is born of a hen will be sure to scratch in the dust.

C. H. SPURGEON. John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 111. (1880) A variant is, "He that is born of a hen must scratch for a living."

LIKE MOTHER, LIKE DAUGHTER, see under MOTHER.

7 It is better to have a Hen to Morrow, than an Egg to Day.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2916. (1732)

A BIRD IN THE HAND, see under BIRD.

8 I should doe like the good wives henne, which beeing fedde so fat, could laie no more egges.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 165. (1574) Young, tr. The proverb is, "Fat hens lay no eggs."

9 Not being a "hens'-rights hen."

EDWARD EVERETT HALE, My Double, and How He Undid Me. (1859) Woman's-rights woman.

10 Pullet can't roost too high fer de owl.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

Empty smoke-house makes de pullet holler.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs.

Settin' hens don't hanker arter fresh aigs.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs.

11 Ask him weakly why does a hen cross a road.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Psyche and the Psyscraper. (1910) A famous joke of the period, the answer being, "To get on the other side."

Yesterday you were a beautiful thing running across the road, little white hen.

But that was then.

JUNE KNAPP, Little White Hen. June, a ten-year-old girl, sent her poem to F.P.A.'s Conning Tower, which printed it.

12 A hen lays many eggs and for that reason is tolerated as a commercial asset. Peahens lay only two or three eggs a year and are allowed to live only because of their beautiful tails.

ARTHUR E. HERTZLER, The Doctor and His Patients, p. 75. (1940)

13 If one knew how good it were

To eat a hen in Janivere,

Had he twenty in the flock,

He'd leave but one to go with the cock.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)

With slight variations in Ray and Fuller.

14 Hens are free of horse corn.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 170. (1721)

"Spoken of those who are free of what is not their own."

<sup>1</sup> It is a sary hen that cannot scrape to one burd.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 181. (1721)
"Spoken of them that have but one child to provide for."

It's a poor hen that can't scrat [scratch] for one chick.

E. L. CHAMBERLAIN, West Worcestershire Words, p. 39. (1882) Another is, "One chick keeps the hen busy."

<sup>2</sup> You will not sell your hen in a rainy day.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 373. (1721)
"You will part with nothing to your disadvantage, for a hen looks ill on a rainy day."

He knows what he is about. I'll warrant we'll never see him sell his hen of a rainy day.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 12. (1768)

Never offer your hen for sale on a rainy day.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 3. (1846)

<sup>3</sup> This should teach us to lay low when there is a hen on.

BILL NYE (EDGAR WILSON), Baled Hay, p. 215. (1884) Something important brewing.

Let the World stop and speak in whispers; and say, . . . "The Yale hen is on."

SAMUEL LEAVITT, Our Money Wars, p. 101. (1894)

I'm only down here on this bus'nis, an' . . . I left a hen on, up home.

E. N. WESTCOTT, David Harum, p. 235. (1898)
Something has gone wrong, or there is a big hen on.

KENNETH MCGAFFEY, The Sorrows of a Show-Girl, p. 211. (1908)

<sup>4</sup> The hen hwon heo haueth ileid, ne con buten kakelen. [The hen when she has laid can't help cackling.]

UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwele, p. 66. (1225)

Hens do not lay eggs when they clucke, but when they cackle.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues and His England: Epistle Dedicatory, p. 214. (1580)

The hen that cakels is she that hath laid.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 100. (1666)

The hen discovers her nest by cackling.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. ii, act iv, sc. 2. (1694)

If you would have a Hen lay, you must bear with her Cackling.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2799. (1732)
See also under COMPENSATION.

It is no good Hen, that cackles in your House and lays in another's.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2987.

"If the hen does not prate, she will not lay": i. e., scolding wives make the best housewives.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 427. (1830)

It's no th' hen 'at cackles th' mooest 'at lays th' mooest eggs.

FRANCIS E. TAYLOR, The Folk-Speech of South Lancashire, p. 8. (1901)

<sup>5</sup> Higgledey, piggledey, my black hen,
She lays eggs for gentlemen.

UNKNOWN, Nursery Rhyme. (c. 1750)

Said the little black hen to the big red rooster, you ain't been around, sir, as often as you uster.

STEWART STERLING, Down Among the Dead Men, p. 46. (1943) Quoting a modern variant.

THE CROWING HEN, HENPECKED, see under WIFE.
SON OF A WHITE HEN, see under FORTUNE.

HERCULES

<sup>6</sup> Johnson: You shall see what a book of cookery I shall make.

Miss Seward: That would be Hercules with the distaff indeed.

JAMES BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 15 April, 1778. "Nor did Hercules disdain the distaff," Boswell quotes, 7 April, 1778.

<sup>7</sup> This might possibly happen to Hercules, sprung from the seed of Jove, but not in like manner to us. (Hoc Herculi, Iovis satu edito, potuit fortasse contingere, nobis non item.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 32, sec. 118. (c. 45 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> In vain against Hercules. (Frustra Herculi.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. vi, No. 35. (1508) "Frustra Herculi, subaudi, calumniam struxeris" (It is foolish to talk against Hercules, or to try to stir up calumny against him).

TWO AGAINST HERCULES, see under TWO.

<sup>9</sup> The labors of Hercules. (Herculei labores.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. i, No. 1. (1523)
Erasmus devotes seven pages to a discussion of this proverbial phrase.

A charge farre greater than the twelve labours of Hercules.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 21. (1581) Pettie, tr. The "labors of Hercules," which have passed into a proverb were, (1) to slay the Nemean lion; (2) to kill the Lernean hydra; (3) to catch and retain the Arcadian stag; (4) to destroy the Erymanthian boar; (5) to cleanse the Augean stables; (6) to destroy the cannibal birds of Lake Stymphalis; (7) to take captive the Cretan bull; (8) to catch the horses of the Thracian Diomedes; (9) to get possession of the girdle of Hippolyta, Queen of the Amazons; (10) to take captive the oxen of the monster Geryon; (11) to get possession of the apples of the Hesperides; (12) to bring up from the infernal regions Cerberus, the three-headed guardian of the gates of hell. He accomplished all of them, and was received among the immortals. So "Hercules' choice" is proverbial for the choice of a life of labor and virtue in preference to one of idleness and pleasure.

<sup>1</sup> A footprint of Hercules. (ἵχνος Ἡρακλέους.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 82. (c. 445 B. C.) Herodotus is telling how the Scythians show, as one of the wonders of the land, a footprint of Hercules, two cubits long, stamped in the rock by the river Tyras.

From one to know all. (Ab uno disce omnis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 65. (19 B. C.)

The philosopher Pythagoras reasoned acutely in determining Hercules' superiority in size and stature. For since it was generally agreed that Hercules paced off the race-course of the stadium at Pisa, near the temple of Olympian Zeus, and made it six hundred feet long, and since the other courses in the land of Greece, constructed later by other men, were indeed six hundred feet in length, but yet were somewhat shorter than that at Olympia, he readily concluded by a process of comparison that the measured length of Hercules' foot was as much greater than that of other men as the course at Olympia was longer than the other stadia. Then, having ascertained the size of Hercules' foot, he made a calculation of the bodily height suited to that measure, based upon the natural proportion of all parts of the body, and thus arrived at the logical conclusion that Hercules was as much taller than other men as the course at Olympia exceeded the others constructed with the same number of feet.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. i, ch. 1. (c. A. D. 150) A quotation from PLUTARCH'S Life of Hercules, which has not survived. The phrase "Ex pede Herculem" has become proverbial, along with "Ex ungue leonem" (From the claw the lion), and "Ab uno disce omnes" (To know all from one). See also under LION. Pythagoras decided that Hercules was six feet seven inches tall.

Hercules is not only known by his foot.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Urn Burial. Ch. 3. (1658)

Hercules, they say, is known by his foot.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 255. (1709)

Ex pede Herculem. "By the foot [you know] Hercules"; hence, by a certain trait you know (or recognize) a person.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Ex. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> Hercules was not begot in one night.

JOHN MILTON, A Declaration, or Letters Patent of the Lession of the Present King of Poland. (1674) Quoting a Greek proverb. Rabelais points out that Jupiter made the night he spent with Alcmena last forty-eight hours," for so great a time was needed for the forging of mighty Hercules."

<sup>3</sup> Lo! another Hercules. (ἄλλος οὗτος Ἡρακλῆς.)

THEMISTOCLES. (c. 475 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Theseus. Ch. 29, sec. 3. Plutarch says that the phrase became current with reference to Theseus, and that from his prowess in helping Meleager slay the Calydonian boar arose another proverb, οὐκ ἄνευ Θησέως (Not without Theseus). Cited by ERASMUS. Adagia. i, vii, 41, with the Latin, "Alter Hercules."

<sup>4</sup> To the see Gaditanus, there Hercules his pileres stondeth.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, i, 298.

(1387) The rocks Calpé (now Gibraltar) and Abyla (now Ceuta) on either side of the strait of Gibraltar, thought by the ancients to support the western boundary of the world, and to have been set up by Hercules. We must laie before us the noble devise of Charles the fifth, to wit, the pillars of Hercules, and to dispose ourselves to goe beyond them.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 87. (1581)

HERD

See also Mob

<sup>5</sup> The low-born herd. (Ignobile vulgus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 149. (19 B. C.)

A cowardly herd, bold only in tongue. (Vulgus ignavum et nihil ultra verba ausurum.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iii, sec. 58. (c. A. D. 109)

The venal herd. (Venale pecus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 62. (c. A. D. 120)

And what the people but a herd confus'd, . . .

Of whom to be disprais'd were no small praise?

MILTON, Paradise Regain'd. Bk. iii, l. 49. (1671)

The unmotived herd that only sleep and feed.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm. (1875)

I hate the vulgar popular cattle.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Fine Weather on the Diligentia. (1884)

HERE

<sup>6</sup> Faith. Sir, we are here to day and gone to morrow.

APHRA BEHN, The Lucky Chance. Act iv. (1686)

The World is full of Vicissitudes, we are here to-day and gone to-morrow, as the Shoe-maker said when he was going to run away.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack. (1731) An early Wellerism.

I am a bird of passage—here today and gone tomorrow.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 14. (1843)

I'm an erratic chap. Here today and gone tomorrow.

R. A. J. WALLING, Spider and Fly, p. 238. (1940)

<sup>7</sup> Better say. Here it is, nor here it was.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22. (c. 1595)

Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 65, with the comment, "Better be at some pains to secure a thing . . . than to lament the loss of it when it is gone." See also MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 931. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> Our so dooing is neither here nor there (as they say).

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Calvin upon Deuteronomy, xcii, 570. (1583)

That's neither here nor there.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 4, 110. (1601)

'Tis neither here nor there.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 3, 59. (1605)

Nay, nay! that's neither here nor there.

RICHARD STEELE, The Conscious Lovers. Act iv, sc. 1. (1722) FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. ix, ch. 6. (1749) BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 51. (1819) DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 14. (1844) etc., etc.

1 I do not expect to finish this by post-time, but here goes.

J. H. NEWMAN, Correspondence, i, 209. (1829)

Since it must be done, here goes!

THACKERAY, Works. (1872), x, 218. (1862)

Here goes! roared the goblin.

BROWNING, Ponte dell' Angelo. St. 21. (1889)

2 Iesus preached hir and thar.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 13981. (c. 1295)

The kyng hem sende her and ther about.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Metrical Chronicle. l. 378. (1297)

William as a wod man was euer here & there.

UNKNOWN, William of Palerne, l. 3821. (c. 1350)

Now here, now there.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus, i, 187. (c. 1380)

If you turne me into any thing, let it be in the likeness of a little pretie frisking flea, that I may be here and there and euery where.

MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus, l. 419. (c. 1590)

I am a sort of Here-and-thereian; I am Stranger no where.

CIBBER, Love Makes a Man. Act iv, sc. 4. (1701)

He must be here and there and euerywhere.

J. B. MORGAN, The West Indies, p. 97. (1790)

I flashed a torch here, there and euerywhere.

GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 27. (1942)

HEREDITY

See also Ancestry

3 It was wont to be said, Ex quolibet ligno non fit Mercurius,—Every block is not fit to make an image.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 300. (1629)

Ex quouis ligno, &c. Mercury's statue is not made of every wood.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Bury-fair. Act ii, sc. 1. (1689)

Every block will not make a Mercury.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1410. (1732)

4 It matters not if you were born in a duck pond, provided that you were born from a swan egg.

HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN, as quoted by A. E. WIGGAM, New Decalogue of Science, p. 48

5 Though it be false and mischievous to speak of hereditary vice, it is most true and wise to observe the mysterious fact of hereditary temptation.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies. Ch. i. (1879)

6 "What are we," said Mr. Pecksniff, "but coaches? Some of us are slow coaches. . . . Some of us are fast coaches. Our passions are the horses; and rampant animals too! . . . Virtue is the drag. We start from The Mother's Arms, and we run to The Dust Shovel."

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 8. (1843)

This body in which we journey across the isthmus between the two oceans is not a private carriage, but an omnibus.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, The Guardian Angel. Ch. 3. (1867) Quoted as "from a work which will be repeatedly referred to in this narrative." Sometimes condensed to: "We are omnibuses in which our ancestors ride."

7 The plant or graff of a gentl tre bereth frute anone. (Generosioris arboris statim plantacum fructu est.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iii, No. 74

(1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 54. (1550) Taverner says, "By this is ment yt pregnant and noble wyttes be quickly rype and brynge forth good frute for the common welth."

I haue harde say that a good impe [tree] bryngethe forth good freute.

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, p. 12. (c. 1534)

8 Of an euyl fater commeth neuer a good childe. (Nunquam ex malo patre bonus filius.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 33.

(1508) TAVERNER, tr. fo. 19. (1550) Taverner adds, "For as oure Englyshe prouerbe testifieth, The yonge cocke learne to crowe of the olde."

Of an evil raven an evil egg. (κακού κόρακος κακόν ὄν.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ix, no. 25.

(1508) ERASMUS uses the same proverb in i, vi, 33, and gives the Latin, "Mali corvi, malum ovum." Another form of the Latin is, "Mala gallina, malum ovum" (Bad hen, bad egg). The Germans say, "Böser Vogel, böser Ei" (Bad bird, bad egg). The French add, "Si l'oiseau est à tuer, l'œuf est à casser" (If the bird must be killed, the egg must be broken).

The Proverbe is verified, that an ill byrde, layeth an ill egge.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 15. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Ye know this is a proverb much used: "An evil crow an evil egg."

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 42. (1536)

Of an ill bird an ill brood.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Corbeau. (1611)

As the Greek proverbe saith, like crow, like egg.

THOMAS MUFFET, Healths Improvement. p. 135. (1655)

LIKE FATHER LIKE SON, see under FATHER.

9 Fish bred up in dirty pooles wil stynke of mud.

BARNABY GOOGE, Eglogs. (1563)

But true the proverbe is, that fish bred up in durtie pooles wil tast of mud.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Minos and Pasiphae, p. 221. (1576)

1 We have a thousande examples: amongst others, this is knowne to most men, which was made to the Emperor Augustus, who meeting by chaunce with a straunger which resembled him verie much in favour, asked him if his mother had at any time beene at Rome, insinuating thereby in flouting maner, that he might be his fathers bastarde sonne. But the straunger answered him no lesse boldly then merily, my mother was never there, but my father hath.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 72. (1574) Pettie, tr. FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms, No. 87. (c. 1605) relates the same anecdote.

Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low;
And some such strange bull leap'd your father's cow,

And got a calf in that same noble feat
Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, v, 4, 48. (1598)

2 Many a good coowe hath an euill caulfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
See under Cow.

Good wombs have borne bad sons.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 120. (1611)

3 How can the fole amble, if the hors and mare trot?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Trot sire, trot damme, how should the fole amble?
That is, when both father and mother were nought, it is not like that the childe will proue good.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 119. (1560)

4 Nor do fierce eagles produce the peaceful dove. (Neque imbellem feroces | progenerant aquilae columbam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 31. (23 B. C.)

A rose isn't born of a squill. (E squilla non nascitur rosa.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iii, No. 93. (1523)

But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,
They never do beget a coal-black calf.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, v, 1, 31. (1593)

5 The tod's [fox's] bairns are ill to tame.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 329. (1721)
"Apply'd to them who are descended of an ill parentage."

6 If the seed-corn be not sound it will not produce seed.

LANGDON, ed, Babylonian Proverbs: Babylonian Tablet K, 4347. (c. 2300 B. C.)

Of froward seed may grow no good corn.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. v, l. 116 (c. 1440)

Of good seed proceedeth good corn

WILLIAM WAGER, The Longer Thou Livest, the More Fool Thou Art, sig. A2<sup>v</sup> (c. 1568)

Ill seed, ill weed.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Moisson. (1611)

Of evil grain no good seed.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 13. (1633)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 8 (1670) has, "Of evil grain no good seed can come."
Of bad seed, never a good melon. (De mala berengena, nunca buena calabaza.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 226. (1856)

7 They often repeat the form [i. e., peculiarities] of their progenitors. (Referant proavorum saepe figuras.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 1219. (c. 45 B. C.)

All thyng shewth fro whens it camme.

The litter is lyke to the syre and the damme.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Men resemble their contemporaries even more than their progenitors.

EMERSON, Representative Men. Ch. 1. (1850)

One always retains the traces of one's origin. (On garde toujours la marque de ses origines.)

ERNEST RENAN, La Vie de Jésus. (1863)

8 A good tree cannot being forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree being forth good fruit. (οὐ δύναται δένδρον ἀγαθὸν καρποὺς πονηροὺς ἐνεγκεῖν, οὐδὲ δένδρον σαπρὸν καρποὺς καλοὺς ποιεῖν.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 18. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Non potest arbor bona malos fructus facere: neque arbor mala bonos fructus facere."

Good fruit does not come from bad seed.

SADI, Pand Namah. Sec. 24. (c. 1260)

Of feble trees ther comen wrecched impes.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Monk's Prologue, l. 68. (c. 1387)

God seith hit hym-self, "shal neuere good appel Thorw no sotel science on sour stock growe."

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, passus xi, l. 206. (1393)

9 We may not expect a good whelp from an ill dog.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 398. (1678)

The bitter gourd will only bear bitter gourds. ('Ku kua chih shêng 'ku kua tzü.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 186. (1872)

Dragons beget dragons, and phœnixes beget phœnixes. (Lung shêng lung tzü, fêng shêng fêng êrh.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2119. (1875)

Frogs breed frogs.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 441. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

Nits make lice.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 51. (1939) Mr. Thompson cites a number of similar proverbs: "If you breed a pa'tridge, you'll get a pa'tridge"; "Plant the crab-tree where you will, it will never bear pippins"; "An apple never falls far from the tree"; "She didn't lick it up off the ground."

of a too-froward girl

1 No one can forge good swords from faulty iron.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 4. (c. 1258)

A crooked log is not to be straightened. (Lignum tortum haud unquam rectum.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 42. (1523) "Crooked by nature is never made straight by education." "Where the root is worthless, so is the tree."

A sour bud will never have a sweet blossom.

ROBERT GREENE, The Card of Fancie. (1587)

Ill flesh was never good bruise [broth].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 198. (1721)

Wooden legs are not inherited, but wooden heads are.

EDWIN GRANT CONKLIN, as quoted by A. E. WIGGAM, New Decalogue of Science, p. 76.

2 Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we!

For such as we are made of, such we be.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 2, 32. (1599)

3 Chicks of a good father. (χρηστού πατρός νεόττα.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Characters. No. ii, sec. 7. (319 B.C.) A CHIP OF THE OLD BLOCK, see under CHIP.

4 The habits we acquire are little worth;
The nature that was ours before our birth
Will master us, while yet we live on earth.

UNKNOWN, Hitopadesa. (c. 1200) Ryder, tr.
The wolf's whelp will at last a wolf become,
Though from his birth he finds with man a home.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 4. (c. 1258)
Eastwick, tr.

HERESY

See also Atheism; Doubt

5 Heresie and beere came hopping into England both in a yeere.

HENRY BUTTES, Dyets Drie Dinner, sig. G4. (1599)

About his [Henry VIII's] fifteen year [c. 1506] it happen'd that diverse things were newly brought into England, whereupon this rhyme was made: Turkeys, Carps, Hopps, Piccarel, and Beer, Came into England all in one year.

SIR RICHARD BAKER, Chronicle of the Kings of England, p. 298. (1643)

With this same beere came up heresies here.

UNKNOWN, Ex-ale-tation of Ale, 6. (1646)

To the same year's produce, we see,

Ascribe both hops and heresy.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Brewer, p. 21. (1714)

6 What late was Truth, now turn'd to Heresie.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Legends, iv, 909. (1596)

7 Every scratch in the hand is not a stab to the heart;
nor doth every false opinion make a Heretick.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State: The Heretick. (1642)

8 Heresy is the school of pride.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1055. (1650)

For the same man to be a heretic and a good subject, is impossible.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1056.

Heresy may be easier kept out than shook off.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1057.

9 They that approve a private opinion, call it opinion; but they that mislike it, heresy: and yet heresy signifies no more than private opinion.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1651)

10 Only heretics grow old gracefully.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xi, 89. (1901)

11 It's no sinne to deceiue a Christian;

For they themselues hold it a principle,

Faith is not to be held with Heretickes.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta, l. 1074. (c. 1592)

Blessed shall be he that doth revolt
From his allegiance to a heretic.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 1, 174. (1596)

They being Romists, I a Protestant:

Their apostolical injunction saith,

To keep their faith with me, is breach of faith.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, A Kicksey Winsey. (c. 1625) The proverb is, "No faith with heretics."

12 A man may be a heretic in the truth.

JOHN MILTON, Areopagitica. (1644)

13 In our windy world

What's up is faith, what's down is heresy.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Harold. Act i, sc. 1. (1876)

Heresy is what the minority believe; it is the name given by the powerful to the doctrine of the weak.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Heretics and Heresies. (1874)

14 The greatest heresy in the world is a wicked life.

ARCHBISHOP JOHN TILLOTSON, Sermons. Vol i, ch. 34. (c. 1690)

15 Among theologians heretics are those who are not backed with a sufficient array of battalions to render them orthodox.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary. (1764)

HERMIT

16 Man, the hermit, sigh'd—till woman smiled.

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 38. (1799)

17 There is much to be said by the hermit or monk in defence of his life of thought and prayer.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Goethe. (1847)

The peculiarity of the New England hermit has not been his desire to get near to God, but his anxiety to get away from man.

HAMILTON WRIGHT MABIE, Backgrounds of Literature: Emerson and Concord. (1903)

1
Shall I, like a hermit, dwell
On a rock or in a cell?
SIR WALTER RALEGH, Shall I, Like a Hermit, Dwell. (a. 1618)

2
The Hermit thinks the Sun shines no where but in his Cell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4590. (1732)
Hermits are contented with their cells.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets: Nuns Fret Not. (1806)

YOUNG HERMIT, OLD DEVIL, see AGE AND YOUTH.

HERO and HEROISM

3
The slave who looks after my chamber-pot does not consider me a god. (οὐ τοιαῦτα μοι ὁ λασσανόφορος σὺννοῖεν.)

ANTIGONUS, King of Macedonia. (c. 306 B.C.)

When Hermodotus, a poet, proclaimed him to be "The Offspring of the Sun and a God."

See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 360D.

The servant knows when his master sins. (Inferior rescit quicquid peccat superior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 269. (c. 43 B.C.)

Few men have been admired by their servants.
(Peu d'hommes ont esté admirez par leurs domestiques.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1595)

No man is a hero to his valet. (Il n'y a point de héros pour son valet de chambre.)

MADAME CORNUEL. (c. 1670) See Lettres de Mlle. Aissé, xii, 13 août, 1728. Sometimes quoted, "pour les valets de chambres." Attributed also to the Prince de Condé.

It has been said, and I believe with some shadow of truth, that no man is a hero to his valet de chambre.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Patron. Act ii, sc. 1. (1764)

To a valet no man is a hero. (Es gibt für den Kammerdiener keinen Helden.)

GOETHE, Wahlverwandtschaften: Aus Ottilien's Tagebüche. (1809)

It is said that no man is a hero to his valet. That is because a hero can be recognized only by a hero.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa, iii, 204. (c. 1820)

In short he was a perfect cavaliero,

And to his very valet seemed a hero.

LORD BYRON, Beppo. St. 33. (1817)

No man, it has been said, is a hero to his valet-de-chambre; and . . . few men perhaps however great in the estimation of the world, carry the same impression of greatness into the bosoms of their own families.

SIR JAMES PRIOR, Life of Burke. Ch. 16, p. 490. (1824)

Heroes, it would seem, exist always, and a certain worship of them! We will also take the liberty to deny altogether that saying of the witty Frenchman, that no man is a hero to his valet-de-chambre. Or, if so, it is not the hero's blame, but the valet's: that his soul, namely, is a mean valet-soul.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters. (1840)

As Hogan says, ivry man is a hero excipt thim that have vallays. . . . All me acquaintances are heroes. I niver yet knew a man that hired another man to help him on with his shirt.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, History. (1909)

Every author must be a valet to his own hero.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Dinner at —. (1910)

No man is a hero to his saddle-horse.

O. HENRY, The Last of the Troubadours. (1911)

It has been said that no man is a hero to his valet. To that it may be added that few men are heroes to themselves.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p. 9. (1941)

4
Who is the hero? The man who conquers his desires.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 103. (c.A. D. 100)

Heroism is the brilliant triumph of the soul over the flesh.

HENRI AMIEL, Journal, 1 Oct., 1849. The Norwegians say, "A hero is a man who knows how to hang on one minute longer."

5
Worship of a hero is transcendent admiration of a great man. . . . Society is founded on hero-worship.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Divinity. (1840)

Hero-worship is strongest where there is least regard for human freedom.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30. sec. 6. (1851)

Crowds speak in heroes.

GERALD S. LEE, Crowds. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1913)

6
I am convinced that a light supper, a good night's sleep, and a fine morning, have sometimes made a hero of the same man, who, by an indigestion, a restless night, and rainy morning, would have proved a coward.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 April, 1748.

7
Pause, traveler, your foot is upon a hero. (Sta, viator, heroem calcas.)

DUKE DE CONDÉ, Epitaph, upon Gen. François Mercy, whom he had defeated at the battle of Nordlingen, where Mercy fell mortally wounded. (1645)

8
To believe in the heroic makes heroes.

DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1844)

9
Heroism feels and never reasons and therefore is always right.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Heroism. (1841)

The hero is not fed on sweets,

Daily his own heart he eats.

EMERSON, Heroism. (c. 1850)

10
Times of heroism are generally times of terror.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Heroism. (1841)

A great style of hero draws equally all classes, all the extremes of society, till we say the very dogs believe in him.

EMERSON, Essays: Greatness. (1876)

1
Alas! that Heroes ever were made!
The Plague, and the Hero, are both of a Trade!

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

Every hero becomes a bore at last.

R. W. EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men. (1850)

2
Heroism is the self-devotion of genius manifesting itself in action.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

When the will defies fear, when duty throws the gauntlet down to fate, when honor scorns to compromise with death—this is heroism.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech in New York, 29 May, 1882.

3
A hero cannot be a hero unless in an heroic world.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, Journal, 7 May, 1850.

4
Everyone is the chief personage, the hero of his own baptism, his own wedding, and his own funeral.

O. W. HOLMES, Some of My Early Teachers. (1882) Farewell lecture at the Harvard Medical School, 28 Nov.

5
Heroes are made of the same stuff as common men. (Les héros sont faits comme les autres hommes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 24. (1665)
The one cruel fact about heroes is that they are made of flesh and blood.

HENRY ARTHUR JONES, The Liars. Act i. (1897)
He is of the stuff that heroes are not often lucky enough to be made of.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Best-Seller. (1909)
The French say, "Il est du bois dont on fait les héros" (He is of the wood of which one makes heroes).

6
Be nature never so lavish with her gifts, she requires fortune's help to make a hero. (Quelques grands avantages que la nature donne, ce n'est pas elle seule, mais la fortune avec elle, qui fait les héros.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 53. (1665)
'Tis Fortune chiefly, that makes Heroes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5079. (1732)

7
There are heroes in evil as well as in good. (Il y a des héros en mal comme en bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 185. (1665)

8
Heroes are bred by lands where livelihood comes hard. (τὸ κακῶς τρέφοντα χωρὶ ἀνδρῶν πνεύ.)

MENANDER, Anephioi. Frag. 63. (c. 300 B. C.)
Head-winds are right for royal sails.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Heroism. (1841)

9
Nothing is more depressing than the conviction that one is not a hero.

GEORGE MOORE, Ave, p. 35. (1911)

10
Heroes are much the same, the point's agreed, From Macedonia's madman to the Swede.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 219. (1732)

11
You cannot be a hero without being a coward.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island: Preface. (1905)

12
Whoe'er excels in what we prize,
Appears a hero in our eyes.

SWIFT, Cadenus and Vanessa, l. 733. (1713)

13
Tho' Peace with Olive bind his Hands,
Confest the conqu'ring Hero stands.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 419. (1733)

See the conquering hero comes!

Sound the trumpets, beat the drums!

DR. THOMAS MORELL. Morrell furnished the libretto for Handel's Joshua (1747), in which these lines appear. Introduced later into Nathaniel Lee's The Rival Queens. Act ii, sc. 1.

14
What a hero one can be without moving a finger!

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 13 July, 1838.

We want great peasants more than great heroes.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 30 Dec., 1840.

The hero will know how to wait, as well as to make haste.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Monday. (1849)

We must meet the hero on heroic grounds.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 1 Feb., 1852.

15
Great-souled heroes, born in happier years. (Magnanimi heroes, nati melioribus annis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 649. (19 B. C.)

HEROD

16
It out-herods Herod.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 16. (1600) Shakespeare is not alluding to any villainy, but to the rantings of the character of Herod in the old mystery plays, where he is represented as a blustering tyrant. For example, in The Offering of the Three Kings, he says, "I am the greatest above degree That is, or was, or ever shall be."

He out-Heroded Herod upon the occasion.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Belinda. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1800)

In criticising an author you must . . . out-Herod Herod.

E. A. POE, Letter to Eveleth, 4 Jan., 1848.

HERRING

17
Its a hard world, when heering men revile fishermen.

WILLIAM AMES, Against Human Ceremonies in God's Worship: Preface. (1633) The proverb is, "The herring-man hates the fisherman."

1 Diverted from their own affairs by the red herring of foreign politics so adroitly drawn across the trail.

W. F. BUTLER, Life of Napier, p. 60. (1890)
The phrase arises from the early English hunting practice of throwing a hunting dog off the scent by dragging an odoriferous meat, such as a red herring or a dead cat, across the fox's trail; hence, any attempt to divert attention from the point at issue. A red herring is a herring to which a red color has been imparted in the process of curing by smoke.

Don't you think the box may be a red herring?

JOHN DICKSON CARR, The Case of the Constant Suicides, p. 153. (1941)

The trail of the red herring. One of the oldest tricks in the world!

GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 209. (1942)

He's been dragging red herrings around this house until it smells like Fisherman's Wharf.

CLIFFORD KNIGHT, The Affair of the Fainting Butler, p. 215. (1943)

2 Every herring must hang by th'owne gill.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 20. (1639)

Every herring must hang by its own gills.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 102. (1670)
Let every herring hang by its own head. Every man must stand by his own endeavour.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 240. (1721)
Na, na! let every herring hang by its ain head, and every sheep by its ain shank.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 26. (1818)
It is the law in Yarmouth that every herring hang by its own head.

THOMAS CARLYLE, in FROUDE, Life, i, 262. (1824) In England a herring is popularly known as a Yarmouth capon.

3 That great fishpond, the sea.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act i, sc. 2. (1604)

The Herring-Pond.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 8. (1694) The phrase is Motteux' and is repeated in bk. iv, ch. 32.

Nay, I'll send printed scroll beyond

To neighbours o'er the Herring Pond.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy: Pt. ii, The Fable of the Lady, the Lurcher, and the Marrow-Puddings. (1719)

Easier rents and taxes will tempt many of your countrymen to cross the herring-pond.

UNKNOWN, England's Path to Wealth. (1722)

How little are our customs known on this side the herring-pond!

JOHN GAY, Polly. Act i, sc. 1. (1729)

He'll plague you now he's come over the herring-pond.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 34. (1815)

Boston's a hole, the herring-pond is wide,

V-notes are something, liberty still more.

ROBERT BROWNING, Mr Sludge "The Medium". Third line from end. (1864)

4 Set a herring to catch a whale.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 331. (1869)

5 A foule old riche widowe, whether wed would ye,

Or a yonge fayre mayde, beyng poore as ye be. In neither barrell better hearyng (quoth hee).

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 12. (1546)

That is, not a pin to choose between them. Lyke lorde, lyke chaplayne; neyther barrell better herynge.

JOHN BALE, Kynge Johann, l. 1888. (c. 1550)
Choose out of the whole pack, . . . you will find them all alike—never a barrel better herring.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

One bad, there's ne'er a good:

And not a barrel better herring among you.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act ii, sc. 4. (1633)

Nor like our misses, about bribing quarrel,

When better herring is in neither barrel.

HENRY FIELDING, Pasquin. Act iii. (1736)

Bestowing a mental curse both on Sectaries and Presbyterians, as being, in his opinion, never a barrel the better herring.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 30. (1826)

6 Of all the fish in the sea, herring is the king.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

The Dutch say, "A land with lots of herring can get along with few doctors."

7 Red herring ne'er spake word but een,
Broyle my back, but not my weamb [stomach].

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 52. (1678)

8 For a ful reckning, I lyk not barrel or hearing.

RICHARD STANYHURST, tr., Aeneis, ii, 45. (1583)
I dislike the whole of it.

9 Virtues thick as Herrings in their souls.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Pindariana. (1795)

People jammed inside like herrings in a barrel.
N. GOULD, Double Event, p. 117. (1891)

HESITATION

See also Indecision

10 Without Hesitation, humming and hawing.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 183. (1709)

11 Ares hates those who hesitate. ("Ἄρης στουγεί μέλλοντας.)

EURIPIDES, Heracleidae, l. 722. (c. 430 B.C.)
Ares, the Wargod.

12 A City that parleys is half gotten.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1095. (1650)
The woman that deliberates is lost.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 1. (1712) Usually misquoted, "She who hesitates is lost."

13 At this answer, the duke hoong the groin.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles of England, iii, 163. (c. 1580) Hesitated, or held back.

You have your hands on thousands, you fools, and you hang a leg.

STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1883)
"To hang a leg," to hang back; "to shake a leg," to hurry. See under LEG.

<sup>1</sup> He who hesitates in the case of truth acts ill when he deliberates. (Qui in vero dubitat male agit cum deliberat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 575. (c. 43 B. C.)

HIDE

<sup>2</sup> I'll tan your hide. (ἢ βύσσα σου θρανεύσεται.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 369. (424 B. C.)
The threat is repeated in l. 481.

<sup>3</sup> This Howlat hidowis of hair and of hyde.
SIR RICHARD HOLLAND, The Buke of the Howlat, l. 950. (c. 1460)

I haven't seen hide nor hair of the piece.
J. G. HOLLAND, The Bay-Path. Ch. 25. (1857)
No one has seen hide nor hair of her.
HIGH PENTECOST, The Twenty-fourth Horse, p. 5. (1940)

<sup>4</sup> The poor fellow meant only to save his own hide.
LORD LYTTON, Pausanias, p. 138. (c. 1870)

<sup>5</sup> If you want to hide a leaf you hide it in a forest.
JONATHAN STAGGE, The Scarlet Circle, p. 243. (1943)

<sup>6</sup> He may wel fynde that hyde him selves.
UNKNOWN, The Proses of the Seven Sages, p. 68. (c. 1400)
Our English proverb saith, he that hath hid can find.

THOMAS FULLER, The Cause and Cure of a Wounded Conscience, p. 339. (1646)
They that feal [hide] can find.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 137. (1678)
As they say, he that hides can find.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 172. (1740)
They that hide ken best where to find.
WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 21. (1816)
Yes, yes, those who hide can find.
MARRYAT, Percival Keene. Ch. 3. (1842)
Hiders are good finders.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 406 (1855)

HIGH

<sup>7</sup> The phrase, "How is that for high?" is borrowed from a low game, known as Old Sledge, where the high depends not on the card itself, but on the adversary's hand. Hence the phrase means, What kind of an attempt is that at a great achievement?

M. S. DE VERE, Americanisms, p. 326. (1871)
"How's that for high, boys?" concluded the narrator. "That's on top," declared Black Jack; "that takes the cake."

F. FRANCIS, Saddle and Moccasin. Ch. 18. (1887)

<sup>8</sup> Right heigh and mighty Prince.
ELLIS, ed., Original Letters. Ser. ii, i, 3. (1400)
HALL, Chronicle, Edward IV, p. 229. (1548)
Their high and mighty word, Experience.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoölamia, p. 83. (1654)
Lord Grey, in his high and mighty way, was proceeding to make light of all this.
J. W. CROKER, Diary, Nov., 1825.
Some of these bankers are as high and mighty as the oldest families.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 24. (1855)

<sup>9</sup> Where do you suppose he got that high brow? (πόθεν ἤμιν αὐτῇ ἡ ὀφρὺς;)

EPICETUS, Encheiridion. Sec. 22. (c. A. D. 110)
A jeering question asked concerning a person who has turned philosopher.
A highbrow is a person educated beyond his intelligence.

BRANDER MATTHEWS, Epigram. (c. 1900)
A highbrow is the kind of person who looks at a sausage and thinks of Picasso.
A. P. HERBERT, The Highbrow. (c. 1920)
What is a highbrow? He is a man who has found something more interesting than women.

EDGAR WALLACE, Interview, at Hollywood, Calif., Dec., 1931.
The highbrow and the lowbrow are, as Kipling would say, "brothers under their skin."
CLEMENT F. ROGERS, Verify Your References, p. 43. (1938)

<sup>10</sup> As high as twoo horse loues his person is.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
As high as three horse loaves.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 73. (1639)
A horse loaf was made of beans and wheat.
As high as a hog all but the bristles.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 202. (1670)
Dust as high as a cat's back.
JOHN MITCHELL, Nantucketisms, p. 42. (1848)
Old Paul is playing them as high as a cat's back.
ANDY ADAMS, Log of a Cowboy, p. 269. (1903)
Ever since I was nine crabs high.
Notes and Queries. Ser. ii, xii, 309. (1861)
KNEE-HIGH TO A DUCK, see KNEE-HIGH.

<sup>11</sup> They hung him high aboon the rest,
He was sae trim a boy;
Thair dyed the youth whom I luv'd best,
My handsome Gilderoy.

THOMAS PERCY, Reliques: Gilderoy. Ser. i, bk iii, No. 12. (c. 1638) The greater the crime the higher the gallows, was at one time a practical legal axiom, and so the gallows upon which the notorious robber, Patrick McGregor, alias Gilderoy, was hanged at Edinburgh, in July, 1638, was a very high one, so high, indeed, that his body, swinging there, looked like a kite. So "Higher than Gilderoy's kite" passed into a proverb.
With all our most holy illusions knocked higher than Gilderoy's kite.
We have had a jolly good lesson, and it serves us jolly well right!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Lesson. (1902)

1 We nobly take the high priori road.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 471. (1742) A burlesque of a priori.

I am unable to say why we should be constrained to travel the "high priori" road.

J. S. MILL, A System of Logic. Ch. 3. (1851)

2 Low and high, rich and poor, together. (Simul in unum dives et pauper.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xlix, 2. (c. 250 B.C.)

Curtesye, That preised was of lowe & hye.

CHAUCER (?), Romaunt of the Rose, l. 1252.

He woos both high and low, both rich and poor.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 117. (1601)

3 Another surf sent [him] high and dry on the beach.

R. G. WALLACE, Fifteen Years in India, p. 48. (1822)

That party which is now scandalously called the high-and-dry church.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers, p. 39. (1857)

4 Too high for the stirrup, and not high enough for the saddle.

UNKNOWN, Folk-Lore. Vol. xxiv, p. 77. (1913)

"Too low for a hawk, too high for a buzzard."

That homely old saying seemed to sum me up.

MAX BEERBOHM, Seven Men, p. 100. (1919)

HIGHWAY

5 Walke nat by the hyghe waye. (Per publicam viam ne ambules.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i. No. 2. Pythagorae symbola. (1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 73. (1550) Taverner adds: "That is to saye, as S. Hierom expoundeth it: Folowe not the errors of the people. For it is not possible, that those thynges whiche be best can please the most parte of folke, The precepte of Pythagoras is nat muche disagreeynge from the Euangelical doctrine of Christe, which monysheth us to flee the broade and wyde waye that the moste parte of men walke in, and to entre into the narowe and streyght waye whiche is lytle beaten, but leadeth to immortalitie and lyfe euerlasting."

6 There men walked by-walks, and the saying is, "Many by-walkers, many balks" [ridges of earth]; many balks, much stumbling; howbeit there were some . . . that walked in the king's highway.

HUGH LATIMER, Second Sermon Before Edward VI, p. 112. (1549)

As plaine as the Kings highway.

FRANCIS HERRING, A Modest Defence of the Caveat Given to Wearers of Impoisoned Amulets, p. 22. (1604)

'to make a road for himself . . . instead of using the King's highway.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Companions of My Solitude. Ch. 1. (1851)

7 Poor ignorant men runne thus like Cranes, and . . . goe the beasts high way (as the prouerbe is).

LAURENCE TOMSON, tr., Calvin's Sermons on Timothy, p. 253/2. (1579)

HILL

See also Mountain

8 The Vale best discovereth the Hill.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Followers and Friends. (1597) Repeated in Promus, No. 145, and in Of the Advancement of Learning, ii, xxi, 71, where he calls it "a proverb more arrogant than sound."

He that stays in the valley shall never get over the hill.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 42. (1633)
Cited by Ray and Fuller.

9 Liue thou vpon hill as thou would liue in hall.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Mirroure of Good Manners, p. 25. (1570)

Do on hill as ye wald do in hall.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 28. (c. 1595)

Do in the Hole, as thou would'st do in the Hall.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1307. (1732)

10 The hills, Rock-ribbed, and ancient as the sun.
W. C. BRYANT, Thanatopsis. (1817)

11 Up the hill favour me, down the hill beware thee.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 22. (1639) A horse speaking.

Up hill spare me, down hill bear me, plain way spare me not, let me not drink when I am hot.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 358. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6276. (1732)

It goes uphill and against the heart.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 589. (1883)

12 A hill being high is nothing; it must have demi-gods to make it famous.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 284. (1872)

13 Over the hills and over the main,

To Flanders, Portugal, or Spain:

The Queen commands, and we'll obey—

Over the hills and far away.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act ii, sc. 3. (1706)

Tom he was a piper's son,

He learned to play when he was young;

But all the tune that he could play

Was "Over the hills and far away."

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy: The Distracted Jockey's Lamentation. (1719)

And I would love you all the day,

Every night would kiss and play,

If with me you'd fondly stray

Over the hills and far away.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act i. (1727)

And o'er the hills, and far away

Beyond their utmost purple rim,

Beyond the night, across the day,
Thro' all the world she follow'd him.
TENNYSON, The Day-Dream: Departure. (1842)

1
The higher the hill, the lower the grass. People of the most greatest fortunes are not the most liberal.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 330. (1721)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4593. (1732)

2
Euerie hill hath his dale.
BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus. Sig. U2. (1583)
There's no hill without his valley.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 5. (1633)
Ollas a hill anenst a slack. [Always a hill against a hollow.]

WILLIAM CARR, The Dialect of Craven. (1828)
To set hills against slacks is to equalize matters by giving and taking.

WILLIAM DICKINSON, Cumberland Glossary, p. 165. (1899) See also under COMPENSATION.

3
We were nurst upon the self-same hill.

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 23. (1637)

4
On a gleaming hill. (ἐν ἀργεννέοντι μαστῳ.)
PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. iv, l. 8. (462 B. C.)
Literally "breast" "a white breast of the swelling earth." The comparison of a rounded hill to a woman's breast is a common one. France has its "mamelon," and Scotland its "paps of Jura."

5
Prykynghe ouer hulle & pleyn,
Til he cam to Charlemeyn.

UNKNOWN, Sir Firumbras, l. 3997. (c. 1380)
[They] Ronne to-gedir ouer hillis and dalis.

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale 34. (c. 1440)

Martin was cursing Mr. Pecksniff up hill and down dale.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 35. (1844)

HIND

6
Naphtali is a hind let loose. (Cervus emissus.)
Old Testament: Genesis, xlix, 21. (c. 550 B. C.)

7
The hind that would be mated with the lion
Must die for love.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, l. 102. (1602)

The rational hind Costard.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 2, 123. (1595)

HINGE

8
Off the Hindges, cleane out of heart.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Hallebrené. (1611)

All businesses here are off the hinges.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 3, No. 31. (30 March, 1624)

Bear with him, sir, he's strangely off o' th' hinges.

WEBSTER AND ROWLEY, A Cure for a Cuckold. Act v, sec. 1. (1661)

HISTORY

We are . . . out of Tune, and off the Hinges.
MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 19. (1708)
To be off the hinges, to be out of health.

CARR, The Dialect of Craven: Hinges. (1828)
OFF THE HOOKS, see under HOOK.

HIP

9
He smote them hip and thigh with a great slaughter. (Percussitque eos ingenti plaga, ita ut stupentes suram femori imponent.)

Old Testament: Judges, xv, 8. (c. 700 B. C.)

Destroy all opposition . . . Hip and Thigh, Root and Branch.

BISHOP RICHARD MONTAGU, The Acts and Monuments of the Church, p. 115. (c. 1635)

Smite the heathen hip-and-thigh with the edge of the sword.

J. G. WHYTE MELVILLE, The Gladiators. Vol. i, p. 255. (1863)

To smite (a person, one's enemies) hip and thigh. To attack unsparingly, . . . to rout utterly.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Smite. (1941)

10
The Doctor was plaguily down in the hips.

SWIFT, The Grand Question Debated, l. 178. (1729) Said of a horse when the haunch-bone is injured; hence, out of sorts.

Heaven send thou hast not got the Hypps

SWIFT, Cassinus and Peter, l. 35. (1731)

11
Beryn he had i-caughte Somwhat oppon the hipp.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, l. 1781. (c. 1400)

If ye chauce in aduoutrie to catche him,
Then haue ye him on the hpy, or on the hyrdell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

In fine he doth applie one speciall drift,
Which was to get the pagan on the hipp.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xlv, st. 117. (1591)

If I can catch him once upon the hip,
I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 3, 47. (1597) "Now, infidel, I have you on the hip."—Ibid., iv, 1, 335.

I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 1, 314. (1605)

The king, . . . had him on the hip, and could out him at pleasure.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy Warre, ii, 59. (1639)

Upon the Hip, at an Advantage, in Wrestling or Business.

B. E., Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Upon. (c. 1690)

HISTORY

I—History: Definitions

12
An account mostly false, of events unimportant, which are brought about by rulers mostly knaves, and soldiers mostly fools.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

History is principally the inaccurate narration of events which ought not to have happened.

E. A. HOOTEN, Twilight of Man, p. 194. (1939)

A somewhat similar definition, author unidentified, runs, "History is something that never happened, written by a man who wasn't there."

<sup>1</sup> That great dust-heap called "history."
AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta: Carlyle. (1884)

<sup>2</sup> History is simply a piece of paper covered with print; the main thing is still to make history, not to write it.

OTTO VON BISMARCK, Epigram. (c. 1875)
Anybody can make history. Only a great man can write it.

OSCAR WILDE, Aphorisms, p. 52. (1893)
<sup>3</sup> History is the essence of innumerable biographies.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: On History. (1839)
There is properly no history, only biography.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: History. (1841)
History is sometimes the shadow of a great man.

PIERRE VAN PAASSEN, That Day Alone, p. 87. (1941) See also under BIOGRAPHY.

<sup>4</sup> History, a distillation of Rumour.
THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. vii, ch. 5. (1837)

Histories are a kind of distilled newspapers.
CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship. Ch. 3. (1840)

All history . . . is an inarticulate Bible.
CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 8. (1850)

<sup>5</sup> History is only a confused heap of facts.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Feb., 1750.

<sup>6</sup> History indeed is the witness of the times, the light of truth. (Historia vero testis temporum, lux veritatis.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 9. (55 B.C.)
Cicero saith in prayse of historie, history, saith he, is the testimony of Tyme, the light of veritie, the life of memory, the guide of tyme, the messenger of antiquity.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 52. (1578)
It is the mission of history, after the other-worldly truth has disappeared, to establish the truth of this world.

KARL MARX, Introduction to a Critique of the Hegelian Philosophy of Right. (Deutsch-Französische Jahrbücher, 1844.)

<sup>7</sup> History is philosophy learned from examples. (ιστορία φιλοσοφία ἐστὶν ἐκ παραδειγμάτων.)

DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS, Ars Rhetorica. Ch. xi, sec. 2. (c. 25 B.C.)

I have read somewhere that history is philosophy teaching by examples.

HENRY BOLINGBROKE, Letters on the Study of History, ii, 14. (1735)

History . . . is a compound of poetry and philosophy.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: Hallam. (1828)

<sup>8</sup> History is bunk.

HENRY FORD, on the witness stand at Mt. Clemens, Mich. in his libel suit against the Chicago Tribune, July, 1919. Later, under cross-examination, Ford could not remember using the word "bunk," but indicated that it expressed his sentiments.

Long years in money-grubbing sunk,
Cried Poros: "History is bunk!"

Well, such a verdict holds no mystery;
When, where, and how learned Poros history?

GEORGE M. WHICHEK, Critique Manqué. (1920)

<sup>9</sup> Historians relate, not so much what is done, as what they would have believed.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

<sup>10</sup> History is but the unrolled scroll of prophecy.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, The Province of History. (1875)

<sup>11</sup> History, in general, only informs us what bad government is.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xi, p. 223. (c. 1800)

<sup>12</sup> All history, so far as it is unsupported by contemporary evidence, is romance.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Boswell's Tour to the Hebrides, 20 Nov., 1773.

I am ashamed to see what a shallow village tale our so-called history is.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: History. (1841)

<sup>13</sup> Many falsehoods are passing into uncontradicted history.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 27 Oct., 1779. And Johnson added, "Seldom any splendid story is wholly true."

Anything but history, for history must be false.

SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, when his secretary asked what he wished read to him as he lay on a sick-bed. (c. 1744) See Walpoliana, No. 141. Or perhaps the correct version is, "Oh, do not read history, for that I know must be false."

The vast Mississippi of falsehood.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays: History. (1879)

<sup>14</sup> The course of life is like the sea;
Men come and go; tides rise and fall;

And that is all of history.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Sea of Fire. Sec. 4. (1873)

<sup>15</sup> It is not likely that this [history] was so. (ταῦτα δ' οὐκ ἐκός ἐστιν οὕτω γενέσθαι.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 25, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 110) Throughout his writings, Plutarch questions the truth of the fables usually received as history.

All the ancient histories, as one of our wits has said, are but fables that have been agreed upon.

(Toutes les histoires anciens, comme le disait un de nos beaux esprits, ne sont que des fables convenues.)

VOLTAIRE, Jeannot et Colin. (c. 1730) And in a letter of the same period, Voltaire adds, "Il n'y a point d'autres histoires anciennes que les fables" (There are no other ancient histories except fables). Napoleon probably read this, or heard it repeated, for one of his sayings is, "What is history but a fable agreed upon?"

Those old credulities, to nature dear,
Shall they no longer bloom upon the stock
Of History, stript naked as a rock?

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour in Italy:
No. 4, Regrets. (1837) Alluding to Niebuhr and other modern historians.

1 Whosoever in writing a modern history shall follow truth too near the heels, it may happily strike out his teeth.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World:
Preface. (1614)

2 The world's history is the world's judgment.
(Die Weltgeschichte ist das Weltgericht.)

SCHILLER, Resignation. (c. 1800)

History is the crystallisation of popular beliefs.
DONN PIATT, Memories of Men Who Saved the Union: Abraham Lincoln. (1887)

3 The history of the great events of this world is scarcely more than the history of crimes.
(L'histoire des grands évènements de ce monde n'est guère que l'histoire des crimes.)

VOLTAIRE, Essai sur les Mœurs. (1753)

History is but a picture of crimes and misfortunes. (L'histoire n'est que le tableau des crimes et des malheurs.)

VOLTAIRE, L'Ingénu. Ch. 10. (1757)

On whatever side we regard the history of Europe, we shall perceive it to be a tissue of crimes, follies, and misfortunes.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of World. No. 42. (1762)

History is, indeed, little more than the register of the crimes, follies, and misfortunes of mankind.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 3. (1776)

I am determined to apply myself to a study that is hateful and disgusting to my very soul . . . I mean that record of crimes and miseries—history.

P. B. SHELLEY, Letter to Thomas Hookham,
17 Dec., 1812.

Human history is in essence a history of ideas.

H. G. WELLS, Outline of History. Ch. 40. (1920)

The history of the world is the record of a man in quest of his daily bread and butter.

H. W. VAN LOON, The Story of Mankind. (1921)

4 And this is exactly how history is written.
(Et voilà justement comme on écrit l'his-toire.)

VOLTAIRE, Charlot. Act i, sc. 7. (c. 1730)

Voltaire's contempt for history was frequently expressed in nearly the same words.

What more can you ask? He has invented history.
(Que voulez-vous de plus? Il a inventé l'histoire!)

MADAME DU DEFFAND, of Voltaire, when some one remarked that he lacked invention. See FOURIER, L'Esprit dans l'Histoire, p. 141. Alexander Dumas is said to have remarked that
"It is permissible to violate history on condition that you have a child by her."

II—History: Apothegms

5 History's pen its praise or blame supplies,
And lies like truth, and still most truly lies.
LORD BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 11. (1814)

6 That is ancient history. (Sed haec et vetera.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i,
ch. 30, sec. 74. (45 B. C.)

7 Happy that Nation, fortunate that age, whose history is not diverting.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740. Perhaps a variation of the aphorism attributed to Montesquieu, "Happy the nation whose annals are tiresome."

He is happiest of whom the world says least, good or bad.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams.
(1786)

Blest is that nation whose silent course of happiness furnishes nothing for history to say.

JEFFERSON, Letter to Comte Diodati. (1807)

A paradoxical philosopher carrying to the utter-most length that aphorism of Montesquieu's,
"Happy the people whose annals are tiresome," has said, "Happy the people whose annals are vacant."

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. i, bk. ii, ch. 1. (1837) In his Life of Frederick the Great, bk. xvi, ch. 1, Carlyle has, "Happy the people whose annals are blank." By "paradoxical philosopher," Carlyle perhaps refers to Cesar di Beccaria, who is sometimes quoted as having written, in the introduction to his Trattato dei Delitti e Delle Pene (1764),
"Happy is the nation which has no history," but no such sentence appears there.

The happiest women, like the happiest nations,
have no history.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Mill on the Floss. Bk. vi,
ch. 3. (1860)

Trinidad ought to have been a happy place . . .
if it be true that happy is the people who have no history.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, At Last. Ch. 3. (1871)

8 Whatever the worth of the present work may be, I have striven throughout that it should never sink into a "drum and trumpet history."

J. R. GREEN, A Short History of the English People: Preface. (1874) A history which gives undue prominence to wars and battles.

9 Rulers, statesmen, nations are wont to be emphatically commended to the teaching which experience offers in history. But what experience and history teach is this—that peoples and governments never have learned anything from history. (Was die Erfahrung aber und die Geschichte lehren, ist dieses, das Völker und Regierungen niemals etwas aus der Geschichte gelernt.)

G. W. F. HEGEL, Philosophy of History: Introduction. (1816)

We learn from history that we learn nothing from history.

SHAW, The Revolutionist's Handbook. (1903) Alas! Hegel was right when he said that we learn from history that men never learn anything from history.

SHAW, Heartbreak House: Preface. (1913)

1 A morsel of genuine history is a thing so rare as to be always valuable.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams, 1817. Man is fed with fables through life, and leaves it in the belief he knows something of what has been passing, when in truth he has known nothing but what has passed under his own eye.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Thomas Cooper, 1823.

2 This is my history; like all other histories, a narrative of misery.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Bennet Langton, 25 Aug., 1784.

3 History, however it is written, always pleases. (Historia quoquo modo scripta delectat.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. v, epis. 8. (C. A. D. 98)

4 I hold it a noble task to rescue from oblivion those who deserve to be eternally remembered. (Quia mihi pulchrum in primis videtur non pati occidere.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. v, epis. 8. (C. A. D. 98)

The principal office of history I take to be this: to prevent virtuous actions from being forgotten, and that evil words and deeds should fear an infamous reputation with posterity.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 65. (C. A. D. 116)

5 History has a certain affinity to poetry and may be regarded as a kind of prose poem. (Est enim proxima poetis et quodammodo carmen solum.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. x, ch. 1, sec. 31. (C. A. D. 80)

It is part of my creed that the only poetry is history, could we tell it right.

CARLYLE, Letter to Emerson, 12 Aug., 1834.

6 The dignity of history.

HENRY SAINT-JOHN, LORD BOLINGBROKE, On the Study and Use of History. Letter 5. (1738)

The strange lady now laboured under a difficulty which appears almost below the dignity of history to mention.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xi, ch. 2. (1749) I shall cheerfully bear the reproach of having descended below the dignity of history.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 1. (1839)

7 The historian is a prophet looking backwards. (Der Historiker ist ein rückwärtsgekehrter Prophet.)

SCHLEGEL, Athenaeum: Berlin, i, ii, 20. (1799)

The historian looks backward. In the end he also believes backward.

NIETZSCHE, The Twilight of the Idols. (1889)

8 I shall be content if those shall pronounce my history useful who desire to have a clear view both of the events which have happened, and of those which will some day, in all human probability, happen again in a same or a similar way. (παρὰ πηλὸν ἔσσεσθαι.)

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. i, ch. 22, sec. 4. (c. 400 B.C.)

History repeats itself, it is true, but history will not bear mimicry.

AUGUSTUS JESSOPP, Daily Life, p. 163. (1885) Should we again be at war with France, history would repeat itself in many of its phases.

J. K. LAUGHTON, Nineteenth Century History, p. 87. (1902)

History repeats itself, says the proverb, but that is precisely what it never really does. It is the historians (of a sort) who repeat themselves.

CLEMENT F. ROGERS, Verify Your References, p. 31. (1938)

History repeats, I've learned;
The same old food in different dishes;
Nero fiddled while Rome burned:
Roosevelt fishes!

WINONA M. GILLILAND, A Song for Suckers. (American Mercury, December, 1938.)

9 The wondrous pageant of a tiny world, I will in due order unfurl to thee. (Admiranda tibi levium spectacula rerum . . . ordine dicam.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 3. (29 B.C.)

History is a pageant and not a philosophy.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta: The Muse of History. (1884)

The pageant of history. History, regarded as a pageant; history in its decorative aspect.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

HIT

10 Well hit! (καλὰ δὴ παγαίεις.)

ARISTOPHANES, Fragments. Frag. 171. (c. 420 B.C.) A phrase taken from a game.

Have all his ventures fail'd? What, not one hit?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 270. (1597)

A hit, a very palpable hit.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 292. (1600)

A lucky hit indeed.

THOMAS BURNET, The Theory of the Earth, i, 294. (1684)

Guess again. . . . A Girl then. . . . You have hit it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738) The noble speaker had made the hit of the evening.

UNKNOWN, The Nonconformist, 25 Sept., 1884, p. 929/2.

11 We hit off a little wit now and then, but no animosity.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 13. (1700)

You used to be rather au fait at hitting off a sonnet.

MARY A. KELTY, Osmond. Bk. i, p. 87. (1822)
I never saw a character so thoroughly hit off.

MACAULAY, Life and Letters, i, 233. (1831)
Sometimes he hits off an individual trait by an anecdote.

SAMUEL SMILES, Character. Ch. 10. (1871)

How do you and the great Mrs. Montague hit it off?

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Early Diary, ii, 291. (1780)

Tom did not venture to inquire . . . how the two hit it off together.

HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 11. (1861)

Why hit a man when he's down?

JEFFERSON FARJEON, Murder at a Police Station, p. 32. (1943) On p. 104, "Never hit a man when he's drunk." See under KICK.

Be more careful not to miss once, than to hit a hundred times. (Atencion á no error una, más que á acertar ciento.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 169. (1647)

The Vulgar will keep no Account of your Hits, but of your Misses.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4816. (1732)

I have not so neerlie hit the white, as my meaning was.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 158. (1574) Young, tr.

He that once hits is ever bending [his bow].

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 786. (1640)

He that once hits will be ever shooting.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 378. (1710)

When you are doing better than three and a half, you are hitting it up pretty well.

M. D. POST, Harvard Stories, p. 146. (1893)

I expect to hit it up until three o'clock tonight.

J. L. WILLIAMS, Princeton Stories, p. 52. (1895)

Hit her up now! . . . Hit her up!

JOHN FOX, The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come. Ch. 5. (1903)

Give me a chap that hits out straight from the shoulder.

CHARLES READE, It Is Never too Late to Mend. Ch. 15. (1856)

Hit out seldom but hit hard.

C. E. PAGET, Autobiography. Ch. 6. (c. 1890)

We'll hit the bush by and by.

MARAH E. RYAN, Told in the Hills, p. 23. (1891)

A little more weather like this and we'll be hittin' the park.

GEORGE ADE, Artie. Ch. 14. (1896)

I hit the sod in the direction of the show.

O. HENRY, Heart of the West, p. 173. (1907)

It was up to me to hit the ties.

JACK LONDON, The Road, p. 130. (1907)

I must hit the road.

Z. A. TILGHMAN, The Dugout, p. 70. (1925)

Young boyes . . . which showte . . . at all adventures hittie missie.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 47. (1553)

The hand of prince Meleager Plaid hittiemiessie.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Ovid's Metamorphoses, viii, 195. (1565)

But, hit or miss,

Our project's life this shape of sense assumes.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, i, 3, 384. (1601)

Howbeit hit-I-misse-I, when was Speculation weake.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albions England. Bk. xiii, sec. 77. (1602)

Tombant levant, well or ill, hittie missie; here or there, one way or other.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Tombant. (1611)

Whose practise in Physick is nothing but the Countrey dance, call'd Hit or Misse.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoëtamia, p. 115. (1654)

Hit or misse for a cow-heel.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 73. (1678)

Do we all march towards Heaven hit or miss, and by guess?

EDWARD HITHERINGILL, Priest-Craft. Ch. 1. (1705) "Hittee Missece, happy go lucky, as the blind Man kill'd the Crow."—Ibid, ch. 4.

We have a smart saying to this effect, Hit or miss, luck is all.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 272. (1709) Renown's all hit or miss.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 33. (1823)

Hitty missy, as the blind man shot the crow.

JOHN GLYDE, JR., Norfolk Garland, p. 148. (1872)

It is not the happy-go-lucky hit-or-miss sort of thing that you may fancy.

OUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), Pascarel, ii, 42. (1873)

A merie man can want no matter to hitte hym home.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 138. (1553)

I got "hit hard" at the Brussels races.

CHARLES LEVER, The Dodd Family Abroad. Ch. 14. (1854)

Stocks had now fallen and everybody was hard hit.

JAMES BRYCE, The American Commonwealth. Vol. iii, ch. 90, p. 229. (1888)

Now be myn trowthe ye hytte the pynne.

UNKNOWN, Coventry Mysteries, p. 138. (c. 1450)

Thou hyttest the nayle upon the head.

UNKNOWN, Proper Dyaloge Between a Gentill-man and a Husbandman, p. 15. (1530) See under NAIL.

Indeede she had hit the needle.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia (1622), p. 305. (1580)

This Bow-man hat the mark.

HENRY MORE, Apocalypsis, p. 54. (1680) See under MARK.

- <sup>1</sup>
 'Tis Wit for Wit, and Hit for Hit.
 UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, vii, 381. (c.1668)
 His snip-snap wit, hit for hit.
 RICHARD LEIGH, The Transproser Rehears'd,
 139. (1673)

HOBBLEDEHOY

- <sup>2</sup>
 He has quitted the hobbledehoy stage; he is out of his teens. (Excessit ex ephebis.)
 TERENCE, Andria, l. 51. (166 B.C.)
 Theyr hobledehoie tyme . . . the yeres that one is neyther a man nor a boye.
 PALSGRAVE, tr., Acolastus. Act i, sc. 1. (1540)
 The first seuen yeers bring vp as a childe,
 The next to learning, for waxing too wilde.
 The next keepe vnder sir hobbard de hoy,
 The next a man no longer a boy.
 THOMAS TUSSEY, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 49. (1573)
 Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 'tis a peas-cod, or a codling when 'tis almost an apple: 'tis with him in standing water, between boy and man.
 SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 165. (1599)
 The Hubber de hoy, which is his man-boy, half a man and half a boy.
 THOMAS BRIAN, The Pisse Prophet, p. 48. (1637)
 I was then a Hobble-de-hoy, and you a pretty little tight Girl.
 RICHARD STEELE, The Conscious Lovers. Act
 iii, sc. 1. (1723)
 Why he's a mere hobbledehoy, neither a man nor a boy.
 SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
 Things between pig and pork—those hobblede-hoys.
 CHARLES LAMB, *Essays of Elia: A Dissertation
 Upon Roast Pig*. (1822)
 Hobbledehoy, neither man nor boy . . .
 There's a god and a devil in Hobbledehoy!
 WITTER BYNNER, Hobbledehoy. (1930)

HOBBY

- <sup>3</sup>
 [His] hobbies will always run away with him.
 MARIA EDGEWORTH, Helen. Ch. 17. (1834)
<sup>4</sup>
 Almost every person hath some hobby horse or other wherein he prides himself.
 SIR MATTHEW HALE, Contemplations, p. 201.
 (1676) The French say, "Chacun à son marotte" (Every one to his hobby).
 Every one has (to use the cant term of the day) his hobby-horse! Something that pleases the great boy for a few hours.
 JOHN WESLEY, Sermons. (c. 1785) Works, ix, 434. The Germans say, "Steckenpferde sind theuerer als arabische Hengste" (Hobby-horses cost more than Arab steeds).
<sup>5</sup>
 Incur the charge of riding a hobby too hard.
 SAYCE, Comparative Philology. Ch. 8. (1874)
 A hobby may be ridden to death.
 AUGUSTUS JESSOPP, Arcady for Better or Worse, p. 197. (1881)

- <sup>6</sup>
 "The hobby-horse is forgot."
 SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 1, 30.
 (1595) A phrase apparently taken from some old ballad. Shakespeare repeats it in Hamlet,
 iii, 2, 142.
 With hey and ho, through thicke and thin, the hobby horse quite forgotten.
 WILLIAM KEMP, Nine Daies Wonder. (1600)
 But see, the hobby-horse is forgot.
 BEN JONSON, Satyr. (1603)
<sup>7</sup>
 Happy is the man who can make a living by his hobby.
 BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act i. (1912) The French say, "C'est son cheval de bataille"
 (It's his war-horse—his hobby).

HOG

See also Pig, Sow, Swine

- <sup>8</sup>
 Covetous usurers, which be like fat unclean swine, which never do any good until they come to the dish.
 WILLIAM BULLEIN, *A Dialogue Against the
 Fever Pestilence*, p. 9. (1564)
 The common saying is, the hog is never good but when he is in the dish.
 LEONARD MASCALL, The Book of Cattell, p. 270.
 (1587)
 A noysome hogg, that is neuer profitable till he dye.
 LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 10. (1589)
 Like a two-legged hog . . . never doth good till he is dead.
 THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 482. (1629)
 He's like a swine, never good until he comes to the knife.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1678)
 Like an Hog; he does no good till he dies.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3226. (1732)
 You are like a Hog; never good, while living.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5851.
 A rich rogue is like a fat hog, who never does good till as dead as a log.
 FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.
<sup>9</sup>
 We determined to go on the old saying, root hog or die.
 DAVID CROCKETT, Autobiography, p. 118. (1834)
 Obligated to go upon the root-hog-or-die principle.
 E. G. PAGE, Dow's Patent Sermons, iii, 193.
 (1853)
 Root, hog, or die. This is the refrain of each of the nine verses of the Bull-Whacker's Epic.
 J. H. BEADLE, Life in Utah, p. 227. (1873)
<sup>10</sup>
 Never lose a hog for a halfp'north of tar.
 JOHN DAY, The Blind-Beggar of Bednal-Green.
 Act v. (1600) See under SHEEP.
<sup>11</sup>
 That fat Epicurean bacon-hog, Horace, for so he calls himself. (Epicuri de grege porcus.)
 ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 112. (1511)
 See under SWINE.

1
In prosperity, we are commonly like hogs feeding on the mast, not minding his hand that shaketh it down.

THOMAS FULLER, Sermons, i, 9. (1654)
The Hog never looks up to him, that threshes down the Acorns.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4599. (1732)
2
A Hog that's bemir'd, endeavours to bemire others.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 214.
A Hog upon trust, grunts till he's paid for.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 215.
Feed a Pig, and you'll have a Hog.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1517.

3
I reckon Squire Lawrie may go the whole hog with her.

JOHN GALT, Lawrie Todd. Bk. ii, p. 43. (1830)

There have been many conjectural explanations of this phrase, which means to go all the way, to do a thing thoroughly. A correspondent in Notes and Queries, 27 Sept., 1851, says it is of Irish origin, where a shilling is called a "hog," so that "To go the whole hog" means to spend the whole shilling.

But didn't I go the whole animal?

DAVID CROCKETT, Sketches, p. 40. (1833)

If that ain't what I call goin' the whole cretur.

W. A. CARUTHERS, The Kentuckian in New York, i, 188. (1834)

As you are not prepared, as the Americans say, to go the whole hog, we will part good friends.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Japhet. Ch. 54. (1836)

He determined "to go the whole hog," and followed up the feint.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 5. (1837)

You mean to go the whole quadruped.

UNKNOWN, Valentine Vox. Ch. 42. (1840)

He wants to go the whole hog.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 5. (1843)

We go the hull shoat with them.

W. E. BURTON, Waggeries and Vagaries, p. 22. (1848)

He's a whole-hog man, is Tom. . . . Sooner have no bread any day than half a loaf.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1857)

I leaves you to go the whole hog.

CHARLES BURKE, Rip Van Winkle. Act i, sc. 2. (1865)

You're not prepared to go the whole hog? You want to pick and choose.

HORACE VACHELL, The Hill, p. 147. (1905)

I am with you whole hog.

MARTHA ALBRAND, No Surrender, p. 27. (1942)

Since he had already gone so far, he might as well go the whole hog.

CYRIL HARE, Tragedy at Law, p. 169. (1943)

4
The daw knows naught of the lyre, the hog nothing of marjoram ointment. (Nil cum fidi-bus graculost, nihil cum amaracino sui.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae: Preface. Sec.

19. (c. A.D. 150) Quoted as an old saying. Marjoram ointment was supposed to be very odious to swine, hence the proverb, meaning "He will have nothing whatever to do with a thing." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 38.

5
He looketh like a Hogg in armour.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1659)
Stiff and clumsy.

A Hog in Armour is still a Hog.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 213. (1732)

See also under APE.

So ridiculous was the figure, as they say, of hogs in armour.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 572. (1740)

I never see Alderman on horseback, but he reminds me of an hog in armour.

UNKNOWN, Westminster Magazine, ii, 457. (1774)

A hog in armour, a person finely, but very awkwardly dressed.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary: Hog. (1847)

He did not carry his finery like a hog in armour, as an Englishman so often does.

TROLLOPE, The Three Clerks, p. 289. (1857)

6
Turn the hogs to the hay. (Tournoyt les truies au foin.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

The hogs to the honey-pots.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)

The Hog is got into the Honey-Pot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4598. (1732)

7
Better my hog dirty home than no hog at all.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1678)

HALF A LOAF, see under BREAD.

8
It is hard to break a hog of an ill custom

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 154. (1678)

It is hard to break an old Hog off a Custom.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2949. (1732)

TEACH AN OLD DOG NEW TRICKS, see under DOG.

9
To make a hog or a dog of a thing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 217. (1670)

He will go through stitch with it: he will make a hog or a dog of it, I will warrant you.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 22. (1712)

Make a hog or a dog of it . . . means, bring it either to one use, or another.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 252. (1721)

10
I should have remembered the old saying. Every hog his own apple.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 41. (1748) See under INDEPENDENCE.

11
My fa-fa-father has brought his ho-ho-hogs to a fa-fa-fair market.

UNKNOWN, Look About You. Sec. 13. (1600)

As wise as Iohn of Gotehams calfe; or this fellow brought his hogges to a faire market.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, A Paire of Spy-Knaves, p. 9. (1619)

You've brought your hogs to a fine market!

JOHN FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act v, sc. 2. (1619)

I have brought my hogges to a faire market.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 76. (1638)
You have brought your hogs to a fair market.
Spoken in derision when a business hath sped ill.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)

1
If we petition a Hog, what can we expect but a grunt?

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack. (1731)
You cannot have more of a sow than a grumph.
WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 10 April, 1827. Repeated in Two Drovers, ch. 1.

What can you expect of a hog but his bristles?

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 166. (1855)

What can you expect from a hog but a grunt?
F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 172. (1902)

HOLE

2
Saint Heirom was the first that ever pickt a hole in the Scriptures.

CHRISTOPHER CARTWRIGHT, Certamen Religiosum, i, 6. (1651)

[They] could not pick a hole in any of his words or actions.

JOHN FLAVEL, The Method of Grace. Ch. 29. (1681)

Not being able to pick a hole in poor Miss Fotheringay's reputation.

W. M. THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 9. (1849)

3
You tell how many holes be in a scummer.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 146. (1639)

4
Listen at the Hole, and you'll hear News of your self.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3247. (1732)
He who peeps through a hole may see what will vex him.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 135. (1710)

The eye of the snooper often finds more than he wished to find. (Der Blick des Forschers findet Nicht selten mehr, als er zu finden wünschte.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act ii, sc. 8. (1779)

5
I'm going to crawl into a hole and pull the hole in after me.

ERLE STANLEY GARDNER, The Case of the Turning Tide, p. 259. (1941)

We've got to get into a hole somewhere in town and pull the hole in after us.

FRANK GRUBER, The Navy Colt, p. 39. (1941)

You can't spend your life hidden in a hole with the hole pulled in after you.

WILLIAM O'FARRELL, Repeat Performance, p. 132. (1942)

If I ever get another case like it, I'm going to crawl into a hole, pull it in after me, and do some shallow breathing.

CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 279. (1942)

6
The hole calls the thief.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 206. (1640) See under OPPORTUNITY.

7
The hole too ope under the nose
Breeds ragged shoes and tattered hose.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Fr.-Eng., p. 10. (1659)

He has a Hole under his Nose, that all his Money runs into.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1858. (1732)

SPURGEON, John Ploughman, p. 39. (1880)

8
He hath taken his thoughts a hole lower.

JOHN LYL, Endimion, iii, 3. (1591)

Humbled, . . . taken a hole lower.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Humilié. (1611)

9
To make a hole in the water, i. e. to drown oneself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 201. (1813)

Why I don't go and make a hole in the water I don't know.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 46. (1853)

I'll make a hole in the water—I'll drown to-night sure as death!

EDEN PHILLPOTTS, Yellow Sands. Act i. (1926)

10
He will find some hole to creep out at.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 253. (1678)

HOLIDAY

11
There were his young barbarians all at play,
There was their Dacian mother—he, their sire,

Butcher'd to make a Roman holiday.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 141. (1818)

"Butchered to make a Roman holiday." A cliché since ca. 1825.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Butchered. (1941) A remarkable instance of the rapidity with which an apt phrase can win popular acceptance.

12
How many observe Christ's Birth-day! How few his Precepts! O! 'tis easier to keep Holidays than Commandments.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743

'Tis not a holiday what's not kept holy.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

13
In condition they differde so many waies
That lightly he layde his up for hollie daies.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)

Thou goest about . . . to hang me up for holydaies, as one neither fitting thy head nor pleasing thy humour.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 323. (1580)

14
The Pusey horn which . . . the gallant old squire . . . used to bring out on high days, holidays, and bonfire nights.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown's School Days. Pt. i, ch. 1. (1857)

An orthodox dinner of meat, vegetables and cheese—and on high days and holidays pudding.

G. A. SALA, Twice Round the Clock: One P.M. (1859)

<sup>1</sup> What will not blinde Cupid doe in the night, which is blindmans holiday?

THOMAS NASHE, Lenten Stufe. (1599)
Blindmans holiday, i.e. twilight, almost quite dark.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 229. (1678)
Blind-man's-holiday, when it is too dark to see to work.

B.E., New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. B6. (1690)

Holiday is parson's holiday.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 3 March, 1711.

"Postman's holiday?" Con asked.

DOROTHY HUGHES, The Bamboo Blonde, p. 35. (1941)

I'm not frightfully keen on busman's holidays.
NGAIO MARSH, A Man Lay Dead, p. 62. (1942)
The busman spent his holiday riding on a bus.

<sup>2</sup> If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 2, 227. (1591)
A perpetual holiday is a good working definition of hell.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children. (1903)

<sup>3</sup> With the slothful it is always holiday. (ἀργοὶς αἰὲν ἑορδα.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 26. (c. 270 B.C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vi, 12, with the Latin, "Ignavis semper feriae sunt."
"With sluggards eu'ry day is holy day"; And so it is with some that seldome sleepes.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly. Epigr. 142. (1611)

Every day is not a holiday. (Il n'est pas tous les jours fête.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Barbier de Seville. Act iii, sc. 5. (1775)

In the bright lexicon of Mr. J. G. Reeder there was no such word as holiday.

EDGAR WALLACE, The Mind of Mr. J. G. Reeder. Ch. 4. (1925)

HOLINESS

See also Goodness

<sup>4</sup> Everything that lives is holy.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell (1790)

<sup>5</sup> Pretended holiness is double iniquity.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 46. (1633)

<sup>6</sup> There is no true Holiness, without Humility.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4924. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> I am holier than thou. (Quia immundus es.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, lxxv, 5. (c. 725 B.C.)

He maketh as though he were as holy as a horse.
JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 620. (1530)

<sup>8</sup> There's nothing holy about you. (οὐδὲν ἁγὸν ὑπάρχεις.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, v, 47. (c. 950) ERASMUS,

Adagia, i, viii, 37, has "Nihil sacri es." The phrase is said to have been uttered by Hercules while looking at a statue of Adonis. The Danes say, "There is no day so holy that the pot refuses to boil."

<sup>9</sup> He shall take holiness for an invincible shield.
Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, 5, 19. (c. 100 B.C.) The Vulgate is, "Sumet scutum inextinguibile aequitatem."

<sup>10</sup> The parte of the tabernacle that is clepid holi of halowes.

JOHN WYCLIF, Bible: Exodus, xxvi, 33. (1382)
The Place the lewes callen Sancta Sanctorum; that is to seye, holy of halewes.

SIR JOHN MAUNDEVILLE, Travels. Ch.8. (c.1400)
Entirely shut in a Holy-of-Holies of culture.

OUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), In a Winter City. Ch. 6. (1876)

HOME

See also House

<sup>11</sup> To thy long home shalt thou wende.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 9195. (1303) See under GRAVE.

Here in the body pent,
Absent from Him I roam,
Yet nightly pitch my moving tent
A day's march nearer home.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, At Home in Heaven. (1827)

One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er;
I am nearer home to-day
Than I ever have been before.
PHOEBE CARY, Nearer Home. (1849)

<sup>12</sup> Run away home. (Fuge domum.)
CAECILIUS STATIUS, Aethrio. Frag.5. (c.175 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> The good governor and the broken leg should stay at home. (El buen gobernador la pierna quebrada y en casa.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34. (1615)
Repeated with a slight variation in ii, 5 and 49.

<sup>14</sup> This is my own dear home. (εἷη μοι οὗτος φίλος οἶκος.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. iv, epis. 8. (56 B.C.)
Quoting an unknown poet.

I know not why, but home is dearest. (Nescio quo modo oikos φίλος.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xv, epis. 16. (44 B.C.)
Here seek Troy; here is your home. (Hic domus est.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 637. (19 B.C.)
Here is our home, here our country. (Hic domus, haec patria est.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 122.
What did Vlysses wish in the midst of his traavailing, but only to see the smoake of his owne Chymnie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 240. (1580)

Such is the patriot's boast, where'er we roam,
His first, best country ever is at home.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 73. (1764)

In happy homes he saw the light
Of household fires gleam warm and bright.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Excelsior. (1841)

<sup>1</sup> "She made home happy!" these few words I read

Within a churchyard, written on a stone.

HENRY COYLE, She Made Home Happy. (c. 1890)

<sup>2</sup> Every groome is a king at home.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly, p. 42. (1611)

Every one is a king in his own house.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Roy. (1611)
An Icelandic proverb says, "Halr er heima hverr" (Every man is master at home).

<sup>3</sup> Sacred and happy homes . . . are the surest guarantees for the moral progress of a nation.

HENRY DRUMMOND, The Ascent of Man, p. 390.
(1894)

Look well to the hearthstone; therein all hope for America lies.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Speech of Acceptance, 27
July, 1920.

<sup>4</sup> Many a man himself and country well hath served 'neath alien skies;

Many a man, at home abiding, from his rut hath failed to rise.

(Multi suam rem bene gessere et publicam patria procul; | multi, qui domi aetatem ager-ent, propterea sunt inprobatii.)

ENNIVS, Medea. (c. 175 B.C.) Quoted by CIC-
ERO, Ad Familiares, vii, 6.

Wit must he have who wanders, but at home all is easy.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St 5.
(c. 900)

Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
i, 1, 2. (1594)

He that lives at home, sees nothing but home.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 7. (1618) Cited as a proverb. The Japanese say, "The frog in the well knows nothing of the great sea."

How much a dunce that has been sent to roam
Excels a dunce that has been kept at home.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Progress of Error, l.
415. (1780) But there are many other proverbs to the effect that he who goes abroad an ass will return an ass. See under TRAVEL.

I hold by the true saying "untravelling youths have ever homely wits."

WALTER SCOTT, Familiar Letters, ii, 134. (1822)

<sup>5</sup> 'Tis joy to him that toils, when toil is o'er,
To find home waiting, full of happy things.

(εἰσιόντι δ' ἐργάτη θώραεν ἢ δὲ τὰνδον εὐρίσκειν καλῶς.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l 76 (c 430 B.C.) Murray, tr

<sup>6</sup> It takes a heap o' livin' in a house t' make it
home.

EDGAR A. GUEST, Home. (1916)

To begin with, it takes a heap o' payin'.

OGDEN NASH, A Heap o' Livin'. (1935)

<sup>7</sup> Germany is my spiritual home.

VISCOUNT HALDANE, Remark. (c. 1910) See his Autobiography, p. 285.

One's spiritual home. The country to which one is most akin and towards which one feels the profoundest sympathy, esp. if it is not one's own country: . . . owing to the stir made by the [Lord Haldane's] statement, the phrase became very widely known.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1942)

<sup>8</sup> Nothing is more dishonorable than to be a pilgrim in one's own home. (Nihil turpius quam domi esse peregrinum.)

GABRIEL HARVEY, Note, written in Llwyd's
Breviary of Britayn. (c. 1600)

I'm now no more than a mere lodger in my own house.

GOLDSMITH, Good-Natured Man. Act i. (1768)

The largest part of mankind are nowhere greater strangers than at home.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk. (c. 1830)

<sup>9</sup> Wherever we feel at home, there we are at our ease.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 111. (c. 1821)

Any old place I can hang my hat is home sweet home to me.

WILLIAM JEROME. Title of popular song. (1901)

Home is anywhere for me.

JOHN G. NEIHARDT, Outward. (1908)

HOME IS WHERE YOU ARE WELL OFF, see under COSMOPOLITAN.

<sup>10</sup> I'd leave ma happy home for you.

WILL A. HEELAN. Title of popular song. (1899)

I wouldn't leave my home if I were you.

ANDREW B. STERLING. Title of popular song.
(1899)

I left my old Kentucky home for you.

WILLIAM JEROME. Title of popular song. (1912)

<sup>11</sup> First of all get a house and a woman and an ox for the plough. (οἶκον μὲν πρῶτιστα γυναῖκά τε βοῦν τ' ἀροτῆρα.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 405. (c. 80 B.C.)

Hesiod's prescription for avoiding hunger and paying one's debts. He adds that he means a slave woman, not a wife, so that she can follow the plough. His second prescription is not to put off till tomorrow what you should do today. ARISTOTLE, Politics, i, 1, 6, quotes the first precept, and adds that the ox serves instead of a servant for the poor.

Home and a pleasing wife. (Domus et placens
| uxor.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 14, l. 21. (23 B.C.)

Four things ought alwayes to be at home, The Henns nest, the chimney, the cat. and the good wife. (Quatro cose doueriano sempre esser in casa, il polaiio, la gatta, il camino, & la bona moglie.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 25. (1578)

A house and a woman suit excellently.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

A house without woman and firelight, is like a body without soul or sprite.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

The many make the household,

But only one the home.

J. R. LOWELL, The Dead House. St. 9. (1858)

It takes a hundred men to make an encampment, but one woman can make a home.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Home. (c. 1879)

A hearth is no hearth unless a woman sit by it.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, The Field-Play. (c. 1880)

Hit take two birds fer to make a nes'.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

One rubber plant can never make a home.

UNKNOWN, Home. (c. 1890)

What is the fireside, if it warm but one.

R. U. JOHNSON, O Made for Love. (1920)

What the hell's all this struggle to make a living for if not for a woman and a home?

CLIFFORD ODETS, Golden Boy. Act ii, sc.3. (1937)

1 Home, home, on the range,
Where the deer and the antelope play;

Where seldom is heard a discouraging word,
And the skies are not cloudy all day.

DR. BREWSTER HIGLEY, The Western Home.

(1873) The name of the song was afterwards changed to Home on the Range.

2 To be happy at home is the ultimate result of all ambition.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 68. (1750)

Goethe once said, "He is happiest, king or peasant, who finds his happiness at home." And Goethe knew—because he never found it.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (c. 1900)

3 I am always at home to you.

CHARLES JOHNSTONE, Chrysal. Bk. ii. ch. 2. (1760)

Their answer to the call is—Not at home.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 167. (1782)

Make yourselves at home.

WILLIAM GORDON, Dearest Mamma. Ch.2. (1860)

4 I'm here in the body, but my spirit is at home. (Egomet sum hic, animus domi est.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 181. (c. 210 B. C.)

5 Learn to stay at home of nights. (Noctes discite manere domi.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. xxix, l. 22. (c. 24 B. C.)

We won't go home till morning.

J. B. BUCKSTONE, Billy Taylor. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1850)

The great Art now to be learned is the Art of staying at Home.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius: A Handful of Arrows. (1852)

6 To walk bare-footed is better than to wear tight shoes; the hardships of a journey are better than discord at home.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vii, Apologue 15. (c. 1257)

7 Home is the girl's prison and the woman's workshop.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

Home life is no more natural to us than a cage is natural to a cockatoo.

SHAW, Getting Married: Preface. (1908)

Home is the place where, when you have to go there,

They have to take you in.

ROBERT FROST, The Death of the Hired Man. (1914)

The modern idea of home has been well expressed as the place one goes from the garage.

G. W. WICKERSHAM, Quoting an unknown ironist. (1930)

Home Is Where You Hang Yourself.

A. O. GOETZ. Title of article in New Yorker, 10 May, 1941.

What is home without a shaker?

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be too Careful, p. 162. (1942)

Home is where the bar is.

CRAIG RICE, Having Wonderful Time, p. 158. (1943)

What does the modern home amount to anyway? Merely a place to leave your wife.

J. L. WILLIAMS, Why Marry? Act i. (1917)

8 Home is where Affection calls,
Filled with shrines the heart hath builded.

CHARLES SWAIN, Home. St. 1. (c. 1870)

Where we love is home,

Home that our feet may leave, but not our hearts.

O. W. HOLMES, Homesick in Heaven. St. 5. (1872)

Home is where the heart is.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 73. (1914) Though Hubbard included this among his epigrams, it far antedates him; in fact, it is sometimes attributed to Pliny

9 See that you remember hearth and home. (Domi focique fac vicissim ut memineris.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 815. (161 B. C.) The proverbial form is, "Pro aris et focis," for altars and hearths, for hearth and home. Among the Romans, the family or household gods (Penates) had their altars (arae) in the open court about which each house was built, and the tutelar deities of each dwelling (Lares) had their niches about the hearth or ingle-nook (foci).

Driven from the hearth and home of his fathers, and his household gods. (Eicit domo atque focis patriis disque penatibus.)

CICERO, Pro Roscio Amerino. Sec. 8. (80 B. C.)

10 Whatever brawls disturb the street,
There should be peace at home.

ISAAC WATTS, Love. (1707)

This is the true nature of home—it is the place of peace.

JOHN RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies: Of Queen's Gardens. (1864)

<sup>1</sup> Homes without Hands, Being a Description of the Habitation of Animals.

JOHN G. WOOD. Title of book. (1864)

<sup>2</sup> The proof of the home is in the nursery.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, p. 27. (1906)

II—No Place Like Home

<sup>3</sup> What is the most perfect happiness? Staying at home.

BHARTRIHARI, Nitu Sataka. No. 103. (c. A. D. 100)

<sup>4</sup> I would rather be at home in fear and trembling than in your Athens without a fear. (Malo enim vel cum timore domi esse quam sine timore Athenis tuis.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xvi, epis. 6. (44 B. C.)

It is better to be at home in the caue of an Hermit then abroad in the court of an Emperour.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus and His England (Arber), p. 243. (1580)

Dry bread at home is better than roast meat abroad.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 683. (1640)

<sup>5</sup> No place is more delightful than one's own fireside. (Nullus est locus domestica sede iucundior.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. iv, epis. 8. (46 B. C.)
Este bueth oune brondes [Pleasant are one's own brands.]

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, 109. (c. 1295)

My ain fireside, my ain fireside,
O there's naught to compare wi' ane's ain fireside.

ELIZABETH HAMILTON, My Ain Fireside. (c. 1800) See also under FIRE.

<sup>6</sup> Who bides at home, nor looks abroad,
Carries the eagles, and masters the sword.

R. W. EMERSON, Destiny. (1867)

That each should in his house abide,
Therefore was the world so wide.

EMERSON, Fragments: Life. Frag. 37. (1867)

<sup>7</sup> Home is best, though it be small. (Bú er betra, thótt líti sé.)

HEUSLER, Zeitschrift des Vereins für Volkskunde, xxv, 111. An ancient Norse proverb. (c. 800)

My house, my house, though thou art small,
Thou art to me the Escorial.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 415. (1640)

The French say, "Il n'y a pas de petit chez-moi" (There's no place like my little home).

If a home is happy, it cannot fit too close.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Service of Love. (1906)

<sup>8</sup> Home is homely, though it be poore in syght.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

Though home be but homely, yet huswile is taught,

That home hath no fellow to such as have aught.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Instructions to Huswiferie. (1573)

For home though homely twere, yet it is sweet.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xxxix, st. 61. (1591)

Home is homely.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 324. (1605)

When all is done home's homelie.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionnaire: Pouvoir. (1611)
Though home be homely, it is more delightful than finer things abroad.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 285. (c. 1670)

Home is home though it be never so homely

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 103. (1670)

"Why truly," says the tortoise, "I was at home, and Home is home let it be never so homely."

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop. Fab. 185 (1692)

The little I have is free, and I can call it my own! "Hame's hame, be it never so homely!"

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Law is a Bottomless Pit. Pt. iii, ch. 4. (1712)

Hame is a hamely word.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 132. (1721)

'Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE, Home, Sweet Home.

From the first act of his opera, Clari, The Maid of Milan, produced at Covent Garden, London, 8 May, 1823.

The saying is, that home is home, be it never so homely.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 35. (1848)

<sup>9</sup> Than roaming nothing is more evil for mortals. (παραγκτοσύνης δ' οὐκ ἔστι κακώτερον ἄλλο βροτοῖσιν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 343. (c. 850 B. C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, x, 38, translates this as "Nil molestius, atque incerta sede vagari."

and then adds the proverb, "Home is best" (Domus optima).

HOMER, Odyssey, iii, 314, says again, "So do not thou, my friend, wander long far from home."

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 64, compresses the advice into two words, "Domi manendum" (Stay at home).

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 342, cites another form, "Propria domus, omnium optima" (Our own house is best of all).

He who is truly happy should bide at home, and he who fares ill should also bide at home. (οἷκοι μένειν χρὴ τὸν καλῶς εὐδαίμονα. | καὶ τὸν κακῶς πρᾶσσοντα καὶ τοῦτον μένειν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 177, Smyth. (c. 485 B. C.)

Attributed to Sophocles by STOBÆUS, Anthology, iii, 39. First line in PSEUDO-DIOGENIANUS, Proverbs, vii, 35. The second line is perhaps a tag added by some unknown comic poet. In Agamemnon, l. 1225, Æschylus uses the adjective "home-abiding" (οἰκουρος). The first line from Aeschylus is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 13, with the Latin, "Domi manere oportet, belle fortunatum," and the addition, "Si velit felicem agere vitam, domi vivat" (If a man wishes to live a happy life, he will live at home). A similar Latin proverb is, "Domi manere convenit felicibus" (It behooves those who are happy at home to remain there).

Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
Home-keeping hearts are happiest.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Song. St. 1. (1877)

He never cares to wander from his own fireside,
He never cares to wander or to roam.

With his baby on his knee,

He's as happy as can be,

For there's no place like home, sweet home.

FELIX MCGLENNON, He Never Cares to Wander from His Own Fireside. (1892)

"There's no place like home." It's a great pity when either husband or wife is forced to answer, "I'm glad there isn't."

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

There's no place like home, and many a man is glad of it.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book. (1906)

1
He that leaueth his own home is worthy no home.

JOHN LYLly, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 240. (1580)

2
It is best to be at home. (οἶκοι βέλτερον εἶναι.)
UNKNOWN, Homer's Hymns: To Hermes, l. 36. (c. 600 B.C.)

Dear home, home is best. (οἶκος φίλος, οἶκος ἀριστος.)

PLUTARCH (C. A. D. 95), as quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iii, 38, with the Latin, "Domus amica, domus optima," and the comment, "Nowhere does a man live as comfortably, as freely, as elegantly as at home."

Remember always what the wrinkled tortoise said, "Home is truly best of all things and the dearest." (οἶκος γὰρ ἀριστος ἀλαθῶς καὶ φίλος.)

CERCIDAS, Meliambs. No. 3, l. 38. (C. A. D. 350)

I'd be at home. (οἶκοι γενολιμν.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. 950) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 75, with the Latin, "Utinam domi sim."

Seek home for rest For home is best.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Instructions to Housewiferie. (1573)

Ay, now am I in Arden: the more fool I; when I was at home I was in a better place.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 4, 15. (1600)

He who wishes to be comfortable will stay at home. (Willst es haben Gemach, so bleib unter Dach.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 306. (1856) A German proverb.

A man is always nearest to his good when at home.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Home. (1859)

East and West, Home is best.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 13. (1869)

Better at home than a mile from it. (Li chia yi li, pu ju wu li.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2526. (1875) There are many Chinese proverbs to the effect that there is no place like home.

3
Let us make resound the sweet song of "Home." (Dulce domum resonemus.)

UNKNOWN, Cocinamus, O sodales (Comrades, Let us Sing Together). Sung at English schools on the eve of the holidays. "Dulce domum" is sometimes improperly used for "sweet home."

HOMER

4
I, too, am indignant when the worthy Homer nods, but in a long work it is allowable to snatch a little sleep. (Et idem | indignor quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus, | verum operi longo fas est obrepere somnum.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 358. (c. 20 B.C.)

One of the rare instances where the birth of a proverb can be observed. "Aliquando dormitat Homerus" (Sometimes even Homer nods) soon became a popular saying.

Even Homer nods at times. (El mismo Homero dormita tal vez.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 107. (1647)

Let's do our best, our Watch and Ward to keep Homer himself, in a long work, may sleep.

ROBERT HERRICK, To the Generous Reader. (1648)

Homer himself hath been observed to nod.

WENTWORTH DILLON, tr., Art of Poetry. (1680)

Those oft are stratagems which errors seem,
Nor is it Homer nods, but we that dream.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 179. (1709)

The very best may sometimes err; aliquando bonus dormitat Homerus.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

Horace acknowledges that honest Homer nods sometimes: he is not equally awake in every line.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Author's Apology for Heroick Poetry. (1674)

Homer not infrequently nods in Scotland Yard.

G. A. SALA, Twice Round the Clock, 3 A.M. (1859)

There are times when even the tiger sleeps.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 217. (1937)

5
Envy belittles the genius even of the great Homer. (Ingenium magni livor detractat Homeri.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 365. (c. 1 B.C.)

6
As learned commentators view
In Homer more than Homer knew.

JONATHAN SWIFT, On Poetry. (1733)

1 Seven cities strive for the learned root of Homer: Smyrna, Chios, Colophon, Ithaca, Pylos, Argos, Athens. (ἐπὶ πόλεις μάργαντο σοφὴν διὰ ῥίζαν Ὀμήρου, Σμύρνα, Χίος, Κολοφών, Ἰθάκη, Πύλος, Ἄργος, Ἀθήναι.)

UNKNOWN, Epigram. See Greek Anthology. Bk. xvi, epig. 298. Epigrams 295-299 are concerned with Homer's birthplace. See also CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta, ch. viii, sec. 19; and AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, bk. iii, epis. 11, sec. 6.

Seven cities warr'd for Homer, being dead, Who, living, had no roof to shroud his head.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Homer's Birthplace. (1546) Homer himself must beg if he wants means, as by report he sometimes did "go from door to door and sing ballads, with a company of boys."

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 6. (1621)

Seven wealthy towns contend for Homer dead, Through which the living Homer begg'd his bread.

THOMAS SEWARD, On Homer, or, A Cure for Poetry. (c. 1738) Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

HONESTY

2 The stream doesn't always yield axes. (οὐκ αἰεὶ πτόταμος ἀξίνας φέρει.)

AESOP, Fables. Sec. 308B. (c. 600 B.C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 57, cites the Greek and gives the Latin, "Fluvius non semper fert securus." Like so many other proverbs, "Honesty is the best policy" stems back to Aesop. In Aesop's fable of The Woodman and the Axe, the woodman, felling trees by a river, accidentally let his axe slip from his hand and fall into the water. Mercury, appearing at the moment, drew a gold axe from the stream and presented it to the woodman. "No, no," protested the latter. "That is not mine. The axe I lost was of iron, not of gold." Mercury, pleased with the man's honesty, retrieved his own axe from the stream, and gave him also the gold one. An acquaintance, hearing of the adventure, dropped his axe into the stream, but when he identified as his the gold axe which Mercury fished out of the water, the god disdainfully threw the gold axe back in, and went away without retrieving even the iron one.

Divine Providence has granted this gift to man, that those things which are honest are also the most advantageous. (Dedit enim hoc providentia hominibus munus, ut honesta magis iuarent.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutiones Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 19. (c. A.D. 80)

Our grosse concepts, who think honestie the best policy.

EDWIN SANDYS, Europae Speculum, p. 102. (1599)

"Honesty is the best policy," but he who acts on that principle is not an honest man.

ARCHBISHOP RICHARD WHATELY, Thoughts and Apothegms. Pt. ii, ch. 18. (c. 1630)

He would ever say that Honesty is the best policy.

DAVID TUVILL, Vade Mecum, p. 27. (1638) In frequent use thereafter. A proverb in many languages, usually in this form. The French say, "L'honnêteté est la meilleure politique," the Italians, "L'onesta è la migliore politica," etc.

Honesty at long running is the best policy.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England: Warwickshire, iii, 274. (1662)

Knavery may serve for a turn, but honesty is best in the long run.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 108. (1678)

I am of the opinion that, as to nations, the old maxim that "honesty is the best policy" is a sheer and ruinous mistake.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Kickerbocker History of New York. (1809)

Let none of us delude himself by supposing that honesty is always the best policy. It is not.

DEAN W. R. INGE, Outspoken Essays. (1919)

See MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 171.

I am afraid we must make the world honest before we can honestly say to our children that honesty is the best policy.

BERNARD SHAW, Radio Address, 11 July, 1932.

Honesty saves a lot of headaches.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 85. (1942)

The guy who cracked that honesty was the best policy was a dope.

CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 150. (1942)

3 Honest dealing between honest men. (Inter bonos bene agier.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. xv, sec. 61. (c. 45 B.C.) Cited as a proverbial principle of law.

4 He is a man to whom you can safely stretch out your fingers in the dark. (Quicum in tenebris mices.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. xix, sec. 77. A proverb cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 23.

You would not be afraid to play at morra with him in the dark. (Cum quo audacter posses in tenebris micare.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A.D. 60) In the game called morra, one party held up a number of fingers and the other had to guess what the number was. In the dark, of course, there was every opportunity to cheat.

5 He is wise that is honest.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 127. (1639) RAY, Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

He is Wiser than most Men are, that is honest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1955. (1732)

Too much honesty never did man harm.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 213. (1639)

A man never surfeits of too much honesty.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

No honest Man ever repented of his Honesty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3582. (1732)

1 Every Man has assurance enough to boast of his Honesty—few of their Understanding.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

Honest Tom! you may trust him with a house full of untold Milstones.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

An honest Man will receive neither Money nor Praise that is not his due.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

2 Honest Men are justified by the Light.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2526. (1732)

Honest Men fear neither the Light nor the Dark.

Honest Men never have the Love of a Rogue.

Honest Mens Words are as good as their Bonds.

Honesty and Plain Dealing puts Knavery out of the Biass.

Honesty is a fine Jewel; but much out of Fashion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 2528–35.

You measure every Man's Honesty by your own.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5959.

3 Honesty harbours as soon in a cottage as in the Court.

ROBERT GREENE, Penelope's Web. (1587)

Cottages have them [falsehood and dissimulation] as well as courts, only with worse manners.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 April, 1748.

Honesty is not greater where elegance is less.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p.38. (c.1775)

Hearts just as pure and fair,

May beat in Belgrave Square,

As in the lowly air Of Seven Dials.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act i. (1882)

4 Our great error is that we suppose mankind more honest than they are.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, Speech, in the Constitutional Convention, 22 June, 1787.

5 An honest plain man, without pleats.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)

An upright downright honest man.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of John James, Ripon Cathedral, 1707.

An honest man, close-button'd to the chin, Broadcloth without, and a warm heart within

COWPER, Epistle to John Hill, l. 62. (1784)

A true and brave and downright honest man

J. G. WHITTIER, Daniel Neall. (1846)

6 Men are disposed to live honestly, if the means of doing so are open to them.

JEFFERSON, Letter to M. de Marbois, 1817.

7 Tail-bush: This act may make him honest! Manly: If he were

To be made honest by an act of parliament, I should not alter i' my faith of him.

BEN JONSON, The Devil Is an Ass. Act iv, sc. 1.

(1631) The proverb is, "You cannot make people honest by Act of Parliament."

8 Honesty is praised but freezes to death. (Probitas laudatur et alget.)

JUVENAL. Satires. No. i, l. 74. (c. A. D. 120) A proverbial phrase characteristic of the inhabitants of a southern climate. In the north, in Germany for example, the same proverb is, "Honesty is praised and starves."

Lata [honesty] is long and dreich [tedious].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595)

Take note, take note, O world,

To be direct and honest is not safe. . . .

Honesty's a fool | And loses that it works for.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 377. (1605)

The honestest man, the worse luck.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Mecheoir.

(1611) Cited also by Ray and Dykes.

Honesty is ill to thrive by.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 30. (1639)

9 Honesty keeps the crown of the causeway.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 155. (1721)

"An honest man has nothing to be ashamed of, and so cares not whom he meets."

10 Honesty may be dear bought, but it can never be an ill pennyworth.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 162. (1731)

"For it will be sure to make a man a gainer at last."

11 The truly honest man is without conceit. (Le vrai honnête homme est celui qui ne se pique de rien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 203. (1665)

12 He that loseth his honestie, hath nothing else to loose.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 63. (1579)

13 Honesty is but an art to seem so.

JOHN MARSTON, The Malcontent. Act v. (1604)

To be honest is nothing; the reputation of it is all.

CONGREVE. The Old Batchelour. Act v. (1693)

14 It is annoying to be honest to no purpose. (Gratis paenitet esse probum.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 3, l. 14. (A. D. 13)

15 An honest man's the noblest work of God.

ALEXANDER POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv,

l. 248. (1732) The birth of a phrase soon widely quoted.

An honest man may be "the noblest work of God" but he is not the noblest product of humanity.

EDWARD DICEY, Six Months in the Federal States. (1863)

An honest God is the noblest work of man.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Some Reasons Why. (1881)

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books, p. 26. (a. 1902)

Why dont I say an honest man's the noblest work of God? Because I dont think so.

BERNARD SHAW, Getting Married. (1908)

16 The just man walketh in his integrity. (Iustus, qui ambulat in simplicitate sua.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

A little integrity is better than any career.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior. (1860)

Integrity was a word he couldn't even spell, let alone define.

BERNARD DOUGALL, Singing Corpse, p. 165. (1943)

1 Of all crafts, to be an honest man is the mastercraft.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1678)

All the honesty is in the parting.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 187.

We are bound to be honest, but not to be rich.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 261.

God make you an honest man than your father.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347.

2 Let us walk honestly, as in the day. (ὡς ἐν ἡμέρᾳ εὐαγγελίου περιπατήσωμεν.)

New Testament: Romans, xiii, 13. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Sicut in die honeste ambulamus."

Never too late is the path to honesty trod. (Nam sera numquam est ad bonos mores via.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 242. (c. A. D. 60)

3 No legacy is so rich as honesty.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, iii, 5, 14. (1602)

4 Rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor house; as your pearl in your foul oyster.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, v, 4, 62. (1600)

Though I am poor, I'm honest.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Witch. Act iii, sc. 2. (c 1620). See also under POVERTY.

The honest man, though e'er so poor, Is king of men for a' that.

ROBERT BURNS, For a' That and a' That. (1795) Commend me to sterling honesty, though clad in rags, as the poet saith.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 4. (1818)

5 Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 178. (1600)

He that resolves to deal with none but honest Men, must leave off dealing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2267. (1732)

6 Hamlet: What's the news?

Rosencrantz: None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Hamlet: Then is doomsday near.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 240. (1600)

7 An honest man, look you, . . . and a very good bowler.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 584. (1595)

The vulgar proverb's crost: He hardly can

Be a good bowler and an honest man.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblemes. Bk. i, No. 10. (1635)

An honest man and a good bowler.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 181. (1670)

8 Honesty is plain, but no good fellow.

UNKNOWN, A Knack to Know a Knave. (1594)

See HAZLITT, Old Plays, vi, 509.

II—Proverbial Comparisons

9 As honest a woman as ever burnt malt.

JOHN LYLY (?), Pappe with an Hatchet, p. 23. (1589)

10 Yes sure, you are as honest a man, as any is in the cardes if the kinges were out.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, p. 191. (1583)

Cited also by Clarke, Ray, and Fuller.

11 As honest a man as the sun ever shone on.

GEORGE PARKER, Life's Painter, p. 26. (1789)

12 As honest a man as ever trod on shoe leather.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 181. (1670) See also under GOODNESS.

13 An honest soul . . . as ever broke bread.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 5, 42. (1598)

An honest maid as ever broke bread.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 4, 161. (1601)

My father was a baker; . . . as honest a man as ever lived by bread.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Fair Maid of the West Act ii, sc. 1. (1631)

14 Honest as the skin between his brows.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 5, 13. (1598)

As honest as the skin that is Between thy brows. WILLIAM CARTWRIGHT, The Ordinary. Act v, sc. 4. (a. 1643)

15 Honest as the day is long.

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 213. (1941)

III—Honesty and Knavery

16 Where knavery is a credit, honesty is sure to be a drug.

BERTHELSON, Eng.-Danish Dict.: Drug. (1754)

17 There are Pickpockets in all honest Crowds.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 252. (1709)

18 The honest Man takes Pains, and then enjoys Pleasures; the Knave takes Pleasure, and then suffers Pains.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755

19 Knaves are in such Repute, that honest Men are accounted Fools.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3134. (1732)

20 Honest men

Are the soft easy cushions on which knaves Repose and fatten.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act i, sc. 1. (1682)

Honest Men and Knaves may possibly wear the same Cloth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2525. (1732)

Honest Men are soon bound, but you can never bind a Knave.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2527.

If Honesty cannot, Knavery should not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2680.

Nobody so like an honest man as an arrant knave.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 463. (1855)

1 Knavery may serve a turn, but honesty is best at long run.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 164. (1678)

Knavery may serve a Turn, but Honesty never fails.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3131. (1732)

2 The honest dealer is always undone, and the knave gets the advantage.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1726)

3 My maxim is, I think every man a knave, till found honest.

CHARLES SHADWELL, Irish Hospitality. Act i. (1720)

4 One honest man scares twenty thieves.

UNKNOWN, in Roxburghe Ballads, vii, 645. (c. 1770) Quoted as "a saying of old." There is a Latin proverb, "Candor dat viribus alas" (Honesty gives wings to strength).

One honest man is worth two rogues.

KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 20. (1855)

HONEY

See also Bee

5 Being anointed with honey live sweetly.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquia, p. 571. (1725) Cited as "the old saying."

6 It's a' for the hiney he'll cherish the bee.

ROBERT BURNS, My Tochter's the Jewel. (1794)

7 How shold ony man handle hony, but yf he lycked his fyngres.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart, p. 64. (1481)

He that handles honey shall feel it cling to his fingers.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 158. (1631)

8 Honey is not for the ass's mouth. (No es la miel para la boca del asno.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 52; (1605); ii, 28 (1615) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2537.

PEARLS BEFORE SWINE, see under SWINE.

9 Make yourself into honey, and the flies will devour you. (Haceros miel, y paparos han moscas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii. chs. 43, 49. (1615) Papar, to eat voraciously. Shelton renders it, "Cover yourself with honey and the flies will eat you," and Motteux, "Daub yourself with honey, and you will never want flies," Trench, "Daub yourself with honey, and you'll be covered with flies." The Latin proverb is, "Ubi mel, ibi apes" (Where the honey is, there the bees).

10 He that hath no honie in his pot, hath none in his mouth.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 161. (1633)

He that hath no honey in his pot, let him have it in his mouth.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 362. (1640)

He that has no Silver in his Purse, should have Silver on his Tongue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2149. (1732)

The Italians say, "Chi non ha danari in borsa, abbia miele in bocca" (He that has no money in his purse, let him have honey in his mouth); the French, "Qui n'a écus en bourse, qu'il ait miel en bouche."

If you have no Honey in your pot, have some in your Mouth.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753

It is not with saying Honey, Honey, that sweetness comes into the mouth.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch 5. (1852) Quoting a Turkish proverb.

Honey in the mouth saves the purse.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 408. (1855)

11 He who shareth Honey with a Bear, hath the least Part of it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2403. (1732)

Honey is too good for a Bear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2539. (1732)

12 Remembring that olde saying, that wee must taste honie but with our fingers end.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 245. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Lick honey with your little finger.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 306. (1639)

13 Every bee's honey is sweet.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

14 A flye folowethe the hony.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, p. 110. (c. 1412)

More Flies are taken with a Drop of Honey than a Tun of Vinegar.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3454. (1732)

Wasps haunt the Honey Pot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5422.

Madam, the ancient proverb says . . .

That one rich drop of honey sweet,

As an alluring luscious treat,

Is known to tempt more flies by far,

Than a whole tun of vinegar.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of a Wife. Canto xxxiv, l. 748. (1821) The "ancient proverb" has been attributed to St. Francis de Sales, and is said to have been the favorite maxim of Henry IV of France, the French being, "On attrape plus de mouches avec du miel que vinaigre." A proverb in most European languages.

It is an old and a true maxim that "a drop of honey catches more flies than a gallon of gall."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, to the Springfield, Ill., Washingtonian Temperance Society, 22 Feb., 1842.

More wasps are caught by honey than by vinegar.

SAMUEL SMILES, Character, p. 228. (1871)
I allers said 'twas easier to catch flies with honey than 'twas with vinegar.

OWEN DAVIS, Icebound. Act ii. (1923)
As John Eliot said, you can catch more flies with molasses than vinegar.

ELEANOR EARLY, A New England Sampler, p. 80. (1940)

1
[It is] sweet honny yat is not made bitter with gall.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 325. (1580)

No honey without gall.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Nul. (1611)

When you taste Honey, remember Gall.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755. See also under COMPENSATION.

2
My son, eat thou honey, because it is good. (Comede, fili mi, mel, quia bonum est.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 13. (c.350 B. C.)
And Salomon seith, "if thou hast founden hony, ete of it that suffyseth; for if thou ete of it out of mesure, thou shalt spewe."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 39. (c. 1387) See under SATIETY.

3
No one among the philosophers of Greece or Rome could produce honey from the thorn.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. 5, Apologue 7. (c. 1257)

But they whom truth and wisdom lead

Can gather honey from a weed.

COWPER, Pine-Apple and Bee, l. 35. (1779)

4
For me, no honey no bees. (μήτ' ἔμοι μέλι μήτε μέλισσας.)

SAPPHO, Fragments. Frag. 106, Loeb. (c. 610 B. C.) Cited by DIOGENIANUS, Proverbs, i, 279, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 62. Sappho was saying that if she couldn't have the honey without the sting, she would have neither, and the phrase was proverbial, even in her distant day, for those unwilling to take the sour with the sweet. Erasmus gives the Latin, "Neque mel, neque apes." The Greek proverb is usually given, μηδὲ μέλι μηδὲ μέλισσας (No honey without bees). See also SWEET AND SOUR.

5
I think the honey guarded with a sting.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 493. (1594)
Honey is sweet, but the bee stings.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 214. (1640) RAY, Proverbs, p. 13. (1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2538. (1732) etc. The French say, "Le miel est doux, mais l'abeille pique."

Honey is sweet indeed, but the Bee stings; and when the Mischief is done, away flies the envious hurtful Creature, and the Satisfaction perishes

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 209. (1709)
He that steals honey should beware of the sting.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 163. (1721)
The Honey is sweet, but the Bee has a Sting.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758. See also under COMPENSATION.

The honey of a crowded hive,
Defended by a thousand stings.

WILLIAM COWPER, Olney Hymns. No. 7. (1779)

6
He guides the honey ill, that may not lick his fill.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, 503. (1623)

7
Dere is boht the hony that is licked of the thorne.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng. (c. 1300) In Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 114.

Hit is harde to lykke hony fro the thorne. . .

Dere is the hony bought that on thornes is sougt.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS., 52. (c.1350) Förster, ed.

And thus as I have said a-forn,

I lické hony on the thorn.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vi, l. 324 (c. 1390)

He that licks honey of thornes paies too deare for it.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Acheter. (1611)
It is deare bought honey that is lickt oof a thorn.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 379. (1678)

Ray also has (p. 184) "To lick honey through a cleft stick," which is cited by FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5197.

He that licks Honey from a Nettle, pays too deare for it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2215. (1732)

One who marries an ill-tempered person attempts to lick honey off a thorn.

WILLIAM HONE, Table-Book, col. 686. (1827)

Never try dirty dodges to make money. It will never pay you to lick honey off the thorns.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk Ch. 19. (1869)

HONEY IN MOUTH, KNIFE IN HAND, see under DISSIMULATION.

HONEYMOON

8
And now their honey-moon, that late was clear,

Doth pale, obscure, and tenebrous appear

NICHOLAS BRETON, Cornucopia. (1612)

Hony-moon, applyed to those married persons that love well at first, and decline in affection afterwards; it is hony now, but it will change as the Moon.

THOMAS BLOUNT, Glossographia: Hony-moon. (1656)

When a couple are newly married, the first moneth is honey-moon or smick smack; the second is, hither and thither: the third is, thwack thwack: the fourth, the Devil take them that brought thee and I together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53. (1670)
Sometimes the parties . . . grow cool in the very Honey Month.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 192. (1710)

9
It will not always be honeymoon.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 123. (1639)

10
It was yet but hony moone.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs Pt. i, ch. 7. (1546)

It being now but Honnie Moone.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 268. (1580)

It is but honeymoon with them.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 118. (1633)

<sup>1</sup>
The first month after marriage, when there is nothing but tenderness and pleasure.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary. (1755)

<sup>2</sup>
My Lord Denbigh is going to marry a fortune, I forget her name; my Lord Gower asked him how long the honey-moon would last? He replied, "Don't tell me of the honey-moon; it is harvest moon with me."

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu, 19 May, 1756.

HONOR

I—Honor: What It Is

<sup>3</sup>
Honour's a lease for lives to come
And cannot be extended from
The legal tenant.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1043. (1663)

<sup>4</sup>
That name, that idle name of wind, that empty sound call'd honour.

SAMUEL DANIEL, A Pastoral. (1592)

What is honour? a word.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 1, 136. (1597)
Honour's but a word.

BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, ii, 389. (1663)

Honour's but a name.

SWIFT (?), To the Tune of Chivie Chase. (1691)

<sup>5</sup>
Honour's the moral conscience of the great.

SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, Gondibert. (1651)

What is Honour, but a greatness of mind?

GEORGE STANHOPE, A Paraphrase upon the Epistles and Gospels, ii, 94. (1705)

Say, what is Honour? 'Tis the finest sense
Of justice which the human mind can frame

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Sonnet. (1809)

<sup>6</sup>
Honor is venerable to us because it is no ephemeris. It is always ancient virtue.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)
As to honor—it's a very fine medieval inheritance, which women never get hold of.

JOSEPH CONRAD, Chance. Ch. 2. (1914)

<sup>7</sup>
Honour, the spur that pricks the princely mind.

GEORGE PEELE, Battle of Alcazar. Act i. (1594)

Honour is the very breath in our nostrils.

JEFFREY HUDSON, dwarf page to Queen Henrietta Maria, on the occasion of a duel (c. 1649)

<sup>8</sup>
Honour, the darling of but one short day.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, A Farewell to the Vanities of the World. (1618)

Honour is a baby's rattle.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses' Looking-Glass. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1630)

Honour is but an itch in youthful blood.

SIR ROBERT HOWARD, The Indian Queen. (1665)
Without money honor is nothing but a malady.
(Sans argent l'honneur n'est qu'une maladie.)

RACINE, Les Plaideurs. Act i, sc. 1. (1668)

Honour but an empty bubble.

JOHN DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 100. (1697)

<sup>9</sup>
Honour's a mistress all mankind pursue,
Yet most mistake the false one for the true:
Lured by the trappings, dazzled by the paint,
We worship oft the idol for the saint.

PAUL WHITEHEAD, Honour. (1739)

II—Honor: Apothegms

<sup>10</sup>
Lo, one who loved true honour more than fame.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF STIRLING,
Doomsday: The Eighth Hour. St. 100. (1614)

A man of honour surely is the best man next to a man of conscience.

ISAAC BARROW, Theological Works, i, 89. (c. 1670)
The honorable man is always honorable, whatever his misfortunes. (El horr horr, Wa low messoo eddorr.)

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 117. (1817)

<sup>11</sup>
Give not thine honour to another.

Apocrypha: Baruch, iv, 3. (c. 320 B.C.)

Never trust your honor to another unless you have his in pledge. (Nunca fiar reputacion sin prendas de honra ajena.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual Maxim
234. (1647)

<sup>12</sup>
Let no stain come upon thine honour. (Ne dederis maculam in gloria tua.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus).
xxxiii, 22. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr

<sup>13</sup>
All honor's wounds are self-inflicted.

ANDREW CARNEGIE, Epigram (c. 1900) See
HENDRICK, Life.

<sup>14</sup>
Here honor binds me, and I wish to satisfy it. (Ici l'honneur m'oblige. et j'y veux satis-faire.)

CORNEILLE, Polyeucte. Act iv, sc. 6. (1640)

Let us do what honor demands (Faisons ce que l'honneur exige.)

RACINE, Bérénice. Act iv, sc. 4. (1670)

If honour calls, where'er she points the way
The sons of honour follow and obey.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farwell, 1.67. (1764)

<sup>15</sup>
The louder he talked of his honor, the faster
we counted our spoons.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship (1860)

<sup>16</sup>
Her honor by dishonour did she guard.
(ἑσωφρόνησε δ' οὐκ ἔχουσα σωφροεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 1034. (c. 428 B.C.)
Way, tr.

His honour rooted in dishonour stood,
And faith unfaithful kept him falsely true.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 871. (1870)

- 1 My brother indeed was the soul of honour.
GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 31. (1766)
The soul of honour. The very personification of honour.
PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Soul. (1941)
- 2 To those whose god is honour, disgrace alone is sin.
J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)
- 3 Count it the greatest of infamies to prefer life to honor, and to lose, for the sake of living, all that makes life worth having. (Summum crede nefas animam praeferre pudori, et propter vitam vivendi perdere causas.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 83. (c. A. D. 120)
Mine honour is my life; both grew in one; Take honour from me, and my life is done.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 1, 182. (1595)
Life every man holds dear; but the brave man Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, v, 3, 27. (1601)
If I lose mine honour, I lose myself.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 4, 22. (1606)
Honor is like an island, rugged and without a beach; once we have left it, we can never return. (L'honneur est comme une île escarpée et sans bords;
On n'y peut plus rentrer dès qu'on en est dehors.)
BOILEAU, Satires. Sat. x, l. 167. (c. 1675)
When honour's lost, 'tis a relief to die; Death's but a sure retreat from infamy.
SIR SAMUEL GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto v, l. 321. (1699)
Honour alone we cannot, must not lose.
LORD HALIFAX, The Man of Honour. (c. 1700)
Better to die ten thousand thousand deaths. Than wound my honour.
JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 4. (1712)
This day beyond its term my life extends, For life is ended when our honour ends.
OLIVER GOLDSMITH, tr., LABERIUS, Mime. (c. 1770)
- 4 What is most honorable is also safest. (Quod pulcherrimum idem tutissimum.)
LIVY, History Bk. xxxiv, ch. 14. (c. 10 B. C.)
- 5 I could not love thee, dear, so much
Lov'd I not Honour more.
RICHARD LOVELACE, To Lucasta, Going to the Wars. (1649)
- 6 Godlike erect, with native Honour clad.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 289. (1669)
In native worth and honour clad.
BARON VON SWIETEN. HAYDN, The Creation: Libretto. (1798)
- 7 We have lost all, only life remains. (Omnia perdidimus, tantummodo vita relicta est.)
OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 16, l. 49. (c. A. D. 9)

All is lost save honor. (Tout est perdu fors l'honneur.)

- FRANÇOIS I OF FRANCE, Letter to His Mother, after his disastrous defeat at Pavia, where he was taken prisoner. (1525) Tradition has altered the king's words to the form given above, but what he really wrote was, "De toutes choses ne m'est demeuré que l'honneur et la vie" (Nothing remains to me save honor and life). The letter is printed by DULAIRE, Histoire de Paris, and in Collection des Documents Inédits sur l'Histoire de France, vol. i, p. 129. (1847) See also SISMONDI, Histoire des Français, xvi, 241. Bonaparte is said to have quoted the phrase to Caulaincourt after Waterloo. (See BOURRIENNE, Mémoires de Napoléon, ii, 25), and Louis XVIII repeated it in reply to a proposal that he renounce the French throne
And all at Worcester but the honour lost.
JOHN DRYDEN, Astraea Redux, l. 74. (1660)
He has lost his boots, but sav'd his spurs.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733
Nothing is lost except our honour.
LORD BYRON, Letter to Thomas Moore, 14 May, 1821. "Nothing is lost save honor," was Jim Fisk's complacent rendering.
- 8 Honour and shame from no condition rise; Act well your part: there all the honour lies.
POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 193. (1732)
- 9 He who would be honorable must rule his mind and belly. (Animo ventrique imperare debet qui frugi esse vult.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 51. (c. 43 B. C.)
No one ever loses honor save him who has it not. (Fidem nemo umquam perdit nisi qui non habet.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 212.
- 10 Only a few held their honor dearer than gold. (Paucis carior fides quam pecunia fuit.)
SAILLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 16, sec. 5. (c. 40 B. C.)
How many sacrifice honor, a necessity, to glory, a luxury!
JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 38. (c. 1870)
- 11 Honour is sometimes found among thieves.
WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 9. (1824) See under THIEF.
- 12 See that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 1, 14. (1602)
By heaven, methinks it were an easy leap
To pluck bright honour from the pale-faced moon,
Or dive into the bottom of the deep, . . .
And pluck up drowned honour by the locks.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, i, 3, 201. (1597)
Honour pricks me on.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 1, 130. (1597)
If it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 3, 28. (1599)

- 1
Bound in honour.
SHAKESPEARE, King John, ii, 1, 522. (1596)
- 2
Honour should be concern'd in Honour's cause.
SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act v, sc. 2. (1696)
- 3
Honour's my Standard, and 'tis true, that I
Had rather Fall, than Blush for Victory.
SIR SAMUEL TUKE, *The Adventures of Five
Hours*. Act v, sc. 2. (1663)

III—Honor: Honors

- 4
When vice prevails and impious men bear sway,
The post of honour is a private station.
ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4. (1712)
Give me, kind heav'n, a private station,
A mind serene for contemplation,
Title and profit I resign;
The post of honour shall be mine.
JOHN GAY, Fables: The Vulture and Sparrow.
(1727)
- 5
Where there's no pay there's no art. (οὔτε γὰρ ὁ μισθὸς οὐδὲν ἔστ' οὐθ' ἡ τέχνη.)
ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 408. (388 B.C.)
That which men honor they practise, that which is not honored is neglected. (ἀσκεῖται δὴ τὸ ἀει τιμώμενον, ἀμελεῖται δὲ τὸ ἀτιμαζόμενον.)
PLATO, Republic. Bk. viii, sec. 551A. (c. 375
B.C.) A much quoted sentence.
Honor nourishes the arts, and all are incited to study by the desire of glory, while those pursuits which meet with general disapproval, always lie neglected. (Honos alit artes omnesque incenduntur ad studia gloria iacentque ea semper, quae apud quosque improbantur.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 4. (45 B.C.) Cicero is undoubtedly paraphrasing the sentence from Plato quoted above. "Honos alit artes" is cited by ERAS-MUS, Adagia, i, viii, 92 (1508), and is included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 26 (1550), with the rendering,
"Honoure mayntayneth cunnyng."
- Let there be many a Maecenas, and there will be many a Maro, Flaccus; even your fields will give you a Vergil. (Sint Maecenates, non derunt, Flacce, Marones | Vergiliumque tibi vel tua rura dabunt.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 56, l. 5. (A.D. 93)
Sayeth not the proverbe, honors nourishe artes?
FRANCIS THYNNE, Pride and Lowliness, p. 22.
(c. 1570)
Where honour ceaseth, there knowledge de-creaseth.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 137. (1639)
- 6
Who is honoured? He who honours others.
Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, iv, 1. (c. 450)
- 7
Honours are shadows, which from seekers fly;
But follow after those who them deny.
RICHARD BAXTER, Love Breathing Thanks. Pt.
ii. (c. 1670)

- 8
To fish for honour with a silver hook.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Honour of Valour. (c. 1615)
To exchange one's freedom for a little gain, . . .
I count it fishing with a golden hook.
RICHARD FLECKNOE, Miscellanies, p. 126. (c.
1650) See also under FISHING.
Be not with honour's gilded baits beguiled.
SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, Gondibert. Bk. i, canto v, st. 75. (1651)
- 9
Honour is like a widow, won
With brisk attempt and putting on;
With ent'ring manfully, and urging,
Not slow approaches, like a virgin.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l.
913. (1663)
- 10
If he that in the field is slain,
Be in the bed of honour lain,
He that is beaten may be said
To lie in honour's truckle-bed.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 1047. (1663)
Costar: Pray now, what may be that same bed of honour?
Kite: Oh, a mighty large bed! bigger by half than the great bed of Ware: ten thousand people may lie in it together and never feel one another.
FARQUHAR, Recruiting Officer. Act i, sc. 1. (1706)
- 11
Honor is a reward of merit. (Honos sit praemium virtutis.)
CICERO, Brutus. Ch. 81, sec. 281. (46 B.C.)
Repeated in the fourth Philippic, sec. 81.
Virtus, of course, means much more than "merit," or than "virtue," as it is often translated; it means everything that becomes a man, courage, worth, excellence.
Honour is the reward of virtue, and counted a divine thing.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 99. (1574) Pettie, tr.
Honour ever is the reward of vertue, and doth accompany it as duly as the shadow doth the body.
GEORGE PETTIE, Pettie Pallace, p. 29. (1576)
- 12
Honor and ease are seldom bedfellows.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia. (1639) FULLER,
Gnomologia. No. 2540. (1732)
Great honours are great burthens.
BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. i, l. 1. (1611)
RICHARD FLECKNOE, Epigrams, p. 53. (1670)
Honours and great employments are great burthens.
PHILIP MASSINGER, The Bondman. Act i, sc.
3. (1623)
Regal honours have regal cares.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 479. (1855)
- 13
Honour without profit is like a six-penny rent to one that hath nothing else to live on.
COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Seigneurie. (1611)
Honour without profit is a ring on the finger.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 232. (1640)
Honour and profit lie not in one sack.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 234.

No profit to honour.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 761. I have heard some say, that honour without maintenance is like a blew coat without a badge.

JOHN TATHAM, The Rump. Act iii, sc. 1. (1660)

Blue was the common color for a servant's livery.

Honour will buy no beef.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act v, sc. 3. (1668) Cited as "the excellent proverb."

1 He that hath no honour hath no sorrow.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 91. (1633)

Where there is no honour, there is no grief.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 188. (1640)

2 It is a worthier Thing to deserve Honour than to possess it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2891. (1732)

3 We cannot come to honour under Coverlet.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 535. (1640)

4 Without thee [O Muse] honors are of no advantage to me. (Nil sine te mei | prosunt honores.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 26, l. 9. (23 B. C.)

5 The honour one does with the mouth avails much and costs little.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

Lip-Honour costs little, yet may bring in much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3245. (1732)

6 If I honour myself, my honour is nothing. (ἐὰν ἐγὼ δοξάσω ἑμαυτόν, ἡ δόξα μου οὐδὲν ἐστίν.)

New Testament: John, viii, 54. (C. A. D. 110)

The Vulgate is, "Si ego glorifico me ipsum, gloria mea nihil est."

7 No man can justly aspire to honour, but at the hazard of disgrace.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 5 Feb., 1751.

8 Honour gained is but earnest of that which is to come. (L'honneur acquis est caution de celui qu'on doit acquérir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 270. (1665)

9 Except for the honor of the thing, I would rather have walked.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, quoting the remark of a man who had been tarred and feathered and ridden on a rail. (1863) See JOHNSTON, I Intend to Be President, Sat. Eve. Post, 16 March, 1940, p. 21.

10 The blind longing for honors. (Honorum caeca cupido.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 59. (C. 45 B. C.)

11 When he counted up his honors, he fancied himself an old man. (Dum numerat palmas, credidit esse senem.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 53. (C. A. D. 93)

12

As snow in summer, and as rain in harvest, so honour is not seemly for a fool. (Quomodo nix in aestate, et pluviae in messe: sic indecens est stulto gloria.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 1. (c. 350 B. C.)

Honor adorns the honorable; the dishonorable it brands. (Honos honestum decorat, inhonestum notat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 263. (c. 43 B. C.)

13

Render therefore to all their dues: . . . honor to whom honour. (τῷ τὴν τιμὴν τὴν τιμὴν.)

New Testament: Romans, xiii, 7. (C. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Cui honorem, honorem."

Hence the proverb, "Honor to whom honor is due." The French say, "A tous seigneurs, tous honneurs."

14

He that desires honour is not worthy of honour.

WILLIAM SECKER, The Nonsuch Professor, ii, 5. (1660) Quoted as "the old maxim, worthy to be revived."

15

[He] bears his blushing honours thick upon him.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 354. (1612)

With all his beauteous honours on his head.

POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 557. (1715)

With "all my blushing honors thick upon me."

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 32. (1850)

16

Abroad in armes, at home in studious kynd, Who seeks with painfull toile, shall Honour soonest fynd.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto iii, st. 40. (1590)

17

Honours, like impressions upon coin, may give an ideal and local value to a bit of base metal; but Gold and Silver will pass all the world over without any other recommendation than their own weight.

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ix, Dedication. This sentence is said to have inspired Burns's lines:

The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
The Man's the gowd for a' that.

18

The love of honor alone is untouched by age. (τὸ γὰρ φιλότιμον ἀγήρων μόνον.)

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. ii, ch. xlv, sec. 4. (C. 400 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 783F.

19

This son of a whore does the honour of my house to a miracle.

VANBRUGH, The Country House. Act i. (1703)

Then hire a Slave, or (if you will), a Lord,

To do the Honours, and to give the Word.

POPE, Imitations of Horace. Epis. i, vi, 100. (1737)

The mayor called this morning to do the honours of the town.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letter, 15 Sept., 1857.

<sup>1</sup> Thy honor, thy name and thy praises shall endure for ever. (Semper honos, nomenque tuum, laudesque manebunt.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. v, l. 78; Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 609. (19 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> Honors change manners. (Honores mutant mores.)

POLYDORE VERGIL, Adagia. Proverb 202. (c. 1520) The earliest known recording of a proverb already in general use, and common to many languages. Cervantes used it in Don Quixote, pt. ii, ch. 4 (1615), "Los oficios mudan las contumbres." The Italians say, "Gli onori mutano i costumi"; the French, "Les honneurs changent les mœurs."

Lord Rutland said to my father [Sir Thomas More], in his acute sneering way: "Ah, ah, Sir Thomas, honores mutant Mores"; to which my father replied, "Not so, i' faith, but have a care lest we translate the proverb and say, 'Honours change Manners'."

MARGARET MORE, Diary, October, 1524. The point of the jest will be better appreciated when it is remembered that Manners was Lord Rutland's family name.

When he [Richard III] was once crowned king . . . he cast a way his old condicions as ye adder doeth her skynne, verefieng ye old prouerbe, honoures chaunge maners.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 387. (1548)

So they verify that saying Honores mutant mores.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 437. (1552) See PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 79. (1576) GREENE, Works, vii, 294. (1590) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741. RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vii, 325. (1748) etc., etc.

Honours change manners; and we will not know those in the court who often fed us in the country.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 418. (1629) Honours change manners. . . . As poverty depresseth and debaseth a man's mind, so great place and estate advance and enlarge it; but many times corrupt and puff it up.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 104. (1670) You might write to me now and then, . . . But honores mutant mores. Professors forget their friends.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Thomas Warton, 21 June, 1757.

How I have offended [him] I know not, unless honours have changed manners.

WALTER SCOTT, The Abbot. Ch. 22. (1820)

HOOF

<sup>3</sup> The Secretary was put to beat the hoof himself, and foot it home.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Sec. i, let. 17. (1620)

We beat the hoof as pilgrims.

THOMAS BROWN, Saints in an Uproar. (1687)

A Man that is thus upon the Hoof can scarce find leisure for Diversion.

WILLIAM DARRELI, A Gentleman Instructed in the Conduct of a Happy Life. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1713)

The good man was . . . forced to beat it on the hoof.

BISHOP WILLIAM WARBURTON, The Doctrine of Grace. Ch. 12. (1750)

Charley Bates expressed his opinion that it was time to pad the hoof.

CHARLES DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 9. (1838)

I thought I recognized your hoof in it!

THACKERAY, Roundabout Papers, p. 87. (1860)

<sup>4</sup> After his humoursome way, [he] stooped downe to Baltazar's feet, to see whether he had a huff on, that is to say, to see whether he was a devil or not.

ANTHONY WOOD, Life, 24 July, 1658.

Here the cloven hoof begins to appear.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Works, ii, 485. (1788)

Pleasant communings we had . . . until she showed the cloven foot, beginning to confer with me about some wench.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 14.

(1822) To show the cloven foot, or, more usually, hoof, is to manifest Satanic qualities.

The cloven hoof of self-interest was . . . to be seen aneath the dove of public principle.

JOHN GALT, The Provost. Ch. 3. (1882)

[It] had caused him to show the cloven hoof too soon.

JAMES PAYN, The Luck of the Darrells. Ch. 31. (1885)

HOOK

<sup>5</sup> What fit's this? The pilgrim's off the hooks too!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Pilgrim. Act iii, sc. 6. (1621) Off his head, mad.

What, Roger, al amort, me thinks th' art off o' th' hookes.

ROBERT DAVENPORT, A New Tricke to Cheat the Divell. Act i, sc. 2. (1639)

To be off the hooks or out of humour.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 739. (1681)

One thing that hath put Sir William so long off the hookes.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 28 April, 1662.

This smart young hopeful is aff the hooks with too hard study.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 1. (1824)

Everybody . . . is a little off the hooks . . . in plain words, a little crazy.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 30. (1824)

Our friend . . . has popp'd off the hooks.

R. H. BARIHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: The Black Mousquetaire. Pt. ii. (1842) Died.

Is it true that old Fox is dropping off the hooks?

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross, p. 293. (1894)

<sup>6</sup> A hook's well lost to catch a salmon.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 5. (1633)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 41. (1639) JOHN

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 104. (1670) See also under FISHING.

<sup>1</sup>
With hook or with crook.

JOHN WYCLIF, Controversial Tracts, in English Works, p. 250. (c. 1380) By fair means or foul.

So what with hoke and what with croke
They make her maister ofte winne.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 2872. (c. 1390)

Nor will suffer this book

By hook ne by crook

Printed for to be.

JOHN SKELTON, Colin Clout, l. 1240. (c. 1523)
By hooke or crooke nought could I wyn there.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Yet will they haue it . . . eyther by hooke or crooke, by right or wrong, as they say.

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, p. 75. (1583)

His tyreling jade he fiersly forth did push,
Through thicke and thin, both over banck and bush,

In hope her to attaine by hooke or crook.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto i, st. 17. (1590)

Some . . . care not how they come by it per fas et nefas, hooke or crook, so they have it.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. i, sec. ii, memb. iii, subs. 15. (1621)

Title enough for a great Man that resolved to hold by hook, what he had got by crook.

NATHANIEL BACON, Historical Discourse of the Government of England, bk. ii, ch. 13. (1651)

If you can't gain it by hook, you must by crook.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 52. (1833)

The church could always maintain her children by hook or crook in those days.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 1. (1860) The Oxford English Dictionary says that there is no evidence as to the origin of the phrase, "by hook or by crook," but one explanation, at least, is plausible—that it refers to the old English law regarding the rights of the poor in securing fuel from the wooded lands adjacent to their homes. They were not permitted to use either axe or saw, but could use hooks (hooked poles known as crook-lugs), or crooks (sickles) for the dead wood and brush. It is stated that the Bodmin Register for 1525 records that "Dymure Wood was open to the inhabitants of Bodmin . . . to bear away upon their backs a burden of lop, hook, crook, and bag wood." The derived meaning is, of course, to accomplish a thing by any means, honestly if possible, crookedly if necessary. The French say, "De bric et de broc."

<sup>2</sup>

[He] himself says he went upon his own hook.

UNKNOWN, Boston Gazette, 23 Nov., 1812.

Some troops are marching about the street, "upon their own hook," I suppose.

PHILIP HONE, Diary, i, 58. (1832)

Candidate for Congress on your own hook.

SOL SMITH, The Theatrical Apprentice, p. 7.
(1846)

HOPE

See also Expectation

<sup>3</sup>

Many a hope has suffered shipwreck. (τολλών βαγαισάν ἐλπίδων.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 505. (458 B.C.)

Hope is not to be trusted. (ἐλπίς γὰρ ἐστ' ἀπιστον.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 479. (c. 421 B.C.)

Many a hopeful man has hope beguiled. (Qui speraverint spem decepisse multos.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 401. (c. 200 B.C.)

Fair hope is often deceived by its own augury.
(Fallitur augurio spes bona saepe suo.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 234. (c. 10 B.C.)

Hope maketh fol man ofte blenkes. [Hope often deludes the foolish man.]

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 307. (c. 1300)

For many tymes I have it seen,
That many have bigyled been,
For trust that they have set in Hope,
Which fel hem aftirward a-slope.

CHAUCER (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l.
4461. (c. 1365)

Too much hoping, deceiueh. (Troppo sperar inganna.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Hope is the most hopeless thing of all.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Against Hope. (c. 1633)

Hope is a kind of cheat.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. Works, p. 236. (1693)

That very popular trust in flat things coming round!

CHARLES DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 20. (1852)

<sup>4</sup>

Hope but flatters me. (σάλνομαι ἰ' ὑπ' ἐλπίδος.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 194. (458 B.C.)

I don't believe in Hope; she befogs everything.
(Nihil Spei credo; omnis res spissas facit.)

CAECILIUS STATIUS, Dardanus. Frag. 22, Loeb
(c. 175 B.C.)

Base hope is credulous. (Credula est spes improba.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 295. (c. A.D. 60)

Hope makes more fools than cleverness. (L'espérance fait plus de dupes que l'habileté.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 530. (1746)

<sup>5</sup>

To move one's man from the middle line.
(κινεῖν τὸν ἀφ' ἐπαῶς μέσθον.)

ALCAEUS, Fragments. Frag. 77. (c. 595 B.C.)

A desperate move in a game on a kind of draughts-board; a last hope.

The sacred anchor. (τὴν ἐπαὶν ἄγκυραν.)

LUCIAN, Zeus Rants. Sec. 51. (c. A.D. 170) The last hope. Quoted as a proverbial phrase

<sup>6</sup>

You ask what hope is? A waking dream.
(ἐρωτῇς τί ἐστιν ἐλπίς, ἐγρηγορότος ἐνύπνιον.)

ARISTOTLE, Apothegm. (c. 330 B.C.) As quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, bk. v, sec. 18, and referred to by QUINTILIAN, *Institutionis
Oratoriae*, and by BASIL, BISHOP OF CAESAR-
REA, in a letter to Gregory of Nazianzus
(c. 370). Aelian ascribed the saying to Plato, and Stobaeus to Pindar. Put into Latin by Sir Edward Coke (c. 1600), "Spes est vigi-lantis somnium" (Hope is the dream of a man awake), it is found in most modern languages, the French, for example, saying, "L'espérance est le songe d'un homme éveillé."

Vain hopes, like certain dreams of those who wake. (Spes inanes, et velut somnia quaedam vigilantium.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. 2, sec. 30. (A. D. 80)

For hope is but the dream of those that wake.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of the World. Bk. iii, l. 102. (1718)

<sup>1</sup> Hope robs men of understanding. (ἐλπίς ἀνθρώπων ὑφαίρειται νόημα.)

BACCHYLIDES, For Automedes of Philus, l. 18. (c. 475 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> There are no hopeless situations, there are only hopeless men. (Il n'y a pas des situations désespérées, il y a seulement des hommes désespérés.)

CLARE BOOTHE, Europe in the Spring, p. 271. (1940) Quoting an unnamed diplomat.

<sup>3</sup> The old hope is hardest to be lost.

E. B. BROWNING, The Cry of the Children. (1843)

<sup>4</sup> Man is, properly speaking, based upon Hope, he has no other possession but Hope.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1834)

<sup>5</sup> Hoping for him as for the May rains. (Le esperando como el agua de Mayo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1615)

<sup>6</sup> Better a good hope than a bad holding. (Más vale buena esperanza que ruin posesión.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7, 65. (1615)

A good Hope is better than a bad Possession.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 154. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> There is more delight in hope than in enjoyment.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 442. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

<sup>8</sup> You must hope for the best. (Debebis optare optima.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. ix, epis. xvii, sec. 3. (46 B.C.)

I wish the best, and therefore if I fare the worst I hope I am the easier to be pardoned.

JOHN BRIDGES, Defence of the Government of the Church of England, p. 74. (1587)

Its best to hope the best, though of the worst affrayd.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto vi, st. 37. (1590)

I'll hope the best, and provide for the worst.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Seneca's Morals: Happy Life. Ch. 10. (c. 1680)

Hope for the best and prepare for the worst.

ANNE NASH, Said with Flowers, p. 113. (1943)

<sup>9</sup> Without hope, we live in desire. (Senza speme vivemo in disio.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iv, l. 42. (c. 1300)

ALL HOPE ABANDON, see under HELL.

<sup>10</sup> We ought neither to fasten our ship to one small anchor nor our life to a single hope. (οὐτε ναῦν ἐξ ἐνὸς ἀγκυρίου οὐτε βίον ἐκ μιᾶς ἐλπίδος ἀρροστέον.)

EPICETUS (?), Fragments. Frag. 30. (c. A. D. 100)

Hope, as an anchor firm and sure, holds fast The Christian vessel, and defies the blast.

WILLIAM COWPER, Hope, l. 167. (1781)

<sup>11</sup> They that feed upon Hope may be said to hang on, but not to live. (Qui spe aluntur, pendent, non vivunt.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia. Ch. 1, sec. 16. (1524)

Hee who lives of Hope makes a thinn belly.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared HOURS of a Souldier, p. 302. (1623)

He that thinketh to thrive by hope, may happen to beg in misery.

UNKNOWN, The Country-mans New Commonwealth, p. 23. (1647)

Hope is a very thin diet, fit for love in a fever.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Bury-Fair. Act iii, sc. 1. (1689)

As the Italian proverb runs, The man who lives by hope will die of hunger.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 191. (1711)

He that lives on hope, hath a slender diet.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 129. (1721)

He that lives upon hope will die fasting.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

To live on hope, one eats little. (À vivre d'espérance, On mange maigre pitance.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 384. (1856)

He who lives on hope has a slim diet.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 15. (1869)

<sup>12</sup> Hope is a poor salad To dine and sup with.

FLETCHER AND MASSINGER, The Custom of the Country. Act ii, sc. 1. (c. 1620)

Hope is a good breakfast, but an ill supper.

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 95. (1625)

See AUBREY, Brief Lives, i, 74.

Ah! he was a wise man who said Hope is a good breakfast but a bad dinner. It shall be my supper, however, when all's said and done.

HESTER LYNCH PROZZI. (1817) See HAYWARD, Autobiography. Vol. ii, p. 188.

Hope is good sauce but poor food.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr.'s Almanack, p. 69. (1906)

<sup>13</sup> He that dooth liue in hope, dooth dance in narrow scope.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 149. (1591)

He that lives in hope, danceth without music.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1004. (1640)

He that liveth in hope danceth without a fiddle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2224. (1732)

1 Hope and a Red-Rag, are Baits for Men and Mackerel.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

2 Great Hopes make great Men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1759. (1738)
He that wants Hope, is the poorest Man alive.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2342.

3 All men are guests where Hope doth hold the feast.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Fruits of War, l. 88. (c. 1572)

4 Hope is a slender reed for a stout man to lean on.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 13. (1843)

The houses hope builds are castles in the air.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 13.

5 Men should do with their hopes as they do with tame fowl, cut their wings that they may not fly over the wall.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims Works, p. 237. (1693)
Cut the wings of your Hens and Hopes, lest they lead you a weary Dance after them.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

6 It is natural to man to indulge in the illusions of hope.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775.

7 Since life is brief, cut short far-reaching hopes. (Spatio brevi spem longam rescues.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode xi, l. 6. (23 B. C.)

8 Hope well and haue well.

WILLIAM HUNNIS, in A Paradise of Dayntie Deuses, p. 57. (1576) MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. H2. (1583) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 307. (1605) MOTTEUX, Don Quixote, pt. ii, ch. 45. (1712) etc.

Spee [bode] well and hae well. . . . That is, hope and expect good things, and it will fall out accordingly.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 290. (1721)

Hope well, and have well, quoth Hickwell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2545. (1732)

9 I suppose it can be truthfully said that Hope is the only universal liar who never loses his reputation for veracity.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Address, Manhattan Liberal Club, at celebration of 155th Paine anniversary. (1887) See The Truth-Seeker, 28 Feb., 1892.

10 The natural flights of the human mind are not from pleasure to pleasure, but from hope to hope.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 2. (1750)

11 Hopers go to hell.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 164. (1721)

12 Hope, great deceiver as she is, at least serves to carry us to the end of life by a pleasant road. (L'espérance, toute trompeuse qu'elle est, sert au moins à nous mener à la fin de la vie par un chemin agréable.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 168. (1665)
Hope is generally a wrong guide, though it is very good company by the way.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims Works, p. 236. (1693)

13 Oft hast thou heard it, Crave in hope, and have in hap.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Ff2. (1583)

14 Take hope from the heart of man, and you make him a beast of prey.

OUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), Wisdom, Wit, and Pathos: A Village Commune. (c. 1870)

15 How many this goddess [Hope] has prevented in the act of fastening the noose about their throats from perishing by the death they had purposed! (Haec dea quam multos laqueo sua colla ligantis | non est proposita passa perire nece!)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 39. (A. D. 13)
Hope keeps a Man from hanging, and drowning himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2544. (1732)
It is Hope alone, that makes us willing to live.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2957.

16 I hoped for better things. (Speravi melius.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. ii, l. 61. (c.10 B. C.)

My hopes are not always realized, but I always hope. (Et res non semper, spes mihi semper adest.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xviii, l. 178.

17 He flies on the wings of hope. (μεγάλας ἐξ ἐλπίδος πέταται.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. Ode viii, l. 129. (446 B. C.)

I take the wings of hope. (πέτομαι δ' ἐλπίσιν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, 1486. (c.409 B. C.)

Restless hope, for ever on the wing.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. vii, l. 133. (1742)

18 With him liveth sweet Hope, the nurse of eld, the fosterer of the heart:—Hope, who chiefly ruleth the changeful mind of man. (γλυκεῖα οἱ καρδίαν ἀτάλλουσα γηροτρόφος συναορεῖ | Ἐλπίς, ἃ μάλιστα θνατῶν πολύστροφον γνῶμαν κυβερνᾷ.)

PINDAR, Fragments. Frag. 214, Sandys. (c. 480 B. C.) Quoted by PLATO, Republic, i, 331A.

"Hope the nurse of age" is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 63, with the Latin, "Spes alitrix senectae."

It is hope which maintains most of mankind. (ἐστ' ἐλπίς ἡ βόσκουσα τοὺς πολλοὺς βροτῶν.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. (c. 450 B. C.)

Hopes are the food of exiles, so runs the saw. (αἱ δ' ἐλπίδες βόσκουσι φονγάδας, ὡς λόγος.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissai, l. 396. (c. 420 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 92, "Spes alunt exules."

Hope supports the afflicted. (Spes servat afflictos.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 63. (1523) Similarly,
"Hope is our only comfort in adversity"
(Spes sola hominem in miseriis solatur).

Hope comforteth a man. (Speranza conforta l'huomo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Hope is a lover's staff.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iii, 1, 246. (1594)

Hope and patience are the two sovereign remedies for all.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 3. (1621)

Hope is the poor man's bread.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 479. (1640)

Hope elevates, and joy Brightens his crest.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 633. (1667)

Hope is worth any Money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2543. (1732)

Hope! thou nurse of young desire.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act i, sc. 1. (1763)

Hope, that with honey blends the cup of pain.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Hymn to Sereswaty, l. 19. (1772)

In all the wedding cake, hope is the sweetest of the plums.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: The Catspaw. (c. 1840)

Hope swells my sail.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The West Indies. (c. 1840)

Hope is grief's best music.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 408. (1855)

Hope is the thing with feathers

That perches in the soul.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 32. (c. 1880) The Russians say, "In the land of hope there is never any winter."

1
Our hope-nots come true oftener than our hopes. (Inesperata accidunt magis saepe quam quae speres.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 197. (c. 200 B. C.) The Germans say, "Unverhofft kommt oft" (The unexpected comes often).

2
Hope springs eternal in the human breast.
POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 95. (1732)
The birth of a phrase which promptly became proverbial.

Hope "springs exulting on triumphant wing."
BURNS, Cotter's Saturday Night, St. 16. (1786)

Hope springs eternal in the scholastic breast.
CHARLES DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1865)

If hope springs eternal in the human breast, let illusion also shed its soft and comforting light upon the darkness of the human path.

P. C. WREN, Uniform of Glory, p. 61. (1941)

The fellow who said hope springs eternal in the human breast should have started probing under my vest next morning.

R. L. GOLDMAN, Murder Behind the Mike, p. 61. (1942)

3
Hope deferred maketh the heart sick. (Spes, quae differtur, affligit animam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiii, 12. (c. 350 B. C.)

Hope deferred has oft dispirited strong men. (Saepe ignavavit fortem ex spe expectatio.)

ACCIIUS, Aeneadae. Frag. 10. (c. 140 B. C.)

For (as it is in the proverb) delayed hope afflicteth the heart.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 38. (1631)

Long hope is the fainting of the soule.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 42. (1633)

Hopes delayed, hang the Heart upon Tenter-hooks.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2547. (1732)

I . . . felt what kind of sickness of the heart it was which arises from hope deferred.

LAURENCE STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: The Captive. (1768)

How true it is that hope deferred maketh the heart sick!

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch. 29. (1836)

You can't live on hope, and hope deferred makes the heart sick.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 12. (1843)

4
Hope helps the beggar, wealth the miser, death the wretched. (Spes inopem, res avarum, mors miserum levat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 672. (c. 43 B. C.)

5
Who against hope believed in hope. (ὅς παρ' ἐλπίδα ἐπ' ἐλπίδι ἐπίστευσεν.)

New Testament: Romans, iv, 18. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Qui contra spem in spem credit."

Hope against hope, and ask till ye receive.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The World Before the Flood. (c. 1845)

He was hoping against hope.

MICHAEL ANNESLEY, Missing Agent. (1938)

To hope against hope: i. e. against reasonable expectation, against probability.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Hope. (1941)

6
Hope maketh not ashamed. (ἡ δὲ ἐλπίς οὐ κατασχύνει.)

New Testament: Romans, v, 5. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Spes autem non confundit."

Where the heart is past hope, the face is past shame.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 563. (1855)

7
So long an interval has room for many a hope. (Tamquam multas spes tam longum tempus reciperet.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 64)

What madness to plot out far-reaching hopes! (Quanta dementia est spes longas inchoantium!)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 4.

8
By hoping more, they have but less.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 137. (1594)

A high hope for a low heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 197. (1595)

[He] lined himself with hope,
Eating the air on promise of supply.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 3, 27. (1598)

1
The miserable have no other medicine
But only hope.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 2. (1604)

Hope! of all ills that men endure,
The only cheap and universal cure.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, For Hope. (c. 1633)

Hope, the patent medicine
For disease, disaster, sin.

WALLACE RICE, Hope. (c. 1928)

There is yet hope.

JAMES MUNYON, Advertising Slogan. (c. 1895)
Munyon was a patent medicine manufacturer.

2
Hope is a flatterer: but the most upright of all parasites; for she frequents the poor man's hut as well as the palace of his superior.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, On Writing and Books. (1764)

3
Hope is the fawning traitor of the mind, while, under colour of friendship, it robs it of its chief force of resolution.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. iii. (c. 1580)

4
Hope is like the sun, which, as we journey towards it, casts the shadow of our burden behind us.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 3. (1859)

5
He glows with empty hopes. (κεναῖσιν ἐλπῖσιν θερμαίνεται.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 478. (c. 409 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 5, with the Latin, "Inani spe flagrat," and the comment, "Sapiens etiam si sperat dissimulat"
(The wise man, even if he hopes, dissimu-lates). A similar Greek proverb is, ζεσταίνεται μὲ τὰς ἐλπίδας (He warms himself with hopes).

Warmed by hope, or frozen by dread. (Échauffés par l'espoir, ou glacés par l'effroi.)

VOLTAIRE, Mérope. Act i, sc. 4. (1748)

6
I don't buy hope with cash. (Ego spem pretio non emo.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 219. (161 B.C.) A proverb cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 5, and by MONTAIGNE, Essays, ii, 17, who gives the French, "Je n'achète pas l'espérance argent comptant."

Parting with the substance for the shadow. The adage advises not to part with what we actually possess, upon the distant prospect of uncertain gain.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, ii, 12. (1814)

7
What is most common? Hope; for those who have nothing else have that ever with them.
(τὶ κοινότατον; ἐλπίς· καὶ γὰρ οἷς ἄλλο μηδὲν, αὕτη πάρεστι.)

THALES OF MILETUS, one of the Seven Wise

Men. (c. 650 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia, 153:D.

Hope alone does not desert man, even in death.
(Spes una hominem nec morte relinquit.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 25. (c. 175 B.C.)
That goddess [Hope], when all other deities abandoned the wicked earth, remained alone on the god-detested place. (Haec dea, cum fugerent sceleratas numina terras | in dis invisā sola remansit humo.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 29. (A.D. 13)
Hope, once conceived, is long-lived. (Spes, tenet in tempus, semel est si credita, longum.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 445. (c. 1 B.C.)
Hope is the last thynge of a man. (La speranza è l'ultima cosa de l'huomo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578) The Italians also say, "L'ultima che si perde è la speranza" (The last thing we lose is hope), and "La speranza è l'ultima ch' abbandona l'infelice" (Hope is the last thing to abandon the unhappy). Derived perhaps from the legend of Pandora, fashioned from clay by Hephaestus at the bidding of Zeus, to revenge himself on Prometheus for giving fire to man. But Prometheus (Fore-thought) foresaw the troubles which Pandora would bring upon mankind, so she went to his brother, Epimetheus (After-thought), who opened the box she carried, unloosing all the ills which have ever since afflicted the human race, and managed to clap down the lid only in time to keep Hope captive.

Hope is the best possession. None are completely wretched but those who are without hope; and few are reduced so low as that.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 34. (c. 1821)

8
We easily persuade our selves to hope
The things we wish.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, *The Adventures of Five
Hours*. Act iv, sc. 2. (1663)

9
Hope inspires the wise, and deludes the indolent. (L'espérance anime le sage, et luerre l'indolent.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 14. (1746)

10
You nurse an idle hope. (Spes pascis inanis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. x, l. 627. (19 B.C.)

Every man is his own hope. (Spes sibi quisque.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 309.

11
The hope of the flock. (Spes gregis.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. i, l. 15. (37 B.C.)

12
Prisoners of hope. (Vincti spei.)

Old Testament: Zechariah, ix, 12. (c. 500 B.C.)

Title of novel by Mary Johnston. (1898)

13
If hoping does you good, hope on.

C. M. WIELAND, Oberon, iv. (1780)

As me seith, gif hope nere, heorte to breke.

UNKNOWN, Ancrene Riwe, p. 80. (c. 1220)

And men saye, warn hope ware it [the heart]
suld brest.

RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE, *The Pricke of
Conscience*, l. 7266. (c. 1340)

Hope ne were, hert brostun were.

FÖRSTER, ed., MS. Douce, 52. (c. 1350)

He made thes wordes to be wreten, "yf hope were not, hert shulde breke."

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale 51. (c. 1440)
But for hope ye hart woold brust.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 95. (c. 1590)
Without hope the heart would break.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Brit-aine (1870), p. 335. (1605)

Hope keeps the heart whole.

ANTHONY BREWER, The Love-Sick King. Act
ii. (1655)

Hope—the only tie which keeps the heart from breaking.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. i,
p. 40. (a. 1662)

If hope were not, heart would break.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vi, 200. (1748)

There is an old proverb that if it were not for Hope the heart would break. Everything may be retrieved except despair.

LORD AVEBURY, Use of Life. Ch. 15. (1894)

II—While There's Life There's Hope

1 Not one, my child, with sight of day is death;
For that is naught, in this is space for hope.
(οὐ ταύτόν, ὦ παῖ, τῷ βλέπειν τὸ καθαίνειν τὸ μὲν γὰρ οὐδέν, τῷ δ' ἐνεῖσιν ἐλπίδες.)

EURIPIDES, Daughters of Troy. l. 632. (c. 415 B. C.)

The hope of life returns with the sun. (Spes vitae cum sole redit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 70. (c. A. D. 120)

There is ay life for a living man.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 323. (1721)

There is aye life for a living body.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to John Carlyle, 22
July, 1834.

2 There is life in a mussel though it be little.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 309. (1721)

There's life in a mussel as lang as it can cheep.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 140. (1832)

3 All things, while a man has life, may be hoped for.
(Omnia homini, dum vivit, speranda sunt.)

TELESPHORUS OF RHODES, when cast into a cage by the tyrant Lysimachus. (c. 310 B. C.) See

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 7.

There's hope while there's life; only the dead are hopeless. (ἐλπίδες ἐν ζωοῖσιν, ἀνέλπιστοι δὲ θανόντες.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. iv, l. 42. (c. 270 B. C.)

If one may only live, there's hope. (Modo liceat vivere, est spes.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 981. (163
B. C.)

While there's life, there's hope. (Dum anima est, spes est.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ix, epis. 10. (49 B. C.)

The exact phrase is, "Ut aegrotō, dum anima est, spes esse dicitur, sic ego, quoad Pompeius in Italia fuit, sperare non destiti" (As a sick man is said to have hope as long as he has life, so I did not cease to hope so long as

Pompey was in Italy). Cited by ERASMUS,
Adagia, ii, iv, 12, and included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 36, with the rendering, "The sycke person whyle
he hath lyfe, hath hope."

Live and do not be the death of two beings in one! Let good hope give thee strength. (Spes bona det vires.)

OVID, Heroides. Bk. xi, l. 61. (c. 10 B. C.)

Founded upon these lines of Ovid is a medieval Latin jingle, "Spes bona dat vires; animum quoque spes bona firmat; | vivere spe vidi qui moriturus erat" (Good hope gives strength; good hope also strengthens the resolution; I have seen one about to die live by hope).

Fond hope keeps the spark alive, whispering ever that tomorrow things will mend. (Credula vitam | spes fovet et fore cras semper ait melius.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. vi, l. 19. (c. 10
B. C.)

While life remains, all is well, though I sit on a piercing cross. (Vita dum superest, benest; . . .
vel acuta | si sedeam cruce.)

MAECENAS, Fragments. Frag. 1, p. 35, Lunderstedt. (c. 8 B. C.) Quoted by SENECA, Ad

Lucilium, epis. ci, sec. 11, who calls it the most debased of prayers (turpissimum votum). MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. ii, ch. 37, commenting on this passage, tells the story of Antisthenes, the Stoic, who, being very ill, cried out, "Who will deliver me from these ills?" Diogenes, who had come to see him, placed a knife in his hand, saying, "This will do it very quickly." "I didn't ask to be delivered from life," Antisthenes protested, "but from my suffering."

No one is to be despaired of as long as he breathes.
(Nulli desperandum, quam diu spirat.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Epicurus, fin. (1524) An expansion of the Latin proverb, "Dum spiramus, speramus" (While we breathe, we hope), sometimes given in the first person,
"Dum spiro, spero."

All things, said an ancient saw, may be hoped for by a man as long as he is alive. (Toutes choses, disoit un mot ancien, sont espérables à un homme, pendant qu'il vit.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1580)

Until death, all is life. (Hasta la muerte todo es vida.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 69. (1615)
Quoted by FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5045.
(1732)

While there's life there's hope.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 113. (1670)

A proverb, with slight variations, in many languages. The Italians say, "Finche vi è fiato vi è speranza"; the Portuguese, "Em quanto ha vida, ha esperança"; the Germans, "So lange Leben da ist, ist auch Hoffnung"; the French, "Qui a temps a vie."

One should have tolerance for a man, hope of him. . . . While life lasts, hope lasts for every man.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero Worship. Ch. 5. (1841)

III—Hope and Despair

- 1 Hope Love's leman is, Despair his wife.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Epigram. (c. 1835)
- 2 Work without Hope draws nectar in a sieve,
And Hope without an object cannot live.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Work Without Hope. (1825)
- 3 Hope, like the hyena, coming to be old,
Alters his shape, is turned into despair.
HENRY CONSTABLE; Sonnets to Diana. (c. 1592)
- 4 Despair in vain sits brooding over the putrid eggs of hope.
J. H. FRERE, The Rovers. Act i, sc. 2. (1798)
- 5 Hope is as cheap as Despair.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2542. (1732)
If we are to dream, the flatteries of hope are as cheap, and pleasanter than the gloom of despair.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to De Marbois.
(1817)
- 6 It is better to hope than to despair. (Ist besser hoffen als verzweifeln.)
GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 197.
(1790)
- 7 Like strength is felt from hope and from despair.
POPE, tr., Homer's Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 852. (1715)
- 8 Do not hope without despair, nor despair without hope. (Nec speraveris sine desperatione nec desperaveris sine spe.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 12. (c. A. D.
64) He who can hope for nothing, let him despair of nothing. (Qui nil potest sperare, desperet nihil.) SENECA, Medea, l. 163. (c.
A. D. 60)
- 9 Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, ii, 3, 9. (1591)
Our final hope Is flat despair.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 142. (1667)
- 10 He who has never hoped can never despair.
SHAW, Caesar and Cleopatra. Act iv. (1897)
HE WHO EXPECTS NOTHING WILL NEVER BE DIS-APPOINTED, see under EXPECTATION.
- 11 Despair is a greater deceiver than hope. (Le désespoir est plus trompeur que l'espérance.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 455. (1746)

IV—Hope and Fear

- 12 You will cease to fear if you cease to hope.
(Desines timere, si sperare desieris.)
HECATON, Fragments. Frag. 25 Fowler. (c. A. D.
50) Quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, v, 7.
So farewell Hope, and with Hope farewell Fear.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 108. (1667)
Where no hope is left, is left no fear.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 206. (1671)
He has no hope who never had a fear.
WILLIAM COWPER, Truth, l. 299. (1781)

- But I strode on austere;
No hope could have no fear.
JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.
Pt. iv. (1874)
- 13 He that hopes not for good, fears not evil
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 565. (1640)
He that hopes no Good, fears no Ill.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2166. (1732)
- 14 I steer my bark with Hope in the head, leaving Fear in the stern.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Madison. (1784)
- 15 Hope and fear are inseparable; there is no fear without hope, no hope without fear.
(L'espérance et la crainte sont inséparables, et il n'y a point de crainte sans espérance, ni d'espérance sans crainte.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 515. (1665)
There is no fear without some hope, and no hope without some fear.
BARUCH SPINOZA, Ethica. Ch. 3. (1677)
- 16 Let the fearful be allowed to hope. (Licet sperare timentis.)
LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 15. (c. A. D. 60)
- 17 Let us hope while we fear, and fear while we hope, we lovers. (Speremus pariter, pariter metuamus, amantes.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. xix, l. 5. (c. 13 B. C.)
Hope and fear bring trust and mistrust by turns.
(Alternant spesque timorque fidem.)
OVID, Heroides. Epis. vi, l. 38. (c. 10 B. C.)
- 18 Fear made her devils, and weak hope her gods.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 256. (1732)
- 19 Just as the same chain fastens the prisoner and the soldier who guards him, so hope and fear, dissimilar as they are, keep step together; fear follows hope. (Quemadmodum eadem catena et custodiam et militem copu-lat, sic ista, quae tam dissimilia sunt, pariter incedunt; spem metus sequitur.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. v, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 64)
Hopes and Fears chequer Humane Life.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2546. (1732)
- 20 Most wretched 'tis to fear when you can hope for naught. (Miserrimum est timere, cum speres nihil.)
SENECA, Troades, l. 425. (c. A. D. 60)
In such a case they talk in Tropes,
And, by their Fears express their Hopes.
SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 117. (1731)
The kind wise word that falls from years that fall—
"Hope thou not much, and fear thou not at all."
A. C. SWINBURNE, Hope and Fear. (1871)
- 21 My mind has been on the rack between hope and fear. (Animus in spe atque in timore attentus fuit.)
TERENCE, Andria, l. 303. (166 B. C.)

Between hope and fear. (Spemque metumque inter dubii.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 218. (19 B.C.)

Between hope and feare.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 60. (1579)

HORN

<sup>1</sup> To give one horns, i.e. to cuckold. (κάρτα ποιεῖν τιμ.)

ARTEMIDORUS, Onirocritica. Bk. ii, sec. 11. (c. A.D. 150)

He who finds corn at home without buying it has a wife who is a horn of plenty. (κεῖνον Ἀμαθελίας ἀ γυναῖ ἐστὶ κέρας.)

CALLICTER, Epigram. (c. ?) Greek Anthology, x, 5. A play upon "horn" which is here used to indicate a cuckold.

She loveth so this hende Nicholas,

That Absolon may blowe the bukkes horn.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 200. (c. 1386)

To weare a horne and not knowe it, will do me no more harme then to eate a flye, and not see it.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, (Arber) p. 284. (1580)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5250. (1732)

Take thou no scorn to wear the horn;

It was a crest ere thou wast born.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 2, 14. (1600)

He that hath horns in his bosom let him not put them on his head.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 569. (1640) Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 104 (1670) with the comment, "Let a man hide his shame, not publish it."

Let no man disorder his rest,

By believing bull's feathers in's crest.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act ii, sc. 4. (1662)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1678), has, "He wears the Bulls feather," with the explanation, "This is a French proverb, for a cuckold." In Roxburghe Ballads, iii, 418 (c. 1680), is the couplet, "To all merry cuckolds who think it no scorn | To wear the bull's feather, though made of a horn."

He had better put his horns in his pocket than wind them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1678)

Horns and grey hairs do not come by years.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 156.

Your horns hang in your eyes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 346.

The brib'd cuckold . . . glories in his gilded horn.

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame, i, 70. (1728)

On ilka brow she's planted a horn.

ROBERT BURNS, The Cooper o' Cuddie. (a.1796)

Wise men wear their horns in their breasts, fools on their foreheads. (Sapientes portant cornua in pectore, stulti in fronte.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 131. (1814)

The phrase "to wear horns," i.e. to be a cuckold, is common to many European languages, and is said to have been derived from the practice formerly prevalent of planting or engrafting the spurs of a castrated cock on the root of the excised comb, where they grew and became horns, sometimes several inches long. See O.E.D. See also CUCKOLD.

<sup>2</sup> Let the horns go with the hide.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 441. (1855) Cited by HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 209, with the comment, "The horns bearing but insignificant value in comparison with the hide, they should be thrown into the purchase of the latter free of charge."

<sup>3</sup> I had the horn of suretyship ever before my eyes. You all know the device of the horne where the young fellow slippes in at the butts-end and comes squeezed out at the buckall.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act i, sc. 1. (1605) Pictures of the "horn of suretyship" used to be common, and "to come out at the little end of the horn" meant to come off badly in an affair.

The prodigal fool the ballad speaks of, That was squee'd thro' a horn.

JOHN FLETCHER, A Wife for a Month. Act iii, sc. 3. (1624)

How did you make it? You didn't come out at the little end of the horn, did you?

W. T. PORTER, The Big Bear of Arkansas, p. 37 (1847)

<sup>4</sup> If a man be deuorst . . . may he haue an action or no, gainst those that make horns at him?

DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Northward Ho. Act i. (1607) "To make horns at" was to hold the fist with two fingers extended like a pair of horns, in an insulting gesture. From the French, "faire les cornes."

Some made mouths at him, others as in scorn With their fork't fingers poynted him the horne

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Agincourt, l. 174. (1627)

<sup>5</sup> He that blaws best bears away the horne.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 149, with the comment, "He that does best, shall have the reward."

<sup>6</sup> Care not; and that will prevent Horns.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1061. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> I have some wrinkles on my horn, for I warn't born yesterday.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws Ch. 7. (1843)

Now that's a wrinkle on my horn.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 10. Something I didn't know.

<sup>8</sup> You horned me off to get a chance to get gaming witnesses out of the way.

J. J. HOOPER, The Widow Rugby's Husband, p. 69. (1851)

MacVeagh is trying his best to horn Blaine out of the Cabinet herd, just as young buffalo bulls horn out the old ones from the herd when they get superannuated.

UNKNOWN, Philadelphia Times, 5 June, 1881.

1 They see their horne of plenty freshly flowing still.

COUNTESS OF PEMBROKE, Psalms, lxxiii, 3. (c. 1586)

He hath the horn of abundance.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 52. (1598)

Nature, very oddly, when the Horn of Plenty is quite empty, always fills it with babies.

WALTER BESANT, Children of Gibeon. Bk. ii, ch. 28. (1886)

2 We locked horns without a word, thar all alone, and I do think we fit an hour.

W. T. PORTER, A Quarter Race in Kentucky, p. 89. (1846)

3 A new sound in an old horn.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 361. (1678)

An old tout [blast] in a new horn.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 28. (1721)

"Spoken when we hear what we have heard before."

There are . . . Puritans of papistical principles -- it is just a new tout on an auld horn.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 27. (1822)

4 Herodotus tells us, that in cold countries beasts very seldom have horns, but in hot they have very large ones. This might bear a pleasant application.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

What men call gallantry, and gods adultery,

Is much more common where the climate's sultry.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 63. (1818)

5 They . . . gunne to drawen in her hornes.

As a snayl among the thornes.

UNKNOWN, Richard Cœur de Lion, l. 3835. (c. 1360) "To draw in one's horns" means to repress one's pride or lower one's pretensions, an allusion to the snail's habit of drawing in its tentacles, or horns, which bear the eyes, when disturbed.

He was tho glad his hornes in to shrinke.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 300. (c. 1380)

Pull in his hornes, and acknowledge his fault.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 150. (1574) Pettie, tr.

It will make yow plucke in your hornes.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act iii, sc. 2. (1577)

Now the old cuckold hath pulled in his hornes.

JOHN LYLY (?), Pappe with an Hatchet. (1589)

Let them cause you to be ashamed, or to shrinke in your hornes ever the more.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian, sig. S1. (1642)

The Kentich gentry acquitted themselves so valiantly . . . that Perkin shrunk his horns back again into the shell of his ships.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Kent, ii, 179. (1662)

To pull in his hornes; make a retreat.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 15. (1672)

So I began to pull in my hornes, as they say.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, i, 115. (1741)

The fellow . . . drew in his horns, and acknowledged he might have been mista'en.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 14. (1818) Scott repeats the phrase in ch. 27.

She had no sooner gone, than Bang began to shoot out his horns a bit.

MICHAEL SCOTT, Tom Cringle's Log. Ch. 13. (1829)

The high-fliers . . . has halled in their horns.

W. T. THOMPSON, Major Jones's Courtship, p. 79. (1843)

We had hauled in our horns considerably since our capture.

W. L. GOSS, The Soldier's Story of Captivity at Andersonville. Ch. 3. (1871)

He told me he would have to draw in his horns a bit.

JOHN RHODE, The Fourth Bomb, p. 244. (1942)

6 I hold hym wyse and wel i-taught,

Can b[e]ar an horn and blow it naught.

UNKNOWN, Songs and Carols, p. 23 Percy Society. (c. 1470)

I can wear a horn and blow it not.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias. (1571)

See HAZLITT, Old Plays, iv, 77.

He cannot hold a horn in his mouth, but must blow it.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis. p. 733. (1681)

TAKE THE BULL BY THE HORNS, see under BULL.

HORN OF DILEMMA, see under DILEMMA.

HE HAS HAY ON HIS HORNS, see under HAY.

HORNET

7 You'll be stirring up the hornets. (Inritabis crabones.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 707. (c. 200 B.C.) Sosia is advising Amphitruon not to get himself into trouble by quarreling with his wife, Alcmena. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, l. 60, in the form, "Irritari crabones." RABELAIS uses the phrase in Pantagruel, bk. ii, "Irriter les freslons." The Germans say, "In ein Wespennest stechen" (To put one's hand into a wasp's nest), while the Scottish form is, "To put one's head in a bees' byke." A similar Latin proverb is, "Stimulus leonem" (You're pricking a lion).

He dared not speak out and provoke the hornets.

JOHN JORTIN, Ecclesiastical History. (1751)

Ass as he is, [he] knows the world too well to get such a hornets' nest about his ears.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 14. (1857)

He's only stirring up a hornet's nest.

HUGH PENTECOST, I'll Sing at Your Funeral, p. 64. (1942)

HORSE

8 Altogether upon the high horse.

JOHN BROWN, Letter to David Garrick, 27 Oct., 1765. See Garrick Correspondence, i, 205.

I expect reverses and disasters, and that Great Britain, now on the high horse, will dismount again.

FISHER AMES, Works, i, 339. (1805)

He was warm, warlike, and mounted on his highest horse.

LORD GRANVILLE, Letter to Palmerston, 4 Feb., 1831. Referring to Sebastiani.

He was determined to ride the high horse.

MARRYAT, Mr. Midshipman Easy. Ch.12.(1836)
"To ride the high horse," or "to be on the high horse," is to assume unbecoming [or arrogant] airs, or claim unacknowledged superiority.

ANNE BAKER, Norham's Glossary: Horse.(1854)
He is glued to the high horse and won't come down.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Sphinx Apple.(1907)
If Agnes rides such a high horse she'll be getting a fall.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, The Chinese Shawl. p 52. (1943)

1
Mingle the good with the bad, as men saie, lette the quicke horse drawe the deade horse out of the myre.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 123. (1573)

His land . . . 'twas sold to pay his debts; All went that way, for a dead horse, as one would say.

RICHARD BROME, The Antipodes. Act i, (1638)
For something already used and of no further benefit.

To work for a dead horse. To work out an old debt, or without hope of future reward.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 171. (1670)

In parliament he again pressed the necessity of reducing expenditures. Friends warned him that he was flogging a dead horse.

JOHN MORLEY, of Richard Cobden, in Dict. Natl. Biography, xi, 151/2. (1887) Attempting to revive interest in something in which no one was interested. See under LABOR LOST.

2
As good horses draw in carts, as coaches.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 7. (1621)

3
The horse next the mill carries all the grist.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 334. (1605) Cited by both Ray and Fuller.

4
What though thyn hors be bothe foule and lene,

If he wol serve thee rekke nat a bene.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Prologue of the Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 47. (c. 1387)

For suche a scalde [scabby] squier as he is. a scabbed horse.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, tr., Acolastus, sig.M2.(1540)

Hakney men saie, at mangy hackneis hyer, A scald hors is good inough for a scabde squyer.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

A ragged colt may serue a scabbed squire.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, sig.F4.(c.1580)

A scald horse is good enough for a scab'd squire, But not if the scabb pays well for the hire.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly. No. 169. (1611)

A scabbed Horse is good enough for a scabbed Knight.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 385. (1732)

5
We must go over horse and man. (Equis viris.)
CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. ix, epis. vii, sec. 1. (46 B.C.)

He's undone horse and man.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 86. (1639)

As much as to say, Undone, horse and man.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 134. (1666)

She cheats horse and foot.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letters, i, 87. (1740)

6
They cannot set their horses i' th' same stable.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 94. (1639)

They cannot agree.

They cannot set their horses together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 181. (1670)

And since we're so near, like birds of a feather, Let's e'en as they say, set our horses together

SWIFT, Works (Scott), xiv, 109. (c. 1710)

Muster Nidgett and his old 'ooman can't set their horses together at all.

PARISH AND SHAW, Kentish Dialect, p.79.(1887)

7
He that hires the horse must ride before.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 99. (1639)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 106. (1670)

He who hires the horse should ride first.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 71. (1917)

8
The best horse needs breaking, and the aptest child needs teaching.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 100. (1639)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6441. (1732)

9
The horse that draws his halter is not quite escaped.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 250. (1639)

The horse that draws after him his halter, is not altogether escaped.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1118.

(1640) The French say, "Il n'est pas échappé qui traine son lien" (He has not escaped who drags his chain).

10
You may break a horse's back, be he never so strong.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 311. (1639)

11
Hee loads not when he lists that wants both horse and cart.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Charger. (1611)

Hee that bath neither Horse, nor Cart, cannot alwayes load.

WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, p. 480. (1623)

12
A made horse. and a man unarm'd are fittest for use.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Cheval. (1611)

A horse made, and a man to make.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 23. (1640)

A horse broken and a wife to break.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Wife. (1736)

13
Ol' Johnson's playin' horse agin.

STEPHEN CRANE, Maggie, p. 24. (1892)

Do you think I'm goin' . . . to have a lot of cheapskates stoppin' to play horse with her?

GEORGE ADE, Artie, p. 163. (1896)

I'm jest as willin' to play horse as anybody.

S. E. WHITE, The Westerners, p. 290. (1901)
I'll drop the tanglefoot, . . . and won't play hoss no more.

O. HENRY, Heart of the West, p. 311. (1907)

<sup>1</sup>
The first favourite was never heard of, the second favourite was never seen after the distance post, all the ten-to-oners were in the rear, and a dark horse which had never been thought of, and which the careless St. James had never even observed in the list, rushed past the grand stand in sweeping triumph.

DISRAELI, Young Duke. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1831)
Who is the dark horse he has in his stable?

THACKERAY, Adventures of Philip. (1862) In racing slang a "dark horse" is a horse about whose racing qualities little is known; in U. S. politics, it is a person not named as a candidate before a convention, who unexpectedly receives the nomination, when the convention becomes dead-locked.

Every now and then a dark horse is heard of, who is supposed to have done wonders at some obscure small college.

UNKNOWN, Sketches from Cambridge, p. 36. (1865)

The note of the Dark Horse is respectability verging on colorlessness, and he is therefore a good sort of person to fall back upon when able but dangerous favorites have proved impossible.

JAMES BRYCE, The American Commonwealth. (1889) Quoted by Wendell Willkie, Issues of 1940. Address delivered 25 April, 1940

James K. Polk, the first "dark horse" ever brought on to the course, in the races for President.

WELCH, Recollections 1830-40, p. 310. (1891)
One day there came a dark horse to Paloma, a young lawyer.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), A Poor Rule. (1909)

<sup>2</sup>
A boisterous horse must have a rough bridle.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 171. (1633)

A boystrous horse must have a boystrous bridle.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 200. (1639)

<sup>3</sup>
Tak in this gray horss, Auld Dunbar.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Poems, lxi, 68. (c. 1500)

If I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 215. (1597)

Horse . . . is a term of derision.

W. H. SMYTH, Sailor's Word-Book. (1867)

<sup>4</sup>
An inch of a nag is worth a span of an aver [work-horse].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 16. (c. 1595)

An Inch of a Horse is worth a Span of a Colt.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 636. (1732)

<sup>5</sup>
The blind horse is hardiest.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 98. (c. 1595) Another Scottish proverb says, "Nae-thing sae bauld as a blind mear [mare]." The Germans say, "Blinder Gaul geht gerade-zu" (The blind horse goes right on).

Mettle is dangerous in a blind horse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1678)

The blind horse is fittest for the mill.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, The Maid's Last Prayer. Act iii, sc. 1. (1692)

He has chang'd his one ey'd horse for a blind one.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

Blind hoss don't fall w'en he follers de bit.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

<sup>6</sup>
A pricked horse must needs trot. (Asino punto bisogna che trotti.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

Behind before, before behind, a horse is in danger to be prick't.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 44. (1670)

<sup>7</sup>
Short hors is son j-curry'd.

FÖRSTER, ed., MS Douce, 52. (c. 1350)

A short horse is soon curried.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 128. (c. 1530) HEYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 10. (1546)

FLETCHER, Valentinian. Act i, sc. 2. (1614) etc., etc.

Here's a short horse soone curried.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Royall King. Act ii. (1637)

A little horse is soon curried.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

A short tale is soon told—and a short horse soon curried.

WALTER SCOTT, The Abbot. Ch. 11. (1820)

It don't take long to curry a short horse.

JOHNSON J. HOOPER, Adventures of Captain Simon Suggs. (1845)

<sup>8</sup>
A Horse that will not carry a Saddle, must have no Oats.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 218. (1732)

When the Horse is starved, you bring him Oats.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5591.

It is unreasonable to expect a horse should void oats which never eat any.

FRANKLIN, Works (Bigelow), ii, 35. (1745)

<sup>9</sup>
Better a lean Jade than an empty Halter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 863. (1732)

Every Horse thinks his own Pack heaviest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1420.

The biggest Horses are not the best Travellers

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4435.

'Tis the Abilities of a Horse, that Occasions his Slavery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5117.

<sup>10</sup>
Put no more on an old horse than he can bear.

DAVID GARRICK, May-Day. Sc. 1. (1775) Cited as "an excellent saying."

<sup>11</sup>
That man has the horse of Sejanus. (Ille homo habet equum Seianum.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. iii, ch. 9, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 150) A proverbial phrase for anyone who is unfortunate or unlucky, originating from the misfortunes which befell the owners of a famous horse which had belonged originally to Gnaeus Sejanus.

He rides the horse of Sejanus. (Equum habet Seianum.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 111. (1511)

The Pegasee,

The hors that hadde wings for to flee.

CHAUCER, Squire's Tale, l. 207. (c. 1386)

Bucephalus, the horse of Alexander, hath as lasting fame as his master.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, (1734)

<sup>1</sup> The fleabitten horse prooveth alwaies good in travell.

BARNABY GOOGE, tr., Foure Bookes of Husbandry, ii, 116b. (1577) The proverb is, "A flea-bitten horse never tires."

Well said, old flea-bitten; thoult never tire, I see.

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act iv, sc. 3. (1614)

<sup>2</sup> Unhappy the horse whose rider is blind: it will never grow sleek. (Infeliz caballo, cuyo amo no tiene ojos; mal engordará.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 230. (1647)

<sup>3</sup> It is not the gylt bridle that maketh the horse the better.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 36. (1574) Pettie, tr.

You may know the horse by his harness.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 64. (1639)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 105. (1670)

A Horse is neither better nor worse for his Trapping.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 217. (1732) The French say, "Un mors doré ne rend pas le cheval meilleur" (A golden bit does not make the horse any better). The Italians have the same proverb, "Freno indorato non migliora il cavallo."

You can't judge of the Horse by the Harness.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5883. (1732) See also under APPEARANCE.

<sup>4</sup> Colt in de barley-patch kick high.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880) The Italians have a somewhat similar proverb, "Cavallo ingrassato tira calci" (A horse grown fat kicks).

<sup>5</sup> From the heels of a horse keep at a distance. (Ab equinis pedibus procul recede.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 2. (c. 500)

Trust not a horse's heel, nor a dog's tooth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 158. (1678)

Three things are not to be trusted—a cow's horn, a dog's tooth, and a horse's hoof.

P. W. JOYCE, English as We Speak It, p. 110. (1910) There are innumerable lists of things which are not to be trusted. See under MONK, WOMAN, THREE.

<sup>6</sup> A jade eats as much as a good horse.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 521. (1640)

To a greedy eating horse a short halter.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1104.

<sup>7</sup> A horse stumbles that hath four legs.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 742. (1640)

A horse may stumble on four feet.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 360. (1678)

MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683) The French say, "Un cheval a quatre pieds et si chet," or "Ferrée jument glisse" (A mare that is shod slips). The Hindus say, "Stumbling is the excuse of a lame horse."

A horse with four feet may snapper [stumble], by a time.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 26. (1721)

<sup>8</sup> Good horses make short miles.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 934. (1640)

<sup>9</sup> When the steed is stolen shut the stable durre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546) See under STABLE.

<sup>10</sup> Folke call on the horse that will cary alwey.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Cheval. (1611)

All lay load on a willing horse.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 93. (1616)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 116. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 532. (1732) The French say, "On touche toujours sur le cheval qui tire" (The horse which draws always gets the whip).

<sup>11</sup> Euermore the common horse is woorst shod.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

<sup>12</sup> To see his sweete lookes, and here hir sweete wurdes, . . . It wolde haue made a hors breake his halter sure.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

It would make a horse breake hys halter, to see so dronken a pageant.

RICHARD STANYHURST, A Description of Ireland, fo. 6. (1577)

'Twould make a horse break his bridle, or a dog his halter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 165. (1670)

<sup>13</sup> It is . . . a proude horse that will not beare his own prouander.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

They alleage for themselves the example of a philosopher who being found fault withall for carrying fish under his cloke, answered, that it was for his own eating: inferring thereby, that (according to the proverbe) it is an yl horse that will not carie his owne provender.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 190. (1574) Pettie, tr. GABRIEL HARVEY, Works (Grosart), iii, 4. (1597)

He's a proud horse that will not carry his own provender.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act iv, sc. 3. (1599)

He's a proud horse that will not bear his own prowán [provision].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 131. (1721)

The Italians say, "Superbo è quel cavallo che non si vuol portar la biada" (oats). An English variant is, "It's a poor horse that can't carry his harness."

<sup>1</sup> God haue mercy, hors, a pyg of mine owne sowe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
God-a-mercy, an exclamation of applause or thanks.

The hostes reckonynge with her gest less willinge to lodge in her hows, then his tyred horse, made low curtesy . . . to the beaste, and seyd gotha-mercy horse.

JOHN PAYNE, Royall Exchange, p. 5. (1597)
Ever after it was a by word thorow London, God a mercy horse, and is to this day.

RICHARD TARLTON, Tarlton's Jestes, p. 24. (1611)

<sup>2</sup> Evyn lyke the myll hors, they be -whyppyd amayne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Wit and Folly, p. 22. (c. 1540)

I that like a horse

Ran blind-fold in a mill, all in one circle.

DEKKER and WEBSTER, Northward Hoe. Act i, sc. 3. (1607)

My thoughts must run

As a horse runs that's blind round in a mill.

MIDDLETON and DEKKER, The Roaring Girle.

Act i, sc. 1. (1611)

Carefull men, like horses in a mill, run round in a competency.

RICHARD WHITLOCK, Zoötamia, p. 432. (1654)

The same circle must be observed every day of one's life, like a horse in a mill.

WILLIAM STUKELEY, Memoirs, iii, 461. (1720)

Like horses in a mill, drudging on in the same eternal round.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: The Superannuated Man. (1825)

I am perpetually turning, like a demd old horse in a demnition mill.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 64. (1839)

<sup>3</sup> He needs must trot afoot that tires his horse.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Woman Killed with Kindness. Act iv, sc. 6. (1607)

<sup>4</sup> Of a ragged colte cometh a good hors.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 128. (c. 1530)

Colts (quoth his man) may proue well with tatches yll,

For of a ragged colte there comth a good horse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

The ragged colt may prove a good horse.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1. (1605)

A ragged colt may make a good horse. An unhappy boy may make a good man. . . . Children which seem less handsome when young, do afterwards grow into shape and comeliness.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72. (1670)

A ragged colt may prove a good horse. And so may an untoward slovenly boy prove a decent and useful man.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 48. (1721)

Aft a ragged cowte's been known

To mak a noble aiver [old horse].

ROBERT BURNS, A Dream. St. 11. (1786)

<sup>5</sup> Whan the hors waloweth, som heris be loste.

HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 129. (c. 1530)
Where the horse walloweth, some hairs will still remain.

CAREW, Survey of Cornwall, p. 9. (1602)

Where the horse rubbs some haire is left behind.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 216. (1639)

Foreigners . . . sometimes are driven hither against their will, but never without the profit of the inhabitants, according to the common proverb, "where the horse lieth down, there some hairs will be found."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Cornwall, i, 299. (1662)

<sup>6</sup> Sing of the building of the horse of wood. (ἵππου κόσμον δέισαν δουρατέου.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 492. (c. 850 B. C.)
The full quotation is, "Sing of the building of the horse of wood, which Epeius made with Athene's help, the horse which once Odysseus led up into the citadel as a thing of guile, when he had filled it with the men who sacked Ilios." The famous "wooden horse" (δούρειος ἵππος) or "Trojan horse," the symbol of boring from within.

Trust not the horse, ye Trojans. (Equo ne credite, Teucri.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 48. (19 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Be wise in time, and turn loose the ageing horse, lest at the last he stumble amid jeers and break his wind. (Solve senescentem mature sanus equum, ne | peccet ad extremum ridendus et ilia ducat.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 8. (20 B. C.)
In some mens aught [ownership] mon the auld horse die.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 60. (c. 1595)

<sup>8</sup> The ear of a bridled horse is in his mouth. (Equi frenato est auris in ore.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 15, l. 13. (20 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> Lend thy horse for a long journey, thou mayest have him again with his skin.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

Lend thy horse for a long journey, thou mayest have him return with his skin.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1670)

<sup>10</sup> His horse's head is swollen so big, that he cannot come out of the stable.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)
He can't pay the ostler.

<sup>11</sup> A four white-foot horse is a horse for a fool; A three white-foot horse is a horse for a king; And if he hath but one, I'll give him to none.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)

One white foot, buy a horse;

Two white feet, try a horse;

Three white feet, look well about him;

Four white feet, do without him.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme. See Notes and Queries.

Ser. 5, vol. vii, p. 64.

One white foot, buy him;
Two white feet, try him;
Three white feet, deny him;
Four white feet and a white nose—
Take off his hide and feed him to the crows.

HAROLD W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 503. (1940) This is a version current in New York State. There are many others.

WHITE HORSE AND FAIR WIFE, see under WIFE.

<sup>1</sup>
Have a horse of thy own, thou maist borrow another.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 34. (1659)
Have a horse of your own, and then you can borrow one.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 14. (1869)

<sup>2</sup>
You can have it straight from the horse's mouth.

FRANCIS ILES, Before the Fact. Ch. 16. (1932)
I have it straight from the mouth of the horse.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Kitty Foyle, p. 324. (1939)

He was really going to hear things from the biggest horses' mouths.

CLARE BOOTHE, Europe in the Spring, p. 35. (1940)

That's a tip straight out of the horse's mouth.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 239. (1940)
That's out of the horse's mouth.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Candle in the Wind Act ii, sc. 3. (1941)

Straight from the horse's mouth (colloquial), adjective and adverb. On very good authority.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>3</sup>
It is an old and true saying, that a kindly aver [work-horse] will never become a good horse; for . . . it is evil to get out of the flesh that is bred in the bone.

JAMES VI OF SCOTLAND, Instructions to His Son, p. 128. (1599)

A kindly aver will never make a good horse. In our ancient writings averium signifies any labouring beast.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 95. (1678)
A kindly aver was never a good nag. Those who are naturally of a low, mean mind, will make but a sorry figure in a higher station.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (1721)

<sup>4</sup>
Hast thou given the horse strength? hast thou clothed his neck with thunder? (Numquid praebebis equo fortitudinem, aut circumdabis collo eius hinnitum?)

Old Testament: Job, xxxix, 19. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup>
Spur a free horse, he'll run himself to death.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act iii, sc. 7. (1633)
Ride a free Horse to Death, and never mind what becomes of him afterwards.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 283. (1709)

Ride not a free horse to death.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71. (1712)

According to the proverb, One may ride a free horse to death.

WILLIAM ELLIS, The Modern Husbandman. Ch. 7, p. 95. (1750)

<sup>6</sup>
Eaten up by horses. (Praeda caballorum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 193. (c. A.D. 120)

By the expense of keeping horses.

A runnyng horse, is an open graue. (Causal corrente sepoltura aperta.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)

A running horse is an open sepulchre.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Sepulchre. (1611) TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 43. (1666)

Hounds and horses devour their masters.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 325. (1639)

A Race-horse is an open Sepulcher.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 376. (1732)

<sup>7</sup>
He's a gentle horse that never cast his rider.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 166. (1721)

<sup>8</sup>
The strongest horse louns the dyke.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 307. (1721)

Let the best Horse leap the Hedge first.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3191. (1732)

<sup>9</sup>
One night he treated a drinking acquaintance to the latest horse opera from America.

JOHN KOBLER, Some Like It Gory, p. 272. (1940)

<sup>10</sup>
I do not allow myself to suppose that either the convention or the League have concluded to decide that I am either the greatest or best man in America, but rather they have concluded that it is not best to swap horses while crossing the river, and have further concluded that I am not so poor a horse that they might not make a botch of it trying to swap.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Reply, to a delegation from the National Union League, notifying him that the League backed his renomination for the Presidency, 9 June, 1864. This is the official version as given in STERN, The Writings of Abraham Lincoln, p. 816, but it is usually quoted "Don't swap horses while crossing a stream," perhaps derived from W. O. Stoddard's version of the speech, "I have not permitted myself, gentlemen, to conclude that I am the best man in the country, but I am reminded in this connection of an old Dutch farmer who remarked that it was not best to swap horses while crossing a stream." See RAYMOND, Life and Public Services of Abraham Lincoln, p. 500.

Change horses in midstream if you want to.

HUGH PENTECOST, The Twenty-fourth Horse, p. 48. (1940)

It seldom pays to change trains in the middle of a trip.

CORNELL WOOLRICH, The Bride Wore Black, p. 179. (1941)

<sup>11</sup>
Riht as a scabbed beste hateth hors comb.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., The Pilgrimage of the Lylf of Man, ii, civ, 114. (1426)

A scabbed horse abides no comb.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 50. (1611)

A scabbed horse cannot abide the comb.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1111. (1640)

A gall'd horse will not endure the comb.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 104. (1670)

Gall'd Horses can't endure the Comb.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1639. (1732)

If any of you get cross over it, I shall tell you that sore horses cannot bear to be combed.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 3. (1869)

SCABBY HEADS LOVE NOT THE COMB, see under HEAD.

1

Whoo hath noon hors on a staff may ride.

JOHN LYDGATE, Political Poems (1859), ii, 219. (1444)

2

Wring not a horse on the withers, with a false saddle.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 249. (1580)

Rubbe there no more, least I winch, for deny I will not that I am wroung on the withers.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 387.

Let the gall'd jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 252. (1600)

Those whose withers were unwrung laughed till the tears ran down.

MARK TWAIN, The Man That Corrupted Hadleyburg, p. 44. (1898)

3

I restored him so gently, that he neither would cry whyie, nor wag the tail.

LYLY, Mother Bombe. Act iv, sc. 2. (1594)

It's an ill jade can neither whinny nor wag his tail.

UNKNOWN, Maroccus Extaticus, p. 6. (1595)

It's an ill horse can neither whinny nor wag his tail.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 70. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 105. (1670)

It is a silly Horse, that can neither whinny, nor wag his Tail.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2882. (1732)

4

He may as well go on foot, they say, who leads his horse by the bridle. (Il a bel aller à pied, dict on, qui mène son cheval par la bride.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1595)

It is good walking with a horse in one's hand.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 805. (1640)

5

The valiant horse races best at the barrier's fall, when he has others to follow and o'erpass. (Tum bene fortis equus reserato carcere currit, | cum quos praetereat, quosque sequatur, habet.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 595. (c. 1 B. C.)

The locus classicus of "Competition makes a horse-race." Indeed, Young so translates the lines. HORSE-RACE, see under GAMBLING.

6

He is a good horse that stumbleth nat some-tyme.

JEHAN PALSgrave, La Langue Françoyse. p. 742. (1530)

It be a good hors That neuer stumbleth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

A good horse that trippeth not once in a iourney.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works (Grosart), i, 23. (1579)

Well, 'tis a good horse never stumbles.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act ii, sc. 2. (1599) Cited by DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 19 (1709), with the comment, "The greatest Beauty hath its Blemishes, and the best of us all have our faults, . . . and he's the best horse that stumbles least."

It's a good horse that never stumbles: and a good wife that never grumbles.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 105. (1670)

He's a good horse that never stumbled,

And a better wife that never grumbled. Both so rare, that I never met with either.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 126. (1721)

The French say, "Il n'y a si bon cheval qui ne bronche."

7

Like the horse to the meadow. (ἵππεύς εἰς μέδιον.)

PLATO, Theaetetus, 183D. (c. 375 B. C.) A proverbial expression for haste or eagerness.

Lucian uses it twice, Pseudosophistes, 8, and Piscator, 9. PHILO also repeats it, De Vita Mosis, i, 22, with ἵππος instead of ἵππεύς:

"Pressing forward like the horse to the meadow, as the proverb goes."

8

He'll never catch it, not with a chariot and four white horses. (Quadrigris albis.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 279. (c. 200 B. C.)

To outstrip with white horses. (Equis praecurrere albis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, Sat. vii, l. 8. (35 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 21, as "Equis albis praecedere." A proverbial expression.

White horses were considered swifter than all others.

They excelled the snows in whiteness, the gales in speed. (Candore nives anteirent, cursibus auras.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 84. (19 B. C.) Referring to the horses given by Printhyia to Pilumnus.

9

It's stupid to lead unwilling hounds to hunt. (Stultitiast venatum ducere invitas canes.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 139. (c. 200 B. C.)

A man maie well bring a horse to the water, But he cannot make him drinke without he will.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 318. (1605)

You may bring a horse to the river, but he will drink when and what he pleaseth.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 625. (1640)

As the proverb says, "One man may lead a horse to water, but twenty cannot make him drink."

SAMUEL JOHNSON, to Boswell, who had just remarked that he was afraid his father would force him to be a lawyer. "Sir," retorted Johnson, "you need not be afraid of his forcing you to be a laborious practising lawyer; that is not in his power," and then repeated the proverb. See BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 14 July, 1763. This is the Scottish form. SCOTT used it in The Heart of Midlothian, "A man may lead a horse to the water, but twenty winna gar him drink." The form is sometimes "Four and twenty canna gar him drink."

He led him to the river, yet brought him back thirsty.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 719. (1817) You may take a horse to the water, but you can't make him drink.

MARRYAT, The King's Own. Ch. 34. (1830)

One can take a horse to water, but a thousand can't make him drink.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 35. (1857)

If an ox won't drink, you can't make him bend down his head. (Niu pu ch'ih shui, an pu chu t'ou.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 61. (1875)

The French say, "On a beau mener le bœuf à l'eau s'il n'a soif" (It's no good leading an ox to the water if he is not thirsty); or "On ne fait boire l'âne quand il ne veut" (One cannot make an ass drink when he does not wish to), or "On ne saurait faire boire un âne, s'il n'a soif" (Nobody knows how to make an ass drink if he isn't thirsty). The Danes say, "You may force a man to shut his eyes, but you cannot make him sleep."

<sup>1</sup>Welch Bayte to spare Prouender.

THOMAS POWELL. Title. (1603) A Welsh bait is a rest, without other refreshment, given to a horse on reaching the top of a hill.

In this place he takes a Welsh bait, and looking back makes a Muster of his Victories.

JAMES HARRINGTON, The Prerogative of Popular Government. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1658)

Give your horse a Welsh bait.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 489. (1662)

<sup>2</sup>From the horse to the ass. (ἀφ' ἵππων ἐπ' ὄνους.)

PROCOPIUS, Anecdota. (c. A.D. 526) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 29, with the Latin, "Ab equis ad asinos," and included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, with the rendering, "Promoted or descended out of the halle into the kytchen," and the comment, "This is where a man is brought from a better state, studie, office, or kynde of luyngye to a worse."

<sup>3</sup>An horse is a vain thing for safety. (Fallax equus ad salutem.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxiii, 17. (c. 250 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup>When the mare hath a bald face, the filly will have a blaze.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

A nagg with a weamb [belly], and a mare with nean [none].

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 44. Cited by CARR, Dialect of Craven, ii, 233, with the comment, "This Craven distich denotes that a horse should have a large paunch and a mare a small one."

That horse is troubled with corns, i.e. is foun-dered.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74.

Let a horse drink when he will, not what he will

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 157.

I think this is a butcher's horse, he carries a calf so well.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 232.

Little may an auld nag do that mauna nicher.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 249.

<sup>5</sup>Hold your hosses, boys—he'll come out directly.

JOHN S. ROBB, Streaks of Squatter Life, p. 24. (1847)

You just hold your hosses and speak a little slower.

MARY A. FREEMAN, in Woman's Home Companion, Nov., 1917, p. 58.

<sup>6</sup>The whole tendency over these years has been to view the Interstate Commerce clause in the light of present-day civilization. The country was in the horse-and-buggy age when that clause was written. . . . The ethics of the period were very different from what they are today. If one man could skin a fellow and get away with it, why, that was all right.

PRESIDENT FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, at a press conference, 31 May, 1935. Stenographic report. See Liberty, 26 March, 1938, p. 12. The President was commenting on the unanimous decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in the Schechter case, rendered a few days previously, in which the National Recovery Administration had been declared unconstitutional.

<sup>7</sup>We put all our money upon the wrong horse. MARQUIS OF SALISBURY, Speech, in House of Lords, 19 Jan., 1897.

He backed the wrong horse, that was all.

HELEN MACINNES, Assignment in Brittany, p. 337. (1942)

They backed the wrong horse.

DENNIS WHEATLEY, The Scarlet Impostor, p. 10. (1942)

<sup>8</sup>The horses of the sun.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 1, 164. (1602)

Who drives the horses of the sun

Shall lord it but a day.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Happiest Heart (1905)

<sup>9</sup>Boys and women are, for the most part, cattle of this colour.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 435. (1600)

My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 3, 181. (1600)
They are manifest asses; but you, good Leech, you are a horse of another colour.

R. H. BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: The Leech of Folkestone. (1840)

What did you think of his wife? That's a horse of another colour altogether.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Last Chronicles of Barset.
Bk. i, ch. 24. (1867)

Farmer Gripper thinks we can live upon nothing, which is a horse of another colour.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures,
p. 51. (1880)

This horse I was talking about might turn out to be a horse of a different color.

RUTH AND ALEXANDER WILSON, The Town is Full of Rumors, p. 122. (1941)

A horse of another colour. A very different matter. [A cliché] from ca. 1860.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

1
He doth nothing but talk of his horse.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, i, 2, 44. (1597)

Whose laughs are hearty, tho' his jests are coarse,
And loves you best of all things—but his horse.

POPE, *Epistle to Mrs. Teresa Blount on Her
Leaving Town*, l. 29. (1714)

Whose only fit companion is his horse.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 412. (1781)

He will hold thee, when his passion shall have spent its novel force,

Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 49. (1842)

2
An two men ride of a horse, one must ride
behind.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii,
5, 40. (1598)

Either I am

The fore horse in the team, or I am none.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Two Noble Kinsmen.
Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1613)

He that rides behind another, must not think to guide.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2270. (1732)
The forerunner of the "backseat driver."

When two ride on one horse, one must ride behind.
VIRGINIA RATH, Posted for Murder, p. 222. (1942)

3
A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 4, 7. (1592)

O for a horse with wings!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 2, 49. (1609)

4
You ride the fore-horse to-day.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

They that ride on a trotting horse, will ne'er perceive it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

Live, horse! and thou shalt have grass.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. See under GRASS.

We stayed for you as one horse does for another.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

5
And the hoofs of the horses as they run shake the crumbling field. (Quadrupedumque putrem cursu quatit ungula campum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 875. (19 B.C.) A famous example of onomatopoeia.

6
There is no good horse of a bad colour.

IZAACK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1653) Quoted as a proverb.

A good horse is never of an ill colour.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs,
p. 297. (1710)

Horses are good of all hues.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 126. (1721)

Good Horses can't be of a bad Colour.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1713. (1732)

"A good horse is never of an ill colour" . . . is wildly irreverent from the Oriental point of view.

J. L. KIPLING, Beast and Man, p. 179. (1891)

7
The goodness of a horse goes in at his mouth.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Inside the Bar. Ch.

4. (1861) Quoted as an Arab saying, with the comment, "It is incredible what improvement may be made in an animal by . . . old oats and exercise."

8
As a horse unrubbed, that haves a sore back, wynses when he is oght touched or rubbed on his rugge.

JOHN WYCLIF, Works (Arnold), iii, 231. (c.
1380)

For trewely, ther is noon of us alle,

If any wight wol clawe us on the galle,

That we nil kike.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wyf of Bathe, l. 83. (c. 1386)

Rub a scald horse vpon the gall,

And he wil bite, wins and went,

So wil all people that are maleuolent.

UNKNOWN, Scholehouse of Women, l. 1013.
(1541)

A horse will kick if you touche where he is galled.

LEWIS WAGER, Marie Magdalene: Prol. (1566)

I know the galled horse will soonest wince.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias, p. 28.
(1570)

Well I know none will winch except she bee gawlded.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 119. (1579)

Rubb a gald hors on the back and he will winch.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

How the gall'd horse kicks.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Wife. Act
v. (1697)

Touch a gall'd horse and he'll wince.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Rub a scald horse on the gall, and he'll wince.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 372. (1869)

9
It was horse and horse, and his deal.

UNKNOWN, Buncomb's Recollections. (a. 1859)

It was horse and horse between the professors.

G. H. LORIMER, Jack Spurlock, Prodigal, p.
3. (1908)

<sup>1</sup> He is fre of hors that ner nade non, quoth Hendyng.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, xxvii. (c. 1300)

They are good willie of their horse that hes nane. FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 94. (c. 1595)

HORSE FOALED OF AN ACORN, see under GALLOWS.

II—Horse: The Gift Horse

<sup>2</sup> Never (as the common proverb goes) inspect the teeth of a gift horse. (Noli [ut vulgare est proverbium] equi dentes inspicere donati.)

SAINT JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Commentary on the Epistle to the Ephesians: Preface. (c. 400) Sometimes given as "Equi donati dentes non inspicuntur." Saint Jerome used the proverb when he replied to certain critics that they ought not to find fault with his writings, since they were free-will offerings. Turned into a medieval jingle by the monks, "Si quis dat mannos, ne quaere in dentibus annos" (If somebody gives you a horse, don't seek its age in its teeth), it is common to many languages. The Italians say, "A caval donato non guardar in bocca," or "A caval donato non si mira il pelo" (Do not trouble about the color of a gift horse); the French, "A cheval donné, il ne faut pas regarder aux dents," or "A cheval donné, ne faut point regarder en la bouche" (Never look in the mouth of a gift horse); the Germans, "Einem geschenkten Gaul, sieht man nicht in 's Maul," or "Geschenkten Gaul, sieht man nicht in 's Maul"; the Spaniards, "A caballo dado no le mires los dientes"; the Portuguese, "Cavallo dado nao se repara a idade." Nobody knows how it originated. It is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, v, 24, in the form, "Non oportere equi dentes inspicere donati" (One ought not to inspect the teeth of a gift horse), and is included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 49, with the rendering, "A gyuen horse (we saye) may not be looked in the mouth." Erasmus attributes it to Saint Jerome.

A gyuen hors may not be loked in the tethe.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria, sig. C4. (c. 1520)

Where gyftis be geuen freely, est west north or south,

No man ought to looke a geuen hors in the mouth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

He ne'er consider'd it, as loth

To loke a gift-horse in the mouth.

BUTLER, Hudibras, Pt. i, canto i, l. 489. (1663)

I am resolved to ride this way [facing the tail], to make good the proverb, that I may not look a gift horse in the mouth.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue Pt. iii, p. 158. (1674)

Anything done for you must always be reckoned as good.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 257.

(1938) A Chinese proverb.

Don't look a gift horse in the portico.

BELLAH, Bones of Napoleon, p. 106. (1940)

Who the hell am I to look a gift horse in the mouth?

G. H. COXE, Murder for Two, p. 161. (1943)

<sup>3</sup> Popular Fallacies: That we must not look a gift-horse in the mouth. . . . Some people have a knack of putting upon you gifts of no real value, to engage you to substantial gratitude.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Popular Fallacies. (1826)

The policy of not looking a gift horse in the mouth may easily be carried too far.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Rambles in England and Ireland. Works, ii, 74. (1873)

<sup>4</sup> He always looked a gift horse in the mouth. (Le cheual donné tousiours regardoyt en la gueulle.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

They aint above lookin' a gift horse in the mouth

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 19. (1843)

III—Horse and Saddle

<sup>5</sup> One Saddle is enough for one Horse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3791. (1732)

One horse, one saddle. (Yi ma, yi an.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2704. (1875)

<sup>6</sup> The fault of the horse is put on the saddle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum No. 242. (1640) See under Ass

'Tis the Horse that stumbles, and not the Saddle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5119. (1732)

The losing horse blames the saddle.

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 34 (1842)

<sup>7</sup> The horse thinks one thing, and he that saddles him another.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 389. (1640) See under Ass.

<sup>8</sup> He that cannot beate the Horse, beateth the Saddle.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Hours of Recreation, p. 213. (1572) See under Ass.

IV—Horse and Spur

<sup>9</sup> You are spurring a willing horse. (Currentem tu quidem.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xiii, epis. 45. (45 B. C.)

To hasten the hastening. (Currentum incitare.)

CICERO, Philippics. No. iii, sec. 8. (44 B. C.) To admonish one who needs no admonition.

Used many times by Cicero, and cited by

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 46.

To set spurs to a willing horse. (Calcaria sponte currenti.)

PLINY, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 8. (c. A. D. 98)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 47.

There neddyd no spure to a willing horse.

J. COOKE, Narrative. (c. 1580) In The World

Encompassed by Sir Francis Drake (Hak.

Soc.) App. iv, 207.

How fondly dost thou spur a forward horse.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iv, 1, 72. (1595)
Pastimes, wherewith men by driving time, spur a free and fast enough running horse (as the proverb is).

JAMES IV OF SCOTLAND, Instructions to His Son, p. 156. (1599)

1

A spur and a whip for a dull horse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 76. (1639)

A good horse oft needs a good spur.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 93.

A resty horse must have a sharp spur.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 167.

A good Horseman wants a good Spur.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 155. (1732)

A good Horse should be seldom spurred.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 156.

It is Bridle and Spur that makes a good Horse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3021.

2

I didn't run a willing horse to death, you understand.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 239. (1943)

3

By too much spurring, the horse is made dull.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 134. (1574) Pettie, tr.

But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle;
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 2, 23. (1599)

4

There is no horse but needeth the spur.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 70. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Where a wande cannot rule the horse, a spur must.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 372. (1580)

5

A pair of spurs to a borrowed horse is better than a peck of haver [oats].

GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

A hired horse tired never.

GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)

The Germans say, "Gemiethet Ross und eigene Sporen machen kurze Meilen" (A hired horse and your own spurs make the miles short).

6

When delay is not safe, it is permitted to spur the galloping horse. (Cum mora non tuta est, . . . utile admissio subdere calcar equo.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 731. (c. 1 B. C.)

7

Be advised, therefore, by me—Spur not an unbroken horse.

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 24. (1820)

It is but idle to spur a horse when his legs are hamshackled.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 33.

(1828) A hamshackled horse is one whose head is tied to one of its forelegs.

8

It shall never neede to prykk nor threte a free horse.

UNKNOWN, The Paston Letters, iii, 200. (1477)

The French say, "A bon cheval point d'éperon" (To a good horse no spur); the Italians, "Buon cavallo non ha bisogno de' spronti" (A good horse has no need of the spur).

'Tis ill spurring a free horse.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)

Do not spur a free horse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 145. (1670)

HORSEMANSHIP

See also Riding

9

A horseman better than Bellerophon himself. (Equus ipso melior Bellerophonte.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 12, l. 7. (23 B. C.)

Bellerophon was the rider of Pegasus.

10

They say Princes learn no art truly, but the art of horsemanship. The reason is, the brave beast is no flatterer. He will throw a Prince as soon as his groom.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Illiteratus Princeps (1636)

11

Spare the lash, my boy, and hold the reins more firmly! (Parce, puer, stimulis, et fortius utere loris!)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 127. (A. D. 7)

HOSPITALITY

See also Cheer, Guest, Inn, Welcome

12

To tear off one's travelling cloak. (Paenulam alicui scindere.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum, xiii, xxxiii, 4. (c. 50 B. C.)

A proverb for urging one strongly to stay. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 99.

Stay is a charming word in a friend's vocabulary

A. B. ALCOTT, Concord Days: June. (1872)

13

It is nothing won to admit men with an open door, and to receive them with a shut and reserved countenance. (Nil interest habere ostium apertum, vultum clausum.)

CICERO, as quoted by FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii, sec 23 1605)

It is a Sin against Hospitality, to open your Doors, and shut up your Countenance.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2883. (1732)

Half Hospitality opens his Door and shuts up his Countenance.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746

14

Tom Drum's entertainment, which is, to hale a man in by the head, and thrust him out by both shoulders.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles of Irelande. B ij l. 1. (1577)

Plato when he sawe the doctrine of these Teachers, . . . gaue them all Drummes entertainment, not suffering them once to shew their faces.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, p. 22. (1579)
Hee had scarce Jacke Drums entertainment.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. D1. (1583)
And so giuing him Jack Drum's entertainment, shut him out of doores.

ROBERT GREENE, A Groatsworth of Witte. (1592)

If you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, iii, 6, 41. (1602)

They gently give them Tom Drums enterteinment.

CHARLES BUTLER, The Feminine Monarchie, p. 64. (1634)

It is at this day doubtful whether it was Jack Drum or Tom Drum, whose mode of entertainment no one wishes to receive.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 125. (1837)

<sup>1</sup> Use hospitality one to another without grudging. (φιλόξενοι εἰς ἀλλήλους ἀνευ γογγυσμού.)

New Testament: I Peter, iv, 9. (c. A. D. 63)

The Vulgate is, "Hospitalites invicem sine murmuracione."

Hospitality is to be shown even towards an enemy. The tree doth not withdraw its shade, even from the woodcutter.

UNKNOWN, The Hitopadesa, i. (c. 1200)

<sup>2</sup> Given to hospitality. (τὴν φιλοξενίαν διώκοντες.)

New Testament: Romans, xii, 13. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Hospitalitatem sectantes."

A lover of hospitality. (φιλόξενον.)

New Testament: Titus, i, 8. (c. A. D. 62) The Vulgate is, "Hospitalitem."

Living in the country and maintaining "old English hospitality" . . . a phrase very much used by the English themselves, both in words and writing; but I never heard of it out of the island, except by way of irony and sarcasm.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 26 June, 1771.

<sup>3</sup> A genial hearth, a hospitable board,
And a refined rusticity.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 18. (1822)

Hospitality consists in a little fire, a little food, and an immense quiet.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1856.

HOST AND HOSTESS

<sup>4</sup> It ys sayd in comyn that "who soeuer rekeneth wythoute his hoste, he rekeneth twys for ones."

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Blanchardyn and Eglantine, lii, 202. (c. 1489)

He fareth lo lyke a geste, that makyth hys rekening himselfe without hys hoste.

SIR THOMAS MORE, The Debellacyon of Salem and Bizance. (1533) Works, p. 991/2.

You reckon without your host. (Vous comptez sans vostre hoste.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 26.

Reckners without their host must reckon twyse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)
Thei reckened before their host, and so paid more then their shotte came to.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, fo. 131b. (1548)

To make the reckoning without the host, is the way soone to bee overshot in the shot.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 228. (1576)

In that Philautus . . . shoulde accompt me his wife before he wo[ol]e mee, certainly he is lyke for mee to make his reckoning twice, bicause he reckoneth without his Hostesse.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 84. (1579)

He that countis without his oist,

Oft tymes he countis twyse.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae, l. 649. (1597)

He that reckons without his Host must reckon twice.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 324. (1605)

He that reckons without his host, must reckon again. (Chi fà conto senza l'hoste fà conto due volte.)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Italian, p. 136. (1670)

Ray adds the French form, "Qui comte sans son hoste, il lui convient compter deux fois."

He that counts but [before] his host counts twice.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 239. (1678)

He that reckoneth before his Host, must reckon again.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2258. (1732)

The proverb has been turned into a jingle, "He who reckons without his host May chance to find his labor lost."

<sup>5</sup> To defame the plum-perfumed [dancing-girl] is to defame the host.

GURNEY CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 372. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>6</sup> A handsome hostess makes the reckoning deare.

BISHOP RICHARD CORBET, Iter Boreale. (c. 1630)

In CHALMERS, English Poets, v, 579.

The fairer the hostess, the fouler the reckoning.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2/1. (1659)

A handsome hostess is bad for the purse. (Huespeda hermosa mal para la bolsa.)

THOMAS FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations: Spanish, p. 3. (1824) The French have the same proverb, "Belle hôteesse c'est un mal pour la bourse."

Half-a-crown in the bill, if you look at the waiter.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2. (1837)

<sup>7</sup> All hosts are of an evil kind.

DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 264. (1700)

<sup>8</sup> A humble host who does his best, rather than a wealthy one for me. (ὡς ἐμοὶ πάντῃ | εἰη πρόθυμος πλουσιον μάλλον ξένος.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 394. (c. 413 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> An Host's Invitation is expensive.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 612. (1732)

<sup>1</sup>
A host is like a general: mishaps oft reveal his genius. (Sed convivoris, uti ducis, ingenium res | adversae nudare solent.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 73. (35 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup>
To the man submit at whose board you sit. (P'êng t'a wan, iu 'hua kuan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 399. (1875)

A HOST IN HIMSELF, see under INFLUENCE.

HOT

<sup>3</sup>
Things are not so hot, lady, not at all so hot.

MARGERY ALLINGHAM, Black Plumes, p. 94. (1940)

<sup>4</sup>
Caesar Augustus thought good to make that practice too hot for them.

EDMUND BOLTON, tr., Florus, iv, vii, 322. (1618)

They will make your house too hot to hold you.

MARCHAMONT NEEDHAM, A Plea for the King. Ep. A ij. (1648)

She . . . made St. Albans too hot to hold her.

CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, Cameos. Ser. iii, xiii, 110. (1877)

<sup>5</sup>
I spare nat to taken, god it woot,
But if it be to hevy or to hoot.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Freres Tale, l. 138. (c. 1386)

They robbed both men and women, . . . nothing was too hot or too heavy for them. (Ilz detroussèrent hommes & femmes, . . . rien ne leurs feut ne trop chault ne trop pesant.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 27. (1534)

A taker and a bribing [robbing] feloe, and one for whom nothing was to hotte nor to heauie.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms (1877), p. 359. (1542)

He'll bear it away, if it be not too hot or too heavy.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 349. (1678)

Such a sight, sweetheart, will make one loath to meddle with matters that are too hot or heavy for their handling.

WALTER SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 8. (1822)

<sup>6</sup>
And wafres, pypping hote out of the glede.

CHAUCER, The Miller's Tale, l. 193. (c. 1386)

Whote [hot] meate came pypping from the fyre.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Ovid's Metamorphoses. Bk. viii, l. 850. (1567)

A peece of beefe puld piping hot out of the furnace.

UNKNOWN, Maroccus Extaticus, iii. (1595)

I gave her a meese of porridge piping-hot.

HENRY SHIRLEY, The Martyr'd Souldier. Act v. (1638)

<sup>7</sup>
Too hot to hold.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 178. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 346. (1678)

<sup>8</sup>
Whan he was hottest in his ire.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 148. (1390)

Be not so hot.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 1, 315

(1604) King Lear, v, 3, 66. (1605) The

Winter's Tale, ii, 3, 32. (1610) PEPYS, Diary,

26 April, 1664. BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Prog- ress, ii, 112. (1684) See also under ANGER

Hot men harbour no Malice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2550. (1732)

That makes Alice warm under the lace yoke.

O. HENRY, The Sphinx Apple. (1907) "Hot under the collar" is, of course, the usual form.

<sup>9</sup>
Whote wortis make softe crustis.

HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 132. (c. 1495)

Hot porridge will soak old crusts.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 75. (1917)

<sup>10</sup>
You are a hot shot indeed.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

He's a hot shot in a mustard pot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1678)

He's a hot Shot, in a Mustard Pot; with his Heels upright.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2440. (1732)

<sup>11</sup>
Drynke hoot and swolow hoot.

UNKNOWN, MS. Latin, No. 394, Rylands Liby. (c. 1400)

Hot sup, hot swallow.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 239. (1639)

Cited by both Ray and Fuller.

II—Hot: Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>12</sup>
Hotter than fire. (πυρρὸς θερμότερα.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 382. (424 B.C.)

Sum-time it hentis [seizes] me with hete as hot as ani fure.

UNKNOWN, William of Palerne, p. 36. (c. 1350)

He woll . . . make me foryete my anger, though I wer as hot as fire.

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum, p. 46. (c. 1440)

A stepdame eke as whott as fyre.

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender, March, l. 48. (1579)

I was as hot as fire at this question.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary, ii, 212. (1786)

<sup>13</sup>
He is as hot as if he had a bellyful of Wasps and Salamanders.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1911. (1732)

<sup>14</sup>
It's as hot as the hinges of hell.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 44. (1920)

On p. 84, is "Hotter than the hinges of hell"

Hot as hell's hinges.

CHARLES SAXBY, Death in the Sun, p. 130. (1940)

<sup>15</sup>
Hot as the devil's hoof.

VAN WYCK MASON, The Sulu Sea Murders, p. 119. (1933)

<sup>16</sup>
Hotter 'n Hannah.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 495. (1940) Thompson hazards the guess that Hannah is the sun, as among southern negroes.

<sup>1</sup>
You shalbe as whote as coles by and by.
THOMAS WILSON, The Rule of Reason, sig. U4.
(1551)

The bishop and all his doctors were as hot as coals.
JOHN FOXE, Book of Martyrs, v, 19. (1563)

<sup>2</sup>
Seene forth alle hote as tostes.
UNKNOWN, Two Cookery-Books, p.12.(c.1430)
Chafyng lyke myne hoste,
As hott as any toste.

JOHN SKELTON, Works (Dyce), ii, 415.(c.1520)
Hotte as a toste.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 1. (1546)
LYLY, Euphues, p. 106. (1579)

They were soon as warm as toast, and fast asleep.
CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 25. (1860)

III—Hot and Cold

<sup>3</sup>
Out of the same mouth you blow hot and cold. (ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ στόματος τὸ θερμὸν καὶ τὸ ψυχρὸν ἐξάγεις.)

AESOP, Fables: The Man and the Satyr. (c. 570 B. C.) The story is that a man, eating with a Satyr one winter day, blew on his hands, and when the Satyr asked him why, he answered that it was to warm his hands. Then when he found the soup too hot, he blew on it. The Satyr asked again why he did so, and the man replied it was to cool the soup. "Then," said the Satyr, "I renounce your friendship, because you blow hot and cold out of the same mouth." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 30, with the Latin, "Ex eodem ore calidum et frigidum efflaret."

I desire no one ever to approach my cave who owns at the same moment two such different sorts of mouth. (Tam diversa duo qui simul ora ferat.)

AVIANUS, Fables. No. xxix, l. 21. (c. A. D. 400)
A rendering of Aesop's fable.

Out of one mouthe commeth bothe hott and colde.

GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig. D2. (1577)
These men can blow hot and cold out of the same mouth to serve severall purposes.

WILLIAM CHILLINGWORTH, The Religion of Protestants. Bk. i, pt. ii, sec. 113. (1638)
To blow hot and cold. (Souffle le chaud et le froid.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Satyre et le Passant. Bk. v, fab. 7. (1668) The French version.
To blow hot and cold with the same breath.

WILLIAM WALKER, Idiom. Anglo-Latina, p. 61. (1690) The generally accepted English form of the proverb.

The old adage of blowing hot and cold; which is taken for the mark and character of a dissembler.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop, p. 219. (1692)
So apt are ill men to blow hot and cold.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 115. (1740)
The duplicity of James himself was marvellous. He blew hot and cold with equal facility.

M. A. S. HUME, Ralegh, p. 232. (1897)

I can stand the fabulous monster that blows hot birds and cold bottles with the same breath. But I can't stand a quitter.

O. HENRY, The Enchanted Profile. (1909)
He could make no answer to a man who blew hot and cold in the same breath.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 208. (1920)

<sup>4</sup>
Sone hote, sone colde.
BENEDICT BURGII, Secrees, p. 60. (c. 1450)
MALORY, Morte d'Arthur, bk. xviii, ch. 8. (1485)

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546) etc. The Dutch say, "Vroeg vuur, vroeg asch" (Soon fire, soon ash); the Germans, "Anfang heiss, Mittel lau, Ende kalt" (Beginning hot, middle tepid, ending cold).

It is sayd of olde, | Sone hote, sone colde;
And so is a woman.

PERCY, Reliques: Not-Browne Mayd. (c. 1502)
Soone hot, soone colde, nothing violent is permanent.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pullace: Cephalus and Procris, p. 193. (1576) See also under LOVE.

<sup>5</sup>
Though Curio bee as hot as a toast, yet Euphues is as colde as [a] clocke.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 106. (1579)

<sup>6</sup>
I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. (ὁφελον ψυχρὸς ἢ ἡ ζεστός.)

New Testament: Revelation, iii, 15. (c. A. D. 60)
The Vulgate is, "Utinam frigidus esses, aut calidus."

<sup>7</sup>
She is so hot because the meat is cold.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, i, 2, 47. (1593)

HOTSPUR

<sup>8</sup>
The Hotspur of the north; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife, "Fie upon this quiet life! I want work!"

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 114. (1597)
Hotspur was the sobriquet of Harry Percy.

A hair-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 2, 18. (1597)

You are none of the Hastings, nor Hotspurs.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5855. (1732)
You're none of the hotspurs. Made use of when accusing a noisy braggadocio, be he soldier or civilian, of cowardice.

MICHAEL DENHAM, ed., Denham Tracts, i, 228. (1846)

HOUR

<sup>9</sup>
A man that is young in years may be old in hours, if he have lost no time.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Youth and Age. (1612)

<sup>10</sup>
And of a day naturall he made trium division: viii houres to rede, and praye with fervent devocion, viii houres occupied with businesse naturall,

And other viii houres to rule his realme riall.

HENRY BRADSHAW, The Life of St. Werburge.
Bk. ii, l. 361. (1513) Referring to King
Aelfred. (c. 890)

The doctors say that the Canonical Hours are,
To rise at five, to dine at nine,
To sup at five, to sleep at nine.

(Disent les mediciens l'heure Canonicque estre
Leuer à cinq, dipner à neuf,
Soupper à cinq, coucher à neuf.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 64. (1548)

So many hours must I take my rest;

So many hours must I contemplate.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, ii, 5, 32. (1591)

Six hours to sleep, as many to righteous law;
Four to your prayers, and two to fill your maw;
The rest bestow upon the sacred Muses.

(Sex horas somno, totidem des legibus aequis;

Quatuor orabis, des epulisque duas;

Quod superest ultra sacris largire Camoenis.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Laws of England. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 85. (1628) Quoted by Coke as "ancient verses." He paraphrased them in a couplet,

Six hours in sleep, in law's grave study six;

Four spend in prayer, the rest on nature fix.

Seven hours to law, to soothing slumber seven,
Two to the world allot, and all to heaven.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, An Ode in Imitation of Alcaeus. (1772) See TEIGNMOUTH, Memoirs of the Life of Sir William Jones, p. 251.

Eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep, eight hours for what you will.

UNKNOWN, Slogan, of the National Labor
Union of the United States. (1866)

The four eights, that ideal of operative felicity, are here [at Auckland, New Zealand] a realized fact!

J. A. FROUDE, Oceana. Ch. 14. (1886) Froude was referring to an Australian jingle,
Eight hours' work, eight hours' play,
Eight hours' sleep, and eight bob a day

1
O King, you are beginning to build at the twelfth hour. (δωδεκάτης ὥρας.)

CRASSUS, to King Deiotarus, who was founding a new city, although a very old man.
(54 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Crassus Ch.
xvii, sec. 1.

About the eleventh hour. (περὶ τὴν ἑνδεκάτην ὥραν.)

New Testament: Matthew, xx, 9. (c. A. D. 50)
The Vulgate is, "Circa undecimam horam."
The parable of the laborers

2
He invited friends home, who used to come at ten o'clock, and begin to get happy about the small hours.

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz. Ch. 7. (1836)
Often beguiled by his studies into the "wee small" hours of night.

F. W. FARRAR, Julian Home. Ch. 8. (1859)

3
One Hour to Day, is worth two to Morrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3761. (1732)
See also under PROCRASTINATION

4
It is a true sayinge, That the houres consecrated to pleasure, are but short.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
p. 214. (1574) Young, tr.

Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 385.
(1605)

Pleasant Hours fly fast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3886. (1732)

5
It is an old and a true saying, that "an hour in the morning before breakfast, is worth two all the rest of the day."

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book. Vol. ii, col.
477. (1827)

An hour in the morning is worth two in the evening.

HENRY G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 311.
(1855)

6
To me, perhaps, the passing hour will grant what it denies to you. (Mihi forsán, tibi quod negarit, | porriget hora.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 31 (23 B. C.)
Learn, that the present Hour alone is Man's.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 33
(1749) See also under PRESENT.

7
There are only twenty-four hours in the day.
Against those who attempt too much.

VINCENT STUCKEY LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 145.
(1902)

8
The hours fly around in a circle. (Volat hora per orbem.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. iii, l. 641. (c. 25 B. C.)
They [the hours] pass by and are put to our account. (Pereunt et inputantur.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 20. (c. A. D. 90)
So runs the round of life from hour to hour.

TENNYSON, Circumstance, l. 9. (1830)

9
Sound, sound the clarion, fill the fife,

To all the sensual world proclaim
One crowded hour of glorious life

Is worth an age without a name.

MAJOR THOMAS OSBERT MORDAUNT, *A Poem,
Written During the Last German War*. First published in The Bee, Edinburgh, 12 Oct., 1791, and used by Sir Walter Scott at the head of Ch. 13, bk. ii, of Old Mortality
(1816). Augustine Birrell, in *More Obiter
Dicta* (1924), hazards the opinion that Scott himself wrote the lines, after looking over the proofs of Mordaunt's "vapid verses" in the editor's room of The Bee, but this is based wholly upon surmise. The war referred to in the title of the poem was the Seven Years'
War, 1756-1763, during which Major
Mordaunt served with the 10th Dragoons, which was stationed in Germany when the war ended. See Literary Digest, 11 Sept., 1920, p. 38.

Too busied with the crowded hour to fear to live or die.

R. W. EMERSON, Quatrains: Nature. (1867)

We have it on high authority that a crowded hour of glorious life is worth an age without a name.

P. C. WREN, Uniform of Glory, p. 11. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> The gods confound the man who first distinguished hours. (Ut illum di perdant, primus qui horas repperit.)

PLAUTUS (?), Boeotia. Frag. (c. 200 B.C.) As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, iii, 3.

I never tie myself to hours: hours are made for man, and not man for hours. (Jamais ie me assubjectis à heures: les heures sont faictes pour l'homme, & non l'homme pour les heures.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 41. (1534) The monk is arguing against punctuality.

Hours was made for man and not man for hours. T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 21. (1843)

<sup>2</sup> Nobody has a good hour without somebody having a bad one. (Bona nemini hora est ut non alicui sit mala.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 62. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> A single hour often restores what many years have taken away. (Solet hora quod multi anni abstulerunt reddere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 667. (c. 43 B.C.) There is a Latin proverb, "Accidit in puncto quod non contingit in anno" (It happens in a moment that comes not to pass in a year).

Oft many things do happen in one hour.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, Whether Liberty or Prison. (c. 1535)

It hath in one hour, that hath not in vii. yere.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

For such chaunce may chaunce in an houre, do ye heare,

As perchaunce shall not chaunce againe in seuen yere.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act iv, sc. 3. (a. 1553)

It will come in an houre, that will not come in a yere.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 62. (c. 1595)

It chanceth in an hour, that happeneth not in seven yere.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 325. (1605)

It chanceth in an hour, that comes not in seven yere.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1678)

"Every man is thought to have some lucky hour," Ray comments, "wherein he hath an opportunity offered him of being happy all his life, could he but discern it, and embrace the occasion." See under OPPORTUNITY. The Italians say, "Accasca in un punto quel che non accasca in cento anni" (It falls out in an instant which falls not out in a hundred years). The French have the same proverb, "Ce advient en une heure que n'advient pas en cent"; the Spaniards, "Lo que no acerta en un ano, acerta en un rato" (That which may not happen in a year may happen in a very short space of time).

One hour's cold will spoil seven years' warming.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 276. (1721)

An hour's cold will suck out seven years' heat.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 3. (1846)

An Hour may destroy what an Age was a building.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 613. (1732)

It happens in an Hour, that comes not in an Age.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2836.

<sup>4</sup> Half an hour's hanging hinders five miles' riding.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 150. (1678)

'Tis half an hour past hanging time.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Half an hour is soon lost at dinner.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>5</sup> Sad hours seem long.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 1, 167. (1595)

An Hour of Pain is as long as a Day of Pleasure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 614. (1732)

For the unhappy how slowly pass the hours!

(Que pour les malheureux l'heure lentement fuit!)

BERNARD JOSEPH SAURIN, Blanche et Guiscard. Act v, sc. 5. (c. 1765)

O, in one hour what years of anguish crowd!

LORD LYTTON, Richelieu. Act iii, sc. 1. (1838)

The slow sweet hours that bring us all things good,

The slow sad hours that bring us all things ill.

TENNYSON, Love and Duty, l. 56. (1842)

Bright hours atone for dark ones.

MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Fireworshippers. (1815)

<sup>6</sup> Let us put off the evil hour as long as we can.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

DARKEST HOUR BEFORE DAWN, see under DAWN.

HOUSE

See also Home

<sup>7</sup> God planteth in mortal man the cause of sin whensoever he wills utterly to destroy a house. (θεὸς μὲν αἰτίαν φέει βροτοῖς | ὅταν καὶ ὅσα δῶμα παμπήδην θέλῃ.)

AESCHYLUS, Niobe. Frag. 77 Loeb. (c. 458 B.C.)

<sup>8</sup> Friendly house, best house. (φίλος οἶκος, ἀριστος οἶκος.)

AESOP, Fables: Zeus. (c. 570 B.C.) The fable is of the tortoise who was late at a dinner given by Zeus, and when Zeus asked the reason, the tortoise replied, "Friendly house, best house." Whereupon Zeus, being angry, condemned the tortoise always to carry her house on her back. The moral, Aesop concludes, is "that many men choose rather to live frugally to themselves than sumptuously with others."

Live in your own house. (Tecum habita.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. iv, l. 52. (c. A. D. 58) The Latin proverb is, "Propria domus omnium optima" (Your own house is the best of all houses).

1
Even if a man mixes the mud [and] the straw, it is God who is the builder. It is He who throws down [a house], it is He who builds
[it] up daily.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col.
xxiv, l. 13. (c. 700 B.C.) Budge, tr.

Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it. (Nisi Dominus aedificaverit domum, in vanum laboraverunt qui aedificant eam.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxvii, l. (c. 250 B.C.)

2
Do not enter your house suddenly, much less the house of your friend.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 10. (c. 450)
Lest you appear to be a spy.

3
Caste the house out at the window.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Bulwarke of Defence, fo.
28. (1562) Throw everything into confusion.
If we take them there any more, wee'll throw the house out of the window.

WRIGHT, ed., Political Ballads, p. 161. (1659)
We are at home now; where, I warrant you, you shall find the house flung out of the windows.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act iii, sc. 5. (1611)
I'll have a virtuous wife, or I'll throw the house out o' the window.

JOHN OZELL, tr., Molière, i, 180. (1714)
The whole family was infected with the mania for Private Theatricals; the house, usually so clean and tidy, was, to use Mr. Gattleton's expressive description, "regularly turned out o' windows."

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz, p. 248. (1836)
4
Whom God loves, his house is sweet to him.
(A quien Dios quiere bien, la casa le sabe.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

5
Water-tight and weather-proof, as they say.
(Sartum et tectum, ut aiunt.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. xiii, epis. 50, sec. 2.
(44 B.C.) The stock phrase for a building in good repair.

The Ducheman saieth, that seggyng [sedge] is good cope.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
Sedge makes a good roof.

A house dry over head is happy.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

Who repairs his gutter, repairs his whole house.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 567 A Spanish proverb.

The goodness of a house does not consist in its lofty halls, but in its excluding the weather.
(Fang wu pu tsai kao t'ang, pu lou pien 'hao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
388. (1875)

6
The owner should bring honor to the house, not the house to the owner. (Nec domo dominus, sed domino domus honestanda est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 39, sec. 139 (c.
45 B.C.)

The house discovers the owner.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Maison. (1611)
The house shows the owner.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 9. (1640)

Grace thy house, and not let that grace thee.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

7
He that buys a house ready wrought,
Hath many a pin and nail for nought.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 324.

(1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 106. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6442. (1732) The Germans say, "Wer ein Haus kauft, hat man-chen Balken und Nagel umsonst."

He that buys a house ready wrought

Hath many a tile and pin for nought.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 300. (1639)

Buy a house made, and a wife unman'd.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Acheter. (1611)

Choose a house made, and a wife to make.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 870.
(1640) See under WIFE.

Fools build houses and wise men buy them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94. (1678) The Germans say, "Narren bauen Häuser, der Kluge kauft sie," the French, "On doit ache-ter pays et maison faite" (One should buy land and houses ready made). See also under BUILDING.

A House ready built never sells for so much as it
cost.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 221. (1732)

8
All things are soon prepared in a well ordered
house.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Apprestée. (1611)

In a good house, all things are quickly ready

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Maison.

In a plentiful house a supper is soone provided.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 152. (1631)

In a good house, all is quickly ready.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 62. (1640)

All is soon ready in an orderly House.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 525. (1732)
As usual, Fuller whips the saying into its best form.

9
God hath often a great share in a little house.
(En petite maison a Dieu grand part.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Maison. (1611)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670)

God oft hath a great share in a little house

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 64. (1640)

My house, my house, though thou art small, thou art to me the Escorial.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 415.

(1640) After the Italian proverb, "Casa mia, casa mia, per piccina che tu sia, tu me sembri una badia" (My house, my house, though you be small, you seem like an abbey to me).
The Escorial was the chief palace of the Spanish Kings.

A small house well filled is better than an empty palace.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.
Ch. 1. (1843)

1 Every spirit makes its house, but afterwards the house confines the spirit.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

A man builds a fine house; and now he has a master, and a task for life: he is to furnish, watch, show it, and keep it in repair, the rest of his days.

EMERSON, Works and Days. (1870)

2 Better one's House be too little one Day, than too big all the Year after.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 919. (1732)

FITZGERALD, Polonius: Building. (1852)

3 My boye (quod he) who badd the be so bolde, As for to plucke an olde house on thy hedd?

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Works (Cunliffe), ii, 548.

(1576) To get oneself into trouble.

You shall pull an old house over your own head by a further provocation.

TOPSELL, Historie of Serpents, p. 658. (1608)
To bring an old house on one's head.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 188. (1670)

She may be a person of quality, and you may bring an old house upon your head.

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Bellamira. Act ii. (1687)
He . . . will have good Luck if he does not pull an old House upon his head.

JOHN HILDROP, Regulation of Freethinking. p. 7. (1739)

Papa observes in an undertone to Dr. Fludyer that he has brought an old house about his ears.

DE MORGAN, Alice-for-Short. Ch. 38. (1907)

4 This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven. (Domus Dei, et porta caeli.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xxviii, 17. (c. 550 B. C.)

In my Father's house are many mansions. (ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τοῦ πατρὸς μου πολλάς οἰκίας.)

New Testament: John, xiv, 2. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "In domo Patris mei mansiones multae sunt."

5 Where the old prouerb is fulfil'd, better one house troubled than two.

ROBERT GREENE, Penelope's Web, in Works (Grosart), v, 162. (1587)

Better one house fill'd than two spill'd. This we use when we hear of a bad Jack who hath married as bad a Jyll.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 51. (1670)

6 The first year let your house to your enemy; the second, to your friend; the third, live in it yourself.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 382. (1869)

7 A man is king in his own house. (Domi suae quilibet rex.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 91. Citing a proverb of c. A. D. 65.

Better your own house, though it be a hovel, for a man is master at home.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 36. (c. 900)

I in my own house am an emperor.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Roman Actor. Act i, sc. 2. (1626)

The charcoal-burner is mayor in his own house. (Charbonnier est maire chez lui.)

BALZAC, Eugénie Grandet. Ch. 1. (1833) Balzac is quoting a proverb the idea of which is common to all languages. The Italians say, "Ogni cane è leone a casa sua" (Every dog is a lion at home); the Germans, "Jedermann ist Herr bei sich" (Every man is lord in his own house), and so on. See also under COCK.

8 Choose not a house near an inn (viz, for noise): or in a corner (for filth).

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 288. (1640) Who buildeth a house in the street, either it is too high or too low. (Chi fabbrica la casa in piazza, o che è troppo alta o troppo bassa.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 40. (1666)

He that builds a house by the high-way side, it's either too high or too low

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 106. (1670)

A House built by the Way-side, is either too high, or too low.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 220. (1732) Build a cottage by the roadside and you will not get it finished in three years. (Tso shê tao p'ang san nien pu ch'eng.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2079. (1875)

9 After the house is finished, leave it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 178.

(1640) After the Spanish, "Despues que la casa está hecha, la deja."

A fool knows more in his house, than a wise man in another's.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 259.

Cited by both Ray and Fuller.

He that would be well, needs not go from his own house.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 444

See also under HOME; TRAVEL.

Woe to the house where there is no chiding

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 452. When you enter into a house, leave the anger ever at the door.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 895. The house is a fine house when good folks are within.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 950

10 A man may loue his house well,

Though he ryde not on the rydge. I haue heard tell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

The ridge, the highest point of the roof

A man may love his house well, and yet not ride upon the ridge.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 192. (1553) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1605)

A man may love the Kirk well enough, and not ride on the riggin of it. A man may love a thing, or person, very well, and yet not show too much fondness.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 37. (1721)

A man may love his house very well, without riding on the ridge.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

A man may love his house well, without riding on the ridge; it is enough for a wise man to know what is precious to himself, without . . . evermore proclaiming it to the world.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 76. (1853)

He rides on the riggin o' the kirk. The rigging being the top of the roof, the proverb used to be applied to those who carried their zeal for church matters to the extreme point.

DEAN EDWARD B. RAMSAY, Reminiscences of Scottish Life and Character, v, 202. (1857)

1 Set thine house in order. (Dispone domui tue.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxviii, 1. (c. 900 B. C.)
Often misquoted, "Put your house in order."

2 He that hath no house must lie in a yard.

JOHN LYLY, Endimion. Act iv, sc. 2. (1591)

3 A house of dreams untold

That looks out over the whispering tree-tops
And faces the setting sun.

EDWARD MACDOWELL, From a Log Cabin (c. 1900) Prefixed to his piano piece of that name, and engraved upon his tomb at Peterboro, N.H., where the cabin was situated

4 If a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand. (ἐὰν οἰκία ἐφ' ἑαυτὴν μερισθῇ, οὐ δύνησεται ἡ οἰκία ἐκελῆν στῆναι.)

New Testament: Mark, iii, 25. (c. A. D. 70)
The Vulgate is, "Si domus super semetipsam dispertiat, non potest domus illa stare"

5 God keep me from four houses: the tavern, the money-lender's, the hospital, and the prison. (Dieu me garde de quatre maisons, | De la taverne, du Lombard, | De l'hospital, et de la prison.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences (c. 1550)

God keep me from four houses, a Usurer's, a Tavern, a Spital, and a Prison.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 817. (1640)

6 Painted Battlements of Prelatry, which want but one puff of the King's to blow them down like a past-board House built of Court-Cards.

JOHN MILTON, Of Reformation Touching Church Discipline. (1641)

It is for children to cry for the falling of their house of Cards.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, The Remedy of Discontentment, 27. (1645)

The Group had not slept for three nights. It stood like a house of cards.

ANTOINE DE SAINT-EXUPÉRY, Flight to Arras, p. 254. (1942)

7 You shall not give him house room long.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pullace, p. 58. (1576)

8 For though in use it gleams like beauteous bronze,

An unused house through time in ruin falls.
(λάμπει γὰρ ἐν χρεαίσιν ὥσπερ εὐπρεπὴς χαλκός· χρόνῳ δ' ἀργήσαν ἤμυσε στέγος.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia. Sec. 792A. (c. A. D. 95)
Quoting an unknown Greek poet.

9 He caste out of house & hom of men a gret route.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Metrical Chronicle, l. 7702. (1297)

Men of the lond were i-dryve out of hir hous and hir home.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, v, 229. (1387)

Hunted out of house and home.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles, p. 204. (1576)

EATEN OUT OF HOUSE AND HOME, see under EATING

10 Prison is preferable to a house full of frowns.

SADI, Bustan Ch. 7, Apologue 15. (c. 1257)

11 He that has a house to put 's head in has a good head-piece.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 2, 25. (1605)

12 They must be goin' to hev considerable rough house—a fuss, I mean.

OWEN WISTER, The Second Missouri Compromise. (1895) See Harper's Magazine, June, p. 540/2.

I intensely dislike a rough house. Rough-housing gets you nowhere.

R. A. J. WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 176. (1943)

13 Make of old wood the new house. (Faire de vieil bois nouvelle maison.)

UNKNOWN, Roman du Jouvencel, fo. 19. (1493)

14 Take care not to fix your abode in a place where there is no temple, no school, no river, and no doctor.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras (Moral Stanzas). (c. 1250)

II—A Man's House Is His Castle

15 No room's private to his Majesty when the street door's once passed. That's law. Some people maintains that an Englishman's house is his castle. That's gammon.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 24. (1836)

Mrs. MacStinger immediately demanded whether an Englishwoman's house were her castle or not.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 9. (1848)

16 The poorest man may in his cottage bid defiance to all the forces of the Crown. It may be frail, its roof may shake; the wind may blow through it; the storm may enter, the rain may enter—but the King of England cannot enter; all his force dares not cross the threshold of the ruined tenement!

WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF CHATHAM, Speech, on the Excise Bill, House of Lords. (1766)

The house is a castle which the King cannot enter.

EMERSON, English Traits: Wealth. (1856)

I think some orator said that though the winds of heaven might whistle around an Englishman's cottage, the King of England could not.

JOHN J. INGALLS, Speech, U. S. Senate. 10 May, 1880.

1 My house is to me like my castle. (Ma meason est à moy come mon castel.)

SIR WILLIAM STANFORD, Les Pleez del Coron, fo. 14B. (1567)

Our law calleth a man's house, his castle, meaning that he may defend himselfe therein.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, Eirenarcha. Pt. ii, ch 7, p. 257. (1588)

The house of every man is to him as his Castle and Fortresse, as well for his defence against injury and violence, as for his repose.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Semayne's Case. (1605) See 5 Reports, 91b.

A man's house is his castle, et domus sua cuique tutissimum refugium [and one's home is his safest refuge].

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes of the Laws Pt. iii, ch. 73. (1644) Quoting Pandects, ii, 4, De in Jus Vocando.

My lodging, as long as I rent it, is my castle.

DRYDEN, The Wild Gallant. Act i, sc. 1. (1663)

Masters of families are much favoured in our law, for their houses are termed their castles.

DUDLEY NORTH, Observations, l. 72. (1669)

A man's house is his castle. This is a kind of law proverb; Jura publica favent privato domus (Public laws favor the privacies of a house)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 105. (1678)

In London, . . . a man's own house is truly his castle, in which he can be in perfect safety from intrusion.

JAMES BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 1 April, 1779. My whinstone house my castle is.

I have my own four walls.

CARLYLE, My Own Four Walls. (c. 1840)

In his own house, John Bull is absolute master. He calls his house his castle. (Chez lui, John Bull est maître absolu. Il appelle sa maison son château-fort.)

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 20. (1890)

A man's house is his castle, not a quiz program.

H. I. PHILLIPS, On White or Rye, p. 164. (1940)

III—House: The House on Fire

2 The empiric to cure the fever, destroys the patient; so the wise man, to burn the mice, set on fire his barn.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 434. (1629)

Burn not your House to fright away the Mice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1024. (1732)

Who, but a Bedlamite, would fire his house, To wreck his vengeance on a pilfering mouse?

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Second Epistle to Mrs. Clarke. (c. 1800)

Ye needna burn the hoose to rid the rottans.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Alec Forbes. Ch. 83. (1865)

3 They retche not whos hows brenneth so that they may warme them by the coles.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe, p. 78. (1481)

He that burns his house, warms himself for once.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 305.

(1640) See also under MEANS AND END.

He will burn his house to warm his hands.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 306.

How proud a looking of calamity in the face, speaks out in . . . : When thou seest thine house in flames, approach and warm thyself by it. (Quando vieras tu casa quemar, llegate á escalar.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch.

3. (1852) OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)

4 Set not your House on fire to be revenged of the Moon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4111. (1732)

Set not your house on fire to spite the moon.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 36. (1880)

5 When my house burns, it is not good playing at Chess.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 668. (1640)

When a Man's House is on fire, it's Time to break off Chess.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5539.

6 At it they went like five hundred houses on fire.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York (1824), p. 291. (1809)

I am getting on . . . like "a house o' fire."

DICKENS, in FORSTER, Life, i, vi, 107. (1837)

Shes getting on like a house on fire.

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act iii. (1912)

7 I can set a house a fyre and ronne away by the lyght.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 710. (1530)

The following English proverbs . . . Burn the house, and run away by the light of it.

JOHN SMEDLEY, in Somers Tracts, xiii, 824 (c. 1720)

IV—House: The House of Glass

8 And for-thy, who that hath an heed of verre, Fro cast of stones war him in the werre!

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii. l. 867. (c. 1380)

Who hath his brains of glass let him not go into a battel of stones.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 45. (1666)

Thee shouldst not throw stones, who hast a Head of Glass thyself.

JOHN SHEBEARE, Matrimony, ii, 102. (1754)

One who has a head of glass should never engage in throwing stones.

FRANCIS GROSE, The Olio, p. 281. (1793) A proverb originally Spanish, "Si tienes la cabeza de vidrio, No os tomeis a pedradas conmigo" (If you have a head of glass, don't throw stones at mine).

<sup>1</sup> 'Tis a foolish man that throws a hunk of coal fr'm his own window at th' dhriver iv a brick wagon.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Platform Making. (1900)

<sup>2</sup> Steenie, Steenie, those who live in glass houses should be carefu' how they fling stanes.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, to the Duke of Buckingham. (c. 1604) The story is that Buckingham, who lived in a mansion in St. Martin's Fields known as the "Glass House" because of its many windows, organized a movement against the Scotsmen who had inundated London upon James's accession, and parties were formed for the purpose of breaking their windows and annoying them in other ways. The Scots retaliated by breaking the windows of the duke's house, and when he complained to the king, James retorted by quoting the proverb very aptly. He was, indeed, hailed as its author, but merely repeated a well known saying. See SETON, Life of the Earl of Dunfermline.

Whose house is of glass, must not throw stones at another.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 198. (1640)

No body should throw stones, whose house is made of glass.

SHADWELL, The Sham Prince. Act i, sc. 2. (1720)

Men in glass houses should not provoke a war of stones.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to R. Walsh. (1820)

They who live in glass houses should not throw stones.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 527. (1855)

He who has a roof of glass should not throw stones at that of his neighbor. (El que tiene tejados de vidrio, no tire piedras al de su vecino.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 285. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "Qui a sa maison de verre | Sur le voisin ne jette pierre"; the Italians, "Chi ha tegoli de vetro, non tiri sassi al vicino"; the Germans, "Wer ein gläsern' Dach hat, muss andere nicht mit Steinen werfen." The idea is common to all languages.

People who live in glass houses have no right to throw stones.

SHAW, Widowers' Houses. Act ii. (1892)

Why condemn him? No!—Lizarann lived in a glass house, and wouldn't throw stones.

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, It Never Can Happen Again, i, 159. (1909)

People who live in glass houses should be extremely careful.

HUGH PENTECOST, I'll Sing at Your Funeral, p. 86. (1942)

<sup>3</sup> Those who live in glass houses gather no moss.
VACHEL LINDSAY, Foolish about Windows. (1914)

<sup>4</sup> What do you get by throwing stones at your enemys windows, while your own children look out at the casements?

WILLIAM SECKER, The Nonsuch Professor. ii, 183. (1660)

Don't throw stones at your neighbors' if your own windows are of glass.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

If you've any glass windows never throw stones.

R. H. BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: St Medard. (1842)

Let us in fairness remember, before casting our stone, that there was once a Crystal Palace in London.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 127 (1941)

HOUSEWIFE

<sup>5</sup> If the housewife sleeps, the basket becomes empty.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

Take huswife from husband and what is he than?

THOMAS TUSSEY, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Booke of Huswiferie: Preface. (1573)

When Housewives all the House forsake,

And leave good Men to Brew and Bake,

Withouten Guile, then be it said,

That House doth stond upon its Head.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 3. (1695)

Quoted as by "Messalah the Arabian."

<sup>6</sup> Bare walls make giddy housewives.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 319

(1605) Cited by Clarke and Ray.

If in private houses bare walls make giddy housewives, in princes' palaces empty coffers make unsteady statesmen.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain Bk. vi, ch. 2. (1655)

I had . . . a house . . . ; but, as we say, bare walls make giddy hussies.

DANIEL DEFOE, Colonel Jacque. Ch. 10. (1723)

Bare Walls make gadding Housewives.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 839. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> The over gentle houswife marres her houshold.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Femme. (1611)

A gentle housewife mars the household.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 47. (1640)

<sup>8</sup> Punch coal, cut candle, and set brand on end,
Is neither good house-wife, nor good house-wife's friend.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

<sup>9</sup> Some gigling Huswives, (Light Leaves will be wagg'd with Little Wind) fell a flouting at them.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 4. (1655)

<sup>10</sup> Every one can keep House better than her Mother, till she trieth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1443. (1732)

1
A fat housekeeper makes lean executors.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 29. (1640)
Everything is of use to a housekeeper.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 74.

2
A cleane fingred huswyfe, and an ydell, folke
saie,

And wyll be lyme fyngerd I feare by my fay.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
The foot on the cradle, the hand on the distaff, a sign of a good housewife.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)
Sweet in the bed, and swair [unwilling] up in the morning, was never a good housewife.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 290. (1721)

3
There's but an hour in the day between a good housewife and a bad. With a little more pains, she that slatters might do things neatly.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1678)

There is . . . but
An Hour in one whole Day between
A Housewife and a Slut.

British Apollo. Vol. iii, No. 91. (1710)
Where the cobwebs grow The Beaux don't go.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 483. (1940)

4
The olde paynters paynted Venus in suche sorte that with her feete she trod uppon a snayle, signyfenge that a good housewyfe oughte to kepe at home and go lytle abroad for as much as her office consisteth within the house.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Adagia, fo.
66. (1550)

Noble housekeepers need no doors.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 96. (1640)
Apelles us'd to paint a good housewife upon a snail, which intimated that she would be as slow from gadding abroad.

JAMES HOWELL, Parly of Beasts, p. 58. (1660)
A wife, domestic, good, and pure,
Like snail, should keep within her door;
But not, like snail, with silver track,
Place all her wealth upon her back.

W. W. HOWE, Good Wives. (1886)

5
And (as our Englishe prouerbe saieth) Hous
kepyng is a priuee theef.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p.
44. (1542)

Good housewifery is a great revenue.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, l.
144. (1725)

A thrifty housewife is better than a great income.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch.
16. (1869)

HOYLE

6
So far fulfilled according to Hoyle.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Tobin's Palm. (1906)

O. Henry used the phrase again in Phoebe (1909) and in The Phonograph and the
Graft. (1909) It refers to Edmond Hoyle

(1672-1769), a writer on card-games, who issued the first edition of his Short Treatise on Whist in 1742. His Laws of 1760 ruled whist until 1864. So "According to Hoyle" means according to the accepted rules, or according to the best authority—correct, regular. It is practically an Americanism, seldom used in England, the English equivalent being "According to Cocker." Edward Cocker was the author of The Compleat Arithme- tician, published in 1664, which went into more than a hundred editions.

He isn't satisfied that everything is according to Hoyle.

FREEMAN, Mr. Polton Explains, p. 172. (1940)
That's more or less according to Hoyle.

LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 35. (1941)

HUCKLEBERRY

7
He got the huckleberry, as we used to say
in college.

HENRY A. BEERS, Split Zephyr. In Century
Magazine, June, 1883, p. 280/2. He was laughed at.

8
I'm your huckleberry.

JOHN HAY, The Bread-Winners. Ch. 10. (1883)
I'm particularly suited to you.

The Saracen . . . is no huckleberry himself.
MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee. Ch.
26. (1889)

If she were looking for a . . . husband, you were her huckleberry.

G. H. LORIMER, Jack Spurlock, p. 72. (1908)

9
I wouldn't risk a huckleberry to a persimmon that we don't . . . sink.

J. K. PAULDING, Westward Ho, i, 80. (1832)
To do this . . . was at least a huckleberry over my persimmon.

DAVID CROCKETT, Narrative of His Life, p. 70.
(1834)

She's a huckleberry above most people's persimmon.

Spirit of the Times (Phila.), 24 Aug., 1844
My larning . . . ain't a huckleberry to your persimmon.

W. G. SIMS, Eutaw, p. 553. (1856)

I'm a huckleberry above that persimmon, 'cause
I'm the chief cook.

D. A. PORTER, Incidents of the Civil War, p.
204. (1885)

10
Within a huckleberry of being smothered to death.

J. K. PAULDING, Westward Ho, i, 182. (1832)
He always kept "a huckleberry or two" ahead of his readers.

EDWARD BOK, Americanization, p. 165. (1920)

11
We shall have them here as thick as huckleberries.

SEBA SMITH, The Life and Writings of Major
Jack Downing, p. 167. (1833)

They were as thick as huckleberries.

CAROLINE KIRKLAND, Western Gleanings, p.
211. (1833)

HUG

- 1
[He] hugs himself for his rare workmanship.
MASSINGER AND DEKKER, The Virgin Martyr.
Act v. (1622)
They hug themselves, and reason thus:
It is not yet so bad with us.
JONATHAN SWIFT, Verses on the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 115. (1731)
We hugged ourselves with the idea that we had done right.
G. W. LEFEVRE, The Life of a Travelling Physician, i, i, x, 238. (1843)
You . . . hug yourself as a good patriot.
F. HALL, Two Trifles, p. 32. (1895)
- 2
Let him rebuke who ne'er has known the pure Platonic grapple,
Or hugged two girls at once behind a chapel.
EZRA POUND, L'Homme Moyen Sensuel. (1910)
- 3
To hug one as the Divell hugs a witch.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 286. (1678)
And hug and kiss, and are so great, as the devil and witch of Endor.
UNKNOWN, Political Merriment. Pt. iii, p. 20. (1715)
I've seen her hug you as the devil hugged the witch.
JONATHAN SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

HUGGER-MUGGER

- 4
He wolde haue hys faythe dyuulged and spredde abroad openly, not alwaye whyspered in hukermoker.
SIR THOMAS MORE, A Dialoge Concerning Heresies, ii, 52b. (1529) Concealment, secrecy.
As men dere speke it hugger mugger.
JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 392. (c. 1529)
It shal be done moche better in open courte, . . . then in hugger mugger.
RICHARD TAVERNER, The Garden of Wysdom, i, 26a. (1539)
He would not smother up sin and deal in hugger mugger against his conscience.
JOHN LYLY (?), Pappe with a Hatchet. (1589)
Works (1902) iii, 401.
We have done but greenly,
In hugger-mugger to inter him.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 83. (1600) Shakespeare's only use of the word.
This is done in secret and hucker mucker.
PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Pliny, ii, 563. (1601)
It must not, as the vulgar say,
Be done in hugger-mugger way.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iii, l. 1171. (1762)
You'd hardly believe what those people sometimes think they can have stowed away in hugger-mugger.
MICHAEL INNES, The Weight of the Evidence, p. 19. (1943)

HUM AND HAW, see Indecision

HUMANITY

See also Man

- 5
Human documents. (Documents humains.)
EDMOND DE GONCOURT, first used by him in 1876. See GONCOURT, La Faustin: Preface.
- 6
Humanity is very uniform.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Taxation No Tyranny. (1775)
- 7
Make me anything but human. (πολει με πλην ανθρωπον.)
MENANDER, The Woman Possessed With a Divinity. Frag. 223K. (c. 300 B.C.) The context is: "If some god should come up to me and say, 'Crato, you, after your death, shall again have being anew and you shall be whatsoever you desire—a dog, sheep, goat, man, horse—for you have to live twice. Choose what you prefer.' Forthwith I'd say, 'Make me anything but human. That is the only living organism which unfairly gets its good or ill fortune.'"
Being human, I'm a heel.
OGDEN NASH, Home Thoughts from Little Moose. (1933)
- 8
How great the emptiness of human affairs!
(O quantum est in rebus inane!)
PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 1. (c. A.D. 58)
- 9
Humanity must perforce prey on itself
Like monsters of the deep.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 2, 49. (1605) See MAN: A WOLF TO MAN.
Humanity is a pigsty where liars, hypocrites and the obscene in spirit congregate.
GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man. Ch. 9. (1888)
- 10
Above all nations is humanity.
GOLDWIN SMITH, Aphorism. (c. 1870) Chiseled on a stone bench on campus of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., where Smith was professor of English.
- 11
For Gulliver divinely shews
That Humankind are all Yahoos.
SWIFT, A Panegyric on Dean Swift, l. 167. (1730)

HUMILITY

- 12
If thou wouldst be exalted, humble thyself before God. who humbles the exalted and exalts the humble.
AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. x, l. 149. (c. 550 B.C.) Whosoever humbleth himself shall be exalted. (Pu tzü ssü, ku' chang.)
LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 22. (c. 550 B.C.) Old, tr. Referred to as an ancient maxim.
Whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted. (ὁστις δὲ ὑψώσει ἑαυτὸν ταπεινωθήσεται, καὶ ὁστις ταπεινώσει ἑαυτὸν ὑψωθήσεται.)
New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 12. (c. A.D.

50) Repeated in Luke, xiv, 11. The Vulgate is, "Qui autem se exaltaverit, humiliabitur: et qui se humiliaverit, exaltabitur."

That philosophical and Christian saying, That the more loftie we are placed, the more lowly wee ought to humble our selves: which is in deed, the way to ryse higher.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 192. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Whoever humbleth himselfe in earth shalbe exalted in heaven.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 124. Pettie, tr.

God hath sworn to lift on high

Who sinks himself by true humility.

JOHN KEBLE, At Hooker's Tomb. (1846)

1 God loveth the happiness of the humble more than that the noble be honored.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxvi, l. 13. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

2 Gold is proved in the fire, and acceptable men in the furnace of humiliation.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), ii, 5. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

My son, when in prosperity walk humbly, and thou wilt be loved more than the giver of gifts.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, iii, 17.

3 It is a hard matter for a man to go down into the Valley of Humiliation, and to catch no slip by the way.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

4 The crown of a good disposition is humility.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 170. (1817)

5 Humble folk been Cristes freendes; they been contubernial with the lord.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale, Sec. 65. (c. 1389)

6 The higher we are placed, the more humbly should we walk. (Quanto superiores simus, tanto nos geramus summissius.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 26, sec. 90. (c. 45 B. C.) "There is sound advice," adds Cicero, "in this word of warning."

Ever the hieere that thou art,

Ever the lower be thy heart.

UNKNOWN, in Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 92. (c. 1450)

It is hard to be high and humble.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2948. (1732)

7 Humility is the foundation of all virtues.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.)

Humility, that low, sweet root,
From which all heavenly virtues shoot.

THOMAS MOORE, The Loves of the Angels: Third Angel's Story. (1823)

Lowliness is the base of every virtue.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home. (1839)

True humility,

The highest virtue, mother of them all.

TENNYSON, The Holy Grail, l. 445. (1870)

Humility is a Vertue all preach, none practise.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Humility. (c. 1645)

Humility is the first of the virtues—for other people.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table Ch. 5. (1860)

8 Humility may clothe an English dean.

WILLIAM COWPER, Truth, l. 118. (1781)

9 Never be haughty to the humble; never be humble to the haughty.

JEFFERSON DAVIS, Speech, at Richmond, 22 July, 1861

10 I am well aware that I am the 'umblest person going. . . . 'umble we are, 'umble we have been, 'umble we shall ever be.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 17. (1849)
Uriah Heep speaking.

11 Who prospers not must be of humble mind (σμικρὸν φρονεῖν χρὴ τὸν κακῶς πεπραγμένον.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. No. 957. (c. 440 B. C.)

12 "To make one eat humble pie"—i. e. To make him lower his tone, and be submissive. It may possibly be derived from the umbles [inwards, around the umbilical cord] of the deer, which were the perquisite of the huntsman; and, if so, it should be written umble-pie, the food of inferiors.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia App. 432. (1830)

You must get up and eat humble pie this morning, my boy.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Bk. i, ch. 14. (1855)

He had . . . to eat humble pie, to go back and accept their offers.

HENRY KINGSLEY, Ravenshoe. Ch. 30. (1861)

"The scornful Dog" had to eat wormwood pudding and humble pie.

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 42. (1863)

"Umbles," made into pies, were served to those of lesser rank, who sat below the salt, and quite contentedly, as became their station, ate a humble pie.

FRANK CASE, Do Not Disturb, p. 253. (1940)

13 A Cypher and Humility make the other Figures & Virtues of tenfold Value.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

14 His humility set a lustre on all (admirable that the whole should be so low, whose several parts were so high) . . . like a tree loaden with fruit, bowing down its branches.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain Bk. x, ch. 3. (1655)

I truly was ever of this minde, that as a tree, the more it is taken with fruit, the more it bendeth to the ground: so a man, the more hee is stored with learning the more hee ought to humble himiselfe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 220. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The boughs that bear most, hang lowest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4430. (1732)

The vines

That bear such fruit are proud to stoop with it.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 517. (1856)

<sup>1</sup> Humility is often made the butt of folly.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 94. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr.

<sup>2</sup> Humility is the true cure for many a needless heartache.

ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. i, ch. 9. (1847)

<sup>3</sup> Humble things become the humble. (Parvum parva decent.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7, l. 44. (20 B.C.)

Humble hearts have humble desires.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum (1640)

<sup>4</sup> Humility is often only an artifice of pride, which abases itself in order to exalt itself. (L'humilité n'est souvent qu'un . . . artifice de l'orgueil qui s'abaisse pour s'élever.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 254. (1665)

It is not a Sign of Humility, to declaim against Pride

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2994. (1732) Declaiming against Pride is not always a sign of Humility.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749

Humility is made the cloak of pride.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, St. Gualberto, l. 14. (1799)

The Germans say, "Zu viel Demuth ist Hochmuth" (Too much humility is pride).

THE PRIDE THAT APES HUMILITY, see under PRIDE.

<sup>5</sup> Humility is the altar upon which God wishes us to offer him sacrifices. (L'humilité est l'autel sur lequel Dieu veut qu'on lui offre des sacrifices.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 537. (1665)

Nearest the throne itself must be

The footstool of humility.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Humility. (a. 1854)

Fairest and best adorned is she

Whose clothing is humility.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Humility. (a. 1854)

<sup>6</sup> Be very lowly of spirit, for man's expectation is but worms.

RABBI LEVITAS, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iv. 4. (c. A. D. 120) Oesterley, tr.

Only humility and submission can make a perfect man. (C'est la seule humilité et soumission qui peut effectuer un homme de bien.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

<sup>7</sup> The humility of hypocrites is, of all pride, the greatest and most haughty.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk, 416. (1569)

<sup>8</sup> She should be humble, who would please.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Chloe Jealous. St. 5. (c. 1709)

<sup>9</sup> Before honour is humility. (Gloriam praecedit humilitas.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 33. (c. 350 B.C.)

Repeated in xviii, 12.

Better is it to be of humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spoil with the proud. (Melius est humiliari cum mitibus, quam dividere spolia cum superbis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 19.

<sup>10</sup> If thou desire greatness, be humble; no other ladder is there by which to climb.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. iv, Apologue 3. (c. 1257)

Humility exalteth a man.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 20. (c. 1238)

<sup>11</sup> Humble thyself in all things. (Humilia te in omnibus.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 24. (c. 1420)

<sup>12</sup> That is true humility to have a meane esteeme of himselfe out of a true apprehension of Gods greatnesse.

WILLIAM WHATELY, Prototypes. Pt. i, ch. 9, p. 99. (c. 1630)

No more lessen or dissemble thy Merit, than overrate it: For tho' Humility be a Virtue, an affected one is none.

WILLIAM PENN, More Fruits of Solitude. No. 116. (c. 1695)

Humility is to make a right estimate of one's self.

C. H. SPURGEON, Gleanings: Humility. (c. 1875)

The higher a man is in grace, the lower he will be in his own esteem.

C. H. SPURGEON, Gleanings: The Right Estimate. (c. 1875)

HUMOR

See also Jesting

<sup>13</sup> Humor is wit with a rooster's tail feathers stuck in its cap.

JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Proverbial Philosophy. (1858)

Humor must fall out of a man's mouth like music out of a bobolink.

JOSH BILLINGS, Proverbial Philosophy.

Humor is gravity concealed behind the jest.

JOHN WEISS, Wit, Humor and Shakespeare. (1876)

<sup>14</sup> Guess his humor ain't refined

Quite enough to suit my mind.

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER, Jabed Meeker, Humorist. (c. 1909) Referring to Mark Twain

<sup>15</sup> Unconscious humour.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Life and Habit. (1877) Butler claims to have coined this phrase.

1
It is the ability to take a joke, not make one, which proves you have a sense of humor.

MAX EASTMAN, Enjoyment of Laughter, p. 36. (1936)

It is better in the long run to possess an abscess or a tumor

Than to possess a sense of humor.

OGDEN NASH, Don't Grin. (1938)

No more sense of humor than a rock has fleas.

RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum, p. 32. (1941)

2
Every Man in His Humour.

BEN JONSON. Title of play. (1598)

Every man has his humour.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 17. (1639)

3
Everything is funny as long as it is happening to somebody else.

WILL ROGERS, The Illiterate Digest, p. 131. (1924)

4
Now I am in a holiday humour.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 69. (1600)

I love not the humor of bread and cheese, and there's the humour of it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 140. (1601)

WIT AND HUMOR, see under WIT.

HUMP

5
The Governor [was] humpin' himself on politics.

W. T. PORTER, comp., The Big Bear of Arkansas, p. 126. (1835)

Go right ahead.—Every one of you hump it.

RUXTON, Life in the Far West. Ch. 9. (1848)

Git up and hump yourself.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 11. (1884)

Back to Broadway for yours, Ferdinand, and hump yourself.

G. H. LORIMER, Jack Spurlock. Ch. 5. (1908)

HUNGER

See also Famine, Fasting, Stomach

6
Hunger sweetens what is bitter.

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. xii, l. 188. (c. 550 B. C.)

The full soul loatheth an honeycomb; but to the hungry soul every bitter thing is sweet. (Anima esuriens etiam amarum pro dulci sumet.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

The forerunner of many similar proverbs.

"A good repast should begin with hunger";

"Hunger changes beans into almonds";

"Nothing comes amiss to a hungry man";

"The hungry ass eats any straw," and others cited below.

The hungry think any food sweet.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vii, pt. i, ch. 27. (c. 300 B. C.)

The dog in his hunger swallows dung.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. (c. 450)

All is food when one is besieged. (ἀπαντὰ τοῖς βρωτὰ τοῖς πολιορκουμένοις.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, iii, 8. (c. 950)

When a revenous cur finds meat, he cares nothing whether it is the camel of the Patriarch (Salih) or the ass of anti-Christ (Dajjal).

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apol. 19. (c. 1258)

Hungur makyth harde benys swete.

UNKNOWN, MS. Douce, 52. (c. 1350)

Hungre maketh hard bones softe. Dura licet faba denti sic salus escurienti.

HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 133. (c. 1530)

Hungry palats will feed on courser meat.

FULLER, The Holy State: Of Tombes. (1642)

Hunger makes hard bones sweet beans. . . .

Hunger makes raw beans relish well or taste of sugar.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 107. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2570. (1732)

Hunger gives even beans a relish. (Fabas indulcat fames.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 115. (1869)

Hungry dogges will eate dirty puddyns.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, and by

DEKKER, Old Fortunatus, ii, 2. Echoed by

SCOTT in The Antiquary, "The messenger

(one of those dogs who are not too scornful to eat dirty puddings) caught in his hand

the guinea which Hector chucked in his face."

Cited by DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 11

(1709), with the comment, "Hunger is so strong that it changes Dirt into a Dainty, and makes a delicacy out of a Dung-hill."

Mean cates are welcome still to hungry guests. (Ieiunus raro stomachus vulgaria temnit.)

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour: Prologue. (1599)

To hunger there is no bad bread. (À la faim il n'y a point de mauvais pain.)

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Fr.-Eng. (1659)

FRANKLIN, in Poor Richard's Almanack,

1733, condensed this to "Hunger never saw bad bread."

Hunger finds no Fault with the Cookery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2566. (1732)

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk,

ch. 5, has, "Hunger finds no fault with the cook." The Germans say, "Die Hunger ist der beste Koch" (Hunger is the best cook).

after the Latin proverb, "Fames est optimus coquus."

Hunger is not Dainty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2567.

Hungry Men think the Cook lazy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2574. (1732)

To the desert traveller all wells are sparkling.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 382. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

The hungry eat with a relish; the thirsty can drink anything.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. See

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 330. (1872)

A hungry man is glad to get boiled wheat. (Tu chi hao ch ih mai fan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 355. (1875)

- 1
Sixty pains attack the teeth of him who hears the sound of his neighbor [eating] but himself has nothing to eat.
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. (c. 450)
He who says, "What shall I eat with my bread?" is not hungry.
Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 100b
- 2
Hunger is a great leveler.
SPENCER BAYNE, Murder Recalls Van Kill, p. 168. (1939)
- 3
Ye know the common proverb . . . "Hunger is sharper than thorn."
THOMAS BECON, Catechism, p. 601. (c. 1560)
Hunger is sharper than the sword.
BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Honest Man's Fortune. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 1. (c. 1612)
Hunger, they say, is a sharp thorn, an begow it's true.
CUDWORTH, Dialect Sketches, p. 15. (1884)
- 4
People should be hungry with the eye and the ear, as well as with the mouth.
HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 36. (1887)
- 5
Hunger iz a slut hound on a fresh track.
JOSH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Encyclopedia of Wit and Wisdom (1874)
- 6
If any man hunger, let him eat at home. (εἰ τις πεινᾷ, ἐν οἴκῳ ἐσθιέτω.)
New Testament: 1 Corinthians, xi, 34. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Si quis esurit, domi manducet."
- 7
Hunger knows no friend.
DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1719)
- 8
The parent of all industries is hunger.
HENRY DRUMMOND, The Ascent of Man p. 251 (1894)
- 9
There's no arguing the case with Hunger: It is the Mother of Impatience, Anger, and Wrath
OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 216. (1709)
- 10
A hungry ass heeds not a blow (Asinus esuriens fustem negligit.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent vii, No. 48. (1523)
Hunger teaches many things. (πολλῶν ὁ λιμὸς γίγνεται διδάσκαλος.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, ii, 48. Quoting an old Greek proverb, with the Latin. "Multa docet fames."
- 11
Thair is nothing betuix a bursten body and a hungered.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 101. (c. 1595)
It's ill speaking between a fou man and a fasting.
WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Lett. 11. (1824)
Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 20 (1828)
- 12
Hunger makes dinners, pastime suppers.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 820. (1640)
- 13
One cannot hide from hunger.
GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 218. (1936)
- 14
Hunger on a handful is a cruel thing. (χαλεπὸς δ' ἐπὶ δράγματι λιμός.)
HESIOD (?) Fragments. Frag. 4. (c. 800 B. C.)
Loeb, p. 280.
- 15
Hunger droppeth euen out of bothe their noses.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
A wretched fellow; one out of whose nose hunger drops.
COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chiche-face. (1611)
She will in a short time make hunger dropp out at your nose.
JAMES HOWELL, Letters, ii, 666. (1659)
Come away, I say, hunger drops out at his nose.
CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 1. (1605)
- 16
Some saie, and I feele hunger perseth stone wall.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)
As the oulde saynge is, honger breketh stone walles.
WILLIAM SPELMAN, A Dialogue Between Two Travellers, p. 121. (c. 1595)
A murrain on all proverbs. They say hunger breaks through stone walls; but I am as gaunt as lean-ribbed famine, yet I can burst through no stone walls.
JOHN MARSTON, Antonio's Revenge Act v (1602)
Hunger breaks through stone walls.
CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1. (1605)
They said they were an-hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs,
That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must eat,
That meat was made for mouths.
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, i, 1, 209. (1607)
Hunger, they say, thro' stony walls will break
GEORGE COLMAN, The Rolliad. Canto i. (1759)
Hunger, by you know whom, 'tis said,
Will break through walls to get its bread.
WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of a Wife. Canto xxxiv, st. 53. (1821) The Dutch say, "Honger eet door steenen muuren" (Hunger eats through stone walls)
- 17
Hunger pinched their bellies. (ἐρεπε δὲ γαστέρο λιμός.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 369. (c. 850 B. C.)
Repeated in xii, 332, and elsewhere.
- 18
A hungry horse makes a clean manger.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 107. (1670)
The hungry horse cleans his manger. (Cheval affamé nettoie sa mangeoire.)
CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 385. (1856)
Hungry rooster don't cackle w'en he fine a wum
JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

1
Any of us would kill a cow rather than not have beef.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (1776) See BOSWELL, Life, v, 247.

2
Bid the hungry Greek go to heaven, he will go. (Graeculus esuriens in caelum, iusseris ibit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 78. (c. A. D. 120)
No nice extreme a true Italian knows;
But bid him go to hell, to hell he goes.

THOMAS PHILLIPS, Letter, to George III of England, reference to the trial of his sister, Queen Caroline of Denmark, for criminal intimacy with her favorite, Count Johann von Struensee. Struensee was executed and Caroline banished. Phillips was, of course, paraphrasing Juvenal

3
What comedy, what actor, is better than disappointed hunger? (Quae comoedia, mimus | quis melior plorante gula?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 157. (c. A. D. 120)

4
They that be slain with the sword are better than they that be slain with hunger. (Melius fuit occasis gladio, quam interfectis fame.)

Old Testament: Lamentations, iv, 9. (c. 600 B. C.)

5
Hunger waits only eight days, as the saying is.
ALEXANDER LEIGHTON, Tales of the Borders. Vol. iii, p. 239. (1837)

6
Accordynge to the prouerbe: He that goeth to bed supperlesse, lyeth in his bed restlesse.
WILLIAM PAINTER, The Pallace of Pleasure. iii, 215. (1567)

Who goeth to bed supperless, shal turne and tosse al night. (Chi va in letto senza cena, tutta la notte si dimena.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Who goes to bed supperless, all night tumbles and tosses.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 37. (1670)
I have heard you say a thousand times, "Who fasting goes to bed, uneasy lies his head."

J. M. RIGG, tr., The Decameron, i, 201. (1906)

7
I well perceiue that hunger forceth the woulf oute of hir denne.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Pallace of Pleasure, iii, 216. (1567)

Hunger drives wooves out of the wood. (La faim chasse le loup du bois.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Bois. (1611)

The Italians say, "La fame caccia il lupo del bosco"; the Dutch, "Honger drijft den wolf uit het bosch."

Hunger drives the wolf out of the forest.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 83. (1666)

Hunger, thou knowest, brings the wolf out of the wood.

SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. iv, p. 245. (1750)

Hunger drives the wolf from the woods. (La faim chasse le loup hors du bois.)

BALZAC, Eugénie Grandet. Ch. 3. (1833)

Hunger, proverbs say, allures the wolf from wood.
BROWNING, Fine at the Fair. Sec. 9, l. 1. (1872)

8
To keep hunger from the lips. (Famem a labris abigere.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 46. (c. A. D. 60)

TO KEEP THE WOLF FROM THE DOOR, see WOLF.

9
Even in fools, hunger sharpens the wits. (Etiam stultis acuit ingenium fames.)

PHAEDRUS (?), New Fables. Fab. 20. (c. 25 B. C.)

10
I suspect that hunger was my mother. (Famem ego fuisse suspicor matrem mihi.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 155. (c. 200 B. C.)

11
Eager for dinner. (ἐπιθυμῶν δειπνῶν.)

PLUTARCH, Symposium. Bk. viii, sec. 726A.

(c. A. D. 95) ATHENAEUS (i, 4A) has "Running to a feast" (τρέχει δειπνῶν). Another proverb for hunger was "Entertaining Hercules" (Ἡρακλῆς ξεπίζειται), which Suidas quotes in his Lexicon, vii, 58, a reference to Hercules' tremendous appetite.

12
Where hunger reigns, it drives out force. (Où faim regne, force exule.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 32. (1534)

Hunger governs the world. (La faim gouverne le monde.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. (c. 1810) See GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 294

13
Hunger and cold deliver a man up to his enemy.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 126. (1678)

The Japanese say, "Even Fuji is without beauty to one hungry and cold."

Under the furze is hunger and cold, under the broom is silver and gold.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 348.

14
A hungry man sees far.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 227. (1678)

A hungry Man smells Meat afar off.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 224. (1732)

An hungry Kite sees a dead Horse afar off.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 616.

15
Hungry I stand, with bread so near my path, Like one unwedded by the women's bath.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 36. (c. 1258)

O noisy drum, all emptiness within, How without food wilt thou thy march begin?

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19.

No bird would fall into the snare but for the tyranny of hunger; nay, except for hunger, the fowler would not set the snare.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Apologue 51.

It is better to die of repletion than to endure hunger.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Apologue 8.

16
Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 132. (1600)

1 Never go near a hungry man. (πεινᾶντι δὲ μὴδὲ ποτένθης.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 148. (c. 270 B. C.)
A hungry people listens not to reason. (Nec rationem patitur . . . populus esuriens.)

SENECA, De Brevitate Vitae. Ch. 18, sec. 5.
(C. A. D. 54) The Latin proverb is, "Fames bilem acuit" (Hunger sharpens anger).

A hungry man is an angry man.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)
The French say, "Vilain affamé demi enragé" (A hungry wretch is half mad).

If thou be hungry, I am angry; let us go fight.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 65. (1678)

Hunger is insolent and will be fed.

POPE, tr., Homer's Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 300. (1725)
I'm hungry.—And I'm angry; so let us both go fight.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Where there is Hunger, Law is not regarded; and where Law is not regarded, there will be Hunger.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

A hungry man is an angry man, and an empty stomach has no conscience.

HACKWOOD, Good Cheer, p. 345. (1911) Conversely, "When the stomach is full the heart is glad."

An empty stomach is not a good political adviser.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Cosmic Religion, p. 107.

Hunger does not breed reform; it breeds madness, and all the ugly distempers that make an ordered life impossible.

WOODROW WILSON, Address to Congress, 11 Nov., 1918.

2 Of all diseases, hunger is the worst.

UNKNOWN, The Dhammapada, xv. (c. 100)

II—Hunger: Proverbial Comparisons

3 As hungry as a church-mouse.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 189. (1670)

4 I came home . . . hungry as a hunter.

CHARLES LAMB, Letters, i, 162. (1800)

I am as hungry as a hunter.

MRS. HENRY WOOD, Trevlyn Hold, Ch. 19. (1864)

5 I am more hungry than any wolfe is.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. L1. (1540)

As hungry as a woofe.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Allouvi. (1611)

This ravening fellow has a wolf in his belly.

FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1620)

I have the hunger of a wolf.

LORD LYTON, What Will He Do with It? Bk. i, ch. 3. (1758)

6 He is so hungry he could eat a horse behind the saddle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1678)

I think he could eat a horse, as the Yorkshireman says, behind the saddle.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 20. (1826)

7 She's sick as a cushion; she wants nothing but stuffing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial i. (1738)

8 I and my men were as hungry as hawks.

JOHN TAYLOR, Christmas In and Out. (1652)

I made a hearty supper, for I was as hungry as a hawk.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 6. (1883)

9 I'm hungry as a hod-carrier.

LEE THAYER, Accessory After the Fact, p. 161. (1943)

10 Hungry as the grave.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 393. (1730)

11 As hongré as a glede [kite].

UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary. (c. 1555) In WRIGHT, Political Songs of England, 17.

III—Hunger Is the Best Sauce

12 That soucht nan othir salso thartill
Bot appetyt, that oft men takys.

[That sought no other sauce thereto

But appetite, that oft men seizes.]

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce, iii, 540. (c. 1375)

Of poynaunt sauce she neded never a deel.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 14. (c. 1387)

13 The best sauce for food is hunger, and for drink thirst. (Cibi condimentum esse famem, potionis sitim.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 28, sec. 90.

(c. 45 B. C.) Quoted as a saying of Socrates. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vii, 69, in the form, "Optimum condimentum fames," with the comment that it was frequently in the mouth of Socrates, deriding his voluptuous countrymen, who used a variety of provocatives to stir up appetite. Common to many languages. The French say, "Il n'y a sauce que d'appétit"; or "À bon appétit il ne faut point de sauce" (To a good appetite no sauce is necessary); the Italians, "La fame è il miglior intingolo," or "Appetito non vuol salsa" (Appetite needs no sauce); the Dutch, "Honger is de beste saus."

Socrates said, the best sauce in the world for meates, is to bee houngeie.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus, fo. 2. (1542)

Houngre & thirste is for all thynges the beste sauce in the worlde.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus, fo. 13.

Hunger is the best sauce.

RICHARD EDEN, tr., The Decades of the Newe Worlde, 62 marg. (1555) JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578) etc., etc.

There is a common prouerbe, that hunger is the best Cooke.

THOMAS VAUTROLLIER, Luther's Commentary upon Galatians, p. 163. (1577)

The best sauce in the world is hunger. (La mejor salsa del mundo es la hambre.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1615)

That "a sharp stomach is the best sauce," is a saying as true as it is common.

WILLIAM HONE, Table-Book, i, col. 277. (1727)
Hunger is the best pickle.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

<sup>1</sup> Hunger is sawce for an emperor.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p.11.(1709)

<sup>2</sup> Hunger is good kitchine meat.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 127 (1721), who explains, "Kitchin" is anything eaten with bread as a relish.

<sup>3</sup> Hunger needs no sauce and thirst turns water into wine.

ROBERT GREENE, Mourning Garment. (1590)

<sup>4</sup> Then Ladie Lelia said, I never felt anie sweeter and better sawce for meate then honger.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iv, 136. (1574)

<sup>5</sup> Earn your sauce by sweating. (Tu pulmentaria quare sudando.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. ii, l. 20. (30 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> Hunger is the cheapest sawce, and nature the cheapest guest.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from the Lower End of the Table. (1613)

<sup>7</sup> Use hunger as a sauce. (ἡμῶ δὲ δσαπερ ὄψω διαχρήσθε.)

XENOPHON, Cyropaedia. Bk. i, ch. 5, sec. 12. (c. 370 B.C.)

Hunger is sauce; no dishes please the gorged. (Condit fercla fames, plenis insuavia cuncta.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 39. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p.626.

Make hunger thy sauce as a medicine for health.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Good Husbandrie Lessons. (1573)

<sup>8</sup> Flesh once a Day, . . . without other Sawce than Hunger, is best.

JOHN LOCKE, Some Thoughts Concerning Education. Sec. 13. (1693)

Hunger sauceth every meate.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, p.73.(1579)

Saith Saint Basil, "Fasting . . . sauceth best the use of meats."

JOSIAS SHUTE, Sarah and Hagar (1649), p. 136. (1641)

HUNTING

See also Chase, Sport

<sup>9</sup> Tom was a mighty hunter before the Lord.

H. C. BRANSON, I'll Eat You Last, p. 7. (1941)
See also NIMROD.

<sup>10</sup> The world is made up of two classes—the hunters and the hunted.

RICHARD CONNELL, Variety: The Most Dangerous Game. (1924)

HURRY

<sup>11</sup> Hunting has as much Pain as Pleasure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2576.(1732)

<sup>12</sup> Close huntyng (quoth I) the good hunter alowth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

<sup>13</sup> The hare, the partridge and the fox must be preserved first, in order that they may be killed afterwards.

JOHN LUBBOCK, Pleasures of Life. Ch. 9. (1887)
The Prince . . . is a mighty hunter. I wonder why Englishmen always want to kill something.

H. S. MERRIMAN, The Sowers. Ch. 21. (1896)
What shall we go out and kill? (The after-breakfast inquiry.) An Englishman's idea of happiness is to find something he can kill and to hunt it.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, i, 19. (1902)

<sup>14</sup> There commeth greater delyght in the hunting, then in the eating.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 394. (1580)

<sup>15</sup> The hunter follows what flees him; taken, he leaves them; and ever he seeks what is beyond what he has found. (Venator sequitur fugientia, capta relinquit; | semper et inventis ulteriora petit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 9, l. 9. (c. 13 B.C.)
ALL ARE NOT HUNTERS WHO BLOW A HORN, see under APPEARANCE.

HURRY

See also Haste

<sup>16</sup> Without hurrying, the runner reaches his goal.
ANI, Teaching. No. 48. (c. 2000 B.C.) Budge, tr.

<sup>17</sup> Dilly-dally brings night as soon as Hurry-Scurry.

MRS. CHAMBERLAIN, A Glossary of West Worcestershire Words, p. 39. (1882)

<sup>18</sup> Let no one see you in a hurry. (ἐν ὁδῷ μὴ σπεύδειν.)

CHILON, Maxim. (c. 560 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Bk. i, sec. 70.

Do not be in a hurry.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk.xiii, ch.17.(c.500 B.C.)
Do not live in a hurry. (No vivir apriesa.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 174. (1647)

Nothing so vulgar as to be in a hurry.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6. (1860)

<sup>19</sup> Whoever is in a hurry, shows that the thing he is about is too big for him. Haste and hurry are very different things.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 Aug., 1749.

A man of sense may be in haste, but can never be in a hurry, because he knows that whatever he does in a hurry, he must necessarily do very ill.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 28 Aug., 1751.

Though I am always in haste, I am never in a hurry.

JOHN WESLEY, Letter, 10 Dec., 1777.

1 Hurry is the failing of fools. (Es pasión de necios la prisa.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 53. (1647)

Let us leave hurry to slaves.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Manners. (1844)

2 Hurrying does not accomplish anything.

GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 232. (1936)

3 What boots the calm of this whole shop
If my inside is going pop? (Quid prodest totius regionis silentium, si adfectus fremunt?)

SENECA, Epistles. (a. A. D. 64) Webster, tr.

He sows hurry and reaps indigestion.

R. L. STEVENSON, An Apology for Idlers. (1881)

4 Nothing can be more useful to a man than a determination not to be hurried.

H. D. THOREAU, as quoted by BROOKS, The Opinions of Oliver Allston, p. 51. (c. 1850)

He who is hurried cannot walk gracefully. (Mang hsing wu hao pu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 115. (1875)

Hurried men lack wisdom.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 565. (1937)

It is better to get wet than to hurry.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 365. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

HUSBAND

5 'Tis a cruel thing for women to be deprived of a husband. (ἀλγος γυναῖξιν ἀνδρὸς εἶργεσθαι.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 920. (458 B. C.)
Marriage-beds are filled with tears through longing for husbands. (λέκτρα δ' ἀνδρῶν πόθῳ | πῖμπλᾶται δακρύμασιν.)

AESCHYLUS, Persians, l. 133. (472 B. C.)

6 In taking a husband, a woman prefers a poor youth to a rich old man.

SIMEON ASHKENAZI (?), Yalkut: Ruth. (c. 1250)
Jesu Crist us sende

Housbondes meke, yonge, and fresshe a-bedde.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 402. (c. 1388)

7 The lame man makes the best husband. (ἀριστὰ χωλὸς οἰφεῖ.)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. Bk. xiii, sec. 568E. (c. A. D. 200) An English proverb says, "A reformed rake makes the best husband."

8 I do not want a shoe larger than my foot.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 49a. (c. 450) I do not want a husband from a rank higher than my own, on the principle, "Marry above you and you get a master."

In taking a husbände, no heede can be too wary, no choyce too chary.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 176. (1576)

9 Until the hours of absence should run through,
And truant husband should return, and say,
"My dear, I was the first who came away."

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 141. (1818)

10 We wedded men live in sorrow and care.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Marchantes Tale: Prologue, l. 17. (c. 1386)

11 She's been thinking of the old 'un.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 3. (1849)

12 He is an ill husband that is not missed.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 2. (1633)

She that hath an ill Husband, shews it in her Dress.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4139. (1732)
Another proverb says, "A bad husband cannot be a good man."

13 The better workman, the worse husband.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 62. (1633)

Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 158, who adds, "It is an observation generally true (the more the pity)."

14 Feed the brute!

GEORGE DU MAURIER. His famous prescription for keeping a husband's love. In Punch, vol. lxxxix, p. 206. (1886)

15 God give me a rich Husband, tho' he be an Ass.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1670. (1732)
Husband, don't believe what you see, but what I tell you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2577.

16 If the husband be not at home, there is no body.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1014. (1640)
When the good man is from home, the good wife's table is soon spread.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 61. (1678)
When the good man's away the board cloth is tint [lost].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 352. (1721)
When the good Man is abroad, the good Woman's Table is soon spread.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5587. (1732)

17 Already, with unblushing face, Lalage seeks for a husband. (Iam proterva | fronte petet Lalage maritum.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 5, l. 15. (23 B. C.)
Often a husband is sought for at a husband's funeral. (Funere saepe viri vir quaeritur.)

OID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 431. (c. 1 B. C.)
It is proper that a man seek a wife, but it is not proper than a woman seek a husband.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 2b. (c. 450)
A husband's loss never goes without sighs:

The widow makes a lot of noise—then consoles herself.

(La perte d'un époux ne va point sans soupirs: On fait beaucoup de bruit, et puis on se console.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 21. (1667)

What creatures widows are in weeping for their husbands and then presently leaving off.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 17 Oct., 1667.

Sorrow for a Husband, is like a Pain in the Elbow, sharp and short.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4231. (1732)

1 Take heed, Camilla, that seeking all the Wood for a straight stick, you choose not at the last a crooked staff.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England. (1580)

You fasted long, and worried on a fly.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 385. (1721)

"Spoken to them who having refused many good matches at last marry unworthily."

The Scots also say, "She wad na hae the walkers, and the riders gaed by."

2 Think not, the husband gain'd, that all is done; The prize of happiness must still be won: And, oft, the careless find it to their cost, The lover in the husband may be lost.

GEORGE LYTTELTON, Advice to a Lady. (a.1773)

A husband is a man who two minutes after his head touches the pillow is snoring like an overloaded omnibus.

OGDEN NASH, The Trouble with Women Is Men. (1942)

3 Shameless Chloe inscribed the monuments of her seven husbands with "Chloe wrought this." (Se fecisse Chloe.) What could be plainer?

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, No. 15. (A. D. 93)
"Chloe fecit" was intended to mean "Chloe built this tomb."

4 Her husband the relater she preferr'd Before the angel.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 52. (1667)

A woman never forgets her sex. She would rather talk with a man than an angel, any day.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 4. (1872)

5 What does a husband matter? He is an incident all married women should forget.

PHILIP MOELLER, Madame Sand. Act i. (1917)

6 A husband's a plaster which cures all girlish ills. (Un mari est un emplâtre qui garit tous les maux des filles.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 39. (1666)

A husband ofttimes makes the best physician, says the proverb.

R. H. BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: The Lady Rhodesia. (1840)

A husband, even though a fool, Teaches far more than any boarding-school.

ELLEN T. FOWLER, Fuel of Fire. Ch. 4. Chapter heading. (1901)

7 If there were no husbands, who would look after our mistresses?

GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man. Ch. 10. (1888)

8 There hath bene never any one husband so good, but there may bee others found as good.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 83. (1576)

9 Why is it that, when men who have wives at home are returning either from the country or from abroad, they send ahead to tell their wives that they are coming? Is it because this is the mark of a man who is confident that his wife is not up to any mischief?

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Roman Questions. Sec. 266B. (A. D. 96)

The husband who desires to surprise is often very much surprised himself. (Mari qui veut surprendre est souvent fort surpris.)

VOLTAIRE, La Femme Qui a Raison. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1750)

If he [the husband] takes a chance and returns home suddenly, he is the master, but it is imprudent and in bad taste, for he exposes himself to unhappy surprises.

(Si, par mégarde, Il se hazarde,

A rentrer chez lui tout à coup,

Il est le maître, Mais c'est peut-être

Imprudent et de mauvais goût;

Car il s'expose À . . . triste chose!)

HENRY MEILHAC AND LUDOVIC HALÉVY, La Belle Hélène. Act ii. (1864)

10 Be a good husband, and you will soon get a penny to spend, a penny to lend, and a penny for a friend.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1813)

11 Dress to meet your parents, undress to meet your husband. (Ch'uan i chien fu mu, t'o i chien chang fu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2237. (1875)

12 Benedick the married man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, i, 1, 270. (1598)

Hero: My heart is exceedingly heavy.

Margaret: 'Twill be heavier soon by the weight of a man.

Hero: Fie upon thee! art not ashamed?

Margaret: Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? . . . Is there any harm in "the heavier for a husband"?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 4, 26. (1598)

13 Ellie: Why do women always want other women's husbands?

Shotover: Why do horse-thieves prefer a horse that is broken to one that is wild?

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

14 You'll have a sad husband, you have such good luck at cards.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

15 He [the husband] alone is ignorant of everything. (Ille solus nescit omnia.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 548. (160 B.C.)

The head of the house is the last to know of its dishonor. (Dedecus ille domus sciet ultimus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 342. (c. A. D. 120)
The goodman's the last to know what's amiss at home.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 52. (1670)
The good Man of the House is the last that knows what's done at Home.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4558. (1732)
It's the old gag. The husband's the last one to know.

LESLIE FORD, The Murder of a Fifth Columnist, p. 102. (1941)

II—Husband: The Henpecked Husband

See also Wife: The Crowing Hen

1 God gif ye war Johne Thomsounis man.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Poems, lxii, 4. (c. 1500)
Some will allege he was Iohn Thomsons man.

ROBERT MONRO, His Expedition with the Worthy Scots Regiment, ii, 30. (1637)
So the imperious Roxalan.

Made the Great Turk John Thomson's man.

SAMUEL COLVILLE, Whiggs Supplication, i, 18. (1681)

Better be John Tomson's man, than Ring and Dinn's, or John Knox's. John Tomson's man is he that is complaisant to his wife's humours, Ring and Dinn's is he whom his wife scolds, John Knox's is he whom his wife beats.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (1721)
D'ye think I am to be John Tamson's man, and maistered by women a' the days o' my life?

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 38. (1816)

2 Euermore like a hog hangeth the groyne
On her husbände, except he be her slaue.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)
Had you some husbände, and snapte at him thus,
Iwys he would geue you a recumbentibus

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

3 He rides with a sark [chemise] tail in his teeth.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 154. (1721)

"Spoken when a new married man has been abroad, and makes haste home."

4 He lives under the sign of the cat's foot. He is hen-peckt, his wife scratches him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1678)

The Germans say, "Unter dem Pantoffel sein" (To be under the slipper).

III—Husband and Wife

5 It is your fate to be my wife, mine to be your husband. (σοι μὲν γαμείσθαι μόρσιμον, γαμῆν δ' ἐμολ.)

AESCHYLUS, Amynone. Frag. 4, Smyth. (c. 458 B. C.)

6 Even if the husband is small as an ant, his wife will seat herself among the nobles of the land.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, 118b. (c. 450)

Though the husband be a flax-beater, his wife will call him to the threshold and sit with him.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, 118b; Kethuboth, 75a.

7 The wife who tricks her husband wrecks the home. (Naufragium rerum est mulier male fida marito.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 6. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

If a husband is unfaithful, it is like spitting from the house into the street; but if a wife is unfaithful, it is like spitting from the street into the house.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 382. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

8 But wedded men ne knowe no mesure,
Whan that they finde a pacient creature.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerkes Tale, l. 566. (c. 1388)

Husbändes are in heauen whose wiues scold not.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Husbands are in heaven whose wives chide not.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2579 (1732)

9 If a man stay away from his wife for seven years, the law presumes the separation to have killed him; yet, according to our daily experience, it might well prolong his life.

C. J. DARLING, Scintillae Juris. (1877)

10 If wives will have rain, down then it drives.
The calmest husbands make the stormiest wives.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Act v. sc. 1. (1602)

The husband was reminded of his lordly authority when he only looked into his trencher [in the time of Elizabeth], one of its learned aphorisms having descended to us,—“The calmest husbands make the stormiest wives.”

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature, iii, 39. (1791)

11 A man leaveth his own father that brought him up, and his own country, and cleaveth unto his wife.

Apocrypha: I Esdras, iv, 20. (c. A. D. 90)

12 Wives are their husbands', not their children's friends. (γυναῖκες ἀνδρῶν, οὐ παίδων φίλαι.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 266. (c. 413 B. C.)

13 The wife should yield in all things to her lord. (γυναῖκα γὰρ ᾗ ᾗ πάντα συγχωρεῖν πόσει.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 1052. (c. 413 B. C.)

Wives, submit yourselves unto your husbands. Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them. (αἱ γυναῖκες, ὑποτάσσεσθε τοῖς ἀνδράσιν. . . . οἱ ἄνδρες, ἀγαπάτε τὰς γυναῖκας καὶ μὴ πικραίνεσθε πρὸς αὐτάς.)

New Testament: Colossians, iii, 18, 19. (c. A. D. 59) The Vulgate is, “Mulieres subditae estote viris. . . . Viri diligite uxores vestras, et nolite amari esse ad illas.” Repeated with variations in Ephesians, v, 22–25.

Ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands.
(ὁμοίως γυναικες ὑποτασσόμεναι τοῖς ἰδίοις ἀνδράσιν.)

New Testament: 1 Peter, iii, 1. (c. A. D. 63)
The Vulgate is, "Mulieres subditae sint viris suis."

Serve your husband as your master, and beware of him as a traitor. (Sers ton mari comme ton maître, Et t'en garde comme d'un traître.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch.5. (1595) Quoted.
In less than law, her master;
In more than name, her friend.

ORPHEUS C. KEER (R. H. NEWELL), The Perfect Husband. (1864)

1
Seldom doth the Husbande thryve withoute the leve of his wyfe.

JOHN FITZHERBERT, The Boke of Husbandry.
Sec. 142. (1523)

2
When the Husband is Fire, and the Wife Tow,
the Devil easily sets all in a Flame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5594. (1732)

3
The greatest parte of the faultes committed by the wives, take their beginning of the fault of the husbandes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 22. (1574) Pettie, tr.

They verifie the Proverbe, when their husbande goeth aboute to make earth of them, they goe aboute to make fleshe without him.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 26.

Remembering the saying, That a man muste neyther chyd nor play with his wife in the presence of others: for that the one bewrayeth her imperfections, the other his owne follye.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 27.

4
The wisdome, valour, and authoritie of the husband, serveth as a buckler to defende the honour of the wife.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii,
p. 29. (1574)

I'll buckler thee against a million.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 241. (1594)

5
In the husband wisdom, in the wife gentleness.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 660. (1640)

6
A good wyfe makth a good husbande (they saie).

That (quoth I) ye maie tourne an other waie.
To make a good husbande, make a good wyfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)
As thou framest thy manners, so wil thy wife fit hers. . . . Husbands that are chaste and godly, cause also their wiues to imitate their goodnesse.

JOHN LYLY, Euphus and His England (Arber), p. 472. (1580)

Who doth desire that chaste his wife should be,
First be he true, for truth doth truth deserve.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii. (a. 1586)

A good Jack maketh a good Gill.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 317

(1605) Cited by RAY, English Proverbs, p. 108 (1670), with the comment, "Inferiors imitate the manners of superiors, wives of their husbands."

For the old saying is, a good husband makes a good wife.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. 4, subs. 1. (1621)

What may not a wise woman bring a bad husband to in time? The good Gill may mend the bad Jack.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, History of Moderation,
p. 15. (1669)

A good Husband makes a good Wife at any time.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Inconstant. Act ii, sc. 1. (1702)

Good wives and good plantations are made by good husbands.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

One good Husband is worth two good Wives, for the scarcer things are the more they're valued

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742

We tell the ladies that good wives make good husbands.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (1759) BOSWELL (Hill), i, 324.

As the husband is, the wife is.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 47. (1842)

7
There is only one thing for a man to do who is married to a woman who enjoys spending money, and that is to enjoy earning it.

E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)

A man should be taller, older, heavier, uglier and hoarser than his wife.

E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings.

8
When the good wife drinketh to the husband all is well in the house.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)
When the husband drinks to the wife, all would be well; when the wife drinks to the husband, all is well.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53. (1670)

9
There are few wives so perfect that they prevent a husband repenting [having married them], at least once a day. (Il y a peu de femmes si parfaites qu'elles empêchent un mari de se repentir, du moins une fois le jour.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Femmes (1688)

10
The wife always by quietude conquers her husband. ('Pin chang 'i ching sheng 'mu.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue)

Sec. 61. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.

The virtuous wife rules her husband by obeying him. (Casta ad virum matrona parendo imperat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 108. (c. 43 B. C.)

She commandeth her Husband . . . by constant obeying him.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Wife. (1642)

An obedient Wife commands her Husband.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 640. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> In mariage, as market folkes tel me, the husband should haue two eies, and the wife but one.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 284. (1580)

Thou must be a glasse to thy wife, for in thy face must shee see hir owne.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 473.

<sup>2</sup> There's no such cosy combination as is Man and Wife. (ἐὰν σκοπῇ τις, ὡς ἀνὴρ τε καὶ γυνή.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 647K. (c.300 B. C.) Man and wife make one fool.

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act i. (1614) Valentine: The two greatest monsters in the world are a man and a woman.

Sir Sampson Legend: Why my opinion is that those two monsters, joined together, make yet a greater, that's a man and his wife.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act iv, sc. 10. (1695) Composed that monstrous animal, a husband and wife.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xv, ch. 9. (1749) That moral centaur, man and wife.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 158. (1818)

Most men and women are merely one couple more.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

Husband and wife come to look alike at last.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 7. (1860)

<sup>3</sup> A wife should live pleasantly with her husband and not be cross all the time because she is virtuous. (ἡδέως συνοικῇ καὶ μὴ ὀργιζομένη ὅτι σωφρονεῖ.)

METRODORUS (c. 168 B. C.), as quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 142A, 753C.

Believe me, there is nothing like having a husband at night beside you, were it for nothing save the pleasure of having one who salutes you with a God protect you! when you sneeze. (Enfin il n'est rien tel, Madame, croyez-moi, Que d'avoir un mari la nuit auprès de soi; Ne fût-ce que pour l'heur d'avoir qui vous salue D'un Dieu vous soit en aide! alors qu'on éternue.)

MOLIÈRE, Sganarelle. Sc. 2. (1660)

<sup>4</sup> 'Tis the established custom [in Vienna] for every lady to have two husbands, one that bears the name and another that performs the duties.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to Lady Rich, 20 Sept., 1716.

<sup>5</sup> The concern that some women show at the absence of their husbands, does not arise from their not seeing them and being with them, but from their apprehension that their husbands are enjoying pleasures in which they do not participate, and which, from their being at a distance, they have not the power of interrupting.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. (1588) As quoted by BLAND, Proverbs, ii, 133.

In our age, women commonly reserve the manifestation of their affection towards their husbands until they have lost them.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. (1588) As quoted by BLAND, Proverbs, ii, 158.

<sup>6</sup> The cunning wife makes her husband her apron.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 29. (1670)

<sup>7</sup> The Lord maketh a man, but the wife maketh an husband.

HELEN ROWLAND, Sayings of Mrs. Solomon, p. 20. (1913)

The happiest wife is not she that getteth the best husband, but she that maketh the best of that which she getteth.

HELEN ROWLAND, Sayings of Mrs. Solomon, p. 21.

<sup>8</sup> The husband sings and the wife accompanies. (Fu ch'ang fu sui.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2209. (1875) Conjugal felicity.

<sup>9</sup> It is their husbands' faults If wives do fall. SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 3, 87. (1605)

The wife seldom rambles till the husband shews her the way.

JOHN VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Wife. Act v, sc. 4. (1697)

Each husband gets the infidelity he deserves.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 19. (1942) The Italians say, "Se la moglie pecca, non è il marito innocente" (If the wife sins, the husband is not innocent).

<sup>10</sup> Wedded persons may thus passe ouer theyr lyues quietly . . . yf the husbände become deafe, and the wyfe blynde.

RICHARD TAVERNER, The Garden of Wysdom. Pt. ii, fo. 4. (1539)

Then marriage may be said to be past in all quietnesse, when the wife is blind, and the husband deafe.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Dialogues. (1637)

A husband must be deaf and the wife blind to have quietness.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 144. (1666)

Happy is the deaf Man, that has a scolding Wife. OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 231. (1709)

The husband must not see, and the wife must be blind.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 338. (1710)

A deaf husband and a blind wife are always a happy couple.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 484. (1940)

<sup>11</sup> A woman going in to her husband should put off her shame with her clothes, and on leaving him should put it on again with them. (τῇ δὲ πρὸς τὸν ἴδιον ἀνδρα μελλούσῃ πορεύεσθαι παρῆναι ἅμα τοῖς ἐνδύμασι καὶ τὴν αἰσχύνην ἀποτίθεσθαι.)

THEANO, wife of Pythagoras, advising a bride.

(c. 525 B. C.) It was also Theano who, when asked how many days it was before a woman became pure after intercourse, replied, "With her own husband at once, with another man never." See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras, viii, 43. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, i, 20. Be Lucretia through the day, if it pleases you; Lais I wish for at night. (Lucretia toto | sis licet usque die; Laida nocte volo.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, No. 104. (A. D. 93)
To his wife.

A good wife is a perfect lady in the living room, a good cook in the kitchen, and a harlot in the bed room.

RICHARD SALE, Passing Strange, p. 221. (1942)

1
Nor put to thy hand betwixt bark and tree, least through thy owne follie so pinched thou be.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie. Ch. 10. (1573) Between husband and wife.

Put not your hand between the rind and the tree.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595)

Being so audacious as to go betweene barke and tree, breeding suspicions . . . between man and wife.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian, sig. Cc1. (1642)

Between the tree and your finger never put the bark. (Entre l'arbre et le doigt il ne faut point mettre l'écorce.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act i, sc. 2. (1666) Referred to as a saying of Cicero.

It is ill meddling between the bark and the rind. It is a troublesome and thankless office to concern ourselves in the jars, and outfalls of near relations, as man and wife, parents and children.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 200. (1721)
Put not the hand between the bark and the tree.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 118. (1678)

Is it for me to stir up strife between them, and put as 'twere my finger betwixt the bark and tree?

WALTER SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 4. (1820)

2
It is well within the order of things
That man should listen when his mate sings;
But the true male never yet walked
Who liked to listen when his mate talked.

ANNA WICKHAM, Contemplative Quarry: The Affinity. (1920)

3
One can always recognize women who trust their husbands. They look so thoroughly unhappy.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii. (1892)

It is most dangerous nowadays for a husband to pay any attention to his wife in public. It always makes people think that he beats her when they are alone.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii. A husband is a sort of promissory note—a woman is tired of meeting him.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act ii. (1893)

HYPOCRISY

See also Cunning, Deceit, Dissimulation, Pretence, Treachery

4
If I did that what a row you would raise.
(ei ἐγὼ ταῦτα ἐποίουν ὅσος ἂν ἦν ὀρύπος.)

AESOP, Fables: The Wolf and the Shepherds. (c. 570 B. C.) When the wolf peered in at the door and saw the shepherds eating a sheep, he made the above remark. From this proverb, "A wolf's saying" (λύκου ῥήματα), of men who condemn in others what they practice themselves.

5
Though the Governor may have the appearance of a nobleman, he may also resemble the sacred crocodiles [in] rapacity and cruelty.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xxiii, l. 19. (c. 700 B. C.) Budge, tr.

Those too I hate who profess purity, though in secret reckless sinners.
(μισῶ δὲ καὶ τὰς σώφρονας μὲν ἐν λόγοις, λάθρα δὲ τόλμας οὐ καλὰς κερκτημένας.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 413. (c. 428 B. C.)

Inwardly base, but with an outward appearance of virtue. (Introrsum turpem, speciosum pelle decora.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 45. (20 B. C.)

They pretend they are priests and live like Bacchanals. (Curios simulant et Bacchanalia vivunt.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 3. (c. A. D. 120)
What difference does it make if you conceal your face under a Gallic cowl when you steal out at night for adultery? (Quo, si nocturnus adulter tempora Santonico velas adopena cucullo?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 144. (c. A. D. 120)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 56.

With-uten feire and frakel with-innen.

UNKNOWN, Old English Homilies, i, 25. (c. 1200)
Mony appel is bryht with-vte
And bitter with-inne.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred (Skeat). 30 (c. 1275) See also under AFFE.

Outward they are gilded, so that it dazzles; but all lead within. (Di fuor dorate son sì ch' egli abbaglia, | ma dentro tutte piombo.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxiii, l. 64. (c. 1300)

Such sayntes in shewe are Satans in deede.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 157. (1576)
A bad man is worse when he pretends to be a saint. (Malus ubi bonus se simulat, tunc est pessimus.)

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. (c. 1597)

As spotted as the Ermine, whose smooth skin. Though it be fair without, is foule within.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Omphale, l. 277. (1621)
Fair without but foul within.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 10. (1633)

The crosse in his breast and the deuill in his actions.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 97.

They set the sign of the cross over their outer doors, and sacrifice to their gut and their groin in their inner closets.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Impostura. (1636)

The beads in the hand, and the Devil in Capuch.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1080. (1640)

The capuch is the cowl of a monk's cloak.

Beads about his neck and the devil in his body.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 15. (1659)

A sheep without, a wolf within.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1232. (1663)

One face to God, and another to the Devil.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 152. (1721)

A fair Face, and a foul Heart.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 88. (1732)

Beads about the Neck, and the Devil in the heart.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 944. (1732)

The Cross on the Breast, and the Devil in the Heart.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4462. (1732)

To have the rosary in the hands and the devil in the soul. (Tener rosario en las manos, y el diablo en el alma.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 278. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

Outside a sheep's skin, inside a wolf's heart. (Wai p'i yang p'i, nei ts'ang lang hsin.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1366. (1875)

He hailed the power of Jesus' name

An' soaked 'em twelve per cent.

DOUGLAS MALLOCK, Behind a Spire. (1930)

I know not how to play the fox, nor to call myself the friend of both parties. (οὐκ ἔστιν ἀλωπεκίζειν, | οὐδ' ἀμφοτέροισι γίγνεσθαι φίλον.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 1241. (422 B. C.)

Though your brow be smooth, you nourish a crafty fox in that hollow heart of yours. (Fronte politus | astutam vapido servas in pectore volpem.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 116. (c. A. D. 58)

If you want to see black-hearted people, look among those who never miss their prayers

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xlii. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

To bare the face and veil the heart. (Frontes aperit hominum, mentes tegit.)

CICERO, Pro Plancio. Ch. vi, sec. 16. (54 B. C.)

Quoted by AUSONIUS, Epistles, ii, referring to life at court.

It is ill to put a blithe face on a black heart.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 216. (1721)

Mr. Podsnap settled that whatever he put behind him he put out of existence. . . . Mr. Podsnap had even acquired a peculiar flourish of his right arm in often clearing the world of its most difficult problems, by sweeping them behind him.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1865) Hence "Podsnappery."

He can say, My jo, and think it not.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 54. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 144, with the comment, "That is, he can pretend kindness, where he has none."

He beareth fire in one hand, and water in the other. (Lui porta fuoco in vna mano, & aqua in l'altra.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

An hypocrite, who as the Poet saith, covereth his conceits with a contrarie cloake.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 30. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A hypocrite is in himself both the archer and the mark, in all actions shooting at his own praise or profit.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane States: The Hypocrite. (1642)

Hypocrites are likened to bull-rushes, which are green and smooth.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentary: Genesis, xxxi, 27 (1643)

There is an hypocrisy in vice as well as religion.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 27. (1843)

The only vice that cannot be forgiven is hypocrisy. The repentance of a hypocrite is itself hypocrisy.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 256. (c. 1821)

In life you loved me not, in death you bewail me.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 220. (1640)

Recompensing former loytryng lyfe loose, As dyd the pure penitent that stale a goose And stack downe a fether.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

The Friar preached against stealing, and had a goose in his sleeve.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 739.

(1640) The Spaniards say, "Hurtar el puerco, y dar los pies por Dios" (To steal the pig and give the feet to God); the Italians, "Rubar il porco, e darne i piedi per l'amor die Dio" (To steal the pig, and give away the feet for the love of God).

The joy of a hypocrite [is] but for a moment. (Gaudium hypocritae ad instar puncti.)

Old Testament: Job, xx, 5. (c. 350 B. C.)

No man is a hypocrite in his pleasures.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1783.

Spread yourself upon his bosom publicly, whose heart you would eat in private.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour. Act iii, sc. 4. (1599)

Who could endure the Gracchi railing at sedition? (Quis tulerit Gracchos de seditione querentes?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 24. (c. A. D. 120)

That is: Who could listen to a man denouncing things which he does shamelessly himself?

He never used his arms against the stream, nor uttered the unfettered thoughts of his mind, nor devoted his life to the cause of truth.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 89.

While commending beans, I am at heart a glutton. (Laudem siliquas occultas ganeo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 58.

<sup>1</sup> Hypocrisy is a homage which vice pays to virtue. (L'hypocrisie est un hommage que le vice rend à la vertu.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 218. (1665)

Hypocrisy is a Sort of Homage, that Vice pays to Virtue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2580. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> They hide what goes on in their lives behind the scenes. (Vitae poscaenia celant.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 1186. (c. 45 B. C.)

I hope you have not been leading a double life, pretending to be wicked, and being really good all the time. That would be hypocrisy.

OSCAR WILDE, The Importance of Being Earnest. Act ii. (1895)

<sup>3</sup> He passed by on the other side. (ἰδὼν αὐτὸν ἀντιπαρῆλθεν.)

New Testament: Luke, x, 31. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Viso illo praeterivit."

<sup>4</sup> Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. (οὐαὶ ὑμῖν, γραμματεῖς καὶ Φαρισαῖοι ὑποκριταί, ὅτι παρομοιάζετε τάφοις κεκοσμημένοις.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 27. (c. A. D. 50) The Vulgate is, "Vae vobis Scribae et Phariseae hypocritae: quia similes estis sepulchris dealbatis." Christ is paraphrasing an old Greek proverb, τοῖχος κεκοσμημένος (a whitened wall), cited by Erasmus. There are many Greek proverbial phrases for pretence or hypocrisy: λαγῶς καθεύδων (a sleeping hare); ὑπόχαλκον χρυσίον (bronzed gold); εὐνοῦς δ σφάκτης (a soft-hearted murderer).

Publicans and sinners on the one side; Scribes and Pharisees on the other.

WILLIAM CHILLINGWORTH, Sermon. (a. 1644)

<sup>5</sup> Hypocrisy is an abominable vice.—'Tis indeed, to be a Pharisee, and carry two faces in a hood, as the saying is.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act iv, sc. 1. (1668) See under FACE.

<sup>6</sup> I hate a bad man saying what is good. (μισῶ πονηρὸν, χρηστὸν θῶαν εἶπη λόγον.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 767. Kock. (c. 300 B. C.)

Aping the words of goodness is the greater wickedness. (Bonitatis verba imitari maior malitia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 74. (c. 43 B. C.)

When the villain pretends to be good, he is most the villain. (Malus bonum ubi se simulat tunc est pessimus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 358.

An ill Man is worst, when he appeareth good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 626. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> Chang: Confucius said, "Your good careful people of the villages are the thieves of virtue." What sort of people were they who could be so silly?

Mencius: Eunuch-like, flattering their generation—such are your good careful men of the villages.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vii, pt. ii, ch. 37, sec. 8-12. (c. 300 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Hypocrites are in the lowest reach of the fire.

MOHAMMED, Koran, iv, 144. (c. 622) Bell, tr.

St. Augustine is credited with the saying, "Multi adorantur in ara cremantur in igne" (Many are worshipped at the altar who are burning in fire).

<sup>9</sup> Act as if I did not know it. (Faites comme si je ne le savois pas.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 19. (1670) The teacher of philosophy has remarked that of course M. Jourdain knows Latin, and the latter answers, "Of course; but explain it just as if I didn't."

<sup>10</sup> He is an extremely hypocritical man; a Greek of the lower empire.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, referring to Alexander I of Russia. See O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile, 5 Dec., 1816.

He has the smartness of an attorney's clerk, and the intrigues of a Greek of the lower empire.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, referring to Lord Palmerston. (Runnymede Letters, 1836.)

<sup>11</sup> The hypocrite had left his mask, and stood in naked ugliness. He was a man Who stole the livery of the court of heaven To serve the devil in.

ROBERT POLLOCK, The Course of Time. Bk. viii, l. 615. (1827)

With one hand he put A penny in the urn of poverty, And with the other took a shilling out.

ROBERT POLLOCK, The Course of Time. Bk. viii, l. 632. (1827)

<sup>12</sup> He knows how much of what men paint themselves

Would blister in the light of what they are.

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON, Ben Jonson Entertains a Man from Stratford. (c. 1916)

<sup>13</sup> There are people who laugh to show their fine teeth; and there are those who cry to show their good hearts.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. ix, No. 51. (c. 1870)

- <sup>1</sup> This man shows wheat and sells barley.
SADI, Bustan. Ch. i, Apologue 2. (c. 1257)
Edwards, tr. A proverbial phrase for a man who shows one thing and sells another of inferior quality; frequently applied to a hypocrite.
A night-prowling robber is better than a sinner in the tunic of a saint.
SADI, Bustan. Ch. v, Apologue 10.
- <sup>2</sup> At home he is a savage; abroad a saint. (Intra domum saevus est; foris mitis.)
SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 10. (c. A. D. 54)
A saint abroad, at home a fiend.
PHINEAS FLETCHER, Purple Island, vii, 36. (1633)
Thus say the common people that know him, A saint abroad, and a devil at home.
BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i, p. 84. (1678)
All Saint without, all Devil within.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 542. (1732)
They are saints abroad, but ask their maids what they are at home.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 67. (1880)
Street angel, house devil. Dimple outside, devil inside.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 483. (1940)
A smile abroad is oft a scowl at home.
P. C. WREN, The Uniform of Glory, p. 84. (1941)
See also WOMAN: SAINTS ABROAD.
- <sup>3</sup> Why, I can smile, and murder whiles I smile. . . .
And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
And frame my face to all occasions.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 2, 182. (1591)
See also SMILE: DECEITFUL SMILES.

- 'Tis too much prov'd—that with devotion's visage
And pious action, we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 46. (c. 1600)
O, what may man within him hide,
Though angel on the outward side!
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 2, 285. (1604)
I want that glib and oily art
To speak and purpose not.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 1, 227. (1605)
Look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under 't.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 5, 64. (1606)
Away, and mock the time with fairest show;
False face must hide what the false heart doth know.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 81. (1606)
MOUTH OF HONEY, HEART OF GALL, see under DIS-SIMULATION.
- <sup>4</sup> You can make the foulest villainy seem fair.
(πόλλ' ἂν κακῶς λάτρη σὺ κλέψεις κακά.)
SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1137. (c. 409 B. C.)
- <sup>5</sup> Hypocrisie can finde out a cloke for every rayne.
UNKNOWN, A New Enterlude Entitled New Custome. Act ii, sc. 2. (1573)
Such a cloke use they [hypocrites] for the rayne.
WILLIAM SPELMAN, A Dialoge or Confabulation Between Two Travellers, p. 56. (c. 1595)
- <sup>6</sup> Joe hates a hypocrite: which shows
Self-love is not a fault of Joe's.
UNKNOWN, On a Hypocrite. (c. 1780)

I

ICE

- <sup>7</sup> That cuts no ice in our set.
GEORGE ADE, Artie. Ch. 11, p. 96. (1896) Is of no importance.
That doesn't cut any ice with me.
CLYDE FITCH, The Climbers. Act iii. (1901)
You must cut some ice wid dese people.
G. B. MCCUTCHEON, Graustark, p. 458. (1901)
Must have some influence.
Her emotions cut no ice with him.
J. J. CONNINGTON, No Past is Dead, p. 103. (1942)
That cuts no ice with me.
JEFFERSON FARJEON, Murder at a Police Station, p. 241. (1943)
- <sup>8</sup> In skating over thin ice our safety is in our speed.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence. (1841)
The incessant, breathless round of intermingled sport and pleasure danced on the thin ice of debt.
OUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), in Fortnightly Review, lii, 785. (1892)

- She's skated over thin ice all her life.
L. K. ANSPACHER, The Unchastened Woman. Act i. (1915)
To indulge in a little bit of risquéting on thin ice
OGDEN NASH, King Lear. (1933)
To skate on thin ice. To act in dangerous and / or delicate and difficult circumstances.
PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Skate. (1941)
You skated on such thin ice that you could almost hear it cracking.
PETER CHEYNEY, Farewell to the Admiral. p. 83. (1943) An old proverb says, "When it cracks, it bears; when it bends, it breaks."
- <sup>9</sup> To break the ice. (Scindere glaciem.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. v, No. 95 (1508) A proverb in many languages for getting things started, or softening up a social stiffness. The Italians say "Rompere il ghiaccio," the French, "Rompre la glace"
To be the first to break the Ice of the Enterprize.
SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Plutarch, p. 89. (1579)

He that hath once broke the ice of impudence, needs not care how deepe he wade in discredite.

THOMAS NASHE, Pierce Penilesse. (1592)

If you break the ice, and do this feat,
Achieve the elder, set the younger free.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 2, 270. (1594)

On things that are tender and unpleasing, it is good to break the ice, by some whose words are of less weight, and to reserve the more weighty voice, to come in, as by chance.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning. (1597)

[He] At last broke silence, and the Ice.

BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, ii, 494. (1678)

To break the ice in making the first overture.

MATEO ALEMAN, Guzman. Bk. i, p. 173. (1708)

You see . . . that I break the ice, and begin first.

RICHARDSON, Pamela. Bk. i, ch. 9. (1741)

And your cold people are beyond all price.

When once you've broken their confounded ice.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 38. (1823)

"If he would have the goodness to break the—in point of fact, the ice," said Cousin Feenix.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 61. (1848)

To break the ice (figurative). To make a beginning, prepare the way. . . . In mid C. 19–20, generally applied to overcoming coldness or stiffness between strangers.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés (1941)

1
Trust not one night's ice.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 455. (1640)

2
Tut, tut, thou art all ice.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 2, 22. (1592)

The bright eyes of our hero thawed all her ice in a moment.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. viii, ch. 4. (1749)

As sure as nature cast Fairbanks for the stuff that kept Eliza from sinking into the river.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Ethics of Pig. (1908) The reference is to Vice-President C. W. Fairbanks, who was celebrated for his icy demeanor, and to Eliza, of Uncle Tom's Cabin, who escaped from the bloodhounds by leaping from cake to cake of ice in crossing the Ohio river.

3
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 215. (1601)

IDEA

4
One of the greatest pains to human nature is the pain of a new idea.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Physics and Politics, p. 163. (1876)

Every new idea has something of the pain and peril of childbirth about it.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books. (c. 1890)

5
There is no adequate defense, except stupidity, against the impact of a new idea.

P. W. BRIDGMAN: The Intelligent Individual and Society. Ch. 3. (1938)

6
Ideas are often poor ghosts, but sometimes they are made flesh.

GEORGE ELIOT, Janet's Repentance. Ch. 19. (1857)

Ideas are the malignant tumors that destroy a rational life.

DYSON CARTER, Night of Flame, p. 333. (1943)

7
They only who build on Ideas, build for eternity.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Politics. (1844)

Gibraltar may be strong, but ideas are impregnable.

EMERSON, Essays: Civilization. (1870)

An invasion of armies can be resisted; an invasion of ideas cannot be resisted. (On résiste à l'invasion des armées; on ne résiste pas à l'invasion des idées.)

VICTOR HUGO, Histoire d'un Crime: Conclusion: La Chute. Ch. 10. (1877) See Édition Nationale, vol. xxxvi, p. 649. The Nation, in a circular dated 15 April, 1943, quoted probably a paraphrase, "There is one thing stronger than all the armies in the world and that is an idea whose time has come." More poetically, "Greater than the tread of mighty armies is an idea whose hour has come."

8
Almost everyone knows this, but it has not occurred to everyone. (Sciunt plerique omnes, sed non omnibus hoc venit in mentem.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: The Epicurean. (c. 1510)

9
Men possessed with an idea cannot be reasoned with.

FROUDE, Short Studies: Colonies. (c. 1870)

10
No idea is so antiquated that it was not once modern. No idea is so modern that it will not some day be antiquated.

ELLEN GLASGOW, Address, before Modern Language Association. (1936)

11
A favourite theory is a possession for life.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 117. (c. 1821)

12
An idea that is not dangerous is unworthy to be called an idea at all.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Dict. of Epigrams. (1910)

13
I've a sneaking notion . . . I'll git some grand promotion.

DAVID HUMPHREYS, The Yankee in England, p. 102. (1815)

To have a sneaking notion for a lady, is to have a timid or concealed affection for her.

J. R. BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 317. (1848)

14
He who receives an idea from me, receives instruction himself without lessening mine; as he who lights his taper at mine receives light without darkening me.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, xiii, 334. (c. 1800)

15
What's the bright idea?

RALPH D. PAINE, Comrades of the Rolling Ocean, p. 40. (1921)

IDEALS

1 Mankind has ever been divided into two sects, Materialists and Idealists; the first founding on experience, the second on consciousness.

EMERSON, Essays: Transcendentalism. (1842)
Our ideals are our better selves.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Habits. (1877)
There is no force so democratic as the force of an ideal.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Speech, in New York, 27 Nov., 1920.

It is necessary for us not only to have ideals. . . . It is necessary that we act to implement them.

MADAME CHIANG KAI-SHEK, Address, before U. S. Senate, 18 Feb., 1943.

2 An ideal, something which . . . ought to be, as distinguished from what is.

JOHN GROTE, An Examination of Utilitarian Philosophy, p. 269. (a. 1866)

Ideal, capable of existence only in thought.
E. R. CONDER, The Basis of Faith, p. 111. (1877)

3 Our bitterest wine is always drained from crushed ideals.

ARTHUR STRINGER, The Devastator, p. 116. (1944)

IDLENESS

See also Indolence, Loafing, Sloth

4 The slothful person is the devil's shop, wherein he worketh engines of destruction.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 450. (1629)
The idle man is the devil's cushion, whereupon he sits and takes his ease.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 197. (1630)
Idleness . . . the Devil's Cushion, as the Fathers call it.

ALEXANDER ROSS, The History of the World: Preface. (1652)

Avoid idleness, which is the devills couch.
JAMES HOWELL, Parly of Beasts, p. 134. (1660).
The Danes say, "Idleness is the devil's pillow."

An idle brain is the devil's shop.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 161. (1678)
Idle Brains are the Devil's Workhouses.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3053. (1732)
Idle fellows are the Devil's Playfellows.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3054.
The idle Man is the Devil's Hireling, whose Livery is Rags, whose Diet and Wages are Famine and Diseases.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758
An empty skull is the devil's workshop.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius: Idleness. (1852)
The Arabs say, "An idle person has the Devil for a playfellow."

Steady employment . . . keeps one out of mischief, for truly an idle brain is the devil's workshop.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 9. (1859) And Smiles cites another saying, "A lazy man is the devil's bolster."

5

It is better to be idle than busy about nothing. (Satius est enim otiosum esse quam nihil agere.)

ATILIUS, as quoted by PLINY, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 9. (c. A. D. 98) Often quoted, "Praestat otiosum esse quam male agere" (It is better to be idle than to do wrong).

Better had it bene for hym (as Erasmus sayth) to have bene ydle then euyll occupied.

EDWARD MORE, Defence of Women: Dedication. (1560)

In the night they be not idle,—nether, as the common saying is, "well occupied."

THOMAS HARMAN, A Caueat for Vagabones, p. 33. (1567)

The proverb is verified, I am neither idle, nor yet well occupied.

UNKNOWN, Marriage of Wit and Science, Act iv, sc. 4. (c. 1570)

It is better to be idle, then ill employed.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 63. (1576)

LYLY, Love's Metamorphosis, i, 2. (1601)

Better be idle than not well employed.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 252. (1681)
Thence comes the proverb, It is better to be idle, than to be doing something, but to no purpose.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Colloquies, p. 210. (1725)
As good do nothing as to no purpose.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 684. (1732)
He is idle that might be better employed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1919.

6

Idleness teacheth much mischief.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxiii, 27. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

Men by doing nothing learn to do evil. (Homines nihil agendo discunt male agere.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 1. (c. 175 B. C.)
Salomon seith: that "ydleness techeth a man to do manye yveles."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 51. (c. 1387)
Plato affirmeth that in doynge nothyng men lerne to do evil.

SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello, ii, 63. (1567)
Cato used to say, That those whiche did nothing, learned to doe yll.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 243. (1574)

By doing nothing we learn to do ill.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 759. (1640)
Doing nothing is doing ill.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1038. (1732)
DOING NOTHING, see under DEED.

7

Idleness is the canker of the mind.

JOHN BODENHAM, Belvedere, p. 131. (1600)
There is no greater cause of melancholy than idleness; "no better cure than business," as Rhasis holds.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

Idleness overthrows all.

BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, ii, 2, 1.

8

Be not solitary, be not idle.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, his closing prescription for health of body and mind. (1621)

If you are idle, be not solitary; if you are solitary, be not idle.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Boswell, Life, 1779.

<sup>1</sup>
To reprove one of laziness, they will say, Does thou make Idle a coate? that is, a coate for idleness?

RICHARD CAREW, The Survey of Cornwall, fo. 56. (1602)

You'll soon learn to shape Idle a coat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 254. (1678)

<sup>2</sup>
Idlers, game-preservers and mere human clothes-horses.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 3. (1850)

<sup>3</sup>
Prolonged idleness provides food for vice. (Diuturna quies vitiis alimenta ministrat.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i. No. 2. (c. 175 B. C.)

The usual proverbial form is, "Otia omnia vitia parit" (Idleness is the cause of all the vices).

All this debauchery comes from idleness. (Nisi ex nimio otio.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 108. (163 B. C.)

In neglected fields hurtful weeds spring up. (Neglectis urenda filix innascitur agris.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, No. iii, l. 37. (35 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ix, 97.

Remove idleness, and Cupid's artillery perishes. (Otia si tollas, periery Cupidinis arcus.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 139. (c. 1 B. C.)

Idleness brings vice. (Otia dant vicia.)

LUCAN, Apothegm. (c. A. D. 50) As quoted by

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 151.

Idleness leads to lewdness.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, v, 5. (c. 450)

A variation of the Latin proverb, "Otium naufragium castitatis" (Idleness is the shipwreck of chastity). Similarly, "Sicut in stagno generantur vermes, sic in otioso malae cogitationes" (As worms are bred in a stagnant pool, so are evil thoughts in idleness).

The minstre and the norice un-to vyces, Which that men clepe in English ydelnesse.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Second Nonnes Tale; Prologue, l. 1. (c. 1389)

Mooder off vices, callid idilnesse.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. ii, l. 2249. (c. 1440)

Fe ydelnesse for it is . . . the key of all vyces.

UNKNOWN, Quatuor Sermones, p. 35. (c. 1483)

That common strumpet, Idelness,

The very roote of all vyciouness.

JOHN REDFORD, The Moral Play of Wyt and Science, l. 347. (c. 1530)

Idleness, which is the well-spring and root of all vice.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 444. (1566)

Idlenes the parent of all vice.

WILLIAM WAGER, The Longer Thou Livest, The More Fool Thou Art, sig. C2. (c. 1568)

Idleness is the mistress of wanton appetites, and fortress of lust's gate.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Against Dicing. (1577)

Idlenesse is the onely nurse and nourisher of sensual appetite, the first shaft that Cupid shooteth in the hot liuer of a heedelesse louer.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues (Arber), p. 111. (1579)
Idleness, the mother of corruption. (L'oisiveté, mère de corruption.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 23. (1580) The French also say, "L'oisiveté nous mène à la mendicité" (Idleness leads to beggary), or "L'ennui est mère de toutes les vices." The Italians say, "L'ozio é il padre di tutti i vizi" (Idleness is the father of all evil), and the Dutch, "Ledigheid is hongers moeder en van diefte volle broeder" (Idleness is hunger's mother and of theft it is full brother).

Sluggish Idlenesse, the nurse of sin.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto iv, st. 18. (1590)

Idlenesse is the roote of all mischief.

UNKNOWN, Servingmans Comfort, in HAZLITT, Inedited Tracts, p. 158. (1598)

Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know, My idleness doth hatch.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 2, 133. (1606)

Of idleness comes no goodness.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Gueule. (1611)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 3696 (1732) amends this to, "Of Idleness never comes any good."

Idlenesse . . . being the mother of all vices.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentleman, p. 61. (1630)

Without business, debauchery

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1007. (1640)

Men must not be poor; idleness is the root of all evil; the world's wide enough, let 'em bustle.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1. (1706)

Idleness and Chastity cannot set their Horses together.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3058. (1732)

Idleness and Lust are sworn Friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3059.

Idleness is the Dead Sea, that swallows all Virtues.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757

Idleness is the root of all evil.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 10. (1850)

It has been said that idleness is the parent of mischief, which is very true; but mischief itself is merely an attempt to escape from the dreary vacuum of idleness.

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 14. (1851)

Every child . . . was to be trained up in some business or calling, "idleness being the mother of all sin."

J. A. FROUDE, History of England, i, 54. (1856)

Idleness, the teeming mother of the arts!

JOHN BUTLER YEATS, referring to his son, W. B.

Yeats, who was in the habit of lying all day abed when getting an inspiration. (c. 1889)

See BROOKS, Opinions of Oliver Allston, p. 51.

<sup>4</sup>
Lat us nat moulen [grow moldy] thus in ydelnesse.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Introduction to The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 32. (c. 1386)

<sup>1</sup> Idleness is only the refuge of weak minds, and the holiday of fools.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 July, 1749.

I look upon indolence as a sort of suicide.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 Feb., 1754

<sup>2</sup> Any excuse for idleness is good enough. (Satis iusta causa cessandi est.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ii, epis. 6. (59 B.C.)

A versiflour seith: that "the ydel man excuseth hym in winter, by cause of the grete cold; and in somer, by enchesoun of the hete."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 51. (c. 1387)

Idle folk lack no excuses.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 234. (1670)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 109. (1670)

<sup>3</sup> Perpetual idleness is unendurable. (Quietem sempiternam possit pati.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 20, sec. 55. (c. 45 B.C.)

The insupportable labour of doing nothing.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 54. (1711)

The sad fatigue of idleness.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 601. (1737)

A life of ease a difficult pursuit.

WILLIAM COWPER, Retirement, l. 634. (1781)

The tedium of fastidious idleness.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk.v, l.430. (1814)

See also under HOLIDAY.

<sup>4</sup> An idler is a watch that wants both hands As useless if it goes as when it stands.

WILLIAM COWPER, Retirement, l. 681. (1781)

<sup>5</sup> Through idleness of the hands the house drop-peth through. (In infirmitate manuum perstil-labit domus.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 18. (c. 250 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> The idle mind knows not what 'tis it wants. (Otioso in otio animus nescit quid velit.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Iphigenia: Chorus. (c. 175 B.C.) See AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, xix, 10, 12.

<sup>7</sup> Says little, thinks less, and does—nothing at all, faith!

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act i, sc. 1. (1706)

<sup>8</sup> Be always ashamed to catch thyself idle.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

Trouble springs from Idleness; Toil from Ease.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

Idleness and Pride tax with a heavier hand than Kings and Parliaments.

FRANKLIN, Letter on Stamp Act, 11 July, 1765.

<sup>9</sup> Idle Men are dead all their Life long.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3055. (1732)

The Dead, and only they, should do nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4469.

<sup>10</sup> Eaten as it were with the rust of idlennesse.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 243. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Idleness is the rust of time.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. 1, sec. 1. (1650)

<sup>11</sup> No one is idle who can do anything.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 411. (c. 1821)

<sup>12</sup> Be not idle, and you shall not be longing.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 310. (1640)

<sup>13</sup> It is more pain to do nothing than something.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 883. (1640) See under DEED.

Idle folks have the most labour.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 161. (1678)

"He works hard who has nothing to do."

Idle people take the most Pains.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3056. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> Both gods and men are angry with a man who lives in idleness. for in nature he is like the stingless drones who waste the labor of the bees, eating without working.

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 303. (c. 800 B.C.)

A glorious lazy drone, grown fat with feeding On others' toil.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Flor-ence. Act i, sc. 2. (1627)

Like a cloistered drone, to read and doze,

In undeserving, undeserved repose.

GEORGE LYTTTELTON, To Dr. Ayscough. (1765)

<sup>15</sup> If you work, the idle will soon envy you as you grow rich. (εἰ δὲ κε ἐργάζῃ, τάχα σε ζηλώσει ἀεργός | πλουτεῦντα.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 312. (c. 800 B.C.)

Idleness always envies Industry.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3057. (1732)

<sup>16</sup> Pass by the smithy and its crowded lounge . . . lest bitter winter catch you helpless and poor and you chafe a swollen foot with a shrunken hand. The idle man who waits on empty hope, lacking a livelihood, lays to heart mischief-making. (πολλὰ δ' ἀεργὸς ἀνὴρ, κενεὴν ἐπὶ ἐλπὶδα μίμνων, | χρήζων βιότοιο, κακὴ προσελέξατο θυμῷ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 498. (c. 800 B.C.)

Idleness is roten slogardye,

Of which ther never comth to good encrees.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Seconde Nonnes Tale, Prologue, 17 (c. 1389)

Idleness is the mother of poverty.

THOMAS GAINSFORD (?), The Rich Cabinet, fo. 73. (1616)

Idleness is the greatest prodigality in the world.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. 1, sec. 1

(1650) Cited by Fuller and Franklin.

Idleness is the key of beggary.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1670)

Idleness must thank itself, if it go barefoot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3062. (1732)

Whoe'er an idle life will lead,

Must take starvation as his meed.

(Yi shêng lan to, jên chí shou o.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2407. (1875)

On the contrary, the philosophers say, Idleness is the mother of luxury. (Au contraire disent les Philosophes, Oysieté estre mere de Luxure.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 31. (1545)

<sup>1</sup> Strenuous inactivity urges us on. (Strenua nos exercet inertia.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 11, l. 28. (20 B.C.)

The Commons, faithful to their system, remained in a wise and masterly inactivity.

SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH, Vindiciae Gallicae.

(1837) Sec. 1, p. 44. (1791) Mackintosh seems, without question, to have been the inventor of "masterly inactivity."

If the government should be taught that the highest wisdom of a state is a wise and masterly inactivity, an invaluable blessing will be conferred.

JOHN C. CALHOUN (1831) See Works (1874), v, 143.

Disciplined inaction.

SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH, History of the Revolution in England in 1688. Ch. 7. (c. 1830)

<sup>2</sup> Have something to do, so that the devil will always find you occupied. (Fac et aliquid operis, ut semper te diabolus inveniat occupatum.)

SAINT JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Epistles. No. 125. (c. A.D. 400) Jehan de Vigny attributes the saying to Saint Jerome in French form, "Fais toujours aucune chose de bien, que le diable ne te trouve oyseux" (Do always some good deed that the devil may not find you idle). HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 74, cites two shorter forms, "Daemon te nunquam otiosum inveniat" (Let the devil never find you idle), and "Res age, tutus erit" (Employ yourself, you will be safe), quoting Ovid's advice on the remedies of love. Henderson adds, "Constant occupation prevents temptation."

Therefore seith seint Jerome: "doth somme gode dedes, that the devel which is our enemy ne finde yow nat unoccupied."

CHAUCEER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 51. (c. 1387)

In works of labour or of skill

I would be busy too;

For Satan finds some mischief still

For idle hands to do.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Idleness. (1720)

If the Devil find a man idle, he'll set him to work.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 221. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2705. (1732)

Satan is a hard boss to work for. When other people are having their vacation is when he keeps you the busiest. As old Dr. Watts or St. Paul or some other diagnostician says: "He always finds somebody for idle hands to do."

O. HENRY, A Midsummer Masquerade. (1908)

Keep the ladies busy and that keeps them out of mischief.

DuBois, Death Comes to Tea, p. 195. (1940)

Better keep busy, and the devil won't find so much for your idle hands to do.

ALLAN UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 147. (1941)

<sup>3</sup> Perhaps man is the only being that can properly be called idle.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 1. (1758)

Every man is, or hopes to be, an Idler.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 1.

As peace is the end of war, so to be idle is the ultimate purpose of the busy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 1.

We would all be idle if we could.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (1776) BOSWELL, Life, iii, 13.

<sup>4</sup> Let not thy hands and arms drop in idleness, but work willingly. What destroys heaven is sloth.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. xxv. (c. 2500 B.C.) Budge, tr.

Great is the idleness which prevails in heaven. (Magna otia caeli.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 394. (c. A.D. 120)

<sup>5</sup> An idle person tempts the devil to tempt him.

RICHARD KINGSTON, Apophthegmata Curiosa, p. 57. (1709)

He that is busy, is tempted but by one Devil; he that is idle, by a Legion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2171. (1732)

When we do ill, the Devil tempteth us; when we do nothing, we tempt him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5620.

The Turks have a proverb which says, that The devil tempts all other men, but that idle men tempt the devil.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 70. (1820)

Cited also by LORD AVEBURY, The Pleasures of Life. Pt. i, ch. 6. The Italians have the same proverb, "Il diavolo tenta tutti, ma l'ozioso tenta il diavolo."

<sup>6</sup> Idleness is ever the root of indecision. (Variam semper dant otia mentem.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iv, l. 704. (c. A.D. 50)

<sup>7</sup> Not to lye in idlenesse, that is, that sloth shoulde be abhorred.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 148. (1579)

Quoted as a saying of Pythagoras.

As good it is to be an addle egge, as an idle bird

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 207.

<sup>8</sup> Why stand ye here all the day idle? (τί ὥδε ἐστήκατε ὅλην τὴν ἡμέραν ἀργοί;)

New Testament: Matthew, xx, 6. (c. A.D. 70)

The Vulgate is, "Quid hic statis tota die otiosi?"

I live an idle burden to the ground.

POPE, tr., The Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 134. (1720)

As idle as a painted ship Upon a painted ocean.

COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. ii. (1798)

Idler than the toad. (Plus oisif que le crapaud.)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch. 2. (1873)

<sup>9</sup> You see how inactivity spoils an idle body, how water acquires a taint unless it is in motion. (Cernis ut ignavum corrumpant otia corpus, | ut capiant vitium, ni moveantur, aquae.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. v, l. 5. (A. D. 13)
Expect poison from the standing water.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

<sup>1</sup> For me idleness is death. (Mors nobis tempus habetur iners.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. v, l. 44. (A. D. 13)
Much difference is there between lying idle and lying buried. (Multum interest inter otium et conditivum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxii, sec. 3. (a. A. D. 64)

Idleness is the sepulchre of a living man.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Indolence. (1859)

<sup>2</sup> That idle but delightful condition of doing nothing. (Illud iners quidem, iucundum tamen nihil agere.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles, Bk. viii, epis. 9. (c. A. D. 98)

The sweetness of being idle. (Inertiae dulcedo.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3. (c. A. D. 98) The origin, perhaps, of the pseudo-Italian phrase, "Dolce far niente" (The sweet condition of doing nothing). Another proverbial Latin phrase is "Vis inertiae" (The power of idleness).

But see, while idly I stood looking on,
I found the effect of love in idleness.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 1, 155. (1594)

<sup>3</sup> Do not sit on a peck measure. (μὴ ἐπὶ χοτύκῳ καθίσαι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children. Sec. 12E. (c. A. D. 95) Plutarch is quoting a proverb, meaning that one should avoid idleness.

<sup>4</sup> Idleness turns the edge of wit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1670)

Idleness makes the Wit rust.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3061. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> A man may spit in his loof [palm] and do little.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 229. (1678)

A variation is, "A man may spit in his nieve [hand] and do nothing."

<sup>6</sup> I am never less idle than when I have nothing to do. (Numquam se minus otiosum, quam cum otiosus.)

SCIPIO AFRICANUS, Apothegm. (c. 190 B. C.) As quoted by CICERO, De Officiis, bk. iii, ch. 1, sec. 1.

<sup>7</sup> Nothing is so certain as that the evils of idleness can be shaken off by hard work. (Nihilque tam certum est quam otii vitia negotio discuti.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lvi, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>8</sup> "Got a great deal to do," retorted Jog, who, like all thoroughly idle men, was always dreadfully busy.

R. S. SURTEES, Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour Ch. 53. (1853)

Idle folk have the least leisure.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch 1. (1869)

The idle man has so much to do

That he never has time to be sad.

JOHN HAY, The Enchanted Shirt. (1871)

<sup>9</sup> In the diligence of his idleness. (Diligenter per vacuitatem suam.)

Apocrypha: The Wisdom of Solomon, xiii, 13 (c. 100 B. C.)

Rushing to and fro, busily employed in idleness. (Trepide concursans, occupata in otio.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 2. (c. 25 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> He will not eat the bread of idleness.

UNKNOWN, Book of Songs (Shiking). (c. 1000 B. C.) Quoted by MENCIVS, vii, i, 32.

She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. (Consideravit semitas domus suae, et panem otiosa non comedit.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 27. (c. 300 B. C.)

IDOLATRY

<sup>11</sup> Four species of idols beset the human mind: idols of the tribe; idols of the den; idols of the market; and idols of the theatre.

FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum: Summary of the Second Part. Aphorism 39. (c. 1625)

<sup>12</sup> All men are idolaters, some of fame, others of self-interest, most of pleasure. (Todos son idólatras, unos de la estimacion, otros del interes, y los más del deleite.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual Maxim 26. (1647)

<sup>13</sup> An image-maker never worships the gods.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 137. (1937)

<sup>14</sup> In that day a man shall cast his idols to the moles and to the bats. (In die illa proiciet homo idola . . . talpas et vespertiliones.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, ii, 20. (c. 725 B. C.)

<sup>15</sup> A dreadful Bugbear to the Women, call'd Mumbo-Jumbo, which is what keeps the Women in awe.

FRANCIS MOORE, Travels into the Inland Parts of Africa, p. 40. (1738)

You might have been High Priest to Mumbo-Jumbo.

HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson. St. 24. (1837)

The name of Mompert had become a sort of Mumbo-Jumbo.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Ch. 28. (1876)

Erudition . . . a hideous idol, a Mumbo-Jumbo.

A. C. BENSON, The Upton Letters, p. 259. (1907)
Mumbo-Jumbo, God of the Congo.

VACHEL LINDSAY, The Congo. (1914)

1 How can an idol accomplish the desires of a man when of itself it cannot drive away a fly.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. x, Apologue 3. (c. 1257)

2 Idolatry is in a man's own thought, not in the opinion of another.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Idolatry. (c. 1650)

3 The god of my idolatry.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 2, 114. (1595)

She is the goddess of my idolatry.

FANNY BURNEY, Letter to Miss S. Burney, 5 July, 1778.

Thou god of our idolatry, the Press.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 461. (1780)

IF

4 If I am king and if my brother die.—
Two ifs scarce make one possibility.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Pt. i, act ii, sc. 1. (1670)

"If I enter Laconia I will level your city to the dust," said Philip of Macedon to the Spartans. Their rejoinder was "If!"

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 93. (1902)

5 'Tis but a mirror, shows one image forth,
And leaves the future dark with endless "ifs."

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gipsy. Bk. ii, l. 214. (1868)

6 For that ye ought to say, If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that. (ἐὰν ὁ κύριος θέλῃ.)

New Testament: James, iv, 15. (c. A. D. 44)

Hence, "If the Lord will" came to be known as St. James's reservation, and "Sub reservatione Jacobaeo" became a Latin proverb. The Vulgate is, "Si Dominus voluerit."

7 If you can dream—and not make dreams your master;

If you can think—and not make thoughts your aim;

If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same; . . .

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!

RUDYARD KIPLING, If—. (1910) Said to have been written with George Washington in mind.

8 "If" is the epitaph on the tomb of opportunity.

PHILIP MOELLER, Madame Sand. Act i. (1917)

9 What quod the protectour thou seruest me I wene with iffes and andes.

SIR THOMAS MORE, The Historie of Kyng Richard the Third, p. 47. (1513)

Bodge vp a blanke verse with ifs and ands.

THOMAS NASHE, Greene's Menaphon: Intro. (1589)

What, Villaine, ifs and ands?

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 77. (1592)

Well, well, with ifs and ands

Mad men leave rocks and leap into the sands.

ROBERT DAVENPORT, King John and Matilda. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1624)

Absolutely, and without any ifs and ands.

RALPH CUDWORTH, The True Intellectual System of the Universe, p. 723. (1678)

Without Ifs and Ands; plane, absolute.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 90. (1681)

If, and An, spoils many a good charter. (Suppositio nihil ponit in re.)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 209. (1721)

Then he came with his If's and And's.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, v, 237. (1748)

"If a poor man's prayer can bring God's curse down . . ."

"If ifs and ans were pots and pans."

KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 10. (1850)

There is also the old doggerel, If ifs and ands were pots and pans, Where would be the work for Tinkers' hands?

Notes and Queries, Ser. vii, i, 71. (1886)

10 If only I could. (εἰ γὰρ ὤφελον.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The E at Delphi. Sec. 386D. (a. A. D. 95) Quoting the proverbial expression of a wish, illustrating the importance of "if."

11 Your proposals are so full of ifs and buts, that I know not how to make anything of them. (Tant y de Si, & de Mais.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1545)

But me no buts.

HENRY FIELDING, Rape upon Rape. Act ii, sc. 2. (1730) HILL, The Snake in the Grass. Sc.

1. (c. 1740) TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers, Ch. 47. (1857) GARDNER, The Case of the Turning Tide, p. 33. (1941), etc., etc.

The man who invented 'if' and 'but' must surely have transformed chopped straw into gold. (Der Mann, der das Wenn und das Aber erdacht, | Hat sicher aus Häckerling Gold schon gemacht.)

G. A. BÜRGER, Der Kaiser und der Abt. (c. 1772) The Germans also say, "Alles wäre gut, wäre kein aber dabei" (All would be well were it not for the 'buts').

"But me no buts." Make no objection!: [a cliché] from ca. 1820. Mrs. Centlivre used the phrase in 1708, but it was Scott's employment of it in The Antiquary, 1816, which popularized it.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: But. (1941)

12 If my aunt had been a man, she'd have been my uncle.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 202. (1813)

The Germans say, "Wenn meine Tante Räder hätte, wäre sie ein Omnibus" (If my aunt had wheels, she would be an omnibus); the French, "Avec un 'si' on mettrait Paris dans une bouteille" (With an 'if' we might put Paris in a bottle); the Danes, "Had it not been for an 'if,' the old woman would have bitten the wolf."

<sup>1</sup> Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, v, 4, 105. (1600)

IGNORANCE

See also Knowledge and Ignorance; Knowledge: Not to Know; Wisdom and Ignorance

<sup>2</sup> To be ignorant of one's ignorance is the malady of the ignorant.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Discourse. (1877)

<sup>3</sup> The ignorant arise and seize heaven itself. (Surgunt indocti et caelum rapiunt.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. viii, sec. 8. (A. D. 397)

<sup>4</sup> An ignorant man will always be the first to be heard.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 12b. (c. 450)

<sup>5</sup> There is no poverty except in ignorance.

Babylonian Talmud: Nedarim, fo. 41a. (c. 450)

There is no darkness but ignorance.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iv, 2, 47. (1599)

I know no disease of the soul but ignorance.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Ignorantia Animae. (1636)

There is no slavery but ignorance.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Liberty of Man, Woman and Child. (c. 1880)

There is no blindness like ignorance.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 358. (1938) A Bhuddist proverb.

<sup>6</sup> He ran with ladder and rope, but could not learn.

Babylonian Talmud: Nedarim, fo. 89b. (c. 450)

Thou hast dived [for pearls] and brought up a potsherd.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 91a.

<sup>7</sup> Ignorance is not innocence, but sin.

BROWNING, The Inn Album. Sec. 5. (1875)

Of all the forms of innocence, mere ignorance is the least admirable.

A. W. PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act ii. (1893)

Ignorance is the night of the mind.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 365. (1838) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>8</sup> Ignorance which supports me is better than wisdom which I must support.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 196. (1817) Rather take from a fool than give to the wise.

<sup>9</sup> I am not ashamed to confess that I am ignorant of what I do not know. (Nec me pudet fateri nescire quod nesciam.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 60. (45 B. C.)

The acknowledgement of ignorance is one of the surest proofs of judgment that I can find. (La reconnaissance de l'ignorance est l'un des plus beaux et plus surs témoignages de jugement qui je trouve.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 10. (1580)

The man who confesses his ignorance shows it once; the man who tries to conceal it shows it many times.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 442 (1938) A Japanese proverb.

<sup>10</sup> If any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant. (εἰ δέ τις ἀγνοεῖ, ἀγνοείτω.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xiv, 38. (A. D.

57) The Vulgate is, "Si quis autem ignorat, ignorabitur."

<sup>11</sup> Ignorance never settles a question.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 14 May, 1866.

<sup>12</sup> Be not ignorant of any thing in a great matter or a small. (Iustifica pusillum, et magnum similiter.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, v, 15. (c. 190 B. C.)

<sup>13</sup> Oh, more than Gothic ignorance!

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. vii, ch. 3. (1749)

<sup>14</sup> Shun the ignorant who feign piety, and the learned who are corrupt.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 74. (c. 1050)

The absence of the ignorant is never regretted.

IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim. No. 437

<sup>15</sup> There is nothing more terrible than ignorance in action. (Es ist nichts schrecklicher als eine tätige Unwissenheit.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

<sup>16</sup> Those which knowe nothing, thinke they know all thinges, and holde their ignorance for wisdom.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 93. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The dull sneer of self-loved ignorance.

P. B. SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iii, sc. 4. (1820)

The recipe for perpetual ignorance is: be satisfied with your opinions and content with your knowledge.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, v, 23. (1897)

The tragedy of ignorance is its complacency.

ROBERT QUILLEN, in syndicated editorial, 1932.

<sup>17</sup> Great evill is caused by that ignorance, which seemeth to it selfe sapience.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 112. (1574) Pettie, tr. Quoted.

As hunger and thirst is an emptiness of the body, so is ignorance an emptiness of the minde.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 121.

Ignorance is a kinde of folly.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 213.

Ignorance is a voluntary misfortune.

NICHOLAS LING, ed., Politeuphuia, p. 63. (1669)

1 It may very truly bee saide, that it is not so much commendation to a man to bee learned, as it is shame to bee unlearned.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk ii, p. 216. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Being ignorant is not so much of a shame. as being unwilling to learn.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755

2 The ignorant in comparison of the learned, are worse then dead.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 51. (1574) Pettie, tr.

3 They condemn what they can't comprehend. (Damnant quod non intelligunt.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 74. (1869) Quoting Cicero.

The disapprobation of the unintelligent is the hallmark of merit and of truth.

E. A. HOOTEN, Twilight of Man, p. 32. (1939)

4 It is better to conceal ignorance. (ἀμαθίην κρύπτειν ἀμεινον.)

HERACLEITUS, Frag. 95, Diels. (c. 500 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 439D.

5 The ignorant hath an Eagle's wings and an Owl's eyes.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 901. (1640)

6 A man's ignorance is as much his private property and as precious in his own eyes, as his family Bible.

O. W. HOLMES, The Young Practitioner. Lecture in New York, 2 March, 1871.

7 If a nation expects to be ignorant and free, in a state of civilization, it expects what never was and never will be.

JEFFERSON, Letter to Colonel Yancy. (1816) No nation is permitted to live in ignorance with impunity.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 407.

8 Ignorance, madam, pure ignorance.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, in reply to the lady who asked why "pastern" was defined in his dictionary as, "the knee of the horse." See Boswell, Life, 1755.

9 Ignorant to twenty-three carats. (Ignorante à vingt et trois carats.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 15. (1678) A proverbial expression for almost completely ignorant, as "Ignorante à vingt-quatre carats" means entirely so. Gold of twenty-three carats is almost completely pure, that of twenty-four carats entirely so.

10 For ignorantia non excusat, as ich have herd. WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text C, passus xiv, l. 128. (1362) "Ignorantia non excusat" (Ignorance does not excuse), a medieval proverb, usually expanded to "Ignorantia legis excusat neminem" (Ignorance of the law excuses no one). However there is another law proverb which says, "Ignorantia facti excusat" (Ignorance of fact is an excuse).

Faults of Ignorance are excusable only, where the Ignorance it self is so.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1510. (1732)

11 She guessed the ignorant would always be a prey for the unscrupulous.

MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 119. (1942)

12 The ignoraunt, which are alwayes enimyes to learning.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 153. (1579) To learning and law there's no greater foe, than they that nothing know.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, xii, 103. (1592)

Art hath an enemy call'd ignorance.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour: Prologue. (1599) A rendering of the Latin proverb, "Artem non habere inimicum nisi ignorantem."

For thus the saying goes, and I hold so:

Ignorance only is true wisdom's foe.

GEORGE WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt Bk. ii, sat. 1. (1613)

13 He who wishes to cure his ignorance, must first confess it. (Qui vult guarir de l'ignorance, il faut la confesser.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 11. (1595)

14 The worst part of ignorance, is making good and ill seeme alike.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes of My Morning Worke. (1613) In Newes from the Lower End of the Table he adds, "Ignorance is an insensible hunger."

15 It is well for men to be in ignorance of many things. (Multa viros nescire decet.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 229. (c. 1 B.C.) He will be ignorant of nothing, though it be a shame to know it.

THOMAS ADAMS, Diseases of the Soul. (1616) There are many things of which a wise man might wish to be ignorant.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Demonology. (1877)

16 Untrained, you're trying to do trained work. (Indoctus quam docte facis.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 630. (c. 194 B.C.) I was compelled to assume the second place at the helm, although I did not know how to hold an oar. (Secundus locus gubernaculorum mihi traderetur, qui remum tenere non noveram.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles. No. xxi, sec. 1. (A.D. 391)

Wild pimpernel among the vegetables. (κόρχοπος ἐν λαχανοῖς.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, iv, 57. (c. 950) ERASMUS (Adagia, i, vii, 21) gives it as "Etiam corchorus inter olera." "A blue bird in the poultry yard"; "A swan among geese."

The notes of the crested lark among the ignorant. (ἐν ἀνοήτοις καὶ κόρυδος φθέγγεται.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, iii, 81. (c. 950) ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 92, has "Inter doctos etiam Corydus sonat."

The sow teaching Minerva. (Sus Minervam.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 40. (1508)

The ignorant teaching the learned. See under MINERVA.

The owl sings to the nightingale. (Bubo canit lusciniæ.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 12.

There is nothing in this world more odious than an ignorant person, which will contend with the learned, like as the Pie did with the Nightingale in musicke.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 222. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The blind man wishes to show the way. (Caecus iter monstrare vult.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 44. (1869)

1 In fighting ignorance too much candor is silly. (Contra imprudentem stulta est nimia ingenuitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 122. (c. 43 B. C.)

You would go wrong less often if you knew your ignorance. (Minus saepe pecces si scias quid nescias.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 416.

2 You men of the other world say that ignorance is the mother of all evils. (Vous autres de l'autre monde dites que ignorance est mere de tous maux.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 7. (1552) Ch. 8 in Motteux' translation.

For ignorance, he said, is the mother of true piety, which he called devotion. (Ignorantia enim, inquit, mater est verae pietatis, quam ille appellavit devotionem.)

BISHOP JOHN JEWEL, Works. Vol. iii, pt. ii, p. 1202. (1559) Bishop Jewel is referring to Henry Cole, Dean of St. Paul's, and the Disputation with the Papists at Westminster, 31 March, 1559. Cole was one of the eight Romanist disputants, and his phrase soon became famous

I, Ignorance, am the mother of true devotion. UNKNOWN, New Custom. Act i, sc. 1. (1573) Ignorance . . . was wont to be termed the mother of deuotion.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, ii, 138. (1593)

The best meanes . . . is to keep them still in ignorance: for Ignorance is the mother of deuotion.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, iv, i, 2. (1621)

Sing not, thou Roman siren, that ignorance is the dam of devotion, to breed it.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 411. (1629)

It was a maxime that over-ruled the foregoing times, that ignorance was the mother of devotion.

SIR ROBERT NAUNTON, Fragmenta Regalia (Arber), p. 15. (c. 1630)

That Ignorance makes devout, if right the Notion, Troth, Rufus, thou 'rt a Man of Great Devotion.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

Better a reverent ignorance

Than knowledge atheistic.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 11. (1863)

Ignorance is the mother of admiration.

CHAPMAN, Widow's Tears. Act ii, 4. (1612)

Ignorance is the mother of presumption and of errors.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 116. (1666)

Ignorance is the mother of impudence.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 422. (1855) See under IMPUDENCE.

3 You know, Percy, everybody is ignorant, only on different subjects.

WILL ROGERS, The Illiterate Digest, p. 64. (1924)

4 Better a dragon for a friend than an ignorant man.

SADI, Pand Namah (Scroll of Wisdom). Sec. 10. (c. 1260)

5 The ignorant man thinks that he knows everything.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 26. (c. 900)

6 A witless man, in company, had best keep silence, for as long as his mouth is shut no one will discover his ignorance.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 27. (c. 900)

There is no better ornament for the ignorant than silence.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 36. (c. 1258) If there are two things not to be hidden—love and a cough—I say there is a third, and that is ignorance, when once a man is obliged to do something besides wagging his head.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. (1863)

7 Ignorance is a feeble remedy for our ills. (Iners malorum remedium ignorantia est.)

SENECA, Oedipus, l. 515. (A. D. 60)

8 The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 3, 30. (1601)

Ignorance and inconsideration are the two great causes of the ruin of mankind.

JOHN TILLOTSON. (c. 1675) As quoted by JOHN ADAMS, Dissertation on Canon Law. (1765)

Ignorance is the root of all evil.

RUTH FEINER, Young Woman of Europe, p. 157. (1942)

9 Our lives are universally shortened by our ignorance.

HERBERT SPENCER, Principles of Biology. Pt. vi, ch. 12, sec. 372. (1864)

Drink to heavy Ignorance!

Hob-and-nob with brother Death!

TENNYSON, The Vision of Sin, l. 193. (1842)

1 Than an ignorant man nothing is more unreasonable; he thinks nothing right except what he has done himself. (Nisi quod ipse fecit nil rectum putat.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 98. (160 B. C.)

It is easier to snatch a pearl from the jaws of a crocodile than to change the ideas of an ignorant person.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras (Moral Stanzas) (c. 1250)

2 The ignorant are courageous. (ἀμαθία θράσος.)

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. ii, sec. 40. (c. 410 B. C.)

3 In knowing nothing is the sweetest life. (ὁ τῷ φρονεῖν γὰρ μὴδὲν ἥδιστος βίος.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 554. (c. 409 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, x, 81, with the Latin rendering, "Suauissima hic est uita, si sapias nihil," and the derived proverb, "In nihil sapiendo iucundissima vita" (In knowing nothing is the happiest life). Storr (Loeb) renders the line, "For ignorance is life's extreme bliss."

To know nothing is the happiest life. (Nihil scire est vita iucundissima.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 8. (1524)

From hence the Proverb hath his beginning, That it is a sweet life to bee unlearned.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 163. (1574) Young, tr.

Where ignorance is bliss,

'Tis folly to be wise.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College, last lines. (1742) PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Blissful, says Gray's lines generated the phrase "blissful ignorance," long since a cliché.

Be ignorance thy choice, where knowledge leads to woe.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. ii, st. 30. (1768)

Hys was the Blisse of Ignorance, but We, being born to bee learned, and unhappye withal, have nought but the Ignorance of Blisse.

THOMAS HOOD, Sentimental Journey from Islington to Waterloo Bridge. (a. 1845)

Where ignorance is bliss, a little learning is a dangerous thing.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 49. (1943)

ILLNESS, see Sickness

ILLUSION

4 Time strips our illusions of their hue.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 21. (1818)

We strip illusion of her veil.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Realism. (1874)

5 Illusions, however innocent, are deadly as the canker-worm.

FROUDE, Short Studies: Calvinism. (c. 1870)

6 It is natural for man to indulge in the illusions of hope.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. See under HOPE.

7 An illusion is the false appreciation of real sensation.

HULME, tr., De Boismont's Hallucinations. Ch.

1. (1859) As distinguished from hallucination, which has no basis in reality.

8 Here we wander in illusions.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 3. 42. (1593)

9 I have, alas, only one illusion left, and that is the Archbishop of Canterbury.

SYDNEY SMITH, Epigram. (c. 1840) See LADY

HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, ch. 9, p. 231.

I'm proof against all illusions except illusions which flatter me.

BERNARD SHAW. See PEARSON, G.B.S., p. 110.

10 In lifting our eyes to the firmament, we see all the stars, as it were, attached to the same dome. But this is merely an optical illusion.

RICHARD SULLIVAN, A View of Nature. Vol. ii, ch. 48, p. 381. (1794)

11 Plunge ourselves deep into the sweet illusion.

EDWARD YOUNG, The Revenge, v, 2. (1721)

Hope—divine illusion!

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, The Regicide, iii, 1. (1749)

Trust . . . to what the world calls illusions.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sc. 2, l. 114. (1847)

Dream on! there's nothing but illusion true!

O. W. HOLMES, The Old Player. (1861)

Don't part with your illusions. When they are gone, you may still exist, but you have ceased to live.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar (1893)

Our grandeur lies in our illusions.

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Grandeur. (1928)

IMAGINATION

See also Fancy

12 Men may dye of imaginacioun,
So depe may impressioun be take.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Miller's Tale, l. 426. (c. 1386)

13 The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth. (Sensus enim et cogitatio humani cordis in malum prona sunt ab adolescentia sua.)

Old Testament: Genesis, viii, 21. (c. 550 B. C.)

14 Imagination is the eye of the soul. (L'imagination est l'œil de l'âme.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées, No. 42. (1810)

Imagination is the air of mind.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Another and a Better World. (1839)

<sup>1</sup> He who has imagination without learning has wings and no feet. (Celui qui a de l'imagination sans érudition a des ailes et n'a pas des pieds.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 53. (1810)
His imagination resembled the wings of an ostrich. It enabled him to run, though not to soar.

MACAULAY, Essays: John Dryden. (a. 1859)
Has your imagination the gout, that it limps so badly?

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act iii, sc. 6. (1898)

<sup>2</sup> They fear what they themselves imagined. (Quae finxere, timent.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 486. (c. 60 A. D.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12.

<sup>3</sup> The sculptor seems to have let his imagination altogether run riot.

HUGH MILLER, First Impressions of England, iii, 38. (1847)

<sup>4</sup> A strong imagination begetteth opportunity, say the wise men. (Fortis imaginatio generat casum, disent les clercs.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 20. (1580) The French proverb is, "Une imagination forte produit l'événement même."

What more wretched than the man who is the slave of his own imaginings? (Quasi quidquam infelicius sit homine, cui sua figmenta dominantur?)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. Quoting from an unknown source.

<sup>5</sup> The human race is governed by its imagination. (C'est l'imagination qui gouverne le genre humain.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Saying. (c. 1801) BOURRIENNE, Life, ii, 2.

<sup>6</sup> To one it is a mighty, heavenly Goddess;
To another, a cow that furnishes his butter.
(Einem ist sie die hohe, die himmlische Göttin, dem andern Eine tüchtige Kuh, die ihn mit Butter versorgt.)

SCHILLER, Wissenschaft. (c. 1800)

<sup>7</sup> The lunatic, the lover, and the poet
Are of imagination all compact: . . .
Such tricks hath strong imagination,
That, if it would but apprehend some joy,
It comprehends some bringer of that joy;
Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush supposed a bear!

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 7. (1596) See also under BUSH.

O, who can . . . cloy the hungry edge of appetite
By bare imagination of a feast?

Or wallow naked in December snow
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 3, 294. (1595)

IMITATION

See also Plagiarism

<sup>8</sup> Being butcher, don't imitate the piper.
(μάγειρον δντα, αὐλητὴν μὴ μιμεῖσθαι.)

AESOP, Fables: The Kid and the Wolf. (c. 570 B. C.) The kid, overtaken by the wolf, persuades the wolf to pipe for it that it may die pleasantly. But the dogs hear the sound of the pipe and corner the wolf, who says to the kid, "I've got what I deserve, since being a butcher, I tried to imitate a piper."

<sup>9</sup> I have heard the bird itself many a time.
(αὐτὰς ἀκούκα πολλὰκις.)

AGESILAUS THE GREAT, King of Sparta. (c. 375 B. C.) Excusing himself when invited to hear a man who imitated the nightingale. See PLUTARCH, Life of Agesilaus, ch. 21. In his Moralia (231C) a similar remark is attributed by Plutarch to Pleistarchus.

Nothing in comparison with Parmenio's pig
(οὐδὲν πρὸς τὴν Παρμενιοντος ὄν.)

PLUTARCH, Symposium. Ch. 5. (c. A. D. 95)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 10, with the Latin, "Nihil ad Parmenonis suem," and the explanation that Parmenio was a famous animal impersonator, whose imitation sounded more like a pig than a real pig. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 69, with the rendering, "Nothyng to Parmenoes sow," and the story that one day a man brought a pig into the crowd under his cloak and pinched it to make it squeal. The people, thinking that the newcomer was trying to outdo Parmenio, cried "Tush, what is this to Parmenio's pig?"

She managed a good imitation of Mae West and the classic line: "C'm up'n see me sometime."

LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 55. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> Imitation is the sincerest of flattery.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 217. (1820)
SELLARS, Murder à la Mode, p. 28. (1941)
HEBERDEN, The Lobster Pick Murder, p. 24 (1941) etc., etc.

The Sincerest Form of Flattery.

BARRY PAIN, Playthings and Parodies. Sec 1 Title.

No sincerer flattery exists than imitation.

S. LANE-POOLE, Sir H. Parkes. Ch. 8. (1901)
He followed his new friend's every movement with sincerest flattery.

LEE THAYER, Guilty, p. 118. (1940)

<sup>11</sup> There is much difference between imitating a good man, and counterfeiting him.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738

<sup>12</sup> O imitators, slavish herd! (O imitatores, servum pecus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 19, l. 19. (20 B. C.)
A slavish herd and stupid, to my mind,
These imitators.

C'est un bétail servile et sot à mon avis
Que les imitateurs.)

LA FONTAINE, Clymène, l. 349. (1671)

1 An imitator is a man who succeeds in being an imitation.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Book of Epigrams. (c. 1905)

2 No man was ever great by imitation.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lines added to Goldsmith's Deserted Village. (1770)

3 So is the imitation of an imitation much more hard and difficult.

FRANCIS JUNIUS, JR., The Painting of the Ancients, p. 349. (1638)

4 We are all easily taught to imitate what is base and depraved. (Dociles imitandis | turpibus ac pravis omnes sumus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 40. (c. A. D. 120)

5 Men almost always walk in the paths trodden by others proceeding in their actions by imitation. (Camminando li uomini quasi sempre per le vie battute da altri, e procedendo nelle azioni loro con le imitazioni.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 6. (1513)

For men are prone to go it blind
Along the calf-paths of the mind,
And work away from sun to sun
To do what other men have done.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The Calf-Path. (1897)

6 In attempting to walk like a swan, the crow lost even its natural gait.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 557. (1842)

The man who plants cabbages imitates, too!

AUSTIN DOBSON, Ballade of Imitation. (c.1873)

7 A needy man is lost when he wishes to imitate a powerful man. (Inops, potentem dum vult imitari, perit.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 24, l.1. (c.25 B. C.)

8 A beautiful copy can never be produced apart from a beautiful pattern. (ὅτι μίμημα οὐκ ἂν ποτε γένοιτο δίχα καλοῦ παραδείγματος.)

PHILO, De Opificio Mundi. Sec. 16. (c. A. D. 40)

A substitute shines brightly as a king,
Until a king be by.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, v, 1, 94. (1597)

The only good copies are those which make us see the absurdity of bad originals. (Les seules bonnes copies sont celles qui nous font voir le ridicule des méchants originaux.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 133. (1665)

The first version was "des excellents originaux," and Meré asked, "Is not one version as true as the other? There are none of M. de la Rochefoucauld's maxims of which the opposite is not equally true."

A copy is never so good as the original.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 348. (c. 1821)

They copied all they could follow, but they couldn't copy my mind.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The "Mary Gloster". (1894)

Without an original there can be no imitation.

WEEEDON GROSSMITH, Diary of a Nobody. Ch.12.

9 Man is an imitative creature. (Der Mensch ist ein nachahmendes Geschöpf.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 9. (1799)

IMMORALITY, see Morality

IMMORTALITY

See also Death and Immortality

10 I have brought into his nostrils the life which is everlasting.

ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. 147, l. 8. (c. 4000 B. C.)

Though the body of all men is subject to overmastering death, the soul remains alive, for it alone comes from the gods. (καὶ σῶμα μὲν πάντων ἔπεται θανάτῳ περισθeneί, | ζῶν δ' ἔτι λείπεται αἰῶνος εἰδωλον· τὸ γὰρ ἐστὶ μόνον | ἐκ θεῶν.)

PINDAR, Dirges. Frag. 131, Sandys. (c. 480 B. C.)

HOMER, Odyssey, xi, 83, refers to the εἰδωλον, or ghost, of Elpenor, as surviving his body, but Pindar was the first to explain its immortality by its divine origin.

The days of mortals are deathless, although the body die. (ἀθάναται δὲ βροτοῖς | αἵμαται, σῶμα δ' ἐστὶ θνατόν.)

PINDAR, Maidens' Song. Frag. 104, l. 14, Sandys.

The last day does not bring extinction, but change of place. (Supremus ille dies non extinctionem, sed commutationem adfert loci.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 49, sec. 117. (45 B. C.)

Gaining eternal life by the boon of death. (Aeternam vitam mortis adepta bono.)

LACTANTIUS, Phoenix, l. 170. (c. A. D. 300)

He does not perish, who dies to live again. (Non moritur, quisquis victurus occiditur.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. Lett. i, sec. 3. (A. D. 370)

I laugh, for hope hath happy place with me,
If my bark sinks, 'tis to another sea.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, A Poet's Hope. (c. 1840)

Man contemplates the adverse evidence, then sticks to his belief that he is to live forever.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 123. (1940)

11 Beauty immortal awakes from the tomb.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Hermit, last line. (1760)

Immortal Hope dispels the gloom!

An angel sits beside the tomb.

SARAH FLOWER ADAMS, The Mourners Came at Break of Day. (c. 1850)

12 There is nothing strictly immortal, but immortality.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. v, sec. 12. (1658)

13 To himself every one is an immortal; he may know that he is going to die, but he can never know that he is dead.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 257. (a. 1902)

<sup>1</sup> Suns may rise and set; we, when our short day has closed, must sleep on during one perpetual night.

(Soles occidere et redire possunt;
Nobis cum semel occidit brevis lux,
Nox est perpetua una dormienda.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode v, l. 4. (c. 57 B. C.)
After death there is nothing. (Post mortem nihil.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 397. (c. A. D. 60)

To die 's to cease to be, it seems;

So learned Seneca did think.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

<sup>2</sup> They do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible. (φθαρτὸν στέφανον λάβωσιν, ἡμεῖς δὲ ἀφθαρτον.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 25. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Illi quidem ut corruptibilem coronam accipiant: nos autem incorruptam."

This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. (δεῖ γὰρ τὸ φθαρτὸν τοῦτο ἐνδύσασθαι ἀφθαρσίαν καὶ τὸ θνητὸν τοῦτο ἐνδύσασθαι ἀθανάσιαν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 53. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Oportet enim corruptibile hoc induere incorruptionem: et mortale hoc induere immortalitatem."

So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? (κατεπόθη ὁ θάνατος εἰς νίκην. ποῦ σου, θάνατε, τὸ νίκης; ποῦ σου, θάνατε, τὸ κέντρον;)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 54-55. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Absorpta est mors in victoria. Ubi est mors victoria tua? ubi est mors stimulus tuus?"

When the day that he [Valiant-for-Truth] must go hence was come, many accompanied him to the river-side, into which as he went he said: "Death, where is thy sting?" And as he went down deeper, he said: "Grave, where is thy victory?" So he passed over, and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. (1684)

The world recedes; it disappears;

Heav'n opens on my eyes; my ears

With sounds seraphic ring:

Lend, lend your wings! I mount! I fly!

O Grave! where is thy Victory?

O Death! where is thy Sting?

POPE, The Dying Christian to His Soul. (1712)

<sup>3</sup> Earth back to earth, the soul on high. (γὰ μὲν εἰς γῆν, πνεῦμ' ἄνω.)

EPICHARMUS, Fragments. Diels, i, 122. (c. 500 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: Consolatio ad Apollonium. Sec. 110B.

Committing earth to earth. (εἰς γῆν φέροντες γῆν.)

EURIPIDES, Hypsipyle. Frag. 757, Nauck. (c. 440 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, 111A.

Or ever the silver cord be loosed or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 6, 7. (c. 250 B. C.) The Vulgate is, "Antequam rumpatur funiculus argenteus, et recurat vitta aurea, et conteratur hydria super fontem, et confringatur rota super cisternam, et revertatur pulvis in terram suam unde erat, et spiritus redeat ad Deum, qui dedit illum."

All is one selfe duste or ashes. (Omnia idem pulvis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii, No. 27. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 62. (1550)

Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust; in sure and certain hope of the Resurrection unto eternal life.

Book of Common Prayer: Burial of the Dead. (c. 1541) See also under DUST.

Dust thou art, to dust returnest,
Was not spoken of the soul.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)

<sup>4</sup> Trusting to fables we drift at random. (μύθοις δ' ἄλλως φερόμεσθα.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 197. (c. 428 B. C.) Euripides is speaking of man's ignorance of what happens after death.

<sup>5</sup> God's children are immortal whiles their Father hath any thing for them to do on earth.

THOMAS FULLER, The Church-History of Britain. Bk. ii, cent. 8. (1655)

Men are immortal till their work is done.

DAVID LIVINGSTONE, Letter, March, 1862, describing the death of Bishop Mackenzie.

Man is immortal till his work is done.

JAMES WILLIAMS, Sonnet: Ethandune. (1892) See The Guardian, 17 Nov., 1911.

<sup>6</sup> Our hope of immortality does not come from any religions, but nearly all religions come from that hope.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Interview, Chicago Times, 14 Nov., 1879.

<sup>7</sup> There is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease. (Lignum habet spem: si praeicisum fuerit, rursum virescit, et rami eius pullulant.)

Old Testament: Job, xiv, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

The tree that is cut down grows again; the moon that wanes waxes after a time. Thus do wise men reflect, and, though distressed, are not overwhelmed.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 87. (c. A. D. 100)

<sup>8</sup> If a man die, shall he live again? (Putasne mortuus homo rursum vivat?)

Old Testament: Job, xiv, 14. (c. 350 B. C.)

And can eternity belong to me,

Poor pensioner on the bounties of an hour?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 66. (1742)

1 Though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God. (Et rursum circumdabor pelle mea, et in carne mea videbo Deum meum.)

Old Testament: Job, xix, 26. (c. 350 B.C.)
My flesh shall rest in hope. (ἡ σὰρξ μου κατασκη-νώσει ἐν ἔλπιδι.)

New Testament: Acts, ii, 26. (c. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Caro mea requiescet in spe." "Resurgam" (I shall arise again) is the proverbial Latin.

Passed from death unto life. (ἐκ τοῦ θανάτου εἰς τὴν ζωὴν.)

New Testament: John, v, 24. (c. A.D. 95) The Vulgate is, "Transit a morte in vitam."

2 There is no Death! What seems so is transition.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Resignation. (1848)

There is no death! the stars go down

To rise upon some other shore.

JOHN LUCKEY MCCREERY, There Is No Death.
(1863) Often wrongly ascribed to Bulwer-Lytton. See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.

3 Death is not the end of all, and the pale ghost escapes the vanquished pyre. (Letum non omnia finit, | luridaque evictos effugit umbra rogos.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iv, No. vii, l. 1. (c. 26
B.C.) The Germans say, "Mit dem Tode hört nicht Alles auf" (With death everything doesn't stop).

In my better part I shall be raised to immortality above the lofty stars. (Parte tamen meliore mei super alta perinnis | astra ferar.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 875. (A.D. 7)
And her immortal part with angels lives.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, v, 1, 19. (1595)

4 The righteous hath hope in his death. (Sperat autem iustus in morte sua.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 32. (c. 250 B.C.)
God created man to be immortal, and made him to be an image of his own eternity. (Deus creavit hominem inexterminabilem, et ad im-aginem similitudinis suae fecit illum.)

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 23. (c.
100 B.C.)

IMPATIENCE

5 Eek wostow how it fareth of som servyse?
As plaunte a tre or herbe, in sondry wyse,
And on the morwe pulle it up as blyve,
No wonder is, though it may never thryve.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. i, l. 963. (c. 1380)
He plants a tree in the morning and wants to saw planks from it at evening.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs.
No. 623. (1937)

6 Impatience does not diminish, but always augments the Evil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3084. (1732)

IMPOSSIBILITY

Impatience makes every Ill double.

Impatience never gets Preferment.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3085-6.

7 Hurry no man's cattle; you may come to have a donkey of your own. Sometimes said to an impatient child.

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 236. (1869)

8 Impatience does Become a dog that's mad.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 15, 79.
(1606)

Impatience is a great obstacle to success. (L'im-patience est un grand obstacle au succès.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. (c. 1810) See
GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 293.

IMPERIALISM

9 Learn to think imperially.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, at Guildhall,
London, 19 Jan., 1904.

10 He defended the liberty and empire of the Roman people. (Populique Romani libertatem imperiumque defenderet.)

CICERO, Philippicae. No. iv, ch. 4. (44 B.C.)
Referring to Decimus Brutus.

Nerva has united two things long incompatible, empire and liberty. (Res olim dissociabiles, prin-cipatum ac libertatem.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3. (c. A.D. 98)

Here the two great principles, Imperium et libertas, res olim insociabiles (saith Tacitus), began to encounter each other.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL, Divi Britannici, p.
349. (1675)

One of the greatest Romans, when asked what were his politics replied, "Imperium et libertas."
That would not make a bad program for a
British ministry.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Mansion House,
London, 10 Nov., 1879.

11 The mission of the United States is one of benevolent assimilation, substituting the mild sway of justice and right for arbitrary rule.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Letter to General Otis,
21 Dec., 1898.

IMPOSSIBILITY

12 It is a disease of the soul to be enamored of things impossible of attainment. (νόσον ψυχῆς τὸ τῶν ἀδυνάτων ἐρᾶν.)

BIAS, Apothegm. (c. 570 B.C.) See DIOGENES
LAERTIUS, Bias, i, 86.

13 Consider nothing, before it has come to pass, as impossible. (Nihil, ante quam evenierit, non evenire posse arbitrari.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii,
ch. 14, sec. 30. (45 B.C.)

Despise no man, nor deem aught impossible.

BEN AZZAI, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iv, 6.
(c. A.D. 130)

Nothing is impossible.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iii, l. 378. (1594)

It becomes a wise Man not to think any Thing impossible.

SIR JOHN HILL, Review of the Works of the Royal Society, p. 66. (1751)

Naught's impossible, as t'auld woman said when they told her cauf had swallowed grindlestone.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 46. (1917)

Apparently there is nothing that cannot happen.

MARK TWAIN, Autobiography, i, 91. (1924)

<sup>1</sup> To a valiant heart nothing is impossible. (A cœur vaillant rien d'impossible.)

JEANNE D'ALBERT, of NAVARRE, mother of Henry IV. Her motto. (c. 1560) Adopted-by Henry as his own device.

Nothing is impossible to a wilyng hart.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

To a wilyng harte is nought impossible.

STEPHEN HAWES, Pastime of Pleasure, p. 7. (1555)

Nothing can be uneasy or hard to a willing heart.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 145. (1576)

Nothing is difficile to a well willit man.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)

Nothing is impossible to a willing mind.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 183. (1631)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 29. (1670)

Few things are impossible to diligence and skill.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 12. (1759)

Nothing is impossible to the man who can will.

(À qui veut, rien n'est impossible.)

MIRABEAU. (c. 1790) As quoted by EMERSON, Considerations by the Way.

<sup>2</sup> I think, and think on things impossible,
Yet love to wander in that Golden Maze.

DRYDEN, The Rival Ladies. Act iii, sc. 1. (1663)

<sup>3</sup> To attempt impossibilities is not the part of a wise man. (τὸ τοῦ μᾶν δ' ἀδύνατ' ἀνδρὸς οὐ σοφοῦ.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 811. (c. 412 B. C.)

There is no obligation to attempt the impossible. (Impossibilium nulla obligatio est.)

AULUS CELSUS, Alethes Logos. (c. A. D. 25)

No one is held bound to the impossible. (Ad impossibile nemo tenetur.)

JOHANNES NAVIZANUS, Sylva Nuptialis. Bk. i, 122. (c. 1460) Quoting a legal proverb, sometimes given as, "Ad impossibile nemo obligatur," or "Ultra posse nemo obligatur" (Beyond what he can do no one is obligated), which can be traced back to the great body of Roman law. Others forms are, "Lex neminem cogit ad impossibile" (The law requires no one to do the impossible); "Impossibilium nulla obligatio" (There can be no obligation to perform the impossible), and "Impotentia excusat legem" (The law excuses impossibility).

A wise man never Attempts impossibilities.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Renegado. Act i, sc. 1. (1630)

Though divines, they were presumed to have so much of civil law, . . . as to know, Nemo tenetur ad impossibilia, "No man is tied to impossibilities."

THOMAS FULLER, The History of the University of Cambridge, p. 236. (1655) The Japanese say, "Impossibility is a good reason."

Even divine power cannot produce impossibilities.

PRIESTLEY, Institutes of Religion, i, 28. (1772)

Hope not for impossibilities.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State: Of Anger. (1642)

Of the things we do and the things we know,

God's always a friendly fair appraiser,

And He doesn't expect a man to mow

Ten acres of grass with a safety razor.

JAMES BALL NAYLOR, Quatrain. (c. 1927)

<sup>4</sup> To believe a Business impossible, is the Way to make it so.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5138. (1732)

To the timid and hesitating everything is impossible, because it seems so.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 16. (1818)

Impossibilities recede as experience advances.

HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1847)

<sup>5</sup> Impossibilities are all equal, and admit of no degrees.

ROBERT HOWARD, The Duke of Lerma: Preface. (1668)

<sup>6</sup> Impossible! Never name to me that blockhead of a word! (Impossible! ne me dites jamais ce bête de mot.)

MIRABEAU, when his secretary told him that what he required was impossible. (c. 1789)

See CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. ii, bk. iii, ch. 7.

Impossible is a word which I never say. (Impossible est un mot que je ne dis jamais.)

COLLIN D'HARLEVILLE, Malice pour Malice. (1793)

"It is not possible," you write me? That is not French. ("Ce n'est pas possible," m'écrivez-vous? Cela n'est pas français.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Letter to Lemarois, commander of Magdeburg, 9 July, 1813. Usually quoted, "Le mot 'impossible' n'est pas français."

The word impossible is not in my dictionary.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 519. (1855) Quoted as a saying of Napoleon.

II—Impossibilities: Examples

See also Labor Lost

<sup>7</sup> Thou wouldst move the immovable. (σὺ δὲ θέλεις ἀν ἀθελκτον.)

AESCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens, l. 1055. (c. 485 B. C.)

Do not attempt to move the immovable. (μὴ κινεῖν τὰ ἀκίνητα.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. iii, sec. 684D. (c. 345 B. C.) Quoting a proverb which he refers to again in Republic, vi, 503B, and which is cited by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 359F.

1
To turn back the rivers. (ἄνω ποταμῶν.)
AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 367. (c.475 B.C.)
Things would flow backwards. (ἄνω γὰρ ἂν ῥέοι τὰ πράγματα.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 520. (c. 421 B.C.)
2
Who's for the Donkey-shearings? (ἡ 's δνον πόκας;)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 186. (405 B.C.)
The reference is to a proverb, "to shear the ass" (δνον κείρεις), meaning something that it is impossible to do. So to go to an assshearing was to go to Noplace, and in The Frogs, Charon names Ass-shearing as one of the ports at which his boat touches.

3
You can never teach a crab to walk straight forward. (οὐποτε ποιήσεις τὸν καρκίνον ὁρθὰ βαδίζειν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 1083. (421 B.C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 38, with the Latin, "Nuncque efficies ut recte ingrediantur cancri."

You can never smooth down the rough spikes of a hedgehog. (οὐδέποτε ἂν θέλεις λείον τὸν τραχὺν ἐχίνον.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 1086. (421 B.C.)
Repeated in slightly different form in l. 1114.
A proverb of great antiquity.

4
Not for birds' milk. (οὐδ' ἂν ὀρνίθων γάλα.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 508. (422 B.C.)

5
To exact an offering from the dead. (κἂν ἀπὸ νεκροῦ φέρα.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. ii. (c. 330 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 12, who gives the Latin, "A mortuo tributum exigere."
Erasmus devotes a page and a half to comment upon this proverb, the equivalent of the English, "To draw blood from a stone."

6
Break the cask but preserve the wine!
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 16a.
(c. 450) There is a similar saying in Shab-bath, 75a: "Cut off his head and shall he not die?"

They make an elephant pass through the eye of a needle.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metzia, fo. 38b.
(c. 450) A variation is (Berachoth, 55b):
"Man is never shown a golden date-palm, or an elephant passing through the eye of a needle." See also under RICHES.

7
To blow up a net. (γυργαθὸν φυσᾶν.)
IMMANUEL BEKKER, Anecdota Graeca. (1814)

8
The vow to stand on the edge of a sword.
(Asidhârâ vratam.)

BEHARTRIEHARI, Nîti Sataka. No. 64. (c. A. D. 100)

9
The cask cannot give any wine except what it has. (La botte non dà che del vino che ha.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 181. (1856) An Italian proverb.

10
To ask pears of the elm tree. (Pedir peras al olmo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 22 (1605);
Pt. ii, ch. 40, 52. (1615) GARAY, Carta 3, has a racy equivalent: "Pedir muelas al
gallo" (To look for grinders in a cock).

You ask an Elm-Tree for Pears.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5862. (1732)

11
To look for three feet on a cat. (Buscar tres pies al gato.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 22; ii, 10.
Meaning, to look for an impossibility; it should of course, be "cinco," "five," and so it stands in GARAY, Carta 3, and in the Academy Dictionary.

Many think to find bacon where there are not even hooks [to hang it on]. (Muchas piensas que hay tocinos y no hay estacas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25. (1605);
ii, ch. 55, 65, 73.

There's no taking trout with dry breeches. (No se toman truchas á bragas enjutas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 23, 71.
(1615) There is another Spanish form,
"Quien peces quiere, morjarse diene" (He who wants fish must put up with a wetting).
The Italians say, "Non si puo avere de pesci senza immolarsi."

12
You can't get ivory out of a dog's mouth.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xl. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.

13
'Tis hard to sail over the sea in an egg-shell.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 5. (1639)
Cited also by Ray and Fuller.

14
Sooner could you hide an elephant under your armpit. (Citius elephantem sub ala celes.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 56. (1508) Another one is, "Sooner shall earth mount to heaven"
(Citius terra aethera conscendet).

The Ethiopian cannot be whitened. (Aethiops non albescit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, x, 88. See under NEGRO.

15
You can't hang soft cheese on a hook.
EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 39. (1852)

16
Once milk becomes sour, it can't be made sweet again.

E. S. GARDNER, The D. A. Cooks a Goose, p.
113. (1942)

17
A goodly matter I promise you when men will goe about (as our Boccace sayth) to make an Orange tree of a briry bush.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 195. (1574) Pettie, tr.

18
You can't catch two frogs with one hand.
H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs.
No. 201. (1937)

<sup>1</sup> 'Twas like trying to dig a prairie dog out of his hole with a peanut hull.

O. HENRY, The Pimienta Pancakes. (1907)

<sup>2</sup> It is impossible to step twice in the same river. (ποταμῷ γὰρ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμβῆναι δις τῷ αὐτῷ.)

HERACLEITUS, Fragments. Frag. 91, Diels. (c. 500 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 392B. Impossible, of course, because the water is always changing.

<sup>3</sup> You cannot hide an eel in a sack.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 764. (1640) See under EEL.

You cannot flay a stone.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. See under STONE.

It is very hard to shave an egg.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. See under EGG.

<sup>4</sup> I shall as soone trie him or take him this waie, As dryve a top ouer a tyeld house.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

You may drive a toppie over a tylde house as soon.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

<sup>5</sup> It is harde to make an olde dog stoupe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

An old dog will learn no new tricks.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 326. (1605) See under DOG.

It is hard to make an old mare leave flinging (kicking).

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 193. (1721)

<sup>6</sup> Ye will (quoth she) as soone stop gaps with rushes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

He that depends

Upon your favours hews down oaks with rushes.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, i, 1, 183. (1607)

<sup>7</sup> 'Tis ill gathering of stones where the sea is bottomless.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

<sup>8</sup> You cannot sell the cow and sup the milk.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 379. (1721)

If you sell the Cow, you sell her Milk too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 2786. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> The fawn catching the lion. (ὁ νεβρός τὸν λέοντα.)

LUCIAN, Dialogues of the Dead, viii, 1. (c. A. D. 170)

<sup>10</sup> Is it possible to gather grapes of thornes, or figges of thistles, or to cause any thing to striue against Nature?

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 42. (1579)

<sup>11</sup> You can't heal a dog-bite without a cautery.

NGAIO MARSH, The Nursing-Home Murder, p. 182. (1941)

<sup>12</sup> To skin a flint and draw oil out of a brick wall.

MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 7. (1693)

An interpolation by Motteux. For SKIN A FLINT, see under STONE.

You can't beat oil out of chaff.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 625. (1937)

<sup>13</sup> To drink up the sea. (Mare interbibere.)

NAEVIUS, Bellum Poenicum Frag. 39. Loeb. (c. 220 B. C.)

He undirfongith a gret peyne, That undirtakith to drinke up Seyne.

(Emprise a merveilleuse peine:

Il bee a beivre toute Seine.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 5081. (c. 1270). Chaucer (?), tr., l. 5709. (c. 1365)

<sup>14</sup> Sooner will a lobster spawn a Lucanian cow. (Prius pariet lucusta Lucam bovem.)

NAEVIUS, Bellum Poenicum. Frag. 65, Loeb. (c. 220 B. C.) Proverbial for any impossibility <sup>15</sup> You can take the boy out of the patch, but you can't take the patch out of the boy.

JOHN O'HARA, Appointment in Samarra, p. 12. (1934)

<sup>16</sup> It is impossible of a kyte or cormerant to make a good sharhawk.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Pallace of Pleasure, iii. 68. (1567) See under HAWK.

<sup>17</sup> To give solidity to smoke. (Dare pondus fumo.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. v, l. 20. (c. A. D. 58)

<sup>18</sup> To bind a dog with the gut of a lamb. (Aginis lactibus alligare canem.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. (c. 25 B. C.) English equivalents are, "You can't tie up a mad bull with a packthread," "You can't bolt a door with a boiled carrot."

<sup>19</sup> To count the pebbles on the shore. (ποντιᾶν ψάφων ἀριθμῶν.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. xiii, l. 66. (464 B. C.)

The sands of the sea—who can number them?

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus) i, 2. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

To number the ashes. (μετρήσεις τὴν σποδόν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 26, sec. 17 (c. A. D. 100)

Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes

Is numbering sands and drinking oceans dry

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 2, 145. (1595)

<sup>20</sup> The number of gallons in the sea, as the saying is. (οἱ τῆς θαλάττης ἡγόμενοι χόες.)

PLATO, Theaetetus. Sec. 173D. (c. 390 B. C.)

Plato is referring to a saying of Aristides, ὥσπερ ἀνελ τις ἐξαριθμείσθαι βούλοιτο τοὺς χοᾶς τῆς θαλάττης (As if you should wish to reckon up the gallons of the sea). The χοῦς was a liquid measure of about three quarts.

<sup>21</sup> You tell me to strip the clothes off a naked man. (Nudo detrahare vestimenta me jubes.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 92. (c. 200 B. C.) The proverb is, "Nemo potest nudo vestimenta detrudere" (No one can strip a naked man of his garments). The French have the same proverb, "On ne peut homme nu dépouiller." The Turks say, "Not even a thousand men in armor can strip a naked man."

There is nothing more vain . . .
Than to beg a breeche of a bare arst man.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
To pull a breeche of a bare arst man.

JOHN BARET, An Alvearie, B, 150. (1580)
To seek a breech from breechlesse men 'twere vain.

JOHN TAYLOR, Works, p. 37. (1630)
An hundred Thieves cannot strip one naked Man, especially if his Skin's off.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.
It's hard to get a stocking off a bare leg.

ROBERT HOLLAND, Cheshire Glossary, p. 451. (1886)

IT'S ILL TAKING THE BREEKS AFF A HIELANDMAN, see under SCOTLAND.

1
You fly without wings. (Tu sine pennis volas.)
PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 93. (c. 200 B.C.) In Poenulus, iv, 2, 47, Plautus has, "Sine pennis volare haud facile est") To fly without wings is by no means easy).

You might as well expect to whiten ivory with ink. (Una opera ebur atramento candefacere postules.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 259. (c. 220 B.C.)
You expect to snatch a lamb from a wolf. (Lupo agnum eripere postulant.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 776. (c. 194 B.C.) Or, as the English proverb goes, "You're trying to snatch the meat from the dog's mouth."
The same idea is back of VERGIL's line,
Eclogues, viii, 52, "Let the wolf flee from the sheep" (Ovis fugiat lupus).

2
It's no easy task to whistle and drink at the same time. (Simul flare sorbereque haud factu facilest.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 791. (c. 220 B.C.)
Quoted as a proverb by Plautus, and also by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 80, who gives the generally accepted form, "Simul sorbere et flare, difficile." Both the Spaniards and the French have the same proverb, the former,
"Soplar y sorber, no puede junto ser"; the latter, "Souffler et avaler, ne se peuvent arranger."

It is a common saying, that one cannot drinke and whistle altogether.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, fo. 137. (1574)
Pettie, tr. HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

As a sextine sayd, a man cannot cary the crosse, and ring the bells altogether.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 99. The French say, "On ne peut sonner les cloches et aller à la procession" (One cannot ring the bells and march in the procession).

No man can doe two thyngs at once, the prouerbe old doeth tell.

TIMOTHY KENDALL, Flowers of Epigrammes, p.
264. (1577)

A man cannot spin and reel at the same time.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 215. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 2591, has, "I cannot spin and weave at the same time."

It is hard to sup and blow with one wind.
WILLIAM WALKER, Paraemiologia, p. 8. (1672)
Blow first and sip afterwards. Simul sorbere et flare difficile est.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 103. (1678)
It is hard to sup and blow with one breath.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 1190. (1681)

I cannot run and sit still at the same Time.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2590. (1732)

3
I can't be here and there at the same time.
(Ego hic esse et illic simitu hau potui.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 792. (c. 220 B.C.)
We cannot be here and there too.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 5, 15. (1595)
One cannot be in two places at once.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Moulin. (1611)
You cannot be found in two places at once.

WILLIAM GURNALL, *The Christian in Compleat
Armour*, i, 206. (1655)

I cannot be at York and London at the same time.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2588. (1732)

4
I can't carry a goat, and you are loading me with an ox. (ὁ δούραται τὴν αἰγὰ φέρει, ἐπὶ μοὶ θερετὸν βοῦν.)

PLUTARCH, On Avoidance of Lending. Sec.
830A. (c. A. D. 95)

5
Then the town-bull is a bachelor, i. e. as soon
as such an one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 66. (1678)
You can't make a horn of a pig's tail.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 104. See under PIG
It is hard to make a good web of a bottle of hay.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 154. FULLER,
Gnomologia. No. 2950. (1732)

You may as soon shape a coat for the moon.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 260. Ray cites many other proverbial phrases for impos-sibilities, such as, "He is building a bridge over the sea," "He is teaching iron to swim."

You may as soon Make a Cloak for the Moon.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6158. (1732)

6
You can't make an omelette without breaking eggs.

ROBESPIERRE, Epigram. (c. 1790)
YOU CAN'T UNSCRAMBLE EGGS, see under ECO.

7
You cannot clap with one palm. (Yi ko pa chang p'ai pu hsiang.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
62. (1875)

A temple can not be built from one tree. (Miao lang chih ts'ai fei yi mu chih chih.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 64.
How can one pole build a great house? (Yi mu yen neng chih ta hsia.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 71.
One louse cannot raise a coverlet. (Yi ko shih tsu ting pu ch'i pei wo.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 70.

No one can sew without a needle; no one can row without water. (Fei chên pu yin hsien; wu shiu pu ta ch'uan.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 240.

<sup>1</sup> To number the waves. (κύματ' ἀμειβεῖν.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 107. (c. 475 B. C.)

See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 343.

As well stand on the beach and strive to number the waves driven shoreward. (ἐπ' ὄντι κύματα μετρεῖν.)

THEOCRITUS, Elegies. Eleg. xvi, l. 60. (c. 270 B. C.)

To count the waves. (Fluctus numero.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ii, epis. 6. (59 B. C.)

Fain to know how many billows of the Ionian sea roll shoreward. (Nosse quot Ionii veniant ad litora fluctus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 108. (29 B. C.)

You bid me number the waves of the sea. (Oceani fluctus me numerare iubes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, ep. 34. (c. A. D. 90)

To number the waves. (Undas numeras.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 45. (1508) Citing Theocritus and Vergil, and giving the Latin proverb.

<sup>2</sup> You cannot get white flour out of a coal sack, nor perfection out of human nature.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 10. (1869)

There's no getting white meal out of a coal-sack.

F. E. TAYLOR, Lancs. Sayings, p. 10. (1901)

The French say, "Il ne sort point de farine d'un sac à charbon," or "D'un sac à charbon ne peut sortir blanche farine."

<sup>3</sup> A man cannot pipe without his upper lip.

FRANCIS THYNNE, Continuation of Holinshed's Scotland. (1586)

<sup>4</sup> You can't split an axe-head with a whip.

TOLSTOY, War and Peace. Vol. ii, pt. ii, ch. 18. (1865) Dole, tr.

<sup>5</sup> Who can take up a heated substance, Without wetting his hands?

UNKNOWN, Book of Songs (Shiking). (c. 1000 B. C.) Quoted by MENCUS, iv, i, 7. There are hundreds of other proverbs dealing with impossible tasks besides those which have been cited here. For example, the Chinese say, "You cannot take two skins from one cow"; the Italians, "You cannot sink a sunken ship"; the French, "You cannot get oil from a wall"; the Dutch, "You cannot shoe a running horse," and so on.

BLOOD OUT OF A STONE, see under BLOOD.

EAT AND HAVE YOUR CAKE, see under CAKE.

CARRY WATER IN A SIEVE, see under SIEVE.

SILK PURSE OUT OF SOW'S EAR, see under SOW

IMPRESSIONS

<sup>6</sup> Forwhy men seyth, "impressiounes lighte Ful lightly been ay redy to the flighte."

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1238. (c. 1374) The proverb is, "Slight impressions soon fade."

<sup>7</sup> It is the worst impressions which are the most lasting. (Haec ipsa magis pertinaciter haerent. quo deteriora sunt.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch 1, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 80)

<sup>8</sup> The entrance-hall is the ornament of the house. (Vestibulum domus ornamentum est.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb, meaning that first impressions are the most important.

There is a great deal in the first impression

CONGREVE, Way of the World, iv, 1. (1700)

First impressions, you know, often go a long way.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit Ch 5. (1843)

IMPUDENCE

<sup>9</sup> Impudence is a kingdom without a crown

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 25. (c. 450)

<sup>10</sup> Impudence is the bastard of ignorance.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 213. (c. 1670)

Ignorance is the mother of impudence.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 422. (1855)

His ignorance is the mother of his impudence

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 2. (1869)

<sup>11</sup> "Confound his impudence!" muttered Squeers

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 13. (1838)

You've got more crust than a piece of toast

FRANK GRUBER, The Navy Colt, p. 108. (1941)

<sup>12</sup> Impudence and Wit are vastly different.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3088. (1732)

Impudence commonly makes a Fortune.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3089

<sup>13</sup> Folly often goes beyond her bounds; but Impudence knows none.

JONSON, Explorata: Scitum Hispanicum (1636)

<sup>14</sup> Than Impudence there is no more illustrious goddess. (οὐκ ἔστι Τόλμης ἐπιφανέστερα θεός.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 793K. (c. 300 B. C.) A variation of the still older Greek proverb, θεός ἡ ἀναιδεία (Impudence is a goddess).

IMPULSE

<sup>15</sup> Obey that impulse.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Empty Tin, p. 79. (1941)

"Obey that impulse" has always been her motto.

MALMAR, Never Say Die, p. 56. (1943)

<sup>16</sup> What is now reason was formerly impulse. (Quod nunc ratio est, impetus ante fuit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 10. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>17</sup> Impulse manages all things badly. (Male cuncta ministrat Impetus.)

STATIUS, Thebaid. Bk. x, l. 704. (c. A. D. 92)

Talleyrand is credited with the cynical epigram, "Mistrust first impulses; they are always good." See his life in Biographie Universelle.

INCH

<sup>1</sup>
An inch in a miss is as good as an ell.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870) p. 318.
(1605) See under Miss.

<sup>2</sup>
Starve him gradually, inch by inch.
WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Way of the World.
Act iv, sc. 12. (1700)
To dispute the ground inch by inch.
FRANCIS HARE, Church Authority Vindicated,
p. 27. (1719)

<sup>3</sup>
He that is permitted more than is right wants more than is permitted. (Cui plus licet quam par est plus vult quam licet.)

PUBLIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 145. (c. 43
B.C.) This saying, the ancestor of "He that is given an inch will take an ell," is cited by AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, xvii, 14, and by MACROBIUS, Saturnalia, ii, 7.

Whan I gaue you an ynche, ye tooke an ell.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
Give an inch, and you'll take an ell.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. Act iv, sc. 3. (1599) TATHAM, The Rump, iv. (1660) SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel, ch. 27. (1822) etc., etc.

Give your wife a yard and she'll take an ell.
THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. ii,
act ii, sc. 2. (1604)

Giue a knaue an inch, hee'l take an ell.
JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Works, p. 168.
(1630)

For sovereignty where she gets an inch, stickes not sometimes to stretch it to an ell.

JAMES HOWELL, Dodona's Grove, p. 8. (1640)

Give him an inch, and he'll take an ell.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 167. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1656. (1732)

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 14.
(1865) etc., etc. A proverb common to many languages and with many variants. The French say, "Si on lui en donne un doigt, il en prend long comme le bras" (If one gives him one finger—or inch—he takes a piece as long as your arm), or, "Si vous lui donnez un pied, il vous en prendra quatre" (If you give him a foot, he'll take four); the Germans, "Wer sich auf der Achsel sitzen lässt, dem sitzt man nacher auf dem Kopfe" (He who lets a man sit on his shoulders, will have him presently sitting on his head); the Italians, "Se ti lasci metter in spalla il vitello, quindi a poco ti metteranno la vacca" (If you let them place a calf on you, they'll soon clap on a cow), a proverb cited by ARCH-BISHOP TRENCH, Proverbs, iii, 68, with the comment, "Undue liberties are best resisted at the outset." The Spanish form is, "Dame dondo me asiente, que yo haré donde me acueste" (Give me a place to sit down, and I'll make a place to lie down); the Russians, "Call a peasant 'Brother,' he'll demand you call him 'Father'"; the Danes, "Make yourself an ass, and you'll have every man's sack on your shoulders." The Italians have one very like the Russian, "Al villano, se gli porgi il dito, ei prende la mano" (Give a clown your finger, he'll take your hand). A modern American variant is, "Give a motorist an inch and he'll try to park on it."

It was according to the old saying, "Give a nigger an inch and he'll take an ell."

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 16. (1884)
Don't trust me an inch, because I might take an ell.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, In the Balance, p. 165.
(1941)

If you gave Philip an inch, he moved right in.
MANNING LONG, False Alarm, p. 97. (1943)

<sup>4</sup>
An inch in an hour is a foot in a day.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 633. (1732)

<sup>5</sup>
I will drub you, you Dog, within an Inch of your Life, and that Inch too.

GEORGE ROBERTS, Four Years Voyages, p. 30.
(1726)

I'll flog you within an inch of your life, and spare you that.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 13. (1839)

<sup>6</sup>
I would I had thy inches.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 3, 40.
(1606)

A notable fellow of his inches.

THOMAS BROWN, The Saints in an Uproar.
Works (1730), i, 73. (1687)

A tall fellow of his inches.

MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. v, ch. 1. (1809)

<sup>7</sup>
I'll not budge an inch.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction, 1, 13. (1594) See also III Henry VI, v, 4, 66; Hamlet, iii, 4, 18.

<sup>8</sup>
An inch at the top, is worth two at the bottom.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

INCONSISTENCY

See also Consistency

<sup>9</sup>
Avoid the clash of inconsistency:
Who fights with self, with no one will agree.
(Sperne repugnando tibi tu contrarius esse:
conveniet nulli qui secum dissidet ipse.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 4. (c. 175 B.C.)

Nothing that is not a real crime makes a man appear so contemptible and little in the eyes of the world as inconsistency, especially when it regards religion or party.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 5 Sept., 1711.

<sup>10</sup>
No philosopher ever declared another to be inconsistent for changing his plans. (Nemo doctus umquam . . . mutationem consilii inconstantiam dixit esse.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xvi, epis. 7. (44 B.C.)

Alas! in truth the man but changed his mind;
Perhaps was sick, in love, or had not dined.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 127. (1732)
'Tis often constancy to change the mind.

JOHN HOOLE, tr., Metastasio's Sieves. (1767)

Jean Jacques Barthélemy is credited with the epigram, "L'homme absurde est celui qui ne change jamais" (The absurd man is he who never changes).

<sup>1</sup> He says one thing standing, another sitting down. (Aliud stans, aliud sedens loquitur.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iii, No. 56. (1523) Quoting Cicero.

<sup>2</sup> He despises what he sought; and he seeks that which he lately threw away. (Quod petiit spernit, repetit quod nuper omisit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 98. (20 B. C.)
What our contempt doth often hurl from us,
We wish it ours again.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 2, 127. (1606)

<sup>3</sup> What boots it at one gate to make defence
And at another to let in the foe?

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 560. (1671)

<sup>4</sup> Unthought-of frailties cheat us in the wise:
The fool lies hid in inconsistencies.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 69. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Man is a Creature very inconsistent with himself.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 7. (1709)

Ah! how unjust to nature, and himself
Is thoughtless, thankless, inconsistent man!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts, ii, 113. (1742)

Man is so inconsistent a creature that it is impossible to reason from his belief to his conduct or from one part of his belief to another.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: Hallam. (1828)

Inconsistency—the only thing in which men are consistent.

HORACE SMITH, Tin Trumpet, p. 204. (1836)

INCONSTANCY

See also Constancy

<sup>6</sup> The man's a bird, unstable, always on the wing. (ἄνθρωπος ὄρνις, ἀστάθηντος, πετόμενος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds. l. 169. (414 B. C.)

You are flighty and your thoughts are empty. (πέτειε καὶ καὶ φρονῶν οὐδὲν φρονεῖς.)

EURIPIDES, The Bacchantes, l. 332. (410 B. C.)

He'd fly after something else. (ἐφ' ἑτέρον ἀνέπετο.)

ARISTOPHANES, Ecclesiazusae, l. 899. (c. 393 B. C.)
He ebbs and flows like Euripus. (μεταπρεῖ ὡς περ Εὐρίπυος.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. 6, sec. 3. (c. 335 B. C.) The strait of Euripus, between Boeotia and Euboea, was supposed by the Greeks to have seven tides a day and so became proverbial for inconstancy. AESCHINES, lxi, 27, used the comparison at about the same time as Aristotle, phrasing it a little differently, πλείους τραπέμενος τροπὰς τοῦ Εὐρίπυος (Turning as often as Euripus). Another Greek proverbial phrase for sudden change or inconstancy is ὁστράκον μεταπεσόντος (As the shell changes sides), derived from a game called ὁστράκινδα, in which a potsherd, with one side black and the other white, was thrown on a line.

<sup>7</sup> As a wedercok, that turneth his face
With every wind, ye fare, and that is sene.

CHAUCER (?), Against Women Unconstant, l. 12. (c. 1390)

Waueryng as the wynde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

He's like a feather on a hill.

UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS., iii, 26. (1639)

You are as unconstant as the wind; as wavering as the weathercock.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 14. (1672)

A wavering man is like a skein of silk.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Wavering. (1736)

<sup>8</sup> But canstow pleyen raket, to and fro, Netle in, dokke out, now this, now that,
Pandare?

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 460.

(c. 1374) "In dock, out nettle" was originally a charm uttered to cure nettle-stings by dock-leaves, but became a proverbial expression for changeableness and inconstancy.

For in one state they twayne could not yet settle,
But waueryng as the wynde, in docke out nettle.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

I cannot skill of such chaungeable mettle,
There is nothing with them but in docke out nettle.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act ii, sc. 3. (c. 1550)

Oute nettle, in docke.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals Dictionary Revised, sig.

E2. (1586) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3831

The constable . . . found some dock leaves, . . . rubbed her hands with the leaves, repeating the old saw Out nettle, In dock: Dock shall ha' a new smock; Nettle shan't ha' narrun.

HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 23. (1861)

<sup>9</sup> Constant in nothing but inconstancie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber).

p. 320. (1580) ROBERT GREENE, Morando

(1584) POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii. (1735)

The world's a scene of changes, and to be Constant, in Nature were inconstancy.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Inconstancy. (c. 1633)

There is nothing in the world constant but inconstancy.

SWIFT, On the Faculties of the Mind. (c. 1720)

Since 'tis Nature's law to change,

Constancy alone is strange.

JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF ROCHESTER, A Dialogue, l. 31. (c. 1675)

<sup>10</sup> Other towns; other girls. (Andere Städtchen andere Mädchen.)

ALBERT SCHLIPPENBACH, Liederbuch für Deutsche Künstler. (1833)

- 1
Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever,
One foot in sea and one on shore,
To one thing constant never.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 3,
64. (1598) Probably a fragment of an old ballad of unknown authorship. See PERCY,
Reliques, vol. i, bk. ii, No. 18.

INDECISION

See also Hesitation, Timidity

- 2
Each indecision brings its own delays,
And days are lost lamenting other days.
JOHN ANSTER, tr., Faust, Pt. i, Prelude at the Theatre. (1888)
Indecision and hesitation are the weakness of a careful nature always intent on the saving of face and losing it thereby.
H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 55. (1941)
- 3
The sin I impute to each frustrate ghost
Is—the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin,
Though the end in sight was a vice, I say.
BROWNING, The Statue and the Bust. (1855)
- 4
He advances one leg and draws back the other.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 771. (1817)
- 5
Remain'd like the ass 'twixt two bottles of hay,
Without ever moving an inch either way.
JOHN BYROM, The Fight Between Figg and Sutton. (c. 1760)
I swithered [hesitated], and was like the cuddie [ass] between the two bundles of hay.
DAVID MOIR, Mansie Wauch. Ch. 25. (1824)
You've been off and on lately . . . like a donkey between two bundles of hay.
KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 27. (1850)
Some men have almost died of indecision, like the donkey between two exactly similar bundles of hay.
E. J. HARDY, How to Be Happy though Married. Ch. 2. (1886)
- 6
In indecision itself guilt is present. (In ipsa dubitatione facinus inest.)
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 8, sec. 37. (c. 45 B.C.)
Of all the small annoyances that weight our mental buoyances,
No chaff or cold derision is so sad as indecision.
W. S. GILBERT, The Bab Ballads. (1869)
- 7
While I at length debate and beate the bushe,
There shall steppe in other men, and catche
the burdes.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. iii. (1562)
See also under BUSH.
- 8
Ashamed to refuse, but yet afraid to take.
(αἰδέσθην μὲν ἀρνήσασθαι, δέισαν δ' ὑποδέχθαι.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 93. (c. 850 B.C.)
Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, vi, 1, xvi, 11.
Like children with a piece of ice, they are neither able to hold it nor willing to let it go. (ὥσπερ οἱ παῖδες τὸν κρύσλλον οὔτε δύνανται κατέχειν οὔτ' ἀφείναι θέλουσι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Concerning Talkativeness.
Sec. 508C. (c. A. D. 95) Plutarch is quoting a proverb, cited by ZENOBIUS, v, 58.

9
Through indecision opportunity is often lost.
(Deliberando saepe perit occasio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 163. (c. 43 B.C.)
While we consider when to begin, it becomes too late to do so. (Dum deliberamus quando incipi-endum, incipere iam serum fit.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. xii, ch.
6, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 80)

10
When men discover many plans they are uncertain which to follow. (Homini tum deest consilium cum multa invenit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 266. (c. 43 B.C.)

11
He haws and he hums,
At last out it comes.

SWIFT, My Lady's Lamentation, l. 109. (1728)
Hem and Haw were the sons of sin,
Created to shally and shirk;
Hem lay 'round and Haw looked on
While God did all the work.

BLISS CARMAN, Hem and Haw. (1896)

12
I won't, I will; I will, I won't again; take, give back; what was said unsaid, what was settled upset. (Nolo volo; volo nolo rursum;
cape, cedo; | quod dictum indictumst; quod
modo ratum erat inritumst.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 950. (161 B.C.)

I am forced to say with the Poet, Neither yea neither nay, can I resolve flatly to say.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 36. (1574) Pettie, tr.

I am At war 'twixt will and will not.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 32.
(1604)

May-bee was ne'er a gude honey-bee.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 131. (1832)

13
I stand at the crossroads. (ἐν τριόδῳ ἔσηκα.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies. Frag. (c. 600 B.C.) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 48, who gives the Latin, "In trivio sum."

Standing, with reluctant feet,
Where the brook and river meet.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood. (1841)

INDEPENDENCE

14
Independence forever!

JOHN ADAMS. His last words. On the morning of July 4, 1826, Adams was aroused from slumber by the discharge of cannon, and asked the cause. On being told it was Independence Day, he murmured "Independence forever!" and sank into a coma from which he never awoke. He had suggested the phrase a few days previously as a toast to be offered in his name at a banquet to be given on the Fourth.

It is my living sentiment, and by the blessing of God it shall be my dying sentiment.—Independence now and Independence forever!

DANIEL WEBSTER, Eulogy, in memory of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, 2 Aug., 1826. Adams and Jefferson had died on the same day, 4 July, 1826, and Webster was paraphrasing Adams's last words in an imaginary speech attributed to him.

<sup>1</sup>
To catch Dame Fortune's golden smile,
Assiduous wait upon her;
And gather gear by ev'ry wile
That's justify'd by honour;
Not for to hide it in a hedge,
Nor for a train-attendant,
But for the glorious privilege
Of being independent.

ROBERT BURNS, Epistle to a Young Friend. (1786)

He was really independent, because he had learnt how to support himself.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Moral Tales, i, i, 7. (1802)
She possessed that most desirable of all requisites, a small independence.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 8. (1837)

<sup>2</sup>
Bee thine owne Palace, or the world's thy gaole.

JOHN DONNE, To Sir Henry Wotton, l. 52. (c. 1597)

Keep the staff in your ain hand.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

<sup>3</sup>
Whoso would be a man, must be a Non-conformist.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

<sup>4</sup>
As long as I live, I'll spit in my Parlour.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 710. (1732)

I wear my hat as I please indoors or out.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 20. (1855)

<sup>5</sup>
That independence Britons prize too high,
Keeps man from man and breaks the social tie.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 339. (1764)

<sup>6</sup>
Resolved, That these United Colonies are, and of a right ought to be, free and independent States.

RICHARD HENRY LEE, Resolution, introduced into the Continental Congress, 7 June, 1776. Embodied in the Declaration of Independence, adopted 4 July, 1776.

Independence, in all kinds, is rebellion.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1831)

<sup>7</sup>
So live that you can look any man in the eye and tell him to go to hell.

H. L. MENCKEN, The American Language, p. 434. (1918) The origin of this bit of advice is unknown, but Mencken says "it was first given currency by one of the engineers of the Panama canal, a gentleman later retired, it would seem, for attempting to execute his own counsel." Used by John D. Rockefeller, jr., in an address before the senior class at Dartmouth, June, 1930.

<sup>8</sup>
Let each man have the wit to go his own way.
(Unus quisque sua noverit ire via.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 25, l. 38 (c. 26 B.C.)

All beastes so soone as they are deliuered from their dam get vpon their feete, and are able to stand a high alone.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, fo. 12. (1586) Pettie, tr.

To go a high lone; by himself.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 37. (1672)

<sup>9</sup>
The charms of independence let us sing.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Elegies, ix, 50. (1750)

Thy spirit, Independence, let me share!

Lord of the lion-heart and eagle-eye.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Ode to Independence (c. 1760)

<sup>10</sup>
Independent as a hog on ice.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 495. (1940)

<sup>11</sup>
I was not born to be forced. I will breathe after my own fashion . . . If a plant cannot live according to its nature, it dies; and so a man.

H. D. THOREAU, Civile Disobedience (1849)

I would rather sit on a pumpkin and have it all to myself than be crowded on a velvet cushion

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. (1854)

<sup>12</sup>
Independence is good, but isolation is too high a price to pay for it.

BENJAMIN TUCKER, Instead of a Book. (1893)

II—Independence: Admonitions

<sup>13</sup>
Every tub must stand upon his own bottom.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 66. (1639)
See under TUB.

<sup>14</sup>
Paddle your own boat. (μόνος μόνῳ κούμιζε πορθμίδος σκάφος.)

EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 362. (c. 440 B.C.)

I row my own course. (Remigio rem gero.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 747. (c. 200 B.C.)

I think it much better that . . . every man paddle his own canoe.

MARRYAT, Settlers in Canada. Ch. 8. (1840)

Voyager upon life's sea,

To yourself be true,

And whate'er your lot may be,

Paddle your own canoe.

UNKNOWN, Paddle Your Own Canoe. Published anonymously in the Editor's Drawer of Harper's Monthly for May, 1854, with this prefatory note: "They have a very expressive term at the West, in speaking of a young man who would be the architect of his own fortune, that he must 'paddle his own canoe.'"

Every man must row with such oars as he has.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 131. (1875)

What a chump a man is when it comes to paddling his own canoe.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Helping the Other Fellow. (1908)

1 Let every man gnaw on his own bone.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 160. (c. 1430)

I should have remembered the old saying, Every hog his own apple.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 41. (1748)

Let every pedlar carry his own burden.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)

Let every Pedlar carry his own Pack.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3176. (1732)

Let every sheep hing [hang] by its own shank. Every man must stand by his own endeavour.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 240. (1721)

Let every herring hing by its ain head, and every sheep by its ain shank.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 26. (1818)

Every head must do its own thinking.

GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 208. (1836)

It's my notion that in a free country every feller ought to cut his own fodder.

ANN SOPHIA STEPHENS, High Life in New York, i, 32. (1843)

Let every man skin his own skunks.

J. R. BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 122. (1859)

INDIAN (AMERICAN)

2 I have never in my life seen a good Indian (and I have seen thousands) except when I have seen a dead Indian.

CAVANAUGH, OF MONTANA, Debate, House of Representatives, 28 May, 1868.

The only good Indians I ever saw were dead.

GEN. PHILIP HENRY SHERIDAN, at Old Fort Cobb, Indian Territory, in January, 1869. The story, as told by Edward M. Ellis, who stated that he was present at the time, is that, after a fight with the Indians, a chief named Old Toch-a-way was presented to Sheridan, and said, "Me good Indian." Sheridan retorted as above. The saying is usually quoted as "The only good Indian is a dead Indian."

A good Indian is a dead Indian.

ALFRED GURNEY, Ramble Through the United States, p. 29. (1884)

On the frontier a good Indian means a "dead Indian."

WILLIAM SHEPHERD, Prairie Experiences, p. 62. (1884)

They said of the Red Indian, did they not, that a good Indian was a dead Indian?

AGATHA CHRISTIE, N or M, p. 36. (1941)

Miss Gilley still felt that the only good Indian was a dead Indian.

ROSEMARY TAYLOR, Chicken Every Sunday, p. 7. (1943)

3 "Do yer ask honest Injun, no cheatin' nor nothin'?" "Certainly. Perfectly honest Injun."

BLANCHE WILLIS HOWARD, One Summer. Ch. 10. (1875)

I'll stick to it. Honest Injun, I will.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 8. (1884) Honest Injun, in colloquial American, is equivalent to the English "honor bright," and is often heard among school-boys as a pledge of faith.

W. S. WALSH, Handy-Book of Literary Curiosities, p. 485. (1892)

4 Lo, the poor Indian! whose untutor'd mind Sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 99. (1732)

5 Injins is Pizen, wherever found.

ARTEMUS WARD, A Visit to Brigham Young. (c. 1862)

INDIFFERENCE

6 Moral indifference is the malady of the cultivated classes. (L'indifference morale est la maladie des gens très cultivés.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 26 Oct., 1870

7 I have no desire to know whether you are black or white. (Nil nimum studeo scire utrum sis albus an ater homo.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode xciii. (c. 57 B.C.) A proverbial phrase for utter indifference, used by CICERO, Philippics, ii, 15, PHAEDRUS, Fables, iii, xv, 10, QUINTILIAN, xi, i, 38, and others.

It is not worth stretching out a finger for. (Ne digitum quidem eius causa porrigendum esse.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iii, ch. 17, sc. 57 (c. 45 B.C.) A reference to the proverb, "Manum non verterim, digitum non porrexerim" (I would not turn my hand, I would not stretch out a finger), indicating utter indifference

8 It is no more to him than a Crab [crab-apple] in a Cow's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2990. (1732) What's a Crab in a Cow's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5505.

Too soon your band its weakness would deplore! A crab in a cow's mouth—no more!

JOHN WOLCOT, Rights of Kings. (1791)

9 It's all one to me. (Ce m'est tout vn.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548) 'Tis indifferent, as Doll danced.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

II—Indifference: Not to Care

10 Whatever turn the matter takes, I deem it all but ducks and drakes. . . .

Let me be deft and debonaire,

I am content, I do not care!

JOHN BYROM, Careless Content. (c. 1763)

The cat is in the parlor, the dog is in the lake; The cow is in the hammock—what difference does it make?

UNKNOWN, Indifference. (c. 1910)

1 For wel I woot, al-though I wake or winke,
Ye rekke not whether I flete or sinke.

CHAUCER (?), The Complaynte unto Pite, l. 109. (c. 1369)

Him rekketh never wher she flete or sinke.

CHAUCER (?), Anelida and Arcite, l. 182. (c. 1372)

2 He did not care a button for cock-fighting.

GEORGE ELIOT, Silas Marner. Ch. 3. (1861)

I don't care a toss where you are.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda, p. 236. (1876)

3 Not that I care three damns what figure I may cut.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter 46. (1760)

Do you suppose I care a damn for that?

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda, p. 211. (1876)

I don't care a continental.

O. HENRY, A Ghost of a Chance. (1911)

4 Few know, and fewer care.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10. (1546)

5 I don't care a flock. (Non ego te flocci facio.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 713. (c. 200 B.C.) Repeated in Epidicus, l. 348; Menachmi, l. 422; Rudens, l. 47, and elsewhere. Floccus means a flock or fluff of wool on clothing, hence anything insignificant or trifling.

I will never care three flocks for his ambition

JOHN LYLY, Midas. Act iv, sc. 2. (1592)

6 Care not would have it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1670)
Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 80 (1721) with the comment, "If you ask a man if he will have such a thing, and he answers I care not, it is a sign that he would have it."

7 He cared not for God or man.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk i, canto ii, st. 12. (1590)

8 I don't care an apple-core. (Ciccum non interduim.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 580. (c. 200 B.C.) Literally, the core of a pomegranate—anything trifling and worthless.

Nobody cares a hair. (Nemo pili facit.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A.D. 60)

I care not two-pence.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Coxcomb, v.1. (1612)

I do not care a farthing.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 50. (1709)

I don't care a straw.

HENRY JAMES, The Passionate Pilgrim. (1875)

See under STRAW.

[They] care not a fig.

C. H. SPURGEON, Treasury of David, ii, 4. (1880)

9 In fayth thi felowship
Set I not at a pyn.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays (E.E.T.S.), p. 34. (c. 1410)

Of Goddes ferfull vengeance they passyde note a pynne.

UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary. (c. 1555) In WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs of England.
For her mother she cares not a pin.

GEORGE WAPULL, The Tyde Taryeth No Man, sig. D3. (1576)

Who not a pin

Does care for looke of living creatures eye.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk i, canto v, st. 4. (1590)

I would not care a pin if the other three were in.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 19 (1595)

'Tis evident you never cared a pin for me.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act iii, sc. 1. (1777)

INDIGNATION

10 We count a great deal on our indignation meetin's.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, The Redskins. Ch. 12. (1846)

The passengers . . . were inclined to organize an indignation meeting.

W. D. HOWELLS, A Woman's Reason. Ch. 11. (1883)

Indignation meetings were held daily.

NORAH DAVIS, The Northerner, p. 53. (1905)

11 His indignation knew no bounds.

CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Vol. iii, ch. 10 (1858)

Ivo rode on, boiling over with righteous indignation.

KINGSLEY, Hereward the Wake. Ch. 21. (1865)

12 His lips are full of indignation. (Labia eius repleta sunt indignatione.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxx, 27. (c. 725 B.C.)

13 The capacity of indignation makes an essential part of the outfit of every honest man.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners. (1869)

14 Indignation brings with it some serious charge. (Magnum secum affert crimen indignatio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 387. (c. 43 B.C.)

Ubi saeva indignatio ulterius cor lacerare nequit. (Where fierce indignation can no longer tear my heart.)

JONATHAN SWIFT, Epitaph for Himself, Inscribed on his tomb in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin. (1745)

INDIVIDUALITY

See also PERSONALITY

15 Individuality is the aim of political liberty

J. FENIMORE COOPER, The American Democrat. Ch. 42. (1838)

16 We fancy men are individuals; so are pumpkins.

R. W. EMERSON, Nominalist and Realist. (1841)

The individual is always mistaken.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

<sup>1</sup> He is only bright that shines by himself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

<sup>2</sup> You are you and I am I. Although you stand by my side with your body naked, how can you defile me?

HWUY OF LEW-HEA, as quoted by MENCIOUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, pt. i, ch. 9. (c. 300 B. C.)

A myrtle remains a myrtle, even though it stand among thorns.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 44a. (c. 450)

<sup>3</sup> This was the plain condition of those times, the whole world against Athanasius, and Athanasius against it.

RICHARD HOOKER, On the Lawes of Ecclesiastical Politie. Bk. v, ch. 42. (1597)

In the Nicene Council [325] he was almost the only high ecclesiastic who stood firm against the Arians . . . Athanasius contra mundum; a proverb which . . . sets forth the claims of individual . . . judgement.

ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY, History of the Eastern Church, vii, 234. (1861)

<sup>4</sup> We were challenged with a peacetime choice between the American system of rugged individualism and a European philosophy of diametrically opposed doctrines—doctrines of paternalism and state socialism.

HERBERT HOOVER, Speech, New York, 22 Oct., 1928. In his Challenge to Liberty, ch. 5, Hoover wrote, "While I can make no claim for having introduced the term 'rugged individualism,' I should be proud to have invented it."

<sup>5</sup> Common natures do not suffice me. Good people, as they are called, won't serve. I want individuals.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to William Wordsworth, 20 March, 1822.

<sup>6</sup> Each man has his own peculiar cast of mind and turn of expression. (Sua cuique quum sit animi cogitatio, | colorque proprius.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, No. 7. (c. 25 B. C.)

Every man wears his belt in his own fashion.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 92. (1721)

Aweel, lass, thou must . . . buckle thy girdle thine ain gate [way].

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 28. (1818)

<sup>7</sup> An individual is as superb as a nation when he has the qualities which make a superb nation.

WALT WHITMAN, Leaves of Grass: Preface. (1855)

Underneath all, individuals,
I swear nothing is good to me now that ignores individuals.

WALT WHITMAN, Blue Ontario's Shore. Sec. 15.

I find no sweeter fat than sticks to my own bones.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 20.

INDOLENCE

See also Idleness, Sloth

<sup>8</sup> An indolent man is like an unoccupied dwelling: scoundrels sometimes burrow in it; thieves and evil characters make it their haunt; or, if they do not, it is full of vermin.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 25. (1887)

Indolence as surely runs to dishonesty as to lying.

BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit. p. 196.

<sup>9</sup> If the profit were dangled before his mouth, he would turn his back.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 593. (1817)

He uses his rump to open the door. (Yung p'i ku ta mên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 596. (1875) He is lazy.

He wants his corn shelled.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 486. (1940) Founded upon the folk tale of the man who refused a gift of corn rather than go to the trouble of shelling it.

<sup>10</sup> Indolence ere now has ruined both kings and wealthy cities. (Otium et reges prius et beatas | perdidit urbes.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode li, l. 15. (c. 57 B. C.) The Germans say, "Durch Faulheit ist schon manche Grafschaft verloren gegangen" (Through indolence many a kingdom has been lost).

<sup>11</sup> The love of indolence is universal, or next to it.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk, 8 June, 1833

<sup>12</sup> Drift is as bad as unthrift.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1678)

<sup>13</sup> That voluntary debility which modern language is content to term indolence.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Langton, 12 July 1784.

<sup>14</sup> Of all our faults, that which we live with most agreeably is indolence. (De tous nos défauts, celui dont nous demeurons le plus aisément d'accord, c'est de la paresse.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 398. (1665)

We have more indolence of mind than of body. (Nous avons plus de paresse dans l'esprit que dans le corps.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 487.

Of all the passions, the least known to ourselves is indolence, the most active and mischievous of them all. (De toutes les passions, celle qui est la plus inconnue à nous-mêmes, c'est la paresse; elle est la plus ardente et la plus maligne de toutes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 630.

<sup>1</sup> Other men have acquired fame by industry, but this man by indolence. (Utque alios industria, ita hunc ignavia ad famam protulerat.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xvi, sec. 18. (c. A. D. 116)

Referring to Caius Petronius.

So that what was indolence was called wisdom. (Ut quod segnitia erat, sapientia vocaretur.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, sec. 49. (c. A. D. 109)

INDUSTRY

See also Diligence

<sup>2</sup> There is no friend like industry: cultivate it, and you will never fail.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 86. (c. A. D. 100)

A little ginger 'neath the tail.

Will oft for lack of brains avail.

T. F. MACMANUS, Cave Sedem. (1920)

<sup>3</sup> The dog that trots about finds a bone.

GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. Ch. 47.

(1843) Quoted as a gipsy saying.

The hinge of the door is not crowded with insects; running water never becomes putrid.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 278. (1872)

The trotting horse hears not the idler's yarn.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 364.

(1938) Busy people have no time for gossip.

A Chinese proverb.

Lice do not bite busy men.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 367.

<sup>4</sup> There is not in the ferry boat any for God's sake.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 665. (1817)

Everyone must pay his fare.

<sup>5</sup> Industry is a loadstone to draw all good things.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy:

Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

<sup>6</sup> Industry is the soul of business and the key-stone of prosperity.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 27. (1841)

<sup>7</sup> We dig a well and can drink; we plow a field and can eat.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 278. (1872)

Milk, by repeated shaking, turns to butter.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 369.

(1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>8</sup> He that does his turne in time, sits half idle.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595)

Let us, then, be up and doing.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)

<sup>9</sup> No man e'er was glorious, who was not laborious.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Industry need not wish.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

Industry pays Debts, Despair increases them.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742

Industry, Perseverance, & Frugality, make Fortune yield.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

God gives all things to Industry.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

<sup>10</sup> Industry will never do much, unless there be natural Parts also.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3093. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> In ev'ry rank, or great or small,
'Tis industry supports us all.

JOHN GAY, Fables. The Man, the Cat, the Dog,

and the Fly. Series ii, No. 8, l. 63. (1727)

Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

<sup>12</sup> People are seldom better employed than in earning their own living.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, as quoted by L. P. SMITH, Oxford. See Atlantic Monthly, June, 1938.

<sup>13</sup> All things are won by industry. (πάντα γὰρ ταῖς ἐνδεχεταῖς καταπονείται πράγματα.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 744K. (c. 300 B. C.)

Nothing is impossible to industry. (Industriae nil impossibile.)

HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 92. Quoting Periander of Corinth, and adding, "Or, in less classic phrase, 'It's dogged as does it.'"

All things are easy to industry, all things difficult to sloth.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734

<sup>14</sup> Push on—keep moving.

THOMAS MORTON, A Cure for the Heart-Ache

Act iii, sc. 1. (1797)

'Tis better to wear out shoes than sheets.

ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)

"Always at it wins the day."

<sup>15</sup> Whoso keepeth the fig tree shall eat the fruit thereof. (Qui servat ficum, comedet fructus eius.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 18. (c. 400 B. C.)

He that tilleth his land shall have plenty of bread. (Qui operatur terram suam, satiabitur panibus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxviii, 19. (c. 400 B. C.)

Plough deep while Sluggard[s] sleep;

And you shall have Corn to sell and to keep.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756. An adaptation of the Spanish proverb, "Ara bien y hondo, cogerás pan en abondo" (Plough well and deep and you will have plenty of corn). There is another

Spanish one which runs, "Ares, no ares, renta me pagues" (Plough or not plough,

you must pay me my rent).

<sup>16</sup> Industry is Fortune's right hand, and Frugality her left.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1678)

Cited as a Spanish proverb on p. 107. The Italians have the same proverb, "L'industria è la mano dritta della fortuna, e la frugalità, la sinistra."

Industry is fortune's right hand, and Frugality her left; a proverb which has been worth ten times more to me than all my little purse contained.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Popular Tales: Lame Jer-vis. Ch. 2. (1799)

1 Industry is the root of all ugliness.

OSCAR WILDE, Phrases and Philosophies for the Use of the Young. (1891)

INFLUENCE

2 How many ships do you reckon my presence to be worth? (αὐτὸν παρόντα πρὸς πόσας ἀντιτάττεις;)

ANTIGONUS II, KING OF MACEDONIA, when his pilot told him that Ptolemy's ships far outnumbered his own. (c. 250 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Kings and Commanders. Sec. 183D. In his Life of Pelopidas, Plutarch refers to "the saying of old Antigonus, who, when he was to fight at Andros, and one told him, 'The enemy's ships are more than ours,' replied, 'For how many then wilt thou reckon me?'"

As that great captain, Ziska, would have a drum made of his skin when he was dead, because he thought the very noise of it would put his enemies to flight.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

Ajax the great, himself a host.

POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 293. (1715) This is Pope's rendering of l. 229.

Lord John is a host in himself.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Remark, to Samuel Rogers, 1839, referring to Lord John Russell.

O for a single hour of that Dundee

Who on that day the word of onset gave!

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet in the Pass of Killcrankie. "Oh, for an hour of Dundee," was the cry of Gordon of Glenbucket, at the battle of Sheriffmuir, 13 Nov., 1715. "Dundee" was the terrible Grahame of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee. MAHON, History of England, i, 184.

Where, where was Roderick then?

One blast upon his bugle-horn

Were worth a thousand men.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto vi, st. 18. (1810)

Oh, for one hour of blind old Dandolo,

Th' octogenarian chief, Byzantium's conquering foe!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 12. (1812)

It is true that I considered Napoleon's presence in the field equal to forty thousand men in the balance.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Memorandum, 18 Sept., 1836. See STANHOPE, Conversations with the Duke of Wellington, p. 81.

Napoleon was called by his men Cent Mille.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. (1860) Because his presence on the battlefield was worth a hundred thousand men.

3 Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? (οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι μικρὰ ζύμη ὅλον τὸ φύραμα ζυμοῖ;)

New Testament: I Corinthians, v, 6. (c. A. D. 57) Repeated in Galatians, v, 9. The Vulgate is, "Nescitis quia modicum fermentum totam massam corrumpit?"

Like a mildew'd ear,

Blasting his wholesome brother.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 64. (1600)

One scabby sheep infects a hundred. (Una pecora rognosa, ne guasta cento.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 97. (1814)

An Italian proverb. See also under SHEEP.

The Dutch say, "Die bij kreupelen woont, leert hinken" (He who lives with cripples learns to limp); the Italians, "Chi vive tra lupi, impara a urlare" (He who lives with wolves will learn to howl). See also under WOLF. A variant is, "Live with a singer if you would learn to sing."

One rotten apple infects a hundred. (Ein fauler Apfel steckt hundert an.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 311. (1856) A German proverb. Similarly, "Ein faules Ei verdirbt den ganzen Brei" (One rotten egg spoils the whole pudding). See also under APPLE.

4 It has been said that "common souls pay with what they do, nobler souls with that which they are."

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History. (1841)

5 One man's yawning makes another yawn. (ἐνὸς χανόντος μετέχκεν ἕτερος.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iv, No. 95. (1508) Erasmus also gives the Latin, "Oscitante uno deinde oscitat et alter," or "Cum oscitat unus, statim oscitat et alter." The French say, "Un bon bâilleur en fait bâiller deux" (One good gaper makes two others gape).

Why doth one man's yawning make another yawn?

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, memb. iii, subs. 2. (1621)

6 Thou canst mould him into any shape like soft clay. (Argilla quidvis imitaberis uda.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 8. (20 B.C.)

He is a bit of wood moved by strings in some one else's hands. (Nervis alienis mobile lignum.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 82. (35 B.C.)

In other words, a puppet.

7 If you say "I am hot" he forthwith perspires. (Si diceris "Aestuo," sudat.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 103. (c. A. D. 120)

8 It is harder to avoid being swayed than to sway others. (Il est plus difficile de s'empêcher d'être gouverné, que de gouverner les autres.)

JACQUES FOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 151. (1665)

1 Never has a man who was bent himself been able to make others straight.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, pt. ii, ch. 1, sec. 5. (c. 300 B. C.) Repeated in v, i, 7, 7.

By bending only one cubit you make eight cubits straight.

UNKNOWN, Book of History. (c. 1000 B. C.)

Quoted by MENCIVS, iii, ii, 1.

2 Two dry sticks will kindle a green one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 135. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5325. (1732) The Germans say, "Eine lebendige Kohle zündet die andere an" (One live coal makes the others burn).

Who does not burn doth not inflame.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 108. (1902)
One must be himself on fire who would kindle ardor in others.

3 Every man, in corrupting others, corrupts himself; he imbibes, and then imparts, badness. (Dum facit quisque peiorem, factus est; didicit deteriora, deinde docuit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, sec. 54. (c. A. D. 64)

4 They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 1, 288. (1611)

5 To behold her is an immediate check to loose behaviour; to love her is a liberal education.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 49. (1709)

Referring to Lady Elizabeth Hastings.

The weak and the gentle, the ribald and rude, She took as she found them, and did them all good.

E. B. BROWNING, My Kate. (1860)

6 It is your human environment that makes climate.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar. (1893)

7 Influence is no government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Henry Lee, 31 Oct., 1786.

This position gave him a vast amount of "influence" which he continued to use for his own advantage.

JAMES BRYCE, The American Commonwealth. Bk. iii, ch. 88. (1888)

He owed his position to influence, not to merit.

Oxford Eng. Dict.: Influence, v, 270/2.

8 There is no such thing as good influence. All influence is immoral—immoral from the scientific point of view.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. (1891)

INFORMATION

9 I am greedy of getting information. (λίχρος εἰμι καὶ τὸ πύθεσθαι.)

CALLIMACHUS, Iambi. No. 18. (c. 250 B. C.)

For your information.

GEORGE BORROW, Bible in Spain. Ch. 49. (1843)

I only ask for information.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 20. (1849)

10 The Informer is the worst Rogue of the two.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4607. (1732)

11 He who cares more for information than for inspiration prefers elevators to wings.

J. B. OPDYKE, Amor Vitaque: Omargrams. (1912)

12 Information appears to stew out of me naturally, like the precious otter of roses out of the otter.

MARK TWAIN, Roughing It: Preface. (1872)

INGRATITUDE

13 Do not befoul the well from which thou hast drunk.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. (c. 450)

Never cast dirt into that fountain of which thou hast sometime drunk.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 404. (1678)

Cast no Dirt into the Well that hath given you Water.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1067. (1732)

Do not throw a stone into the well from which thou drinkest.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 151. (1817)

14 Eat the gift and break the dish.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 556. (1817)

The dish will remind you of the obligation, therefore destroy it.

15 You too, my child. (καὶ σὺ τέκνον.)

JULIUS CAESAR, when Marcus Brutus stabbed him. (44 B. C.) See Suetonius, Lives of the Caesars: Julius. Ch. 82, sec. 3. Suetonius says that "some have written" that Caesar spoke in Greek. The more popular version is the Latin, "Et tu, Brute fili" (You too, O Brutus, my son).

Et tu Brute! Then fall, Caesar!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 1, 77. (1599)

This was the most unkindest cut of all;

For when the noble Caesar saw him stab,

Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,

Quite vanquish'd him.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 187. (1599)

16 Ingratitude is the daughter of pride. (La ingratitud es hija de la soberbia.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 51. (1615)

17 When I have thatched his house, he would throw me down.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 170. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1670)

When I had thatch'd his House, he would have hurl'd me from the Roof.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5559. (1732)

18 To have rams for children. (κρίους ἐκγεννᾶν τέκνα.)

EUPOLIS, Fragment. (c. 425 B. C.) Rams were proverbial for ingratitude, perhaps because they sometimes butted the people who fed them.

<sup>1</sup> Many favours which God giveth us ravell out for want of hemming, through our own unthankfulness: for though prayer purchaseth blessings, giving praise doth keep the quiet possession of them.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 9. (1642)

<sup>2</sup> All things are ungrateful. (Omnia sunt ingrata.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxxiii, l. 3. (c. 57 B. C.) The Germans say, "Undank ist der Welt Lohn" (Ingratitude is the world's reward).

Ingratitude's a weed of every clime.

SAMUEL GARTH, Epistle to Godolphin. (1710)

<sup>3</sup> If ye had not plowed with my heifer, ye had not found out my riddle. (Si non arassetis in vitula mea, non invenissetis propositionem meam.)

Old Testament: Judges, xiv, 18. (c. 700 B. C.)

If I had not lifted up the potsherd for thee, thou wouldest not have discovered the pearl under it.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metsia, fo. 17b.

Also, Jebamoth, 92b; Machshirin, 21b. (c. 450)

<sup>4</sup> You love a nothing when you love an ingrate. (Nihil amas, quom ingratum amas.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 228. (c. 200 B. C.)

An ingrate is sometimes less to blame for his ingratitude than the one who did him the favor. (Tel homme est ingrat, qui est moins coupable de son ingratitude que celui qui lui a fait du bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 96. (1665)

One finds few ingrates as long as one is capable of bestowing favors. (On ne trouve guère d'ingrats tant qu'on est en état de faire du bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 306.

Every time I bestow a vacant office, I make a hundred discontented persons and one ingrate. (Toutes les fois que je donne une place vacante, je fais cent mécontents et un ingrat.)

LOUIS XIV. (c. 1670) See VOLTAIRE, Siècle de Louis XIV. Ch. 26.

You are like the French statesman, who said, when he granted a favour, "J'ai fait dix mécontents et un ingrat."

SAMUEL JOHNSON, speaking against promiscuous hospitality. See BOSWELL, Life, 1772.

<sup>5</sup> When you call a man ungrateful you have no words of abuse left. (Dixeris male dicta cuncta cum ingratum hominem dixeris.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 149. (c. 43 B. C.) Or, more compactly, "Ingratum si dixeris, omnia dixeris" (If you say he is ungrateful, you say all that can be said).

Earth produces nothing worse than an ungrateful man. (Nil homine terra peius ingrato creat.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 140, l. 1. (c. A. D. 370)

You can call a man no worse than unthankful. JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina, p. 170. (1639)

Ingratitude is worse than witchcraft.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Denham Tracts, ii, 83. (1846)

<sup>6</sup> One ungrateful person does harm to all the unfortunate. (Ingratus unus omnibus miseris nocet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 282. (c. 43 B. C.) It is especially the ungrateful who teach folk to become niggardly. (Malignos fieri maxime ingrati docent.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 350.

<sup>7</sup> None learn of me the science of the bow. Who make me not their target in the end.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Maxim 27. (c. 1258)

I taught you to swim; and now you'd drown me.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2626. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> A grateful dog is better than an ungrateful man.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 85. (c. 1258)

<sup>9</sup> They whom I benefit injure me most. (ὁρτνας γὰρ εὖ θέω, κῆποι με μάλιστα σίννονται.)

SAPPHO, Fragments. Frag. 13, Loeb. (c. 600 B. C.)

They whom I most have helped . . .

The hand that feeds they bite.

MARION MILLS MILLER, Ingratitude. Paraphrasing the fragment from Sappho given above.

We set ourselves to bite the hand that feeds us. EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents. (1770)

And having looked to Government for bread, on the very first scarcity they will turn and bite the hand that fed them.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts and Details on Scarcity. (1795)

If you pick up a starving dog and make him prosperous, he will not bite you. This is the principal difference between a dog and a man.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)

<sup>10</sup> Blow, blow, thou winter wind
Thou art not so unkind

As man's ingratitude.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 174. (1600)

Ingratitude is monstrous.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 3, 10. (1607) In

Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 147, is the phrase, "Monster of ingratitude." In King

Lear, i, 5, 43, is "Monster ingratitude!"

I hate ingratitude more in a man

Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 4, 388. (1599)

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 281. (1605)

<sup>11</sup> Ingratitude dries up wells.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 490. (1623)

Ingratitude is treason to mankind.

JAMES THOMSON, Coriolanus. (1748)

II—Ingratitude: The Snake and the Wolf

1 To warm a snake in your bosom. (ὄφιν ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ θάλπειν.)

AESOP, Fables: The Snake and the Rustic. (c. 570 B.C.) The classic example of ingratitude. See under SNAKE.

Don't nourish animals with crooked claws. (Quae uncis sunt unguibus ne nutrias.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 2. (1500) Don't nourish a lion's whelp. (Leonis catulum ne alas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 77. Breed up a crow and he'll tear out your eyes. (Crea el cuervo, y sacarte ha los ojos.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 11. (1814) A Spanish proverb.

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long That she had her head bit off by her young.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 12. I lodged the rat in my granary, and he became my heir. (Acoji al raton en mi cillero, | Y volviere mi heredero.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 276. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "J'ai logé le rat, et il me dévalise" (I lodged the rat and he robbed me).

2 To do good to boors is to throw water into the sea. (El hacer bien a villanos es echar agua en la mar.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 23. (1605) To do good to the Ungrateful, is to throw Rose-water into the Sea.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5156. (1732) After the Latin proverb, "Perit quod facis ingrato" (What you do for an ungrateful man is lost).

3 The wicked are always ungrateful. (Siempre los malos son desagradecidos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 23. (1605) Hell is full of the ungrateful.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2488. (1732)

4 Do good to a villain and he'll do evil to you. (Faites bien au vilain et il vous fera mal.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, ii, 105. Quoting from a manuscript of the 13th century.

Unhang the rascal and he'll hang you; Be kind to the blackguard and he'll beat you. (Dépends le pendard, il te pendra; Oigne le vilain, il te poindra.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550) There are a number of variations of this old proverb. One is: "Flatter the low and they'll cudgel you; cudgel the low and they'll flatter you" (Oignez vilain, il vous poindra; poignez vilain, il vous oindra). A shorter one is, "Never do a kindness to a rascal" (De vilain jamais bon faict).

Save a thief from the gallows, and he'll send you there. (Ôtez un vilain du gibet, il vous y mettra.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 11. (1814) See under THIEF.

5 Look what kindness does. Nurse a wolf-cub, nurse a puppy-dog, to be eaten for it. (τὸ δ' χάρις εἰς τὶ πόθ' ἔπει. | θρέψαι τοι λυκιδεῖς, θρέψαι κυνὰς, ὥς τυ φάγῳντι.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. v, l. 37. (c. 270 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, 86, with the Latin, "Ale luporum catulos" (To nourish the whelps of a wolf). Another form is, "Pasce canes qui te lanient catulosque luporum" (Rear dogs' and wolves' cubs to rend you).

A wolf's whelp had been fostered till, one day, Grown strong, it tore its master's life away.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Maxim 5. (c. 1258)

INHERITANCE

See also Heir

6 Bettyr it is to suffer great hunger than sale of inheritance. (Et touteffois il est plus licite et vault mieulx souffrir et endurer grant pour te que vendre ou alier ses heritaiges.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regisme de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

7 The fool inherits, but the wise must get.

WILLIAM CARTWRIGHT, The Ordinary. Act iii. sc. 6. (c. 1634)

8 When I die, I'll leave him the Fee-Simple of a Rope and a Shilling.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, A Constant Couple. Act iv, sc. 3. (1700)

I'll disinherit him—. . . I'll cut him off with a shilling.

GEORGE COLMAN, SR., The Musical Lady. Act ii. (1762)

He had threatened to cut off his son with the proverbial shilling.

DOROTHY L. SAYERS, In the Teeth of the Evidence, p. 82. (1940)

9 What you inherit from your fathers must first be earned before it's yours. (Was du ererbt von deinen Vätern hast, | Erwirb es, um es zu besitzen.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 1. (1806)

10 As a little childe riding behind his father, sayde simply unto him, Father, when you are dead, I shal ride in the Saddle.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 43. (1574) Pettie, tr.

11 Property not produced by labor, but inherited. (Res non parta labore, sed relicta.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 47. (c. A.D. 93)

It cometh by kind [nature], it cost them nothing

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 325. (1605)

What cometh by Kind, costeth nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5484. (1732)

12 The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places: yea, I have a goodly heritage. (Funes ceci-derunt mihi in praeclaris: etenim hereditas mea praeclara est mihi.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xvi, 6. (c. 250 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> To inherit property is not to be born—is to be still-born, rather.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 13 March, 1853.

INJURY

See also Insult; Turn: Ill Turn; Wrong

<sup>2</sup> The injuries we do and those we suffer are seldom weighed in the same scales.

AESOP, Fables: The Partial Judge. (c. 570 B. C.)

See under CASE: THE CASE IS ALTERED.

<sup>3</sup> Do not ink a pen to do an injury.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xvii, l. 6. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr. Amen-em-apt was a scribe, and so his proverb is quite in character.

<sup>4</sup> Injury to majesty, i. e. high treason. (Laesae maiestatis.)

AMMIANUS, Rerum Gestarum. Bk. xvi, ch. 8, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 390) The French form, lèse-majesté, is the one usually used. The French also say, "Lèse-humanité," treason against society.

<sup>5</sup> The man who can hide his hate can injure whom he will. (Qui celare potest odium pote laedere quem vult.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. Zurich mss., 4. (c. 175 B. C.)

Whom they have injured they also hate. (Quos laeserunt, et oderunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 33. (c. A. D. 54)

It is a principle of human nature to hate those whom you have injured. (Proprium humani ingenii est odissè quem laeseris.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 42. (c. A. D. 98)

Forgiveness to the injur'd doth belong, But they ne'er pardon who have done the wrong.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 2. (1672)

He that does you an injury will never forgive you.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 263. (1710)

Men hate those they hurt.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3395. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Injury may be done by two methods, by fraud or by force. (Duobus modis, id est aut vi, aut fraude, fiat iniuria.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 41. (c. 45 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> It is better to receive than to do an injury. (Accipere quam facere praestat iniuriam.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 19, sec. 56. (45 B. C.)

It is more wretched to commit than to suffer an injury. (Miserius est nocere quam laedi.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, sec. 52. (c. A. D. 64)

It is better to take many injuries than to give one.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735

<sup>8</sup> Remember like an evil man, past injuries. (ἐμνημόνευσε δ' ὥσπερ ἄνθρωπος κακὸς | παλαιὰ νεκρή.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 1164. (c. 430 B. C.)

A paraphrase of the proverb, "A worthy man forgets past injuries."

You who forget nothing but injuries. (Qui oblivisci nihil soles nisi iniurias.)

CICERO, Pro Ligario. Ch. 12, sec. 35. (45 B. C.)

Referring to Julius Caesar, before whom the speech was made.

The remedy for injuries is to forget them. (Iniuriarum remedium est oblivio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 289. (c. 43 B. C.) Quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium, xciv, 28. Similarly, "Iniuriae spretae exolescunt; si irascaris agnitae videntur" (Injuries made light of disappear; if you become enraged concerning them, they seem to be admitted).

Think not on smert, and thou shalt fele noon.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv. l. 466. (c. 1380)

Neglect will kill an injury, sooner than revenge.

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves, p. 213. (1620)

There is no such injury as revenge, and no such revenge as the contempt of an injury.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 7. (1643)

Injuries slighted become none at all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3097. (1732)

Neglect will sooner kill an Injury than Revenge.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3520.

Neglect kills Injuries, Revenge increases them

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

It costs more to revenge injuries than to bear them.

WILSON, Maxims of Piety. No. 303. (a. 1755)

The remedy for injuries is not to remember them.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 514. (1855)

<sup>9</sup> Who hurteth others, hurteth hym selfe. (Chi nuoce altrui, nuoce se stesso.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 29. (1578)

The Latin proverb is, "Nemo laeditur nisi a seipso" (No one is injured except by himself).

To injure others is to injure one's self. ('Hai jên 'hai chi 'hai tzu shên.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 186. (1872)

SCARBOROUGH (No. 868) has it: 'Hai jên chung 'hai chi.

<sup>10</sup> Christianity commands us to pass by injuries; policy, to let them pass by us.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

Doing an Injury puts you below your Enemy; Revenging one makes you even with him; Forgiving it sets you above him.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

"T is more noble to forgive, and more manly to despise, than to revenge an Injury.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

<sup>11</sup> Injurious Men brook no Injuries.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3098. (1732)

Injury is to be measured by Malice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3099.

It is no Injury, that is not meant an Injury.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2988.

It is worse to do, than to revenge an Injury.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3035.

1 Don't show your injured finger, for everyone will knock against it. (No descubrir el dedo malo, que todo topará allí.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 145. (1647)

Anticipate injuries and turn them into favors. (Prevenir las injurias y hacer de ellas favores.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 259.

2 Injuries done us by others often cause us less pain than those we inflict on ourselves. (Les violences qu'on nous fait, nous font souvent moins de peine que celles que nous nous faisons à nous-mêmes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 363. (1665)

3 Requite injury with kindness. (Pu shan' 'ché wu yi' shan' chi.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 49. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

Some one asked, "What think you of the principle of rewarding injury with kindness?" "With what, then, will you reward kindness?" asked the Master. "Reward injury with justice, and kindness with kindness."

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiv, ch. 36. (c. 500 B. C.) Legge, tr. Giles has it "returning good for evil."

4 If an injury has to be done to a man it should be so severe that his vengeance need not be feared.

NICCOLO MACHIAVELLI, The Prince. Ch. 3. (1513)

If you injure your neighbour, better not do it by halves.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

5 Be not provoked by Injuries, to commit them.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 298. (1693)

6 No one should be injured. (Nulli nocendum.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 26. (c. 25 B. C.)

7 By condoning an old injury, you invite a new one. (Veterem ferendo iniuriam, invitas novam.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 218. (1778) From Aesop's fable of the boy throwing stones at a man, who first by entreaties and then by giving him a small coin, tried to get him to stop. Finally he pointed out a richer man who was passing and advised the boy to throw stones at him. But the rich man, instead of giving him money, had him arrested and severely punished. "So," Aesop concludes, "by condoning one affront, we often lay ourselves open to fresh ones."

He who makes himself a sheep, the wolf carries off. (Qui se fait brebis le loup le ravit.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c.

1550) The Italians have the same proverb: "Che pecora si fa, il lupo la mangia."

8 He that injures one threatens many. (Multis minatur qui uni facit iniuriam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 351. (c. 43)

Cited by BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 2.

He threatens many that hath injured one.

BEN JONSON, Sejanus. Act ii. (1603)

He threatens many that is injurious to one.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2372. (1732)

9 He who will not do an injury when he can is a benefactor. (Qui obesse cum potest non vult prodest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 581. (c. 43 B. C.)

Blessed is the man who knows his power, yet refrains from injuring others.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 305. (1917)

10 How ghastly is an injury from one of whom you dare not complain! (Heu quam miserum est ab eo laedi de quo non possis queri!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 246. (c. 43 B. C.)

The injured man's cure for pain is his enemy's pain. (Laeso doloris remedium inimici est dolor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 334.

He who has learned the power to injure, remembers it when he can use it. (Quisquis nocere didicit meminit cum potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 554.

Who comes to injure always comes determined. (Qui venit ut noceat semper meditatus venit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 610.

The wise man gives an injury room to settle down (Sapiens locum dat requiescendi iniuriae.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 651.

Injury may well be done a man for the sake of safety. (Salutis causa bene fit homini iniuria.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 681. There is a similar law proverb, "Iniuria iniuriam cohibere licet" (We may hinder one injury by means of another). There is another law proverb, often cited in rape cases, "Volenti non fit iniuria" (No injury is done to one who is willing).

It is the mark of a good man not to know how to do an injury. (Vivi boni est nescire facere iniuriam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 735.

11 One is not so soon healed as hurt.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1678)

The Germans say, "Verletzen ist leicht, heilen schwer" (It is easy to hurt, hard to cure)

12 No wise man can receive either injury or insult. (Nullam sapientem nec iniuriam accipere nec contumeliam posse.)

SENECA, De Constantia. Ch. 2, sec. 1. (c. A. D.

45) To ADD INSULT TO INJURY, see under INSULT.

He who has injured thee is either stronger or weaker: If weaker, spare him; if stronger, spare thyself. (Aut potentior te, aut imbecillior laesit: si imbecillior, parce illi; si potentior, tibi.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 54)

Injuries come from them that hath the upper hand. (Iniuriarum potentiorum sunt.)

BACON, Of Church Controversies. (1597)

1 The greatest punishment for having done an injury is the fact of having done it. (Maxima est enim factae iniuriarum poena, fecisse.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 26. (c. A. D. 54)

Seneca has another proverb, "Iniuriam qui facturus est iam facit" (He who intends to do you an injury has already done it)

2 He that will no hurt do,

Must do nothing that longe thereto.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Apothegms, fo. 56. (1550)

3 It's not the greatest injuries which cause the greatest resentments. (Non maxumae eas quae maxumae sunt interdum irae iniuriarum | faciunt.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 307. (165 B. C.)

II—Benefits and Injuries

4 A benefit slips from the mind, an injury endures. (Labitur ex animo benefactum, iniuria durat.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 34. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.

For men use, if they have an evil turn, to write it in marble; and who doeth us a good turn we write it in the dust.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Kyng Richard the Third. (1513)

All your better deeds

Shall be in water writ, but this in marble.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act v sc. 3. (1611)

An injury graves itself in metal, and a benefit writes itself on the wave. (L'injure se grave en metal, et le bienfait s'écrit en l'onde.)

JEAN BERTAUT, Maximes. (c. 1611) The French also say, "Ecrives les injures sur le sable, mais les bienfaits sur le marbre" (Write injuries in the sand, but benefits in marble). The Italians say, "Chi offende scrive nella rena; chi è offeso nel marmo" (He who offends, writes in sand; he who is offended, in marble).

Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues We write in water.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iv, 2, 45. (1612)

Injuries are written in brass, kind Graccho, And not to be forgotten.

MASSINGER, Duke of Milan. Act v, sc. 1. (1623)

On adamant our wrongs we all engrave, But write our benefits upon the wave.

WILLIAM KING, Art of Love, l. 971. (1709)

Some write their wrongs in marble: he, more just, Stoop'd down serene and wrote them in the dust.

SAMUEL MADDEN, Boulter's Monument. (c. 1730)

Injuries don't use to be written on Ice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3096. (1732)

Write injuries in dust, benefits in marble.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

The memory of past favours is like a rainbow, bright, vivid, and beautiful; but it soon fades away. The memory of injuries is engraved on the heart, and remains forever.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 14. (1843)

5 In most cases it is safer to do a man an injury than to heap too many benefits upon him. (Il n'est pas si dangereux de faire de mal à la plupart des hommes, que de leur faire trop de bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 238. (1665)

6 How bitter it is, when you have sown benefits to reap injuries! (Sed ut acerbum est, pro bene factis cum mali messim metas.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus. l. 718. (c. 200 B. C.)

Doing a favor for a bad man is quite as dangerous as doing an injury to a good one. . . A favor done to a bad man is a favor done and gone; an injury done to a good man is an injury alive and after you. (Malo bene facere tantundemst periculum | quantum bono male facere.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 633. (c. 194 B. C.)

7 A benefit cited by way of reproach is equivalent to an injury. (Un bienfait reproché tint toujours lieu d'offense.)

RACINE, Iphigénie. Act iv, sc. 6. (1674)

8 It is far better to forget a benefit than an injury. (Multo praestat benefici quam malifici immemorem esse.)

SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum. Ch. xxxi, sec. 28. (c. 40 B. C.) "Because," Sallust goes on, "the good man merely becomes less active in well doing when you neglect him, but the bad man grows more wicked."

9 What is more wretched than the man who forgets his benefits and clings to his injuries? (Quid autem eo miserius, cui beneficia ex-cidunt haerent iniuriarum?)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxi, sec. 23. (c. A. D. 64)

INJUSTICE

See also Justice and Injustice

10 Injustice is impiety. (ὁ δδίκων ἀσεβεί.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, No. 1. (c. A. D. 174)

There is but one blasphemy and that is injustice. R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, at Chicago, 20 Sept., 1880.

11 The unjust man is unjust to himself, for he makes himself bad. (ὁ δδίκων ἐαυτὸν δδικεῖ κακὸν ἐαυτὸν ποίει.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, No. 4. (c. A. D. 174)

1 It is more disgraceful to do injustice than to suffer it. (αἰσχρὸν τὸ δδικεῖν τοῦ δδικεῖσθαι.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 489A. (c. 385 B.C.)

It is better to suffer injustice than to do it.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato. (1850)

Emerson's rendering of Plato's aphorism. See also under INJURY.

2 Injustice, swift, erect, and unconfin'd,
Sweeps the wide earth, and tramples o'er mankind,

While prayers, to heal her wrongs, move slow
behind.

POPE, tr., Homer's Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 628. (1715)

3 Even those who do an injustice hate it. (Etiam qui faciunt oderunt iniuriam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 183. (c. 43 B.C.)

4 The world has no long injustices. (Le monde n'a point de longues injustices.)

MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, Letter to Madame de Grignan, 9 Sept., 1675.

5 Injustice in the end produces independence. (L'injustice à la fin produit l'indépendance.)

VOLTAIRE, Tancrède. Act iv, sc. 6. (1760)

INN

6 He loved bet the tavern than the shoppe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Cokes Tale, l. 12. (c. 1386)

7 Yes, to the last inn of all travellers, where we shall meet worms instead of fleas.

SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT, The Man's the Master. Act i, sc. 1. (1668) See also GRAVE

8 He goes not out of his way that goes to a good inn.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 831.

(1640) JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14.

(1670) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1851.

(1732) The French say, "Il ne se tort pas qui à bon hostel va" (He goes not wrong who goes to a good inn).

He that is in a tavern, thinks he is in a vine-garden.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 987.

9 Resty wealth willetth me this widow to win,
To let the world wag, and take mine ease in mine inn.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

In this proverbial saying, inn does not mean a tavern or public house, but one's own home. The original meaning of inn was a private house or dwelling-place.

Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 3, 92. (1597)

These great rich men must take their ease i' their inn.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The World Tost at Tennis. (c. 1607) Works, vii, 185.

"Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn?" has been the slogan of an animal, which . . . has gained control of natural resources that make subsistence well nigh effortless.

EARNEST A. HOOTEN, Why Men Behave Like Apes and Vice Versa, p. xiv. (1941)

10 They lived wherever night compelled a halt.
(Quas nox coegerat sedes habebant.)

SALLUST, Bellum Jugurthinum. Ch. 18. (c. 40 B.C.)

Where dwell'st thou?—Under the canopy. . .
I' the city of kites and crows.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iv, 5, 40. (1607)

When you sleep in your cloak there's no lodging to pay.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Boots and Saddles. (c. 1860)

There's naught to pay For a couch of hay

At the Inn of the Silver Moon.

H. K. VIELÉ, Inn of the Silver Moon. (1900)

11 Whoe'er has travell'd life's dull round, . .
May sigh to think he still has found

The warmest welcome at an inn.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Written at an Inn at Henley. (c. 1763)

INNOCENCE

12 Folly and Innocence are so alike,
The diff'rence, though essential, fails to strike.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 203 (1780)

13 The innocent are gay.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 493. (1784)

Oh, Mirth and Innocence! Oh, Milk and Water!
LORD BYRON, Beppo. St. 80. (1817)

14 Wisdom without Innocence is Knavery; Innocence without Wisdom is Folly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5772. (1732)

15 Innocence is not nearly so well shielded as crime. (Il s'en faut bien que l'innocence trouve autant de protection que le crime.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 465. (1665)

Innocence is no Protection.

Innocence itself hath need of a Mask.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3100-1. (1732)

No innocence can stand up under suspicion, if it is conscious of being suspected.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 28 Jan., 1841.

16 Who ever perished, being innocent? (Quis umquam innocens periit?)

Old Testament: Job, iv, 7. (c. 350 B.C.)

Be this our wall of bronze, to have no guilt at heart, no wrongdoing to turn us pale. (Hic murus aeneus esto, nil conscire sibi, nulla pallescere culpa.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 60. 20 B.C.)

The Latin proverb is, "Nulla certior custodia innocentia" (No protection is as sure as innocence).

Innocencie beareth her defence with her.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites. fo. 31. (1578)

Innocence after all has nothing to dread. (L'innocence enfin n'a rien à redouter.)

RACINE, Phèdre. Act iii, sc. 6. (1677) The Germans say, "Thue recht, scheue Niemand" (Do right, fear nobody). Schiller wrote, "Die Unschuld hat im Himmel einen Freund" (Innocence has a friend in heaven).

True, conscious Honour is to feel no sin;
He's arm'd without that's innocent within.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 93. (1732) Horace's line (l. 60) is given above.

Innocence is its own defense.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

Mere innocence will tame any ferocity.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 10 Dec., 1840.

She thinks he's armed without that's innocent within.

REX STOUT, Bad for Business. Ch. 6. (1940)

THRICE IS HE ARMED THAT HATH HIS QUARREL
JUST, see under JUST.

1
The exactest vigilance and caution can never maintain a single day of unmingled innocence, much less can the utmost efforts of incorporated mind reach the summits of speculative virtue.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 14. (1750)

2
O God, keep me innocent; make others great!
(O mon dieu, conserve-moi innocente, donne la grandeur aux autres!)

CAROLINE MATILDA, QUEEN OF DENMARK, wife of the profligate Christian VII. (c. 1770)
Scratched by her with a diamond on a window of the castle of Frederiksborg, Denmark, when accused of criminal intimacy with her favorite, Struensee.

3
Blessed are the innocent, for theirs is the kingdom of Art!

GEORGE MOORE, Ave, p. 165. (1911)

4
Bold, as innocence should be. (Audacter, ut pudicam decet.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitryon, l. 838. (c. 200 B.C.)
The innocent ought to be bold. (Decet innocentem . . . confidentem esse.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 665. (c. 200 B.C.)

Conscious of innocence, she laughed at scandal's lies. (Conscia mens recti famae mendacia risit.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iv, l. 311. (c. A.D. 8)

What is that which innocence dares not?

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act i, sc. 1. (1619)

There is no courage but in innocence.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, The Fate of Capua. (1700)

He who is free from fever does not fear to eat watermelons.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1350. (1875)

5
There's nothing ingenuous about this ingenue. (Non insulsum huic ingenium.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 1071. (c. 200 B.C.)

6
None but the innocent can nurse bright hopes in woe. (In malis sperare bene nisi innocens nemo solet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 292. (c. 43 B.C.)
A charge is not easily framed against an innocent person. (Non facile de innocente crimen fingitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 474.

He who pleads for innocence is eloquent enough. (Qui pro innocente dicit satis est eloquens.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 557. The Latin proverb, cited by PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 213, is "Innocentia est eloquentia" (Innocence is eloquence). Pontanus credits it to Quintilian.

The innocent man on trial fears fortune, but not a witness. (Reus innocens fortunam non testem timet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 629.

Innocence ever follows her own light. (Suum sequitur lumen semper innocentia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 661.

When innocence is frightened the judge is condemned. (Ubi innocens formidat damnat iudicem.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 709.

II—Innocence: Proverbial Comparisons

7
I . . . am now as clear as is the babe new borne.

ROBERT ARMIN, The Two Maids of More-clacke, sig. D3. (1609)

They died as innocent as the child unborn.

LORD JOHN SOMERS, ed., Somers Tracts, viii, 131. (1748)

Offering to take her oath . . . that she was innocent as the child unborn.

SWIFT, Directions to Servants: The Chambermaid. (1745)

If he were as innocent as the new-born infant, they would find some way of making him guilty

SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 10. (1816)

I am as innocent . . . as the babe unchristened

R. L. STEVENSON, The Black Arrow: Prologue (1888)

As innocent as a new-born babe.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Tinsley's Bones, p. 188. (1942)

8
As innocent as a new-laid egg.

W. S. GILBERT, Engaged. Act i. (1877); SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 12. (a 1902); LEE THAYER, Five Bullets, p. 21 (1944)

9
As innocent as a lamb.

BRONSON HOWARD, Henrietta. Act i. (1887)

10
Innocent enough to swallow it, hook, line and sinker.

ZELDA POPKIN, No Crime for a Lady, p. 244 (1942)

11
The day is not more innocent than the bottom of my heart. (Le jour n'est pas plus pur que le fond de mon cœur.)

JEAN RACINE, Phèdre. Act iv, sc. 2. (1677)

- 1
As innocent as a devil of two years old.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 286. (1678)
You are as innocent as a devil of two years old.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

III—Innocence and Guilt

- 2
The innocent are free from fear, but guilt
Ever is fearful its crimes will be uncovered.
(Pavore carent qui nihil commiserunt; at poenam
Semper ob oculos versari putant qui peccarunt.)
ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol i, p. 190. (1814)
- 3
It is better that ten guilty persons escape than that one innocent suffer.
WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries on the Laws of England. Vol. iv, ch. 27. (1765)
Better ten guilty escape than that one innocent man suffer. (Meglio è liberar dieci rei, che condannar un innocente.)
THOMAS FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations, p. 59. (1824) Citing an Italian proverb, which is also a maxim of English law. Fielding says it originated in Italy, and that Dr. Paley was against it, while Blackstone and Romilly approved of it.
Better two Drones be preserv'd than one good Bee perish.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 935. (1732)
Better feed five drones than starve one bee.
CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 126. (1875)
- 4
I hear much of people's calling out to punish the guilty, but very few are concerned to clear the innocent.
DANIEL DEFOE, An Appeal to Honour and Justice. (1715)
- 5
Innocence is not suspicious, but guilt is always ready to turn informer.
T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 15. (1843)
- 6
All are presumed good till they are found in a fault.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 943. (1640)
Where the guilt is doubtful, a presumption of innocence should in general be admitted.
JUNIUS, Letters. No. 67. (1772)
The rule that a man must be assumed innocent till proved guilty is thoroughly sound.
Spectator (London), 6 Aug., 1910, p. 205
- 7
Often has outraged Jupiter involved the innocent with the guilty. (Saepe Diespiter | neglectus incesto addidit integrum.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 29. (23 B. C.)
Jupiter hurls chance thunderbolts at many who have not deserved to suffer the penalty of guilt. (Iuppiter in multos temeraria fulmina torquet, | qui poenam culpa non meruere pati.)
OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 6, l. 27. (A. D. 13)

- 8
A guilty man punished is an example for the rabble; an innocent man condemned is the affair of all honest men. (Un coupable puni est un exemple pour la canaille; un innocent condamné est l'affaire de tous les honnêtes gens.)
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 14. (1688)
- 9
Guilt entreats, innocence grows angry. (Nocens precatur, innocens irascitur.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 455. (c. 43 B. C.)
When the innocent is found guilty, part of his native land is exiled. (Ubi innocens damnatur, pars patriae exsulat.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 732
The grass suffers because of the weed.
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92a. (c. 450)
HE THREATENS THE INNOCENT WHO SPARES THE GUILTY, see under JUDGE.

INS AND OUTS

- 10
Weep if thou wilt, or leef; for, out of doute, This Diomede is inne, and thou art oute.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 1518. (c. 1380)
The grand contention's plainly to be seen, To get some men put out, and some put in.
DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman: Introduction. (1700)
The only difference, after all their rout, Is that the one is in, the other out.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Conference, l. 165. (a. 1764)
The real power and property of the [English] government is in the great aristocratical families of the nation. The nest of office being too small for them to cuddle into it at once, the contest is eternal which shall crowd the other out. For this purpose they are divided into two parties, the INS and the OUTS.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 376. (c. 1814)

INSANITY, see Madness

INSOLENCE

- 11
The insolence of the vulgar is in proportion to their ignorance: they treat everything with contempt which they do not understand.
HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 331. (c. 1821)
- 12
Insolence breeds the tyrant. (ὑβρις φευτέι τυραννον.)
SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 872. (c. 409 B. C.)
Insolence is the precursor of destruction. (συμπτριβή προηγείται ὑβρις.)
GREGORY NAZIANZEN, Apothegm. (c. 375)
Insolence is Pride, with her Mask pulled off
Insolence puts an End to Friendship.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3104-5. (1732)

INSPIRATION

<sup>1</sup> Inspiration is to work every day. (L'inspiration c'est de travailler tous les jours.)

CHARLES BAUDELAIRE, Epigram. (c. 1860) See GENIUS: AN INFINITE CAPACITY FOR TAKING PAINS.

Inspiration (for writing) is mostly the application of the seat of the pants to the seat of the chair.

LOUISE D. RICH, We Took to the Woods, p. 28. (1942)

<sup>2</sup> The inspiration is wanting. (Abest etiam ἐνθουσιασμός.)

CICERO, Ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. iii, epis. iv, sec. 4. (54 B.C.) His brother had been urging Cicero to write some poetry, and this was Cicero's excuse for not doing so.

No more inspiration in her than in a plate of muffins.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act ii. (1903)

<sup>3</sup> No man was ever great without some portion of divine inspiration. (Nemo vir magnus sine aliquo adflatu divino umquam fuit.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 66, sec. 167. (45 B.C.) Hence, "divine afflatus."

<sup>4</sup> There seem nowadays to be two sources of literary inspiration—fulness of mind and emptiness of pocket.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 9. (1862)

<sup>5</sup> I never wet my lips in the Nag's Spring. (Nec fonte labra prolui caballino.)

PERSIUS, Satires: Prologue, l. 1. (c. A. D. 58) Hippocrene, struck out by the hoof of Pegasus, on the top of Mount Helicon. The fount of Inspiration <sup>6</sup> This gift which you have . . . is not an art, but an inspiration; there is a divinity moving you, like that in the stone which Euripides calls a magnet, but which is commonly known as the stone of Heraclea. For that stone not only attracts iron rings, but also imparts to them a similar power of attracting other rings; and sometimes you may see a number of pieces of iron and rings suspended from one another so as to form a long chain: and all of them derive their power of suspension from the original stone. Now this is like the Muse, who first gives to men inspiration herself: and from these inspired persons a chain of other persons is suspended, who take the inspiration from them.

PLATO, Ion. Sec. 533. (c. 350 B.C.) This simile has come to be known as "Plato's rings."

<sup>7</sup> Inspirations are hot-headed and hot-footed, so take them or leave them, but be quick about it.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 83. (1940)

INSTINCT

<sup>8</sup> He has peculiar powers as an assailant, . . . an instinct for the jugular and the carotid artery, as unerring as that of any carnivorous animal.

RUFUS CHOATE, referring to John Quincy Adams. See SAMUEL GILMAN BROWN, Memoir of Rufus Choate, p. 417.

<sup>9</sup> A moment's insight is sometimes worth a life's experience.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10. (1860)

<sup>10</sup> We heed no instincts but our own. (Nous n'écoutons d'instincts que ceux qui sont les nôtres.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 8. (1664)

<sup>11</sup> Instinct preceded wisdom.

GEORGE LILLO, Fatal Curiosity. Act i. (1736)

<sup>12</sup> Beware instinct.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 299. (1597)

I'll never Be such a gosling to obey instinct

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, v, 3, 34. (1607)

<sup>13</sup> Ev'n Lambs by Instinct fly the Butcher.

SWIFT, Strephon and Chloe, l. 154. (1731)

<sup>14</sup> Swift instinct leaps, slow reason feebly climbs

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 82. (1744)

The operation of instinct is more sure and simple than that of reason.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 26. (1781) However, there is a Latin proverb, "Utatur motu animi, qui uti ratione non potest" (Let him make use of instinct who cannot make use of reason).

The very essence of an instinct is that it is followed independently of reason.

CHARLES DARWIN, The Descent of Man. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1871) See also discussion of the theme in Pt. i, ch. 4

INSULT

<sup>15</sup> The insulter is he who brings you the report
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 520
(1938) An Egyptian proverb.

<sup>16</sup> He who allows himself to be insulted deserves to be. (Qui se laisse outrager mérite qu'on l'outrage.)

CORNEILLE, Héraclius. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1650)

<sup>17</sup> A moral, sensible, and well-bred man
Will not affront me, and no other can.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 191. (1781)

How can a tiger ever receive an insult from a dog?

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 283. (1872)

You can't insult me. I'm too ignorant.

CLIFFORD ODETS, Golden Boy. Act i, sc. 2. (1937)
The Chinese say, "A man must insult himself before others will."

1 Add not hurt unto mine hurt. (μὴ νοσοῦντί μοι νόσον | προσθήσ.)

EURIPIDES, Alcestis, l. 1047. (c. 438 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 7, with the Latin, "Morbum morbo addere" (To add disease to disease).

Lightly I suffer injury if it is free from insult. (Patior facile iniuriam si est vacua a contumelia.) PACUVIUS, Periboea. Frag. 304. (c. 160 B. C.) You add insult to injury. (Iniuriae addideris contumeliam.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fable 3, l. 5. (c. 25 B. C.) The fable of The Bald Man and the Fly. "A fly bit the bare pate of a bald man, who, endeavoring to crush it, gave himself a heavy blow. Then said the fly jeeringly, 'You wanted to avenge the sting of a tiny insect with death; what will you do to yourself, who have added insult to injury?'" This is the origin of the phrase.

This is adding insult to injuries.

EDWARD MOORE, The Foundling. Act v, sc. 2. (1748)

Nothing is so insulting as to add irony to injury. NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, to Barry O'Meara, at St. Helena, 6 Dec., 1816. "Doubler ses torts d'un affront" is the French proverb.

On the snow add frost. (Hsüeh shang chia shuang.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 179. (1872) To offer me a sandwich, when I am looking for a supper, is to add insult to injury.

THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, Crotchet Castile. Ch. 2. (1831)

2 Arrows pierce the body, but insults pierce the soul. (Atraviesan el cuerpo las jaras, pero las malas palabras el alma.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 267. (1647)

3 No sacred fane requires us to submit to insult. (Kein Heiligthum heisst uns den Schimpf ertragen.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 191. (1790)

4 One insult pocketed soon produces another. JEFFERSON, Letter to George Washington, 1790. The way to procure insults is to submit to them. HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 402. (c. 1821)

5 Fate never wounds more deep the gen'rous heart,

Than when a blockhead's insult points the dart. SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 168. (1738)

6 If you speak insults, you shall also hear them. (Contumeliam si dices, audies.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 1173. (c. 195 B. C.)

7 Neither the valiant nor the free-born can suffer insult. (Contumeliam nec fortis pote nec ingenuus pati.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 114. (c. 43 B. C.)

The noble mind does not admit an insult. (Ingenuitas non recipit contumeliam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 279.

You insult the noble mind when you propose something unworthy. (Ingenuitatem laedas cum indignum roges.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 272.

8 It is often better to ignore an insult rather than to avenge it. (Saepe satius fuit dissimulare quam ulcisci.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 32. (c. A. D. 54)

Happy is he who hears an insult and ignores it; a hundred evils pass him by.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

The wise forget insults, as the ungrateful a kindness.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 380. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

9 Insults are like bad coins; we cannot help their being offered to us, but we need not take them.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

10 Men can bear an injury unless they have to face insults also. (Facile ferre iniuriam, nisi contra constant contumeliam.)

CAECILIUS STATIUS, Fallacia. Frag. 44, Loeb. (c. 175 B. C.)

An injury is much sooner forgotten than an insult.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1746.

11 They accept everything as an insult. (Ad contumeliam omnia accipiunt magis.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 606. (c. 160 B. C.)

INTELLIGENCE

See also Cleverness, Mind

12 An intelligent man is never in want. (χρῆ δ' οὐκ ἔστι δασύς ἀνθρώπων πέφυκ' ἀνὴρ.)

ARISTOTLE. (c. 335 B. C.) The attribution is by Erasmus, who gives the Latin, "Sapiens non eget."

13 Smell at his flask.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 22a. (c. 450) Test his intelligence.

14 In fools and idiots inclination does duty for intelligence. (Les fous et les sottes gens ne voient que par leur humeur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 414. (1665)

15 Among men, reject none; among thieves, reject nothing. This is called comprehensive intelligence.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 27. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

To perceive things in the germ is intelligence.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 52.

Intelligence consists in recognizing opportunity.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 685. (1937)

Intelligence is the particular facility a person has to cope with any given situation.

M. S. MICHEL, Sweet Murder, p. 165. (1943)

1 All things are slaves to intelligence. (ἅπαντα δοῦλα τοῦ φρονεῖν καθίσταται.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 769. (c. 300 B. C.)

2 You will more easily stamp out intelligence and learning than recall them. (Sic ingenia studiaque opprimeris facilius quam revocaveris.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3. (c. A. D. 98)

3 He's very knowing.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 3, 26. (1606)

INTENTION

See also Purpose

4 God does not reckon to punish an evil intention as a sinful act.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 39b. (c. 450)

5 To do evil with good intent is better than conforming to the Law from bad intent.

Babylonian Talmud: Nazir, fo. 23b. (c. 450)

For oft good predicacioun
Cometh of evel entencion.

(Car bone predicacioun Vient bien de male entencion.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 5113, (c. 1270) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 5763. (c. 1365)

The good intention excuses the bad action. (La buona intenzione scusa il mal fatto.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 195. (1856) An Italian proverb.

6 Of every noble action, the intent
Is to give Worth reward, Vice punishment.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Captain. Act v, sc. 5. (1612)

7 Stain not fair acts with foul intentions.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 1. (1682)

8 Actions will be judged according to intentions.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 49.

Our actions are judged good or evil according to our intentions.

EDWARD LANE, The Thousand and One Nights, i, 59. (1841) The law proverb is, "Omne actum ab agentis intentione iudicandum" (Every deed is to be judged by the doer's intention).

9 One often sees good intentions carry men to very vicious results. (Il est ordinaire de voir les bonnes intentions, . . . poulser les hommes à des effects très vicieux.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 19. (1580)

Heaven always favors good intentions. (Siempre favorece el cielo los buenos deseos.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

There's nothing we read of in torture's inventions,
Like a well-meaning dunce, with the best of intentions.

LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 250. (1848)

Her path in life was paved with good intentions.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be too Careful, p. 190. (1942)

HELL IS PAVED WITH GOOD INTENTIONS, see under HELL.

10 "He means well" is useless unless he does well.
(Bene volt, nisi qui bene facit.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 439. (c. 194 B. C.)

I mene wel, by god that sit above.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 1004. (c. 1380)

All men mean well.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

11 A good intender needs nothing but a voice.
(A bon entendeur ne faut qu'un parole.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 7.

12 The man who intends to do injury has already done it. (Iniuriam qui facturus est iam facit.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 55)

13 I hope, sir, your intentions are honourable.
THOMAS SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act ii, sc. 1. (1668)

You assure me that your intentions are honorable. (Vous m'assurez que vos intentions sont pures.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Le Barbier de Seville. Act iv, sc. 6. (1775)

I hope, marm, that your intensions is honorable?
ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Woman's Rights. (1862)

Evidence that his intentions are "serious"—whatever that may mean.

CONSTANCE WAGNER, The Major Has Seven Guests, p. 67. (1940)

14 'Tis the Intent
Which forms the Obligation, not th' Event.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

INTEREST: see Self-Interest

INTOLERANCE, see Tolerance

INVENTION

15 The art of invention grows young with the things invented. (Ars inveniendi adolescit cum inventis.)

FRANCIS BACON, Baconiana. (a. 1626) Quoted as a maxim. "Facile est inventis addere" (It is easy to add to inventions) says another Latin proverb, and still a third, cited by RAY, English Proverbs, points out that "Nihil simul inventum est et perfectum" (Nothing is invented and perfected at the same time).

1 A fond thing vainly invented.
Book of Common Prayer: Articles of Religion.
 No. 22. (1549)

2 God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions. (Fecerit Deus hominem rectum, et ipse infinitis miscuerit quaestionibus.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 29. (c.250 B. C.)
 Countless ages will beget many inventions.
 (μυρία αἰών πολλά προσευρήσει χάρεα.)

DIOSCURIDES, Epigram on Thespis. (c. A. D. 60)
 See Greek Anthology, vii, 410. Many Inventions is the title of a book of short stories published by Rudyard Kipling in 1893.

3 Invention breeds invention. No sooner is the electric telegraph devised than gutta-percha, the very material it requires, is found.
 R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days. (1870)

4 If it is not true, it is well invented. (Se non è vero, è ben trovato.)

CARDINAL IPPOLITO D'ESTE, speaking of the Orlando Furioso, which Ariosto dedicated to him. (1516) BÜCHMANN, Geflügelte Worte, questions the attribution.

If it is not true, it is still a happy invention. (Se non è vero, egli è stato un bel trovato.)

ANTONIO DONI, Marmi. (1552)

If it is not true, it is exceedingly well invented. (Se non è vero, è molto ben trovato.)

GIORDANO BRUNO, Degli Eroi Furori. (1585)
 The line is usually given in the form credited to Cardinal d'Este, and rendered, "If not true, it is a happy invention." The phrase was evidently a common saying in the sixteenth century.

5 Man's inventions keep on advancing from age to age. The benevolence and maliciousness of the world in general remains the same. (Les inventions des hommes vont en avançant de siècle en siècle. La bonté et la malice du monde en général reste la même.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. ii, art. xviii, No. 108. (c. 1660)

6 Invented by the calumniating enemy. (Inventé par le calomniateur ennemi.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 11. (1545)

A thing devised by the enemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 306. (1592)

A weak invention of the enemy.

COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (alt.), v, 3. (c.1710)

7 The inventions of mortal men are no less mortal than themselves.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1614)

I am not so nice,

8 To change true rules for old inventions.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iii, 1, 80. (1594)

9 This proceeding is not of my own invention.
 SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub: Dedication. (1704)
 It's my own invention.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 8. (1872)

IRELAND AND THE IRISH

10 He that would England win,
 Must with Ireland first begin.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 396.
 (1855) Quoted by FROUDE, History of England, x, 480.

11 There came to the beach a poor Exile of Erin, . . .

He sang the bold anthem of "Erin go bragh."
 THOMAS CAMPBELL, Exile of Erin. (1800) Erin go bragh: Ireland for ever.

12 Oh, the fighting races don't die out,
 If they seldom die in bed.

J. I. C. CLARKE, The Fighting Race. (1898)

A fighting race who never won a battle, a race of politicians who cannot govern themselves, . . . a pious race excelling in blasphemy, . . . a race skilled in idleness, talented in hate, inventive only in slander.

TOM PENHALIGON, The Impossible Irish: Dedication. (1935)

13 Her Irish was up too high to do anything with her.

DAVID CROCKETT, Narrative of His Life, p. 30. (1834)

She'd got her Irish up now, and didn't keer.

MARK TWAIN, Adventures of Snodgrass, p. 21. (1856)

14 It's a good thing to be an Irishman because people think that all an Irishman does is to laugh without a reason an' fight without an obbjck.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, The Irish. (1900)

15 Will any, but an Irish-Man, hang a wooden Kettle over the Fire?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5756. (1732)

16 Irish assurance: a bold, forward behavior. It is said that a dipping in the river Shannon totally annihilates bashfulness.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue. (1785)

The ambition of the Irish is to say a thing as everybody says it, only louder.

G. M. HOPKINS, Letter to Robert Bridges. (1888)

17 Every Irishman has a potato in his head.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

No Irishman is so poor but that he has a still poorer Irishman living off of him.

W. M. THACKERAY, as quoted by A. E. WIGGAM, New Decalogue of Science, p. 55.

<sup>1</sup> The Irish are a fair people; they never speak well of one another.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1775.

If you put an Irishman on a spit you can always get another Irishman to baste him.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island: Preface. Sec. 33. (1907)

God is good to the Irish, but no one else is: not even the Irish.

AUSTIN O'MALLEY, Epigram. (c. 1932)

<sup>2</sup> Ireland will be your hinder end.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 192. (1721)

"Foreboding that he will steal and go to Ireland to escape justice."

<sup>3</sup> England's difficulty is Ireland's opportunity.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, i, 35. (1902)

<sup>4</sup> My one claim to originality among Irishmen is that I have never made a speech.

GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man. Ch. 4. (1888)

Ireland is a fatal disease—fatal to Englishmen and doubly fatal to Irishmen.

MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man. Ch. 11.

Nothing in Ireland lasts long except the miles.

GEORGE MOORE, Ave, p. 11. (1911) An Irish mile is 2,240 yards, which is a little more than an English mile and a quarter

<sup>5</sup> Like an Irishman's obligations, all on one side.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk-Phrases of Four Counties, p. 19. (1894)

<sup>6</sup> Hibernicis ipsis Hibernior.—"More Irish than the Irish themselves." A specimen of modern dog Latin, quoted against those who are guilty of bulls or other absurdities.

HENRY RILEY, Dictionary of Latin Quotations, p. 146. (1860)

As Irish as pigs in Shudekill market.

W. E. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 65. (1869)

The great feudal chiefs, descended usually from the Norman and English conquerors, . . . greatly contemning . . . "the mere Irish," though other people pronounced them . . . "Hibernis ipsis Hiberniores."

CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, Cameos from English History. Ser. ii, ch. 18. (1871)

<sup>7</sup> Mr. Speaker, I smell a rat; I see him forming in the air and darkening the sky; but I'll nip him in the bud.

SIR BOYLE ROCHE, Speech, in Irish Parliament. (c. 1790) See BARRINGTON, Personal Sketches.

SMELL A RAT, see under RAT.

There is one distinguishing characteristic of the Irish bull—its horns are tipped with brass.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Essay on Irish Bulls. Ch. 7. (1802)

It was Professor Tyrrell who neatly explained that the Irish bull differed from the bull of all other islands in that "it was always pregnant."

BRANDER MATTHEWS, Recreations of an Anthropologist, p. 20. (1904)

<sup>8</sup> The western isles Of kerns and gallowglasses. SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 2, 12. (1606)

<sup>9</sup> He gave the little Wealth he had,
To build a House for Fools and Mad:

And shew'd by one satyric Touch,
No Nation wanted it so much.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 479. (1731) The nation referred to is Ireland.

<sup>10</sup> Give an Irishman lager for a month and he's a dead man. An Irishman is lined with copper, and the beer corrodes it. But whiskey polishes the copper and is the saving of him.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Ch. 23. (1883)

<sup>11</sup> The Irish have the best hearts in the three kingdoms.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Hannah More, 15 June, 1787.

<sup>12</sup> Ireland is now ruled partially by the priests, and may be so entirely in the near future if it is true that "Home Rule is Rome Rule."

UNKNOWN, The Spectator (London): Supplement, 29 April, 1911, p. 628.

<sup>13</sup> The Emerald Isle.

UNKNOWN, Erin, To Her Own Tune. (1795)

Arm of Erin! prove strong, but be gentle as brave,
And, uplifted to strike, still be ready to save,
Nor one feeling of vengeance presume to defile
The cause, or the men of the Emerald Isle.

WILLIAM DRENNAN, Erin. (c. 1800) Sometimes cited as the first use of the phrase, but Dr. Drennan, in an introduction to his verses, expressly says that it was first used in the song cited above, "a party song written without the rancour of party," as he described it Has anybody here seen Kelly?

Kelly from the Emerald Isle?

WILLIAM J. MCKENNA, Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly? An American adaptation of an English song, Kelly from the Isle of Man, sung by Nora Bayes in The Jolly Bachelors (1903)

In the seventh century Ireland was known by the designation of "The Isle of Saints" . . . Its missionaries laboured with singular success in France, Germany, Switzerland, and Italy, as well as in Great Britain.

THOMAS KILLEN, Ecclesiastical History of Ireland, i, 40. (1875)

IRON

<sup>14</sup> So you used me to pull the irons out of the fire for you?

JAMES HILTON, Was It Murder? Ch. 14. (1933)
See CHESTNUT.

<sup>15</sup> Of itself does iron draw a man to it. (αὐτὸς γὰρ ἐφέλκεται ἄνδρα σίδηρος.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvi, l. 294. (c. 850 B.C.)
Repeated in xix, 13.

1 If you reject the iron, you will never make the steel.

KANG-HSI, Sacred Edict. Sec. 4. (c. 400 B.C.)

2 The yron though fretted with the rust, yet being burnt in the fire shineth brighter.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 101. (1579)

3 It is not saide in vaine, Laden with iron [i. e. arms, weapons], laden with feare.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina, p. 204. (1631)

4 Put no more so many yrons in the fyre at ones.

SIR WILLIAM PAGET, Letter to Somerset, 7 July, 1549.

The King should have at once many yrons (as the saying is) in the fire to attend upon.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 336. (1576)

One[e] iron in ye fyre at once.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 94. (c. 1590)

Many yrons in the fire part mon coole.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c. 1595)

You know, brother, I have other irons on the anvil.

CHAPMAN, The Widdowes Teares. Act ii, sc. 1. (1612)

It is always good

When a man has two irons in the fire.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Faithful Friends. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1613)

They that have many Irons in the fire, some must burne.

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH, A True Relation of Such Occurrences as Hath Hapned in Virginia, iv, 159. (1624)

He that hath many irons in the fire, some will cool.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 78. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 107. (1678)

I have more irons in the fire than one.

VANBRUGH AND CIBBER, The Provok'd Husband. Act ii, sc. 1. (1728) FOOTE, The Englishman in Paris. Act i. (c. 1750)

I had now several important irons in the fire, and all to be struck whilst hot.

ROBERT POLLOCK, Peter Wilkins. Bk. ii, ch. 15. (1751)

He who puts too many irons in the fire may well forget one or two. (Qui met trop de fers au feu, Enoubbliera bien un ou deux.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 385. (1856)

[He] keeps more than one iron in the fire.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 13. (1857)

5 Iron sharpeneth iron. (Ferrum ferro exacuitur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 17. (c. 250 B.C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 99, cites this as "Ferrum ferro acuitur." Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus. fo. 65, "Yron whetteth yron."

6 Whose feet they hurt with fetters: he was laid in iron.

Old Testament: Psalms, cv, 18. (c. 250 B.C.)

The literal translation of the Hebrew is, "His person entered into the iron," meaning that Joseph was bound in chains; but in the Vulgate the phrase was mistranslated, "Ferrum pertransit animam eius" (The iron entered into his soul), a perversion carried over into the Psalter, cv, 18, and into the Great Bible of 1539.

I saw the iron enter into his soul.

STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: The Captive: Paris. (1768)

She was sinking into a slavery worse than that of the body. The iron was beginning to enter into the soul.

MACAULAY, Essays: Madame D'Arblay. (1843)

I herded sheep for five days and then the wool entered my soul.

O. HENRY, The Hiding of Black Bill. (1909)

7 I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 10, 30. (1590)

Put up your iron.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iv, 1, 42. (1599)

Ay me! what perils do environ

The man that meddles with cold iron!

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1. (1664)

"Gold is for the mistress—silver for the maid—Copper for the craftsman cunning at his trade"

"Good!" said the Baron, sitting in his hall,

"But Iron—Cold Iron—is master of them all"

RUDYARD KIPLING, Cold Iron. (1910)

II—Strike While the Iron Is Hot

8 If you see a beauty, hammer away at the business at once. (ἢν τινα καλὸν ἴδῃς, εὐθὺς τὸ πρῆγμα κροτεῖσθω.)

ADDAEUS, Epigram. (c. 320 B.C.) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 20. Paton, in the Loeb C.L., puts it into the idiomatic, "Strike while the iron is hot."

While it is hot, strike. (Dum calet hoc agitur.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 914. (c. 194 B.C.)

He saw his iron was in the fire. (Videret ferrum suum in igne esse.)

SENECA (?), Apocolocyntosis. Sec. 9. (A.D. 55) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, v, 100, and given as a proverb in the form, "Nunc tuum ferrum in igni est" (Now your iron is in the fire), with the explanation that it means, "Now your iron is in the fire, you must work it while it is hot." Another proverbial form, given by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 123, is, "Ferrum, cum igni candet, tundendum" (The iron, while it glows with heat, should be beaten).

While fortune is hot. (Dum fortuna calet.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 734. (c. A.D. 60) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, l. 47.

Act while thy hand is hot! (Perage dum fervet manus.)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 435. (c. A.D. 60)

While thou art hungry eat; while thou art thirsty drink; while the cauldron is hot pour out.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 62b (c. 450)

If thou hast dates in the fold of thy garment, run to the brewery. While yet the sand is on thy feet, dispose of thy wares.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 113a.

While the fire is burning, cut the pumpkin and bake it.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 33b.

"While the sandle is on thy foot, tread down the thorns."—Genesis Rabbah, xliv, 12.

Omitting no time, least the yron should coole before he could strike, he presently went to Camilla.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 267. (1580)

Beating his yron that he might frame it while it were hoat.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 382.

1 Pandare, which that stood hir faste by,
Felte iren hoot, and he bigan to smyte.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1275. (c. 1380)

Right so as whyl that iren is hoot, men sholden smyte, right so, men sholde wreken hir wronges whyle that they been fresshe and newe.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 12. (c. 1387)

The iren hoot, tyme is for to smyte.

LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. ii, l. 6110. (1412)

2 Whan the yron is well hoot, hit werketh the better.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, p. 136. (c. 1489)

Whan the yron is hoot it moste be wrought and forged.

JEAN D'ARRAS, tr., Mesuline. Ch. 27. (c. 1500)
Whilst the iron is hot we must strike it. (Pendant que le fer est chault il le fault batre.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 31. (1532)

And one good lesson to this purpose I pike
From the smithis forge, whan thyron is hot strike.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

"Too many irons in the fire" is also "from the smith's forge."

I think it wisdom to strike while the iron is hot.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Minos and Pasiphae, p. 219. (1576) One of the earliest uses of the proverb in its exact modern form. So frequent thereafter that only variations will be given.

It is good to strike the yron when it is hot. (E bon batter il ferro quando che l'è caldo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

It is good to strike while the iron is hot.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 327. (1605)

We must beat the iron while it is hot; but we may polish it at leisure.

JOHN DRYDEN, Aeneis: Dedication. (1697)

We must strike while the Iron is hot, if we would make any Work on't.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 188. (1709)

Where's the good of putting things off? Strike while the iron's hot; that's what I say.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 44. (1841)

One must strike the iron while it is hot. (Il faut frapper le fer pendant qu'il est chaud.)

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 295.

(1890) The usual French form is, "Il faut (or On doit) battre le fer quand il est chaud."

Now, while the iron is heated, strike!

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, A Wreath for Mrs. Roosevelt. (1940) A few of many examples.

MAKE HAY WHILE THE SUN SHINES, see under HAY.

3 Men, contrary to iron, are worst to be wrought upon when they are hot; and are farre more tractable in cold blood.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1642)

4 Strike now, or else the iron cools.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, i, 49. (1591)

His iron did on the anvil cool.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 2, 194. (1596)

Don't let the place get cold. (Ta t'ieh kan jê.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 752. (1875)

And with new notions,—let me change the rule,—
Don't strike the iron till it's slightly cool.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 302. (1846)

IRONY

See also Satire

5 Irony is the foundation of the character of Providence. (L'ironie est le fond du caractère de la Providence.)

HONORÉ DE BALZAC, Eugénie Grandet. (c. 1832)

6 An Irony is a nipping jeast, or a speech that hath the honey of pleasantness in its mouth, and a sting of rebuke in its taile.

EDWARD REYNER, Rules for the Government of the Tongue, p. 227. (1656)

Irony is jesting hidden behind gravity.

WEISS, Wit, Humor and Shakespeare. (1876)

Irony is an insult conveyed in the form of a compliment.

EDWIN PERCY WHIPPLE, Literature and Life: Wit. (1850)

ISOLATION

7 Isolation is the sum total of wretchedness to man.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iv, ch. 4. (1843)

8 Whether splendidly isolated or dangerously isolated, I will not now debate; but for my part, I think splendidly isolated, because this isolation of England comes from her superiority.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER, Speech, in Canadian Assembly, 5 Feb., 1896.

We have stood alone in that which is called isolation—our splendid isolation, as one of our colonial friends was good enough to call it.

VISCOUNT GEORGE J. GOSCHEN, Speech, at Lewes, 26 February, 1896.

Splendid isolation. Britain's political isolation, hence any other country's: [a cliché] from 1896.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés (1941)

IT

- 1
All the girls will "do it,"
When flirting on our block.
T. D. C. MILLER, Flirting On Our Block. (1884)
"It" is the most obscene word in the English language.
DOUGLAS GILBERT, Lost Chords, p. 76. (1942)
Gilbert illustrates his point by quoting the titles of such songs as "She Had to Go and Lose It at the Astor," "If I Can't Sell It I'm Going to Sit on It Rather Than Give It Away," the "its" in question being a fur piece and an old rocking chair.
- 2
'Tisn't beauty, so to speak, nor good talk necessarily. It's just It. Some women'll stay in a man's memory if they once walked down a street.
RUDYARD KIPLING, Mrs. Bathurst. (1904)
She wasn't one of these girls who are all S.A. [sex appeal] and IT.
AGATHA CHRISTIE, Sad Cypress, p. 135. (1940)
It's IT, my boy. That's what it is, IT.
AGATHA CHRISTIE, Evil under the Sun, p. 18. (1941)
He's got "It," as they say.
NGAIO MARSH, Death and the Dancing Footman, p. 126. (1941)
I got one hundred per cent essay. Ess-shay. "It."
NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 124. (1941)
A man's picked up the wench and taught her she has It.
H. C. BAILEY, Nobody's Vineyard, p. 37. (1942)
The French say, "Avoir le fluide."
Scared of my its appeal.
FINLAY McDERMID, Ghost Wanted, p. 210. (1943)

ITALY AND THE ITALIANS

- 3
'Tis a true proverb, All Italians are plunderers.
(Gli Italiani tutti ladroni.)
NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Remark, in a loud voice at a public reception in Italy in 1797. To which an Italian lady present is said to have replied, "Non tutti, ma buona parte" (Not all, but a good part), a play upon Napoleon's name. See COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria: Satyrane's Letters. Letter 2. Coleridge adds, "This, I confess, sounded to my ears as one of the many good things that might have been said. The anecdote is more valuable; for it instances the ways and means of French insinuation."
- 4
Queen Mary's saying serves for me—
(When fortune's malice Lost her, Calais)
Open my heart and you will see
Graved inside of it, "Italy."
ROBERT BROWNING, "De Gustibus" (1855)
- 5
Ah Italy, thou slave, hostel of woe, vessel without pilot in a mighty storm, no mistress of provinces, but a brothel! (Ahi serva Italia, di dolore ostello, | nave senza nocchiero in gran tempesta, | non donna di provincie, ma bordello!)

- DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto vi, l. 76. (c. 1300)
From which, perhaps, the phrase, "Italy, courtesan of nations."
Proverbially said, there are in Genoa, Mountaines without wood, Sea without fish, Women without shame, and Men without conscience, which makes them to be termed the white Moores.
JAMES HOWELL, Instructions for Forreine Travell, viii, 41. (1642) TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 102. (1666)
- 6
Beyond the Alps lies Italy. (Alpes, . . . quarum alterum latus Italiae sit.)
LIVY, History. Bk. xxi, ch. 30. (c. 10 B.C.)
Past the Alpine summits of great pain
Lieth thine Italy.
ROSE TERRY COOKE, Beyond. (1860)
Beyond the Alps, as histories note,
Lies Italy.
PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, The Progress of Dictatorship. (1940)
- 7
All that be blacke digge not for coales, all things that breede in the mudde, are not Euets, all that are borne in Italy, be not ill
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 315. (1580)
- 8
Midnight and love and youth and Italy!
LORD LYTTON, The Wanderer: Prologue (1857)
Lump the whole thing! Say that the Creator made Italy from designs by Michael Angelo.
MARK TWAIN, Innocents Abroad. Ch. 3. (1869)
- 9
Italy is only a geographical expression. (Italien ist ein geographischer Begriff.)
PRINCE METTERNICH, Memorandum to the Great Powers, at the Congress of Vienna, 2 August, 1814. He was evidently proud of the phrase, for he repeated it in his correspondence.
- 10
Hail, land of Saturn! great mother of earth's fruits, great mother of men! . . . 'Tis for thee I dare to unseal the sacred founts. (Salve, magna parens frugum, Saturnia telus, | magna virum: tibi . . . sanctos ausus recludere fontis.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 173. (29 B.C.)
- ITCH
- 11
Itch . . . also is pleasing.
FRANCIS BACON, Sylva Sylvarum, vii, 694. (1626)
BETTER THAN RICHES TO SCRATCH WHERE IT ITCHES, see under SCRATCHING.
- 12
He who in itching no scratchyng will forbere,
He must beare the smartyng that shall follow there.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
He that will not bear the itch must endure the smart.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 162. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2349. (1732)

<sup>1</sup>
An olde saide sawe, itche and ease, can no man please.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 486. (c. 1594)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6237. (1732)

<sup>2</sup>
The ytch of vain glory.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Confutation of Tyndale. (1532)

An itch of preaching.

CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Biography: Life of More, ii, 119. (1599)

An itch to be thought modest.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses Looking-Glasse, iii, iv. (1638)

This agreeable itch of the elbow.

NICHOLAS AMHERST, Terrae filius. Ch. 47. (1726) Of gaming.

The itch of literary praise.

JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 115. (1753)

He had an itch for authorship.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Ch. 7. (1863)

The itch of originality infects his thought.

LOWELL, My Study Windows, p. 201. (1870)

<sup>3</sup>
It is better to ytche than to smarte.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p. 494. (1530)

JACK

See also John

<sup>6</sup>
He was goin' to clean the streets and jack up the coppers.

GEORGE ADE, Artie. Ch. 12. (1896) To call to account, or bring to a sense of duty.

I think I'll jack up our boys in the city room

S. H. ADAMS, The Clarion, p. 100. (1914)

The engineer was . . . jacked up for thirty days.

HERBERT HAMBLIN, The General Manager's Story, p. 298. (1898) Suspended.

In process of trying to jack up our customer, . . . we lost out on the deal.

FREEMAN AND KINGSLEY, The Alabaster Box, p. 57. (1917) To raise the price of a thing.

<sup>7</sup>
One that reckoneth accounts all the day passeth not an happy moment. One that gladdeneth his heart all the day provideth not for his house. The bowman hitteth the mark, as the steersman reacheth land, by diversity of aim.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 25. (c. 3550 B. C.)

Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr. Tacking is evidently what is meant in the case of the steersman.

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)
Cited by Ray and Fuller and frequently quoted.

An itch is worse than a smart.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1670)

Itch is more intolerable than Smart.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3114. (1732)

<sup>4</sup>
Our fingers wyll itch at hym.

JOHN STUBBS, The Discoverie of a Gaping Gulf, E viii b. (1579)

If I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 3, 48. (1601)

His tongue itched to be let loose.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Gusman de Alfarache, i, 57. (1622)

His fingers itched to give Nic. a good slap on the chops.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, iv, i. (1712)

The men's fingers are itching for a fight.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Hyppatia. Ch. 18. (1853)

<sup>5</sup>
Miss Notable: My elbow itches; I shall change bed-fellows.

Lady Smart: And my right hand itches; I shall receive money.

Lady Answerall: And my right eye itches; I shall cry.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

THE ITCH TAKE THE HINDMOST, see under DEVIL.

J

All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy,
All play and no work makes Jack a mere toy.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Harry and Lucy Concluded. Vol. ii. (1825)

All work and no play may make Peter a dull boy as well as Jack.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letters, i, 313. (1853)

"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy"; but all play and no work makes him something greatly worse.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 11. (1859)

<sup>8</sup>
Ile throw him into the Dock rather than he shall succeed Jack o' Dandy.

RICHARD BROME, The Northern Lasse. Act iii, sc. 2. (1632) A contemptuous name for a fop.

Leave her, she's only worth the Care

Of some spruce Jack-a-dandy.

SIR GEORGE ETHEREGE, The Comical Revenge. Act ii, sc. 3. (1664)

All the Jack-a-dandies that have been fluttering about you.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison. Bk. iv, ch. 29. (1754)

I'd sooner by half bend my back double with hard work than be a jack-a-dandy.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 1. (1869)

<sup>9</sup>
I'd do it as soon as say Jack Robinson.

FANNY BURNBY, Evelina. Lett. 82. (1778) Although Miss Burney uses this as an ordinary and well-understood saying, no earlier instance of its use has been discovered.

I'd get her off before you could say Jack Robinson.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Absentee. Ch. 2. (1812)
Let's have the shutters up . . . before a man can say Jack Robinson.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave 2. (1843)
A work it is easy to be done.

As 'tis to say Jack! Robys on.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary of Archaic and Provincial Words. (1847) Halliwell gives this as from an "old play," but the play has never been identified, and the couplet is evidently an invention. The origin of the phrase is unknown.

<sup>1</sup>
He that parted is in every place
Is no-where hool, as writen clerkes wyse.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 960. (c. 1380)

He is not any where, who is every where.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 139. (1574) Pettie, tr. The French say, "Quand on est propre à tout, on n'est propre à rien" (When one is good at everything, one is good at nothing).

Some broken citizen, who hath well plaid Jack-of-all trades.

GEFFRAY MYNSHUL, Essayes and Characters of a Prison, p. 50. (1618)

Why, you mungrel, you John of all trades.

JASPER MAYNE, The City Match. Act ii, sc. 5. (1639)

He that sips of many arts drinks of none.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1642) Quoting the Latin proverb, "Aliquis in omnibus est nullus in singulis."

I am still in my vocation; for you know I am a jack of all trades.

JOHN DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act i, sc. 1. (1690)
Old Lewis Baboon was a sort of Jack of all trades, which made the rest of the tradesmen jealous.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull. Ch. 4. (1712)
Lewis Baboon, the French.

You are Davy to all things.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 392. (1721)
Jack of all Trades is of no Trade.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3051. (1732)
"How comes it that I am so unlucky?" "Jack of all trades, and master of none," said Goodenough, with a sneer.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Popular Tales: Will. Ch. 1. (1800) This is the modern form most commonly used. A variant is, "Jack of all trades is seldom good at any."

He is a bit of a Jack of all trades, or to use his own words, "a regular Robinson Crusoe."

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz: Parish. Ch. 2. (1836)
I'm a sort of Jack of all trades and master of none.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 7. (1843)

The master of one trade will support a wife and seven children: the master of seven trades will not support himself. (Meister einer Kunst nährt Weib und sieben Kinder: Meister der sieben Künste nährt sich selber nicht.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 75. (1852) Citing a German proverb.

Better be master of one trade than Jack of all trades. (Pai i wu ju yi i ching.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 317. (1875)

A man of many trades cannot rear a family. (I to pu yang chia.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 335.

<sup>2</sup>
As cunningly . . . as euer poore cuckoe coulde commend his Iacke in a boxe.

HENRY CHETTEL, Kind Harts Dreame, p. 45. (1592)

My Lord Vitelli's love, and maintenance,
Deserves no other Jack i' the box but he.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 1. (c. 1623)

These woman [have] touns that lie worse than false clocks,

By which they catch men like Jacks in a box.

HENRY GLAPTHORNE, Argalus. (1639)

Jack in the box, a sharper or cheat.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. G2. (1690)

<sup>3</sup>
Jack Sprat teacheth his grandame.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 4. (1639)

Jack Sprat would teach his grandame. Ante barbam docet senes [Before you have a beard you teach the old]. The French say, Les oisons mènent paitre les oies. The goslings lead the geese.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 108. (1678)

<sup>4</sup>
[He] thought it an excellent opportunity to make his "Jack."

J. M. CRAWFORD, Moseby and His Men, p. 282 (1867) To achieve his object.

Made his Jack. Carried his point; was fortunate in his undertaking.

JOHN BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 378. (1877)

You've come here to make your jack, and I've always heard that a good way to do that is to dress as if you'd already made it.

HARRISON ROBERTSON, The Inlander, p. 25.

(1901) To make your fortune. Jack: money.

He made plenty of jack while they were being dull boys.

STANLEY WALKER, The Uncanny Knacks of Mr. Doherty. (New Yorker, 12 July, 1941)

<sup>5</sup>
'Twas all one to Jack.

CHARLES DIBDIN, All's One to Jack. (c. 1790)

Jack Tar, the popular name for a sailor.

There's a sweet little cherub that sits up aloft,
To keep watch for the life of poor Jack.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Poor Jack.

For if bold tars are Fortune's sport,
Still are they Fortune's care.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Blind Sailor.

Jack's as good as his master in these matters

CHARLES READE, Foul Play. Ch. 40. (1869)

The simple discovery that for the novelist's purpose, Jack was as good as his master.

RICHARD GARNETT, Age of Dryden, p. 245. (1895)

Why, Jack's the king of all,
For they all love Jack.

FREDERICK E. WEATHERLY, They All Love Jack.
(c. 1910)

<sup>1</sup> "Every one of 'em," replied Dennis. "Every man Jack!"

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 39. (1841)

Every man-jack in the place gave his vote to the liege lord.

MRS. GASKELL, Wives and Daughters. Ch. 1. (1866)

I am responsible for the ship's safety and the life of every man Jack aboard of her.

STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 9. (1883)

<sup>2</sup> Making a sort of political Cheap Jack of himself.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Ch. 6. (1872) A Cheap Jack is a travelling hawkker who offers bargains, usually putting up his wares at an arbitrary price and then cheapening them gradually.—O.E.D.

None of your cheap-John turnouts for me.

MARK TWAIN, Roughing It. Ch. 46. (1872)

<sup>3</sup> Body of me, I'm dry still; give me the jack, boy;

This wooden skilt holds nothing.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1620) A pitcher of waxed leather, sometimes called a black-jack.

Small jacks we have in many ale-houses, tipped with silver.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Philocothonista. (1635)

A large black leathern jack, which contained two double flagons of strong ale.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 9. (1826)

<sup>4</sup> He found himself jack-out-of-doors.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne's Essays, i, 6. (1603) An interpolation by Florio.

Not Jack-out-of-doors nor yet gentlemen.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 206. (1639)

<sup>5</sup> Yit durst Thersites bee

So bold as rayle uppon the kings, and he was payd by mee

For playing so the sawcye Jacke.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Ovid's Metamorphoses. Bk. xiii, l. 289. (1567) To play the Jack, i. e., to play the knave.

If you were not resolved to play the Jacks, what need you study for new subjects?

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle: Induction. (1611)

Your fairy . . . has done little better than played the Jack with us.

SHAKESPEARE, Tempest, iv, 1, 198. (1600)

Sir R. Brookes overtook us coming to town; who played the jacke with us all, and is a fellow that I must trust no more.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 23 Feb., 1668.

"He calls the knaves Jacks, this boy," said Estella with disdain, before our first game was out.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 8. (1861)

<sup>6</sup> What is vulgarly called Jack of both sides. (Ut vulgo dici solet Johannem ad oppositum.)

EDMUND GRINDAL, Letter to John Foxe, 28 Dec., 1557.

A Godly and necessary Admonition concerning Neuters, such as deserve the grosse name of Iack of both sides.

UNKNOWN. Title of book. (1562)

Who plaid ye iackes on both sides, and were indeed Neuters.

THOMAS DEKKER, Works, iv, 158. (1609)

He hath won this universal good will by the vice of playing Jack of both sides.

HENRY CAREY, EARL OF MONMOUTH, tr., Advertisements from Parnassus, p. 338. (1656)

He feigns himself a Jack of both Sides.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 289. (1709)

How often have those men of honour . . . play'd Jack a both sides, to-day for and to-morrow against.

DANIEL DEFOE, The Complete English Gentleman. Pt. i, ch. 1, p. 30. (1729)

They try to be Jack-o'-both-sides, and deserve to be kicked like a football by both parties.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 18. (1869)

<sup>7</sup> Jack Kitch, the proper name of the Common Hangman that is now in being.

RICHARD HEAD, The Canting Academy, p. 13.

(1673) John, or Jack, Ketch was the common executioner from about 1663 to 1686. Partly because of his barbarity at the executions of political offenders, and partly perhaps from apt association with the verb Ketch, Catch, his name became notorious, and finally passed into the language as an appellation for a hangman. See O.E.D., v, 539/2.

"Jack Ketch," says I, "is an excellent physician."

DRYDEN, Duke of Guise: Epilogue. (1682)

If they seize the vessel it is piracy—a criminal act which ends with Jack Ketch.

W. CLARK RUSSELL, Marooned, p. 75. (1889)

<sup>8</sup> I haue bene common Iacke to all that hole flocke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Some Iackes are common to all that will play.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 45. (1611)

<sup>9</sup> Iack out of office, she maie bid me walke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

I am left out; for me nothing remains.

But long I will not be Jack out of office.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, i, 1, 175. (1591)

We should be but so many Jacks out of Office.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 65. (1668)

To be Jack in an office.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 74. (1678) A self-important petty official.

Jack in an office is a great man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 214. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3050. (1732)

Jack in an office, of one that behaves himself imperiously in it.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. (c. 1700)

How uppish and sawcy soever such a Jack-in-an-office may be.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1709)

Two upstart Jacks in Office, proud and vain.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

Some folks are Jacks-in-office, fond of power.

JOHN WOLCOT, The Lousiad. Canto iv. (1785)

A type of Jack-in-office insolence and absurdity . . . a beadle.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1857)

1 Jack would wipe his nose if he had one.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 108. (1670)

2 I'm Simple Jack, just as before. (Je suis Gros-Jean comme devant.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 10. (1678)

Gros-Jean, a French proverbial phrase for a person of no consequence. To be "Gros-Jean as before" means that one is no better off than before. In this fable, a dairy-woman, carrying a pail full of milk on her head to market and thinking of the things she is going to do with the money she receives for it, drops the pail and so is Gros-Jean as before.

3 When there was neede of my seruice . . . I was seldom or never wanting; I was Iacke at a pinch.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Aleman's Guzman de Alfarache, i, 130. (1622)

Jack at a pinch, a poor Hackney Parson.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. G2. (1690)

Jack-at-a-pinch, a sudden unexpected call to do anything. Also, a poor parson.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary of Archaic Words: Jack. (1847)

4 There are giants to slay, and they call for their Jack.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Empty Purse. (1887). That is, Jack the giant killer.

5 The man [was not] to be made any more account of than Jack hold my staff.

BISHOP RICHARD MONTAGU, Appello Caesarem, ii, xiv, 217. (1625) A servile attendant.

Madam, in plain English I am made a . . . Jack-hold-my-staff.

APHRA BEHN, Sir Patient Fancy. Act v. (1678)

6 I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff; but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 12. (1597)

7 I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the clock.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, 5, 60. (1595) A "Jack o' the clock" was a mechanical figure which struck the bell.

This is the night, nine the hour, and I the jack that gives warning.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act ii, sc. 2. (1602)

8 A mad-cap ruffian and a swearing Jack.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1, 290. (1594)

9 For Jak wold be a jentyلمان that late was a grome.

JOHN SKELTON, Against a Comely Coistrown [Scullion]. St. 6. (c. 1515)

Iacke would be a gentleman if he could speake frenche.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 108. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3052. (1732)

Since every Jack became a gentleman,

There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 3, 72. (1592)

Nowe Iacke will bee a gentleman, no longer a sheepheard.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, c42. (1599)

Jack would be a gentleman if he had money.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 98. (1639)

We ape the French . . . in their language ("which if Jack could speak, he would be a gentleman").

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies: Berkshire, i, 118. (1662)

Jack will never make a gentleman.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 659. (1681)

Jack will never make a Gentleman, nor Joan a Gentlewoman, unless when some Fool of a Knight marries his Cook-maid.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1709)

10 When his companions drank to the Hans en Kelderr, or Jack in the low cellar, he could not help displaying an extraordinary complacence of countenance.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 10. (1751) A rendering of the Dutch Hans-in-Kelder, a baby in the womb.

11 I am an Evening dark as Night,

Jack-with-the-Lantern, bring a Light.

SIR ROBERT STAPLETON, The Slighted Maid. Act iii, l. 48. (1663)

Partridge . . . firmly believed . . . that this light was a Jack with a lantern, or somewhat more mischievous.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xii, ch. 12. (1749)

I have followed Cupid's Jack-a-lantern, and find myself in a quagmire.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 4. (1775)

12 The Mayor . . . was a pleasant man, and Jack among the maids.

JOHN TRUSLER, Modern Times, i, 160. (1785) A ladies' man.

13 Jack Napys, with his clogge.

Hath tiede Talbot oure gentille dogge.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Poems: Arrest of the Duke of Suffolk, p. 224. (1450) "So far as yet found, the word [Jackanape] appears first as an opprobrious nickname of William de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk (murdered 1450), whose badge was a clog and chain, such as was attached to a tame ape. . . . But of its relation to an ape or apes, no certain explanation can be offered. . . . Jack Napes is the earliest form, of which Jack-a-Napes, Jack-an-ape, Jack-and-apes, are later perversions, apparently attempts of 'popular etymology' to make the expression more intelligible."—O.E.D., v, 537/1.

This the Divell's Jackanapes made pastime to Lucifer.

NICHOLAS HARPSFIELD, A Treatise on the Pretended Divorce Between Henry VIII and Catharine of Aragon, p. 291. (c. 1555)

Can Jack an Ape be merry when his clog is at his heel?

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 321. (1605) When his wife is along. Cited by Ray and Fuller.

There is more ado with one Jack-an-apes than all the bears.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 69. (1633)
Cited by Clarke and Fuller.

Jack-an-apes is no gentleman.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 226. (1639)
They tell him he's a Jackanapes, a Rogue and a Rascal.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Predestination. (a. 1654)

I always put these pert jackanapeses out of countenance.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters. (1748).

A whiskered Jackanapes, like that officer, set to command grey-headed men before he can command his own temper.

KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 4. (1850)

1
Then Jacke-a-lent comes justlynge in,
With the hedpeece of a herynge.

THOMAS WRIGHT, ed., Political Songs: Philip and Mary, p. 191. (c. 1560) "A figure of a man set up to be pelted: an ancient form of the sport of 'Aunt Sally,' practised during Lent. Hence fig. a butt for every one to throw at."—O.E.D.

He was dressed up like Jack a Lent.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Chippes, p. 50. (1575)

You little Jack-a-Lent, have you been true to us?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 3, 27. (1601) Referred to again in v, 5, 134.
How like a Jack-a-lent

He stands, for boys to spend their Shrovetide throws.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Shepherd's Oracles. (1646)

Jack o' Lent. This was a puppet, formerly thrown at, in our own country, during Lent, like Shrove-cocks.

WILLIAM HONE, Table Book, i, col. 270. (1827)

II—Jack and Jill

2
Jack will eat no fat, and Jill doth love no leane,
Yet betwixt them both, they lick the dishes cleane.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 57. (1639)

Archdeacon Pratt would eat no fatt,
His wife would eat no lean;
Twixt Archdeacon Pratt and Joan his wife,
The meat was eat up clean.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1659)
Jack Sprat he lov'd no fat, and his wife she lov'd no lean:

And yet betwixt them both they lick'd the platters clean.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 211. (1670)

Jack Sprat could eat no fat,

His wife could eat no lean;

And so, betwixt them both, you see,

They lick'd the platter clean.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes of England. Ch. 14, p. 92. (1843)

3
If Jack's in love, he's no Judge of Jill's Beauty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2681. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748.

4
Jack and Jill went up the hill,
To fetch a pail of water;

Jack fell down and broke his crown,

And Jill came tumbling after.

J. O. HALLIWELL, ed., Nursery Rhymes of England. Ch. 14, p. 97. (1842)

5
Some songe of Ienken and Iulyan for there mede.

JOHN LYDGATE, London Lyckpeny, l. 80. (c. 1430)

For Iak nor for Gille wille I turne my face.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Mysteries, iii, 336 (c. 1460)

And I wole keep the feet this tyde,

Thow ther come back Jakke and Gylle.

UNKNOWN, Coventry Mysteries, 340. (c. 1450)

6
Princes are brav'd by Jack and Jill.

MARCHAMONT NEEDHAM, History of the English Rebellion, p. 74 (1661)

7
A good Jack makes a good Jill.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 106. (1678)

There are many variations. "If Jack were better, Jill would not be so bad," "Jack's as good as Jill," and so on. Jack, of course, is a sort of generic name for a young fellow and Jill for a young woman. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE.

If Gill was a shrew, it was because Jack did not as in duty bound, stop her mouth with a kiss

LYTTON, My Novel. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1852)

8
There's not so bad a Gill but there's as bad a Will.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 146. (1678)
There's not so ord'nary a Gill, but there's as sorry a Jack.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. sig. F2. (1690)

A bad Jack may have as bad a Jill.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1. (1732)

There never was a silly Jack, but there was as silly a Jenny.

JOHN GALT, Annals of the Parish. Ch. 27. (1821)

<sup>1</sup> What auayleth lordshyp, yourselfe for to kyl
With care and with thought howe Jacke shall haue Gyl?

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 290. (c. 1520)
Come chat at home, al is wel. Iack shall haue Gill.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)
Our wooing doth not end like an old play; Jack hath not Jill.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 885.
(1595)

Jack shall have Jill; Nought shall go ill.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
iii, ii, 461. (1596)

All shall be well, and Jack shall have Jill.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870) p. 318.
(1605) CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 63. (1639)

Like will to like; a Jacke looks for a Gill.
(Chascun demande sa sorte.)

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Demander. (1611)
The proverb is, each Jacke shall have his Gill.

BARDSLEY, Puritan Nomen, p. 104. (1619)

Every Jack must have his Gill. Like will to like.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 108. (1670)

Not a Jack among them but must have his Jill.

DANIEL DEFOE, Everybody's Business. (1725)
According to the proverb, "never a Jack but there's a Gill."

SAMUEL PEGGE, Kenticisms. No. 12. (1735)

Every Jack will find a Jill, gang the world as it may.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 2. (1823)

"Every Jack has his Gill," if he and she can only find each other out at the propitious moment.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, General Bounce. Ch. 2. (1855)
After much water-spilling and cracking of crowns,
Jack has got his Jill.

TICKNER EDWARDES, Neighbourhood, p. 10.
(1911)

While the ancient law fulfills,

Myriad moons shall wane and wax.

Jack must have his pair of Jills,

Jill must have her pair of Jacks.

BERT LESTON TAYLOR, Old Stuff. (1911)

"For every Jack there's a Jill" was a thoroughly
Elizabethan bit of English.

R. L. GALES, Studies in Arcady. Ser. ii, p. 241.
(1912)

Every Jack has his Jill;

If one won't, another will.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches,
p. 483. (1940)

JAIL, see Prison

JARGON

<sup>2</sup> And all the incoherent Jargon of the Schools
... Contrive to chock your Minds, with many a senseless doubt.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Ode to the Athenian Society,
l. 205. (1692)

Stale Memorandums of the Schools.

SWIFT, Ode to Sir William Temple, l. 34. (1689)

What's all the noisy jargon of the schools,

But idle nonsense of laborious fools,

Who fetter reason with perplexing rules?

JOHN POMFRET, Reason. (c. 1702)

All jargon of the schools.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Ode on Exodus, iii, 14.
(1709)

To them the sounding jargon of the schools
Seems what it is—a cap and bells for fools.

WILLIAM COWPER, Truth, l. 367. (1781)

What's a' your jargon o' your schools,

Your Latin names for horns an' stools?

ROBERT BURNS, First Epistle to J. Lapraik. St.
11. (1785)

JEALOUSY

<sup>3</sup> Jealousy is worse than liquor. It biteth like an adder.

C. F. ADAMS, Up Jumped the Devil, p. 47. (1943)

<sup>4</sup> With her rival, and not with a rod.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, fo. 63b. (c.
450) The way to control a wife is through jealousy.

In jalousye I rede [advise] eek thou him bynde,
And thou shalt make him couche as dooth a quaille.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Clerkes Tale,
l. 1149. (c. 1386) Advice to a wife on the way to treat a husband.

<sup>5</sup> Jealous men are eyther knaues or coxcombes.

... You weare yellow hose without cause

DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Northward Hoe. Act i.
(1607)

He wears yellow stockings, i. e. he is jealous.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Yellow. (1736)

<sup>6</sup> Jealousy, and lust, and ambition drive a man out of the world.

RABBI ELEAZAR, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iv, 30
(c. A. D. 200) Oesterley, tr

<sup>7</sup> Jealousy is inborn in women's hearts.
(ἐπιφθορόν τι χρέμα θηλείας φρενός.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 181. (c. 430 B. C.)

She'd have you spew up what you've drunk abroad. (Ut devomas vult, quod foris potaveris.)

CAECILIUS STATIUS, Plocium, l. 162. (c. 150 B. C.)

A jealous woman sets the whole house afire
(Incendit omnem femina zelus domum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 332. (c. 43 B. C.)

A woman is only jealous of her companion's thigh.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 13a. (c. 450)

No woman is jealous without another woman being the cause.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 74a.

I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 151. (1600)

The venom clamours of a jealous woman

Poisons more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, v, 1, 69
(1593)

A jealous woman believes everything her passion suggests.

JOHN GAY, Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2. (1727)

What frenzy dictates, jealousy believes.

JOHN GAY, Dione. (c. 1727)

All jealous women are mad.

A. W. PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act ii. (1893)

Plain women are always jealous of their husbands, beautiful women never are!

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act i. (1893)

1 Where jealousy is the Jailour, many break the prison.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1642)

2 A jealous Head is soon broken.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 225. (1732)

3 Jealousy is nourished by doubt. (La jalousie se nourrit dans les doutes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 32. (1665)
There is more self-love than love in jealousy. (Il y a dans la jalousie plus d'amour-propre que d'amour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 324.
It is only those who give no cause for jealousy who are worthy to arouse it. (Il n'y a que des personnes qui évitent de donner de la jalousie, qui soient dignes qu'on en ait pour elles.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 359.
Jealousy is always born with love, but does not always die with it. (La jalousie naît toujours avec l'amour, mais elle ne meurt pas toujours avec lui.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 361.
Jealousy is the greatest of all evils. (La jalousie est le plus grand de tous les maux.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 503.

4 All mistrust (Jalousie) is either needelesse or bottlesse.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England: Euphues to Philautus (Arber), p. 475. (1580)

5 Jealousy will be the ruin of you. (Perdet te dolor hic.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 98, l. 11. (A. D. 93)

6 Wedlock's yellow sickness.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Phoenix. Act ii. (1607)
Jealousy, the jaundice of the soul.

JOHN DRYDEN, Hind and Panther, iii, 73. (1687)
Jealousy Thou tyrant of the mind.

JOHN DRYDEN, Song of Jealousy. (c. 1700)
Jealousy is the bellows of the mind.

GARRICK, Epilogue to Horne's Alonzo. (a. 1779)

7 Jealousy shuts one door and opens two.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 370. (1710)

8 Jealousy is grounded upon love.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, ii, 102. (1576)
Love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 4, 178. (1594)

I perceive it is true, . . . that love is not without jealousy.

NICHOLAS BRETON, A Poste with a Packet of Mad Letters. (1603)

Love is never without jealousy. Lat. zelotypiam parit amor.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 241. (1721)

The Reward of Love, is Jealousy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4731. (1732)

Jealousy is said to be the offspring of Love. Yet, unless the parent makes haste to strangle the child, the child will not rest till it has poisoned the parent.

J. C. and A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

Jealousy, . . . there can never be love without it.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 3. (1837)

9 Jealousy is excluded from the celestial choir. (φθόνος γὰρ ἔξω θελοῦ χοροῦ ἵσταται.)

PLATO, Phaedrus. Sec. 247A. (c. 375 B.C.)

10 Man's of a jealous and mistaking kind.

POPE, tr., Homer's Odyssey. Bk. vii, l. 394. (1725)

11 Jealousy is the rage of a man. (Zelus est furor viri.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 34. (c. 250 B.C.)

Jealous as a tiger. (Ialous, comme vn Tigre.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 28. (1545)

That hateful helhounde Jelousy.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 186. (1576)

12 Love being jealous makes a good eye look asquint.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1678)

13 Green-eyed jealousy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 110. (1597)

O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;

It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock
The meat it feeds on.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 165. (1605)

The doctor was turning almost green with jealousy.

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 43. (1863)

14 For be ye wele assured

That frensy nor ielousy

Nor heresy wyll neuer dye.

JOHN SKELTON, Replycacion, l. 406. (c. 1525)

Fransy, heresy, and ielousy are three,

That men say hardly or never, cured bee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

The old proverb is, that heresy, fransie, and jealousy be so bred by the bone that they will neuer out of the fleshe.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Bulwarke of Defence, fo 75. (1562)

Our old English proverb: From heresie, phrenesie, and Iealousie, good Lord deliver me.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xxxi, notes. (1591)

Frenzy, Heresy, and Jealousy, seldom cured.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1047. (1640)

15 Jealousy is cruel as the grave: the coals thereof are coals of fire. (Dura sicut infernus aemulatio, lampades eius lampades ignis.)

Old Testament: Solomon's Song, viii, 6. (c. 800 B.C.)

<sup>1</sup>
A jealous man hath his horns in his eyes.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 174. (1666)
A jealous Man's Horns hang in his Eyes.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 226. (1732)
See also under HORN.

<sup>2</sup>
The ear of jealousy heareth all things. (Auris zeli audit omnia.)
Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, i, 10. (c. 100 B. C.)

This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 657. (1593)

<sup>3</sup>
Hunger, Revenge, to sleep are petty foes,
But only Death the jealous eyes can close.
WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act ii, sc. 4. (1672)

JEHU

<sup>4</sup>
The driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; for he driveth furiously. (Est autem incessus quasi incessus Iehu filii Namsi, praeceps enim graditur.)

Old Testament: II Kings, ix, 20. (c. 600 B. C.)
Hence "Jehu" for a fast driver, once used especially for the drivers of hansom cabs and other public vehicles.

But this new Jehu spurs the hot-mouth'd horse.
JOHN DRYDEN, The Medall, l. 119. (1682)

Our Jehu was a hackney-coachman.
CONGREVE, Double-Dealer. Act iii, sc. 10. (1694)
I like, my dear Lord, the road you are travelling, but I don't like the pace you are driving; too similar to that of the son of Nimshi.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Lord John Russell. (c. 1845)

JERICO

<sup>5</sup>
He has been to Jericho, i. e. is drunk.
FRANKLIN, Drinker's Dictionary. (1745)

<sup>6</sup>
And the king said, Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown. (Et mandavit eis David: Manete in Iericho, donec crescat barba vestra.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, x, 5. (c. 700 B. C.)
This was David's advice to his servants, who had been mistaken for spies by Hanun, and sent back from the land of Ammon with one half of their beards shaved off. Used later in slang or colloquial phrases for a place of retirement or concealment, or a place far distant and out of the way.—O.E.D.

Who would, . . . I know,
Bid such young boys to stay in Jericho
Vntill their beards were grown.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Hierarchie of the Blessed Angels, iv, 208. (1635)

Let them all goe to Jericho,
And ne'er be seen againe.
UNKNOWN, in Mercurius Aulicus. No. 8. (Mar., 1648)

Let him be jogging to Jericho for me.
UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 146. (1694)
They wish the poor children at Jericho.

MRS. THRALE, in D'ARBLAY, Diary, i, 31. (1778)
She with her apron wiped the plates, and, as she rubb'd the self,
Said I might "go to Jericho, and fetch my beer myself."

R. H. BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: Misadventures at Margate. (1837)

Her habit was to . . . come forward hurriedly, yet hesitatingly, wishing herself meantime at Jericho.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 7. (1849)
She wishes you were . . . at Jericho—anywhere else, in short, than at Sandybeach.

JAMES PAYN, By Proxy. Ch. 34. (1878)

JEST

<sup>7</sup>
A rope and a noose are no jesting matters.
JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull, iii, 2. (1712)
He will find that these are no jesting matters.
MACAULAY, History of England, xv, ii, 175. (1855)

<sup>8</sup>
As for Jest, there be certaine Things which ought to be priviledged from it: namely Religion, Matters of State, Great Persons.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse. (1597)
Jest not with the two-edged sword of God's word
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Jest (1642)

We say . . . it is no safe jesting with holy things
THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, p. 14. (1630)
Jest not with the eye, or with Religion.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 163. (1640)
The eye and Religion can bear no jesting.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 164.
'Tis ill jesting with your eye and religion.
SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 322. (1710)

Bourd [jest] not with my eye, nor with my honour. Both these things are too tender points to be jested with; and the honour often more nice than the eye.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (1721)
III. JESTING WITH EDGED TOOLS, see under TOOL

<sup>9</sup>
Jests that give pain are no jests. (No son burlas las que duelen.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 62. (1615)
MATEO ALEMAN, Guzman de Alfarache, pt. ii, bk. ii, ch. 3, quotes the same proverb in slightly different form, "No son buenas burlas las que salen a la cara."

<sup>10</sup>
"Thou seist ful sooth," quod Roger, "by my fey, But 'sooth pley, quaad pley' [true jest, bad jest], as the Fleming seith."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Cook's Prologue, l. 32. (c. 1386) Chaucer uses a Dutch word, kwaad.

Well (quoth I) it is yll iestyng on the soothe.
Sooth bourd is no bourd [true jest is no jest], in ought that mirth doothe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

As the old saying is, sooth boord is no boord.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Apologie of Poetrie. Par. 9. (1591)

The truest jests sound worst in guilty ears.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1670)

A sooth boord is no boord. Spoken when people reflect too satirically upon the real vices, follies, and miscarriages of their neighbours.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 3. (1721)
True Jests breed bad Blood.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5280. (1732)
True Jests do the greatest Execution.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5281.
There's no jest like the true jest.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

This effort did not take quite as well as former efforts of the Laird's wit. The lady drew up, and the Provost said, half aside, "The sooth boord is nae boord."

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 12. (1824)

1
"Allas!" quod he, "this is a wikked jape . . . And when this jape is tald another day, I sal been halde a daf, a cokenay!"

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reves Tale, l. 281. (c. 1386)

A threadbare jester's threadbare jest.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 532. (1762)

2
A joke's a very serious thing.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 1386. (1762)

3
O happy mortal! he never failed to have his jest. (O mortalem beatum! cui certo scio ludum numquam defuisse.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 13, sec. 30. (45 B. C.)

I love my jest, an the ship were sinking, as we say'n at sea.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act iii, sc. 3. (1695)

Might he but set the rabble in a roar,
He cared not with what jest.

WILLIAM COWPER, tr., Iliad, ii, 258. (1791)

4
Whether jest or earnest, as the saying is. (Quicum ioca seria, ut dicitur.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. xxvi, sec. 85. (c. 45 B. C.) A proverbial phrase repeated by SALLUST, Bellum lugurthinum, ch. 96, and by OVID, Metamorphoses, iii, 319.

I have mingled grave with gay (Laetis seria miscuimus.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. Epig. 25. (c. A. D. 380)
Be as be may, for earnest or for game.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Hypermnestra, l. 142. (c. 1385)

Reasonyng in ieste after this sorte, and yet meanyng good earnest.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Logique, p. 68. (1551)
Snatching in iest and keeping in earnest.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 115. (1579)
Betweene grieve and game, iest and earnest.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 266. Betweene iest and earnest.—Ibid, p. 392.

Intermingle . . . jest with earnest.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse. (1597)
You may kill one another in jest, and be hanged in earnest.

HENRY PORTER, Two Angrie Women of Abington, v, 1. (1599)

In love's schoole, wherin who-so studies in jest, may learne in good earnest.

JAMES HAYWARD, tr., The Banish'd Virgin, 163. (1635)

Mows [jesting] may come to earnest.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 254. (1721)
Jest and earnest working side by side.

TENNYSON, The Princess, iv, 541. (1847)
From Jest to Earnest.

E. P. ROE. Title of novel. (1875)

5
Moderation should be observed in jesting. (Adhibenda est in iocando moderatio.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 59. (55 B. C.)

6
Boord [jest] not with bawtie [a watch dog].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22. (c. 1595)
Boord not with Bawty, lest he bite you. Do not jest too familiarly with your superiors.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 56. (1721)
Never jest in the presence of a prince. (Chün ch'ien wu hsi yen.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1029. (1875)

7
He makes a foe, who makes a jest.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.
Joke went out and brought home his fellow, and they two began a quarrel.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741

8
Good Jests bite like Lambs, not like Dogs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1714. (1732)
He's at a great Loss for Jests, that is forc'd to rake Hell for them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2454.

9
Where you see a Jester, a Fool is not far off.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5685. (1732)
A joker is near akin to a buffoon; and neither of them is the least related to wit.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 Aug., 1749

10
Wanton Jests make fools laugh, and wise men frown.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Jestings. (1642)

The wise make jests and fools repeat them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 260. (1678)

11
It is good to make a Jest, but not to make a trade of Jestings.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Jestings. (1642)

Cease your funning.

JOHN GAY, Beggar's Opera. Act i, sc. 1. (1727)

12
Someone is generally sure to be the sufferer by a joke. What is sport to one is death to another.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Comic Writers. Lecture i. (1819)

Jokes are as bad coin to all but the jocular.
WILLIAM HONE, Year-Book, col. 1416. (1831)

1 All things are big with jest: nothing that's plain

But may be witty, if thou hast the vein.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 40. (a. 1633)

2 Leave jesting whiles it pleaseth, lest it turns to earnest.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 109. (1640) The Italians say, "Lascia la burla quando più piace" (Drop the jest when it pleases most). The Spanish form is, "A la burla dejarla quando mas agrada."

Leave a Jest when it pleases you best.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6357. (1732)

3 Long jesting was never good.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 696. (1640)

4 The cruel jest. (Saevus iocus.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 148. (20 B. C.) Let there be jesting without bitterness. (Accedent sine felle ioci.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 48, l. 21. (A. D. 93) Bitter jests, whereof the memory is of long duration. (Acerbis facitiis . . . quarum in longum memoria est.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. v, sec. 2. (C. A. D. 116) A bitter jest that comes too near the truth leaves a sharp sting behind. (Asperae facitiae, ubi nimis ex vero taxere, acrem sui memoriam relinquunt.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 68. (C. A. D. 116) The Latin proverb is, "Nunquam sunt grati quae nocuere sales" (Jests which hurt are never welcome.)

What is this savage jesting of thine? (Quaenam ista iocandi | saevitia?)

CLAUDIAN, In Eutropium. Bk. i, l. 24. (C. A. D. 400) Too bitter is thy jest.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 174. (1595)

Of all the griefs that harass the distress'd, Sure the most bitter is a scornful jest.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 166. (1738) Jestings lies bring serious sorrows.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 436. (1855) The French say, "Bon mots n'épargnent nuls" (Jests spare no one).

5 What forbids one to speak the truth laughingly? (Quamquam ridentem dicere verum | quid vetat?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 24. (35 B. C.) A man may seye full sooth in game and play.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Cook's Prologue, l. 30. (c. 1386)

Ful ofte in game a sooth I have herd saye.
CHAUCER, The Monk's Prologue, l. 76.

There are many sooth words spoken in bourding [jesting].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 94. (c. 1595) Jesters do oft prove prophets.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, v, 3, 71. (1605) More is often taught by a jest than by the most serious knowledge. (Que salió á veces mejor el aviso en un chiste que en el más grave magisterio.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 22. (1647)

Many a true word hath been spoken in jest.
UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, vii, 366. (c. 1665)

Many a true word's spoken in jest.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

There's many a true word said in jest.
T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 24. (1843)

As the proverb tells us, many a true word has been uttered in jest.

R. C. TRENCH, Medieval Church History. Ch. 9, p. 130. (1877)

There is many a true word spoken in jest.
BERNARD SHAW, Widowers' Houses. Act i. (1892)

My way of joking is to tell the truth. It's the funniest joke in the world.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act ii. (1905) The Italians say, "Quel che pare burla, ben sovente è vero" (What seems a joke is very often the truth). There is an old French proverb, "En oy moquant dit on bien vrai" (In jeering one often says the truth).

6 Putting jesting aside, let us turn to serious thoughts. (Sed tamen amoto quaeramus seria ludo.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 27. (35 B. C.) Jestings apart. (Omissis iocis.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 21. (A. D. 98)

7 Jestings often cuts hard knots more effectively than gravity. (Ridiculum acri | fortius et melius magnas plerumque secat res.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 14. (35 B. C.) Joking decides great things, Stronglier, and better oft than earnest can.

MILTON, Imitation of Horace. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 14. (1642)

8 It is a certain thing, it is proverbially known, that a jest breaks no bones.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1781.

9 Your Knaueship brake your fast on the Bishops, by breaking your iests on them.

JOHN LYL ( ? ), Pappe with an Hatchet. (1589) You break jests as braggards do their blades, which, God be thanked, hurt not.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, v, 1, 189. (1598)

The scaffold (a place not to break jests but to break off all jesting).

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History, iii, 119. (1655)

Jests are never good till they're broken.
HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 250. (1869)

10 Not a letter of mine is dipped in poisoned jest. (Nulla venenato littera mixta ioco est.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 566. (C. A. D. 9)

No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence i' the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 244. (1600)

1 A maker of iests, a bad character. (Diseur de bons mots, mauvais caractère.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. 1, art. ix, No. 22. (c. 1660)

2 The gods also have a love of jesting. (φιλοπαισμονες γὰρ καὶ οἱ θεοί.)

PLATO, Cratylus. Sec. 406C. (c. 375 B.C.) The Latin form is, "Iocos et Dii amant."

3 If a thing be spoken in jest, it is not fair to take it seriously. (Si quid dictum est per iocum, | non aequom est id te serio praevertier.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 920. (c. 200 B.C.)

4 He's having his little joke. (Ioculo istaec dicit.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 23. (c. 200 B.C.)

5 O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible,
As a nose on a man's face, or a weather-cock on a steeple.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 1, 141. (1594)

Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest. . . .

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 203. (1600)

6 A jest's prosperity lies in the ear
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 871. (1595)

Less at thine own things laugh; lest in the jest
Thy person share, and the conceit advance.

HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 39. (c. 1633)

Let not thy laughter handsell thy owne Jest.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchyridion, iv, 83. (1640)

I laugh at nobody's jest but my own, or a lady's.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i, sc. 4. (1694)

He does not only find the jest, but the laugh too.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Refusal. Act i. (1721)

He that laughs at his own jest mars all the mirth of it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 155. (1721)

Do you find the jest, and I'll find the laugh.

GOLDSMITH, Good-Natured Man. Act i. (1768)

A jest loses its point when the jester laughs himself. (Der Spass verliert Alles, wenn der Spassmacher selber lacht.)

SCHILLER, Fiesco. Act i, sc. 7. (1783)

Like some poor nigh-related guest,
That may not rudely be dismist;
Yet hath out-stay'd his welcome while,
And tells the jest without the smile.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age. (1823)

I advise comic lecturers, when they lay a warm joke, not to act as a hen doth when she has uttered an egg, but look sorry and let someone else do the cackling.

JOSH BILLINGS, Proverbial Philosophy. (1858)

He must not laugh at his own wheeze:

The snuff-box has no right to sneeze.

KEITH PRESTON, The Humorist. (1925)

7 A dry jest, sir. . . . I have them at my fingers' end.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 3, 80. (1599)

8 Being a standing jest for all one's acquaintance.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act v, sc. 2. (1777)

My father and mother were a standing jest.

MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. i, ch. 5. (1809)

9 If you give a jest you must take a jest.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The jester and jestee.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. i, ch. 12. (1769)

10 The simple joke that takes the shepherd's heart.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 623. (1726)

A college joke to cure the dumps.

SWIFT, Cassius and Peter. (1734)

11 It is difficult to fashion a jest with a sad mind (Difficile est tristi fingere mente iocum.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 6, l. 34. (19 B.C.)

No time to break jests when the heartstrings are about to be broken.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Jestings. (1642)

Jesting, said Arcite, suits but ill with pain.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite, i, 285. (1700)

12 Dull is the jester, when the joke's unkind

EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame, ii, 124. (1728)

13 The cream of the jest.

JOHN EACHARD, The Grounds and Occasions of the Contempt of the Clergy and Religion. (1670) JAMES BRANCH CABELL, title of a novel. (1917)

Now comes the cream of the jest.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Tuesday Club Murders. Ch. 7. (1933)

II—Jest: Lose a Friend for a Jest

14 My sone, keep wel thy tonge and keep thy freend.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Maunciple's Tale, l. 215. (c. 1389) The Danes have the same proverb, "Giem din Mund [mouth]. | og giem din Ven."

15 A Joke never gains over an Enemy, but often loses a Friend.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 228. (1732) Thou canst not joke an enemy into a friend, but thou may'st a friend into an enemy.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1730

16 Don't say in jest things which insult your friends. (Nec tuom quidem est amicis per iocum iniuste loqui.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 573. (c. 194 B.C.)

A friend must not be wounded, even in jest (Amicum laedere ne ioco quidem licet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 54. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>1</sup> We should keep far away from the idea that it is better to lose a friend than a jest. (Longeque absit propositum illius potius amicum quam dictum perendi.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. iii, sec. 28. (c. A. D. 80)

He'd rather lose his dinner than his jest.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Wit at Several Weapons. Act i. (c. 1613)

[They] will not stick to lose their friend rather than their jest.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentleman, p. 137. (1630)

He'll not lose his jest for his guest.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 255. (1639)

Some had rather lose their friend than their jest.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1161. (1640)

He that will lose his friend for a Jest deserves to die a beggar by the bargain.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1642)

JESUS, see Christ

JEW

<sup>2</sup> The unbelieving Jews. (ἀπειθήσαντες Ἰουδαῖοι.)
New Testament: Acts, xiv, 2. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Increduli Iudaei."

A race prone to superstition, opposed to religion. (Gens superstitioni obnoxia, religionibus adversa.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. v, sec. 13. (c. A. D. 116)

Jews are not fit for Heaven, but on earth they are most useful.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i. (1868)

How odd | of God | to choose | the Jews.

WILLIAM NORMAN EWER, How Odd. (c. 1900)

<sup>3</sup> Israel shall be a proverb and a by-word among all people. (Eritque Israel in proverbium, et in fabulam cunctis populis.)

Old Testament: I Kings, ix, 7. (c. 600 B. C.)

Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile. (ἴδε ἀληθὺς Ἰσραηλῆτης ἐν ᾧ δόλος οὐκ ἔστιν.)

New Testament: John, i, 47. (c. A. D. 95) The Vulgate is, "Ecce vere Israelita, in quo dolus non est."

When people talk about a wealthy man of my creed, they call him an Israelite; but if he is poor they call him a Jew.

HEINRICH HEINE, MS Papers. (c. 1850)

Still on Israel's head forlorn,

Every nation heaps its scorn.

EMMA LAZARUS, The World's Justice. (1882)

<sup>4</sup> Poverty becomes a Jew as a red bridle becomes a white horse.

Midrash: Song of Songs Rabbah, 1. (c. 450)

A saying of Rabbi Akiba.

<sup>5</sup> The dream of the Jew—not to work with the hands!

HENRY MILLER, The Cosmological Eye, p. 28. (1939)

<sup>6</sup> A crabbed Jew—a creature that quarrels with sound human food. (Querulus Iudaeus, humanis animal dissociale cibus.)

RUTILIUS NAMATIANUS, De Reditu Suo. Bk. i, l. 383. (c. A. D. 416)

Bassanio: If it please you to dine with us.

Shylock: Yes, to smell pork. . . . I will buy with you, sell with you, . . . but I will not eat with you.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 3, 34. (1597)

Invite not a Jew either to Pig or Pork.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3106. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> The Jews were once the chosen people of God. There were miscreants among them, however, and it must certainly have been from one of them that Disraeli descended. He possesses just the qualities of the impenitent thief who died on the cross, whose name, I verily believe, must have been Disraeli.

DANIEL O'CONNELL, Speech, at Dublin. (1837)

Yes, I am a Jew, and when the ancestors of the right honourable gentleman were brutal savages in an unknown island, mine were priests in the temple of Solomon.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, reputed reply to Daniel O'Connell.

The gentleman will please remember that when his half-civilized ancestors were hunting the wild boar in Silesia, mine were princes of the earth.

JUDAH P. BENJAMIN, in reply to a taunt by a Senator of German descent. (c. 1857) See MOORE, Reminiscences of Sixty Years in the National Metropolis.

You call me a damned Jew. My race was old when you were all savages. I am proud to be a Jew.

JOHN GALSWORTHY, Loyalties. Act ii. (1922)

To be a Jew is a destiny.

VICKI BAUM, And Life Goes On, p. 193. (1931)

<sup>8</sup> I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 198. (1597)

This is the Jew That Shakespeare drew.

Attributed to ALEXANDER POPE, after seeing a performance of Shylock by Charles Macklin, 14 Feb., 1741.

JEWEL

<sup>9</sup> Have I caught my heavenly jewel?

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet ii. (c. 1580)

From the earliest times it has been the custom to call any shining excellence or precious thing a "jewel," as in the examples which follow:

Learning is a jewel.

THOMAS NASHE, An Almond for a Parrat, fo. 9b. (1589)

The jewel of life

By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, v, 1, 40. (1596)

Experience be a jewel.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 2, 213. (1601)

My modesty, the jewel in my dower.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 1, 54. (1611)

'Tis a jewel of a husband.

DRYDEN, Amboyna. Act iv, sc. 1. (1673)

O discretion, thou art a jewel!

UNKNOWN, Song, in The Skylark. (1772) CONSISTENCY THOU ART A JEWEL, see under CONSISTENCY.

She is quite a jewel of a servant.

JANE WELSH CARLYLE, Letters, ii, 387. (1858)

<sup>1</sup> Though a jewel fall into the mire, it remains as precious as ever, and dust is as worthless as ever, even though it ascend to heaven.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 56. (c. 1258)

One of the best known of Chinese proverbs is the similar, "Though the white gem be cast into the mire, it cannot be lastingly sullied."

JILL, see under Jack

JINGO

See also Chauvinism

<sup>2</sup> By jingo, quoth Panurge, the Man talks somewhat like, I believe him.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 56.

(1694) This is Motteux' rendering of "Par Dieu." Where he got it nobody knows, though it is supposed to be a substitution for God, derived perhaps from the Basque words for God, Jinko, Jainko, or Yinko, and acquired from Basque sailors.

Their husbands care no more for them, no, by jingo, no more than they care for their husbands.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Way to Keep Him.

Act i, sc. 2. (1760)

[She] expressed her sentiments . . . in a very coarse manner when she observed that, by the living jingo, she was all of a muck of sweat.

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 9. (1766)

No, by the living jingo! not till he treats us.

MARRYAT, The Dog-Fiend. Ch. 30. (1837)

We don't want to fight, yet by Jingo! if we do, We've got the ships, we've got the men, and got the money too.

G. W. HUNT, We Don't Want to Fight: Chorus.

An English music hall song of 1878, when the country was on the verge of intervening in the Russo-Turkish war on behalf of the Turks. It became what the Oxford English Dictionary, v, 585/1, calls the "Tyrtæan ode" of the Russophobes, and the Russophobes themselves became known as Jingoës—a term soon generally applied to any fire-eating super-patriots and politicians, or to anyone favoring a bellicose policy in dealing with foreign nations. "Tyrtæan," pertaining to or in the style of Tyrtæus, a Greek poet of the 7th century B.C., who composed martial songs for the Spartans."

The Jingoës—the new tribe of music hall patriots who sing the Jingo song.

G. J. HOLYOAKE, Article, in Daily News (London). 13 May, 1878, 3/4.

Nobody . . . could be less given to the worship of Jingo.

LESLIE STEPHEN, Studies of a Biographer. Vol. i, ch. 3, p. 104. (1898)

JINKS

<sup>3</sup> Highjinks, a play at dice who drinks.

B.E., New Dictionary of the Canting Crew.

(c. 1695) Casting dice to see who should empty a large bowl of liquor, and who should pay for it.

Often in Maggy's, at hy-jinks,

We guzzled scuds,

Till we could scarce, wi' hale-out drinks,

Cast off our duds.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Elegy on Maggy Johnstoun. (1711)

The frolicsome company had begun to practise the ancient and now forgotten pastime of high jinks.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 36. (1815)

A game of forfeits.

There were no High Jinks, or sprightly sayings.

LORD COCKBURN, Memorials of His Time, p. 225. (1821)

High Jinks going on night and day at the court.

R. H. BARTHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: The Brothers of Birchington. St. 17. (1842)

Boisterous sport; romping games; unrestrained merry-making. The modern meaning.

All sorts of high jinks go on on the grass plot.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 1. (1861)

The time for high jinks was during the Windsor fair.

J. D. COLERIDGE, Eton in the Forties. Ch. 4.

(1896) Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines is the title of an old song from which Clyde Fitch derived the title of his play, Captain Jinks. (1902)

JOAN

<sup>4</sup> Prior: He is our lady's chaplain, but serves Joan.

Don: Then, from the friar's fault, perchance. it may be

The proverb grew, Joan's taken for my lady.

ANTHONY MUNDAY, The Downfall of Robert Earle of Huntington. Act iii, sc. 2. (1601)

Here is as good bread made as in France; and in the night Joan is as good as my lady.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch.

33. (1620) The last phrase is an interpolation by Shelton. What Sancho says is, "Y de noche todos los gatos son pardos" (In the night all cats are gray). See under DARKNESS.

Night makes no difference 'twixt the Priest and Clark;

Jone as my Lady is as good i' th' dark.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides: No Difference i' th' Dark. (1648)

Joan is as good as my lady in the dark.

DUCHESS OF NEWCASTLE, Sociable Letters, ii, 4. (1664)

Much also we shall omit about confusion of Ranks, and Joan and My Lady.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1838)

Were it not for imagination, Sir, a man would be as happy in the arms of a chambermaid as of a Duchess.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1776.

1 Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue and groan:

Some men must love my lady and some Joan.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 1, 206. (1595)

JOB

2 This, we think, is but Job's news to the humane reader.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1838) News of disaster.

It was Friday . . . when this Job's-post from Dumouriez . . . reached the National Convention.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. iii, ch. 4. (1837)

3 Job feels the rod Yet blesses God.

BENJAMIN HARRIS (?), The New England Primer. (c. 1687)

4 Miserable comforters are ye all. (Consolatores onerosi omnes vos estis.)

Old Testament: Job, xvi, 2. (c. 350 B. C.)

Job called his friends miserable comforters.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentleman, p. 132. (1630)

This If, . . . is likely to prove with Job's friend, but a miserable comforter.

THOMAS FULLER, Sermons: Comfort in Calamity. (1654)

They sat down, like Job's three comforters, and said not one word to me for a great while.

DEFOE, Roxana, in Works (1903), xii, 20. (1724)

Your ladyship is one of Job's comforters.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

He called her Small Hopes, and Job's comforter.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Ch. 7. (1748)

A Job's comforter. One who, pretending to comfort, aggravates the distress of somebody.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Job. (1941)

5 I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 145. (1597)

LORD BYRON, Werner. Act i, sc. 1, l. 401. (1822) AS POOR AS JOB, see under POVERTY.

Job was not so miserable in his Sufferings, as happy in his Patience.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3109. (1732)

While others of the learned Robe

Would break the patience of a Job.

SWIFT, The Beasts' Confession. l. 87. (1732)

You would provoke the patience of a Job.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. x, ch. 8. (1749)

My uncle bore it with the patience of Job.

W. E. NORRIS, Thirlby Hall. Ch. 6. (1884)

JOHN

See also Jack

6 I could see that a Johnny-on-the-spot . . . was trying to keep cases on her.

GEORGE ADE, Artie. Ch. 3. (1896)

He's Johnny-on-the-Spot whenever street car men are licked into shape.

JACK LONDON, The Valley of the Moon, ii, 10. (1913)

When it arrives I'm sure Johnny-on-the-spot.

B. M. BOWER, Flying U Ranch, p. 106. (1914)

I believe you were Johnny-on-the-spot.

S. M. SCHLEY, Dr. Tobey Finds Murder, p. 101. (1941)

7 The security here spoken of . . . is at present become a mere form: and John Doe and Richard Roe are always returned as the standing pledges for this purpose.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries on the Laws of England, iii, xviii, 274. (1768)

John Doe further says that one Richard Roe came and turned him out, and so John Doe brings his action against Richard Roe.

SAMUEL WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 8. (1841)

So common was [the name Gaius] that it was selected in the Roman law-books to serve the familiar purpose of John Doe and Richard Roe in our own legal formularies.

F. W. FARRAR, The Early Days of Christianity Bk. ii, p. 506. (1882)

8 To be John at night and Jack in the morning: to boast of one's intentions over-night and leave them unfulfilled next day.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 596. (1883)

9 A syr John lacke latin, that can scarce rede his porteus [breviary].

SIR FRANCIS BYGOD, A Treatise Concernynge Impropriations of Benefices. (c. 1535) An ignorant priest.

We are bound to believe the Church's decisions read or explained to us (by the pope's messenger though a Sir John Lack-latin).

THOMAS JACKSON, Commentaries upon the Apostile's Creed. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 5. (1614)

10 You always know a Johnny Newcome by his getting his back to the breeze.

CHAMIER, Saucy Arethusa. Ch. 15. (1837)

11 There never were two greater chums than we, Johnny, my old friend John.

WILLIAM COURTRIGHT, Johnny, My Old Friend John. (1894)

12 The ignorant Hottentots and Indians, not having been able to form any idea of the Dutch East India Company, . . . the Dutch from the very beginning in India, politically gave out the company for one individual powerful prince, by the christian name of Jan or John. . . . On this account I ordered my interpreter to say farther that we were the children of Jan Company, who had sent us out to view the country.

G. FORSTER, tr., Spatimann's Voyage to the Cape of Good Hope, x, ii, 21. (1785)

John Company will some day find out the truth. MARRYAT, Newton Forster. Ch. 41. (1832)
He was offered a position in India, in the service of John Company.

MRS. LYNN LINTON, Paston Carew. Ch. 2. (1886)

1 Hee would say The Apostle wrote like a good plain John a nods.

SAMUEL HARSNET, Popish Impostures. Ch. 23, p. 160. (1603) One not quite awake.

2 A grand attack was made on the Johnny raws of Blandford.

PETER HAWKER, Diary. Ch. 1. (1813)

There were some Johnny Raws on board.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book. Vol. ii, col. 1395. (1823)

You took me for a country Johnnie Raw.

R. L. STEVENSON, Kidnapped, p. 39. (1886)

3 John Dory bought him an angling nag to Paris for to ride a.

SIR JOHN HAWKINS, History of Music: Appendix, p. 23. (1609)

Then asks my opinion of John a Nokes and John a Stiles. . . . I for my part think John Dory was a better man than both of them.

JOHN MILTON, Colasterion. (1645)

But I to Paris rid along,
Much like John Dory in the song.

JOHN MENNES, Musarum Deliciae, p. 17. (1655)

4 I will send it him by John Longe the carier.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Of what length is John long the carier? A quarter of a yere long.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs and Epigrams, p. 189. (1562)

To stay for John Long the Carrier; to tarry long for that which comes but slowly.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Attendre. (1611)

That yours should be a whole month in making scarce 100 English miles . . . is strange to me, unless you purposely sent it by John Long the carrier.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, 5 June, 1645. Whether all things are carried by Tom Long the Carrier; Quo tardissime omnia perferuntur.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 839. (1681)

It is coming by Tom Long the carrier, said of anything that has been long expected.

FRANCIS GROSE, ed., A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Tom Long. (1785)

Who was Tom Long the carrier? . . . What road did he travel?

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 4. (1834)

To send by John the long carrier: by a round-about route.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 597. (1883)

5 Why will ye (quoth he) I shall follow hir will? To make me Iohn drawlache, or such a snekebill.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)
John Drawlatch, a thief; snekebill, "one out of whose nose hunger drops."

6 Yet hogis head in hogstowne is no Iohn a droyne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs and Epigrams, p. 214. (1562)

That poor Iohn a Droynes his man, . . . a great big-board thresher.

THOMAS NASHE, Have with You to Saffron-Walden. (1596)

7 As if it was such a marvel, Jonye should be chous'd when he comes to commence gentleman.

EDMUND HICKERINGILL, Gregory, Father Greybeard, p. 46. (1673)

Where she that is bonny

May catch her a johnny,

And never lead apes below.

ALLAN RAMSAY (?), Bonny Tweedside. (1724)

LEAD APES IN HELL, see under APE.

The English Johnnies, who had never been out of a cockney workshop before.

LORD BYRON, Letter to Murray, 25 Feb., 1824.

8 There are three Johns: 1, the real John, known only to his Maker; 2, John's ideal John, never the real one, and often very unlike him; 3, Thomas's ideal John, never the real John, nor John's John, but often very unlike either.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 3. (1857) Alphonse Karr compressed this to, "Every man has three characters: that which he exhibits, that which he has, and that which he thinks he has."

9 John—How that name smacks: What an honest, full, English, and yet withal holy and apostolic sound it bears.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to J. B. Dibdin, 16 Sept., 1827.

10 I . . . peak,

Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 595. (1600)

His name is Iohn, . . . but neither Iohn a nods, nor Iohn a dreames.

ROBERT ARMIN, Nest of Ninnies, p. 57. (1608)

11 Doth the lawyer lye then, when vnder the names of Iohn a stile and Iohn a noakes hee puts his case?

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apologie for Poetrie (Arber), p. 53. (1581) John who lives at the stile and John who dwells at the oak, the equivalents of the more modern John Doe and Richard Roe.

In plain English I am made a John-a-Nokes of.

APHRA BEHN, Sir Patient Fancy. Act v. (1678)

<sup>1</sup> The luck that comes to them is like Johnny Toy's, who lost a shilling and found a two-penny loaf.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures. p. 20. (1880)

<sup>2</sup> [Letters signed] John Trott.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. Nos. 296, 314. (1712) A bumpkin, a boor.

The mereest John Trot in a week you shall zee
Bien poli, bien frisé, tout à fait un Marquis.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Englishman in Paris: Epilogue. (1753)

Our travelling gentry . . . return from the tour of Europe as mere English boors as they went—John Trot still.

GEORGE COLMAN, SR., The Musician Lady. Act ii, sc. 1. (1762) See also under TRAVEL.

CHEAP-JOHN, see JACK: CHEAP-JACK.

JOHN BULL, see under ENGLAND.

JOKE, see Jest

JOLLITY

See also Merriment, Mirth

<sup>3</sup> As any jay she light was and jolyf.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reves Tale, l. 234. (c. 1386)

And forth she gooth, as jolif as a pye.

CHAUCER, The Shipmannes Tale, l. 209.

Stiborn and strong, and joly as a pye.

CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 456.

All rags and all happiness; the urchins who drive the sand-laden neddies through our streets, are envied by the capon-eating turtle-loving epicures of these cities. "As jolly as a sand-boy" designates a merry fellow who has tasted a drop.

JON BEE, Dictionary of the Turf: Sand-boy. (1823)

The Jolly Sandboys was a small roadside inn
DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 18. (1840)

We will smoke together and be as merry as sand-boys.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Letters, i, 70. (1841)

Everything combined to make him as jolly as a sand-boy.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Children of the Ghetto. Bk. i, ch. 24. (1892)

As jolly as a sandboy.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Rubaiyat of a Scotch Highball. (1907)

<sup>4</sup> There is no jollity but hath a smack of folly.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 495. (1640)

Virtue's its own reward. So's jollity.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 15. (1843)

<sup>5</sup> Be jolly, lords.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 7, 65. (1606)

There's some credit in being jolly, with an inflammation of the lungs.

DICKENS, The Life and Adventures of Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 5. (1844)

JOURNEY

See also Travel

<sup>6</sup> It is a great journey to the world's end.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 3. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 158. (1670)

It is a great way to the bottom of the sea.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 4. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 154. (1670)

He goes a great Voyage, that goes to the Bottom of the Sea.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1850. (1732)

It is a great Journey to Life's End.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2859.

<sup>7</sup> I journeyed fur, I journeyed fas'; I glad I foun' de place at las'!

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Nights with Uncle Remus. Ch. 35. (1883)

<sup>8</sup> In sports and journeys men are known.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 401. (1640)

Little journeys and good cost bring safe home.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 504.

In a long journey straw weighs.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 821

<sup>9</sup> Journeys end in lovers meeting.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 3, 44. (1599)

<sup>10</sup> I always like to begin a journey on Sundays, because I shall have the prayers of the Church to preserve all that travel by land or by water.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

PRAYERS AND PROVIDER HINDER NO JOURNEY.
see under PRAYER.

JOY

See also Bliss, Delight, Happiness

<sup>11</sup> All creatures have their joy and man hath his.

GEORGE HERBERT, Man's Medley. (a. 1633)

<sup>12</sup> Should all men pile their joys up on a single spot, mine would surpass them all. (Gaudia | sua si omnes homines conferant unum in locum, | tamen mea exsuperet laetitia.)

JUVENIUS, Fragments. (c. 200 B.C.) Quoted by VARRO, De Lingua Latina, vi, 50.

<sup>13</sup> Rejoice ye in that day and leap for joy. (χαίrete ἐν ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ καὶ σκιπρήσατε.)

New Testament: Luke, vi, 23. (c. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Gaudete in illa die, et exultate."

Ready to leape out of his skynne for joy.

B.R., tr., Herodotus, i, 38. (a. 1584)

With joy ready to leape out on's skine.

